Production In 1933

by

IRVING THALBERG

SINCE 1920 I have made an average of thirty-six pictures a year—some years I have made as high as sixty pictures. 1933 is the only year in which I did not release any pictures. Therefore, it is with the usual motion picture oddity that I should be writing on production in 1933.

However, 1933 was one of the most eventful years that I can remember. The beginning of the year found the country in a very bad state economically, and early in the year the dramatic bank closing brought the economic condition, which had been steadily on the downgrade since 1930, to its climax. The closing of the banks brought a strain upon the already-weakened finances of most of the motion picture companies that they were unable to face, and a fifty per cent cut was instituted. The wisdom of this has frequently been questioned, but the necessity was apparent.

The N. R. A. law with its accompanying codes for all industries brought about in due course an instruction to the motion picture industry from the Government to codify its relationships between competing companies and between employer and employee groups. In an industry as diversified as this industry, representing producers and distributors, major and minor; actors, stars, and bit players; directors, great and small; writers, technicians, etcetera, it represented a task more difficult perhaps than was faced by any other industry and brought about, in my opinion, an unfortunate drifting into individual groups which has weakened the motion picture structure as a whole. This is the first real rupture in employer-employee relationships. I regard this as one of the most serious happenings of the year. In the past, even during the Equity strike and other similar occurrences, there has always been an undercurrent of extreme good will which has done much to preserve the future of the industry.

Production-wise, this has been an uneventful year. It is significant that the National Board of Review, which has rarely included even one picture of foreign make in its selection of the ten best pictures of the year, has this year given thirty per cent of its votes to pictures made outside of the United States.

Perhaps this lowering in quality can be laid directly to the financial stringency, as most of the large companies attempted to reduce in cost the average picture they made, and to reduce in number the pictures upon which they would be called on to spend large sums of money. Unfortunately, there does not exist for motion pictures the steady demand that exists for bread and foodstuffs, and other articles of daily use, so that the theatres of the country have been faced with constantly decreasing audience attendance on all except the outstanding pictures. These attractions have done greater business in attendance than ever before. Whether that was due to the fact that the public is staying away from the average program picture and is therefore hungry for entertainment when it arrives, or whether we have reached in the picture business the point already reached in the show business many years ago when nothing but the outstanding attractions would draw customers—but those in great quantities—I am not certain.

Personally, I do not care to prophesy but I certainly believe it is safe to say that the motion picture industry is facing a serious crisis if it cannot increase the number of outstanding attractions to be made in a year.

I do not believe it is essential to spend great sums of money to make these outstanding attractions, although there should be no flinching from it if this is necessary. Outstanding attractions have always been the result of interesting personalities — sometimes new, sometimes established — fitted with interesting roles in stories that are sincerely good and sincerely entertaining and produced with the showmanship touch that distinguishes any product that sells, be it automobiles, ladies' dresses or motion pictures.

While this problem is primarily one of the producer, and he should not shirk it, it also calls for very great responsibility on the part of the star, director, writer, etcetera, and this responsibility must be accepted in the spirit of cooperation that characterized the earlier days of the movies, when each year brought about a supreme advance in every aspect of the motion picture industry over the year previous.

The year 1933 has been one of very few advances, although it brought about the fulfillment of the promise shown by three new stars—Katharine Hepburn, Mae West and Bing Crosby. Still, their discovery and first important advance was made in the previous year. While 1932 saw the approach to stardom of many established personalities, in addition to those mentioned, 1933 has given us very little in new personalities. This was the most serious defect of the year—for the discovery of new personalities and the retention and advancement of those already existing in the industry is the cornerstone of the industry's strength against depression. If there is a second cornerstone, it is the fine spirit of cooperation that has always existed between the employer and employee groups.

On the credit side for the year is the fact that most of the large and small companies, in spite of extremely difficult financial crises they have had to overcome, still exist. Although some of the existing personalities have been seriously affected, box-office-wise, a number of them are greater than ever and most of them have retained their glamor for the public. Skillful, cooperative production can very quickly bring the industry back to its former high place. Every code and every regulation should keep in mind this supreme necessity.

As Nicholas M. Schenck once so aptly put it, there is nothing wrong with the industry that good pictures cannot cure.

Important Events of 1933

by

HOWARD ESTABROOK

THE moving finger of history will write 1933 as a turning point in many things. Certainly in motion pictures it has marked definite changes.

Perhaps the most striking change is the REBIRTH OF INDIVIDUALITY IN PRODUCTION. This was foreshadowed last year when the great theatre chains were being split up, and 1933 saw the studios swing wide to individuality. Today the INDIVIDUAL in Hollywood means more than ever before.

Producers who formerly headed studios and supervised from forty to sixty productions annually are now heading individual units and are producing from six to twelve pictures a year. When you see leading producers concentrating on not more than a dozen pictures, a maximum of one a month instead of one a week, you may expect something. Men who in the past attempted to hold themselves responsible for delivering one picture every week were killing themselves physically. Scientists tell us that extreme fatigue creates an active poison in the blood. No one can work eighteen hours a day over long periods without destructive results. Men who a year ago were worn down with jumpy nerves are today smiling and ruddy, and are doing better work.

In a sense, decentralization is a return to the producing system under which the most successful silent pictures were made. That was the heydey of the independent producer who gave undivided attention to each individual picture and was often responsible for the money that went into it. Even a large studio in those days was usually headed by a single executive who exercised a general control much less exacting on himself than under today's conditions, and a producing unit consisted of a writer and a director held responsible for individual pictures. Talking pictures created the associate producer or executive producer, often a former independent producer, who now heads the unit, coordinating and controlling the vastly more complicated task of producing pictures today. The present trend toward units should restore one of the best values of the silent era, a small group of creators concentrating on each picture.

A further swing to individuality is seen in the growing tendency to assign one writer to prepare a story for the screen. This is sound policy. It is obvious that the great works of writing throughout all literature, in the varied techniques of drama, novel, short story, history, biography and poetry, have been the creations of individual writers. The greatest music, whether for opera, symphony, dances or songs, has been written by single composers. Only when the individual is free to express what is in him does true creation result.

Another striking tendency of 1933, which became evident late in the year, was an increasing trend toward WHOLESOME PICTURES, a definite expression of public taste, as indicated by the overwhelming success of such stories as "Little Women" and "Three Little Pigs." Don't underestimate the story value of the latter—it is a well constructed fable, building cumulatively to a major climax in which the villain gets his just deserts right in the seat of the pants, a moral that is pointed and unmistakable.

This swing of public taste toward normal is nothing new. After each disturbed period it always asserts itself. As a matter of fact the real outstanding successes that last through the years are invariably based on sound values. So-called headline stories and other ephemeral reflections of the passing scene, unless also including something permanently worth while, are overshadowed when a genuine hit appears based on a theme that endures—such a picture, reissued, will still hold audiences long after the headline story, which has served its transient purpose, is forgotten.

One might venture to say that a story with a soul is the best investment. Only a limited number of such pictures are seen, because they are infinitely more difficult to make, but when one is successfully achieved it becomes part of the legend of motion pictures.

An important factor in the past year has been the increasing recognition of so-called STANDARD LITERATURE, stories which have been known long and favorably to the reading world, but which have been neglected by the screen. It is necessary to mention only a few to illustrate the point. "Litle Women" comes under this category. "Alice in Wonderland" for many years has rested on our library tables. "The Invisible Man" has awaited screen production for many a long day. Each one of these is strikingly different. None can be accused of copying another major hit or following in the train of a cycle. Perhaps we might search our library shelves a little more receptively and scan our newspapers less hopefully for a new twist on gangsters or shady ladies.

The year 1933 has been notable for the SUCCESSFUL FOREIGN PICTURES shown in this country. After many years of studying our methods England finally broke through and delivered a resounding hit in "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth"—a production that will compare favorably with our better technical work. True, a large proportion of the validity of this picture is due to the amazing performance and physical likeness of Charles Laughton, who sends you out of the theatre with the impression that you have actually spent an evening in the presence of Henry the Eighth. That is a true magic of drama—the creation of absolute reality in the mind of the spectator.

A REVOLUTION IN MUSICAL PRODUCTIONS has occurred in 1933. Cut and dried methods have been rudely upset by many striking successes in a new vein. Noteworthy was the foreign-made picture "Be Mine Tonight." Another venture in a new field, "Flying Down to Rio," came so late in the year that results are not yet available. But it is safe to say that musical production methods never have had such a shaking up as during the past twelve months.

There is no more reason for so-called musical cycles of plenty and famine than there is for any other cycles. If producers continue to strive for the new and unusual in musical production, music will always be with us, as it should be.

In general the major developments of 1933 in the production field of motion pictures have been constructive. They should bear fruit in future years in increased success and prosperity.

The Year in Review

by

ROBERT E. WELSH

WELL, it all depends on how you'd like to take your "Review of the Year"—straight, or with a chaser. If you take it straight, it's a headache—no, a series of headaches. If you take the chaser, there may be a smile or two. Not many, y'unnerstand, but enough to take that bitter taste away.

It goes this way, if we start with the straight doses — What do we get? Omigosh, ogeeogosh, what do we get? Just taking a hop, skip and a jump over the files of Hollywood Reporter for the year 1933 we get something like this:

"BANK HOLIDAYS . . . STUDIO SHUTDOWNS . . . FOUR WEEKS WITHOUT PAY . . . EIGHT WEEKS WITH HALF PAY . . . PAY CUTS RESTORED . . . NO, WARNERS WON'T RESTORE CUTS . . . YES, THEY WILL . . . OH, HECK . . . AND SO ON."

We warned you it was pretty nasty stuff taken straight. But you could have done worse. It wasn't all in CAPITALS. There's a lot of "10 per cent cut" . . . "10 per cent of the 90 per cent . . . " mixed up in that batch, too.

Or, if you still insist on downing it straight and merely want to change your brand, try this from the headlines:

"RKO RECEIVERSHIP THREATENED . . . OFFICIALS DENY ANY RKO RECEIVERSHIP LIKELY . . . PARAMOUNT RECEIVERSHIP IN SIGHT . . . EXECS DENY ANY POSSIBILITY OF PARAMOUNT RECEIVERSHIP . . . EDUCATIONAL CHANGES DUE . . . HAMMONS DENIES ANY EDUCATIONAL CHANGES . . . WORLD WIDE IN TROUBLE . . . KBS DITTO . . . "

Then add your own summing up to that paragraph. We're busy at the moment, having been interrupted by a major executive who wants to deny something with his right hand on a Bible borrowed from the prop department.

But we've got some hundred proof stuff here we've been holding out on you. For you gentulmen of ol' Kaintuck who like it real strong we prescribe this Headline Punch:

"COLUMBIA SOUND MEN ON STRIKE . . . STRIKE THREATENED IN ALL STUDIOS . . . ACADEMY ATTEMPTS TO CONCILIATE . . . STRIKE DECLARED IN ALL MAJORS . . . STRIKE WILL BE OVER TOMORROW . . . NO, DAY AFTER TOMORROW . . WELL, MAYBE NEXT WEEK."

And then you remember that cold gray dawn when we woke up and found the darn strike had been over for several days and we were too much befused to know it!

That's what that hundred proof does to you.

Now just take all these potions, mix 'em together, down the mess from a thimble and what have you? The Year of Headaches.

That's what it was.

It's not a very enjoyable year to review.

Unless you want to look at it this way: Most of us are still here at the old stand; doing a fairly good run of business; and gol durn it if it doesn't look as though there are some silver linings being hung out for an airing just over the hill in 1934.

It was a year of major and minor headaches. One of the major-minors was the remarkable rise of the Academy of the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to undreamed of prestige and importance through its handling of the salary cut problems—and the overnight decline when it ran into the Code buzzsaw.

Along the same line is the terrific change in the status and importance of the unions in the operation of studios. And one of the minor ones is the great mystery of the year—THE STILL BIRTH OF THE GREAT HAYS BOOKING OFFICE FOR ALL TALENT.

But take your "Review of the Year" with a few chasers, perhaps a drop or two of fruit juice to cut it, and maybe it won't go so hard. As we said, you may even get a smile.

Try this batch of headlines: Dec. 3: "DAVID SELZNICK WILL POSITIVELY REMAIN AT RADIO." Dec. 29: "DAVID SELZNICK ANNOUNCES THAT YESTERDAY HE SIGNED A NEW ONE YEAR CONTRACT WITH RADIO." Then just close your eyes, twirl the pages between your fingers. and open them on January 5. You'll read: "DAVID SELZNICK SIGNS WITH MGM."

There's another of much the same flavor. On January 17 you can read: "NEW YORK CERTAIN WARNER AND RKO WILL MERGE." Or on January 20: "NOW IT LOOKS LIKE WARNER AND FOX." And you can follow that merger trickle until you drown in the mess, if you care to. Personally, we don't. A little of merger goes a long way with us.

It's interesting, if you read each issue as though you were just learning these things for the first time, to know how many times Merian Cooper has been out of Radio.

Players were cantankerous in the Year of Headaches. Constance Cummings started it just as the year dawned by jumping the Columbia fence. Marlene Dietrich was sued by Paramount for $185,000 on January 2. (What happened to that suit?) George Raft ducked "The Story of Temple Drake." Sylvia Sidney caught a plane one night and wired the studio about her plans from Albuquerque. Ronald Colman said goodby to Sam Goldwyn. Gosh, was there something in the air?

Every now and then, though, something cheerful hits you between the eyes. On July 14, for example, we read: "CARL LAEMMLE SIGNS JIMMIE GRAINGER." That's a good year's news for any company.

But as you go further along you find that no matter how you have boasted about your capacity—you just can't take it. You approach August—and as early as the 9th you read: "First Meeting Called to Settle Industry's Code."

Huh? We knew that would gag you. There's too much of it. From that date on—code, code, code. Meetings, resolutions, denunciations, appeals—what have you?

And just as the dear old cranky gentleman that was 1933 began to get tangled up in his whiskers we received a code. But can we bury it with the old guy?

No, they've dropped it in the lap of 1934—with plans for a three months' investigation of salaries, statistics and plain and fancy picture facts.

Omigosh, do we have to go through all that again?

"Maybe I'm Wrong—"

by

B. P. SCHULBERG

THE REPORTER has asked me to think aloud on production matters for this Holiday Edition. Since most thinking on production is LOUD, and since there is very little thinking anyway, this should be a very short article in very LARGE type. But here are some random thoughts on current production problems, prefaced with the usual introduction to nearly every statement at nearly every production meeting, "Throw me out if you don't like this one."

Next to the "Throw me out" line, the one most commonly heard is, "Maybe I'm wrong." Three little words that have cost this business enough millions to refinance every existing company in the industry. In a business as fluctuating, and as unruled and uncharted as our own, it may be costly and destructive to be too positive or certain about anything; but, by the same token, it may be equally wrong and expensive to be quite so uncertain. Fifteen years ago, in the experimental stages of the industry, it might have been altogether proper for production executives, directors, writers, players and cameramen to enunciate the "Maybe I'm wrong" theory while going about their daily work—or rather their daily studies of the business. But after fifteen years of silent picture experience, and five years of sound, there should be a little more conviction and a little less guessing than do prevail. A producer worthy of his hire should more often be certain that a given principle of production is either definitely right or wrong; directors who feel eligible to transmute enormous investments into little pictures on a screen should not be so constantly perturbed by the thought that what they are doing is probably wrong; writers should by now have a little more certitude that a certain scene is good or bad, and cameramen should less often than is the case fail to control the mechanical factors that govern their work. I am allowing in all this rationalizing for the fact that ours is a creative work, and for the variable human equation involved; notwithstanding which, the doubts assailing every factor in every process of production have added no little to the present high negative costs, and the only way to reduce costs at a time when costs must be reduced—if the industry is to survive—is to reduce the degree and quantity of guessing, and to play down the "Maybe I'm Wrong" method of production.

ELIMINATE WASTE!

The recent bitter years have taught all of us to be more careful in the actual production of pictures, and to minimize waste. There is no doubt that every studio in the business has done a creditable thing in bringing lost motion and waste activity to a minimum of cost hitherto unknown. Yet there is also no doubt that much remains to be done, and I would gladly take as my compensation for a year's hard work the cost of sheer waste in any major studio. There are still sequences being shot that any careful script scrutiny should disclose are either bad enough to need retaking before or after preview, or that will be eliminated entirely or reduced to shorter length, because of footage. There are still sets being built, and photographed, with principals and extras, that never even see a preview. There are still too many protection shots made at the price of longer schedules and greater final negative cost; and less guessing, or perhaps, better guessing, can eliminate most of these waste items. With no creative branch volunteering to accept less remuneration, the only way for this business to go on is for everyone to save more than he is now doing all along the line.

A CLEAN, NOT A SACCHARINE, SCREEN

The great success of "Little Women" has made every one in production circles "clean-minded." Many of us are concluding that "Little Women" proves that the American public now wants only clean, sweet pictures. As well conclude that "State Fair" proved it only wanted rural pictures, that "Cavalcade" proved it only wanted historical pictures, and that Mae West proved it only wanted spicy pictures. Do not let us go wrong on superficial reasoning, which has always been the best kind of reasoning we do, and which may at this critical time cost us many millions not to be spared. I am for a clean screen: I am also for a free screen, with certain, necessary restraints, which accurately mirrors life, and contemporary literature and drama. Paramount did a mighty fine thing, and deserves the thanks of the industry, for giving the public, at Christmas time, as fine, clean and inspiriting a screen gem as "Alice In Wonderland," as Radio deserves commendation for its moving depiction of a clean American classic. But I can think of no surer way to lose our audiences than to make a whole succession of such pictures, even as good as "Little Women" and "Alice." The American public has never yet evinced any inclination to live on fairy tales and sweet, simple stories; they want action, primarily, in their entertainment diet, and this element of action, which is a psychic American craving, and which fortunately is a natural adjunct of the screen, is noticeably absent from this school of writing. Do not make the screen so sugary, in the next few months, as to give the public film diabetes.

I was a member of the Producers' Committee of two—Irving Thalberg the other—who with Father Lord, Will Hays and his staff, drew up the Hays Code. During the conferences which preceded its formulation, Father Lord himself, a broad-minded, intellectual clergyman, conceded that the screen could and should reflect life in all its phases, and was most insistent that sex should not be removed from the curriculum of the screen, lest audiences forever lose interest in an anaemic entertainment that would not compare with the strength and vigor and naturalness of the legitimate theatre or of current literature. He merely urged restraint and good taste, and to that end the code was designed. Let us not lose the scope and the hope of the screen to tell every kind of story, in good taste, merely because one kind of story, beautifully done, succeeds eminently.

Who among us dare to presume to define what is life, and what merely dirt? Recently the Government brought an action against a book. The United States moved to keep the unexpurgated edition of Joyce's "Ulysses" out of the country. After long deliberation, Federal Judge Woolsey rendered a verdict in favor of free entry for the book. His decision, notable for its erudition and vision, is worth quoting in full, but I shall only give this excerpt: "If one does not wish to associate with such folk as Joyce describes, that is one's own choice. In order to avoid indirect contact with them one may not wish to read 'Ulysses'; that is quite understandable. But when such a real artist in words, as Joyce undoubtedly is, seeks to draw a true picture of the lower middle class in a European city, ought it to be impossible for the American public to see that picture?"

That sums up the whole case of the motion picture versus binding and restricting influences. As long as life is pictured "artistically" and capably, it has a right on the screen: if parents can select the books their young shall read, the paintings and sculpture they shall see, they can also select the motion pictures they shall view. But realistic pictures of present-day life should not be denied those who want them, provided they conform with the canons of good taste and are honestly designed. As well say that the great nude sculptures of the classicists should be barred from public exhibition, because a few morons might get the wrong impulses from viewing them.

REMEMBER THY AUDIENCES AND PLACE NO FALSE GODS BEFORE THEM, LEST THEY RISE UP AND SMITE THEE.

This might well be a new commandment to place before everyone engaged in production. Too many producers still produce for the critics, too many directors still direct for their brother-directors, too many writers still write only for the admiration of other writers, and too many cameramen still photograph in a style not intended for commercial consumption, but for the plaudits of cinematographers. The critics—God bless them!—can be oh, so wrong! We all know how many times in the past ten years, pictures that have received the eulogies of the critics have died at the box-office, and how equally often pictures that have been unmercifully panned by the critic-body have been box - office clean-ups. That can only indicate that the critical, and the public, standard of entertainment differ greatly. Clara Bow was for two years the most popular feminine star on the screen. During those two years she naturally made a great deal of money for Paramount. This naturally indicates that the public wanted and approved her pictures; but I have yet to see a single newspaper criticism, during all that time, expressing approval of a single one of her pictures. We deliberately kept Clara a public, and therefore a profitable, star, and not a critics' star.

Writers only too often know they are constructing a scene too abstract, too philosophical and too "rich" for mass consumption, but they do so to convince the writing fraternity that they are indeed writers worthy of their "steal." If they wrote more for their audiences, and less for themselves, they would have more box-office successes and a healthier industry.

Recently, I asked a fine, sensitive director, comparatively new to Hollywood, why he did not show his night scenes with enough light for audiences quickly and easily to see the expression of his players. I remarked that once it was indicated to the audience that a night scene was intended, by means of a dark long shot, the audience would gladly accord him the license of taking liberty with the lighting, as it would rather see the most fleeting facial changes of the players than miss seeing them by being continuously convinced that it was seeing a night scene, with the medium and close shots scientifically matching the long shot. He replied that when the best directors in the business—he happened to mention Lubitsch and Borzage among them—took such license, he would begin doing so, but until they did he was going to be included in their class, rather than have it thought that he did not know as much technically as they did. So here is a chance for Lubitsch and Borzage to be the way-showers toward a better audience result in visibility of night action, rather than to a slavish system of impressing their fellow-directors that they know all about screen technique, which the audience cares nothing about if it cannot SEE the picture. I say this in case the director in question was correct in quoting them as protagonists of too-dark night shots. Personally, it is my recollection that both Lubitsch and Borzage are such practical directors that they would know it to be wrong not to take a freely-granted license to have their players clearly lighted at all times and under all circumstances.

Cameramen, too, ignore only too frequently the desires of the audience, in taking, at great cost, difficult screen effects that only brother cameramen appreciate or understand. We have all seen those beautiful, hazy effects that took hours and hours to get, played in theatres where lighting and projection conditions that were not ideal converted them into nothing but bad photography that tried and strained, and finally hurt an audience's optics. Remember our audiences, in writing, directing, photographing! And they will remember you, and your days will be long in the motion picture industry.

But—"Maybe I'm wrong," and by this time, certainly, maybe I'm long.

W. R. WILKERSON

THE outstanding event in the motion picture industry during 1933 was the rebellion. The rebellion of the creators.

This rebellion started with the publication of the Producers Arbitration Agreement and ended with the general tossing around given the artists, writers and directors at the Washington meetings of the NRA code. Sandwiched in between was the famous 50 percent cut in early March.

These events caused the creators to sit up and take notice. Hitherto they had been content to do the producer bidding, were satisfied that the studio heads knew what they were talking about and responsible for all their acts

They were contented to draw their salaries and do as they were told, believing if they were told the wrong thing, if there were mistakes in their orders, they would be corrected. For after all, the job was to make successful pictures, productions that would earn their way and turn back a profit, and any injury to the creators would injure all possibility of that success.

Prior to the Producers Arbitration Agreement and since the picture business had started there had always been a spirit of friendly cooperation by the men and women actually making the pictures and the individuals behind the gun. They had worked together all for the cause of good pictures. There had been instances of isolated disturbances where the star, the writer or the director had found serious fault with the manner in which he or she was being treated by the studio, but such disturbances were the exception rather than the rule. But when the creators began to digest the full meaning of the Producers Arbitration Agreement, that cooperation began to waiver, that friendly feeling was shaken and its place crept a suspicion, whispered at first, but openly expressed later.

The Producers Agreement was found to be all for the producer and nuts to the creators. Its restraining orders were beyond all sense of fairness, to say nothing of the legal aspect of its restraint. Creators were to be as so many slaves, should the full effect of that agreement be carried through. And hell broke loose. Meetings were held on all sides. The writers rebelled, the artists declared war, the directors and technicians raised all sorts of a rumpus. There were all kinds of arm waving and loud talking, threats and counter threats to be quieted only when one smart person said: "Don't worry about the whole thing, there's nothing to it. The thing was framed to protect one or two studios. The other producers will get wise to it soon and the cat will be out of the bag. A producer war will follow."

And that's what happened. There was a producer war. A fight started because the clauses that bound one producer to another were being breached, and they were walking out on each other. The smoke screen that was raised to protect a few was found to be phoney when the smoke cleared and out went the Producers Agreement. But not until a distrust was planted, a seed that took root in the creator's garden. The spirit of cooperation that had always existed was hardly to be found, everyone was fighting his individual battle, armed to the hilt with plenty of ammunition. But this was a dum-dum battle, shooting from ambush.

In March open warfare was started. No shooting from the bush—a fight out in the open. It started with the meeting of the producers and the agents, called by the producers for the purpose of getting these representatives to talk their clients into taking a cut, a small cut. Were not the banks of the whole nation closed and with those closings was not the flow of money stopped? How were they to pay off? Wouldn't the agents go to their clients and ask their help? Hardly had the last word been uttered when all the agents agreed to the suggestion. And then—the request for 50 percent of all salaries for a period of eight weeks. Wow!

And was there fun? And was there a fight?

Of course they took the cut and took it for eight weeks, but all doubt as to the future of the creators in the hands of the producers was settled then, definitely and for all time. There were meetings after meetings, more arm waving, more loud talking, quieted only when it looked as though the Academy could be built to protect the creators and this building was started. The loss of confidence by the creators in the producers was fertile ground for the building of an organization for their protection.

And then the writers smelled a rat. They walked out of the Academy. Formed the Screen Writers Guild, an organization of writers for the writers, the formation of which was the straw that broke the camel's back. Fired by distrust and suspicion, the writers started the spark of the real rebellion. They called their shots, all shooting in the direction of the heads of the various studios. For the first time since the start of the business, salaried individuals got up on their feet in open meeting and defied the men who were paying them their salaries. "To hell with the salaries," cried a few, "give us a cut in the spoils. If the pictures are a success we get money, if they are not we starve." And with the starting of the Writers Guild, the start of the finish of the Academy was being written.

When the motion picture industry was invited to sit down at a table in Washington and write its own code, the creators were found to be wanting. They sent representatives to take care of their end, but those representatives started the old game of politics and the creators were about to be washed out, were washed out. And that marked the end of all thoughts of cooperation between the creators and the producers.

Without cooperation between the employer and the employee no industry can succeed and much of the reason for poor pictures right at this time is due to the loss of that cooperation, plus a distrust of one for the other. Aside from the belief that they will be taken advantage of at every turn, the creators now have a lack of confidence in the whole producer layout. The writer feels that his material is being butchered, the artist believes that he is being ruined by bad pictures and the director claims that he is not permitted to direct and the other fellow (the producer) can't.

And there is only one answer, PERCENTAGE and equal rights guarding those percentages. Through this means lies the only salvation for the production end of this business. Give the creators a whack at the profits and if there are no profits——but there will be.

Give the writers a piece for their creation; place the important stars, the name draws, on a small weekly salary and a percentage of the gross; do the same for the directors and you will have a business that must cooperate and you will find a cooperation that will make good pictures, hardly anything but good pictures. And these pictures will be made at a fraction of the cost of present productions because of that cooperation. If a writer knows that his writing must be right or no dough, he will write. If the stars are forced to accept a share of the burden, they will star. They won't walk in late for calls, they won't read their lines like a high school pupil, they will know their parts and they will fight any element that attempts to hold up production. The director will work with the star, with the writer AND the producer. They will all work together.

But before any such percentage system can be put into effect, all those participating in the percentage must have about equal say. The producer will not be permitted to produce as he has in the past. He will not be the sole boss. He will have to take counsel with the others. They will have to be in agreement all around. And it's coming to that, if not in the big studios, outside of them, and if the big plants permit too much of that outside business, there will be no big plants other than rental studios.

There has been a rebellion, a big rebellion. Some producers, wise to their jobs, realize it; others are sitting idly by and groping for a reason for all the bad pictures. The rebellion is the reason and it was the highlight of 1933.

Happy New Year

I HAVE JUST SEEN CLARK GABLE AND CLAUDETTE COLBERT IN "IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT" AND CONSIDER IT ONE OF THE FINEST PICTURES COLUMBIA HAS EVER PRODUCED.

CONGRATULATIONS, FRANK CAPRA.

Down With The British

by

ARTHUR KOBER

THE talkies have suddenly put on long drawers and have gone very social. Fox imports a flock of Britishers, and Leslie Howard, accompanied by a drawing-room accent, finds himself in demand. Joan Crawford still speaks Douglas Fairbanks Jr. English, and movie companies have stopped making pictures that move and are now giving a tired public a slice of life as lived by the starched-front nobility.

I want to protest. I want to register my disapproval of these peculiar shenanigans. Think of its influence upon the poor, susceptible public! I'm not worrying about the kiddies, God damn them! Those tiny tots have ceased being a source of concern. I'm troubled about the adults. I'm troubled, to be more specific, about those former neighbors of mine in the Bronx and in Washington Heights.

Can't you see what the drawing-room drama will do to these orthodox burghers? A steady diet of those anomalous charades in which beautifully upholstered gentlemen flaunt their nostrils at Holliwell Hobbs and say, in a voice loaded with tonsils, "I say, a whiskey and sodah, pleeaz!" will tend to make Mr. Mandelbaum and Mr. Flugelman behave the same way.

I can just picture the following conversation taking place in "Brick" Mandelbaum's drawing room in the Alta Yente Arms:

("Brick" Mandelbaum and "Buddy" Flugelman are looking out of the window. A typical Washington Heights rain wets the street. It is "Brick" who finally breaks the silence.)

Brick: Oi, I say, wot rotten vedder ve're hevink.

Buddy (shooting his cuffs): Yes, eet's bistly, doncher know.

Brick (letting a note of petulance creep into his voice): Desh hit hall, vy doesn't de sun come hout like an hold dirr?

Buddy: Ve could jolly well stend some nice vedder.

(At this point Mr. Flugelman looks furtively around the room to make certain they are unobserved. He lets his voice drop as he speaks.)

Buddy: I say, Breeck, hev you hoid about de Ginsboigs?

(Brick raises his eyes. Of course he is terribly curious but in the movies the Britishers are never upset. Internally they may be a seething cauldron, an erupting volcano, but they always manage to preserve a calm and unruffled exterior. Only the arched eyebrow betrays Brick's curiosity.)

Brick: No, hold binn, vot's de noos?

Buddy (significantly): Sadie ran avay vit the shuffer.

Brick (with satisfaction): Soives Pincus jolly vell right. Pincus is so tarribly meedle-cless ennyhow Steel, hevink one's vife run away vit one's shuffer,—vell, dot ees a beet theeck.

Buddy: Uf course! Hefter hall,—a shuffer! Oi, I say!

Brick: Vot's wrunk vit a shuffer! You're soch a snopp, Boddy.

Buddy (unconcerned by this rebuke): Vell, eet's a bistly mess. Doncher t'ink so, hold t'ing?

Brick (removing his monocle and wiping it with his 'kerchief): Oi, I don't know. (adjusting his monocle.) Sadie's rilly top holl. Rilly.

Buddy (grasping the significance of this remark): Oi, I say. Not rilly!

Brick: Yes, by Joff!

Buddy (chuckling—but more of a cackle than a chuckle): You, too, hah? Vell, Sadie ees a preety chomming pizz of beggech (he sighs). Vot a gestly mess! (looking at his wrist watch). Vell, I'll be deshink.

Brick: Oi, I say, vidder avay?

Buddy: I t'ink I hev time for a robber or two britch at de clobb.

Brick (shaking as if chilled): I most be een a beet of a fonk. I say, chock eet Boddy and I'll hev Jivves breenk in some tea (he pulls the cord and in a moment Jeeves arrives). Oi, Jivves, breenk in some glesses tea.

Jeeves: How menny glesses tea you weesh, sorr?

Brick (somewhat annoyed): Two, uf course!

Jeeves: Mit lemon, sorr?

Brick: Eeef you pliz, Jivves.

Jeeves (retiring): Very goot, sorr.

(But Buddy feels uncomfortable. Good God, how was he to know that Brick Mandelbaum was one of Sadie Ginsburg's lovers? He has jolly well put his foot in it.)

Buddy: Breeck, I t'ink I'll hemble alonk vitout tea. Eet's very dissent uf you ennyhow.

Brick: Oi, rot.

Puddy (getting his hat, stick and gloves): Vell, I'll desh alonk. Peep, peep, hold t'ing.

Brick (at the door): Chirry-ho, Boddy. And don't t'ink heel uf Sadie Ginsboig. She's rilly docky. Rilly! Chirr-ho!

So, for God's sake, let's go back to the Westerns; let's go back to those chromos in which hi-jackers were eventually put on the spot by muggs who had the heat turned on them; let's go back to the "Yeah?" "Oh, yeah!" "Yeah?" "Oh, yeah!" type of literature. Enough of this fancy-schmensy play-acting! Enough of nasal-voiced heroines and dignified, wooden heroes. Enough, I say, because I want my Mandelbaums and Flugelmans to be Mandelbaums and Flugelmans!

Hindsight On Previews

by

THE PREVIEWER

THERE is a peculiar two-way effect as you go over the day by day files of The Reporter to get a hindsight view of the previews on pictures.

The first slant you get sorta takes some of the joy out of life. "Gosh," you murmur, if you are given to murmuring, or mutter, if you prefer that, "what a heck of a lot of pictures are made for no good reason at all."

You spot a title. And read the preview which probably has one of those stock phrases, "Won't burn up any rivers, but may satisfy a lot of audiences."

Huh! You remember that picture—and also recall what it did at—or to—box offices. Of course, you are using hindsight, but you just can't help saying, "Migosh, when you read the review over, remember the picture, and view it from all angles—how on earth did they ever think there WAS a picture in that yarn?"

This happens all too often for a picture man's comfort. But we said there was a two-way effect when exercising this hindsight. And here is the other one:

If you don't just take the re-reading on a page by page basis, but hit the high spots of each month—THERE'S A LOT OF DARN GOOD ENTERTAINMENT FOR MR. AND MRS. PUBLIC TURNED OUT IN THIS BUSINESS IN THE COURSE OF A YEAR.

And strangely enough — EACH MONTH seems to have its highlights. Some months, like September or October, crowd in the highlights — but hardly a month goes by without SOMETHING big to shout about.

So that at the end of the year you chalk up about thirty pieces of picture entertainment with which you would be darned glad to be associated in any way, shape or form. An approximate thirty shows that stand up and shout. Behind them, about forty that rank as pretty good entertainment, not bad evenings for any family. And behind that second group—celluloid that some executive way up at the top should have killed before it got out of the first story conference.

Which is the final lesson you get out of this hindsight business—the bad ones, almost invariably were mistakes of EXECUTIVE JUDGMENT. A different way of saying that, either the stories were bad, or the stories covered themes that should never have been tackled.

You learn something else, taking a second glance at the previews of the year. It is this: When previewers err, with a consistency that makes it almost a rule, they never err when saying that a picture is POOR, MEDIOCRE, or FAIR.

When the previewer slips it is usually with the fallibility which only proves him human. For some reason —about story, direction or cast—he PERSONALLY goes a bit overboard in enthusiasm on a picture which later proves not to measure up to his report.

So, with these words about the reactions to a general survey of the year past, let's dig a little deeper and see how the year shaped up. Not as we look at it now, but as if we were just coming up with each month in its turn.

We entered the year with a pretty good start—because just before the bells rang "Cavalcade" had brought out the parade of adjectives. And if Fox had only kept up its January pace there'd be cheering now—because the same month brought the preview of "State Fair." And "She Done Him Wrong" came from Paramount in January. A pretty good start for any year.

There were other pictures in January that are just as well unmentioned now. But even while you groan about them, and start to con February's pages, you get the first impression of that feeling we mentioned: That with all the fodder, SOMEONE is always making SOMETHING good.

Look at this February list for a single month's entertainment: "Topaze," "Be Mine Tonight," "Secrets," "The Masquerader," "King Kong," "White Sister." May we hope for as much this next month?

March brought along the picture that was just about forty-five days behind its proper date—"Gabriel Over the White House"—a great show. An inspiration of an idea. But the darned trouble was that a fellow like Hoover went out on March 4, a man named Roosevelt came in—and the psychology of a nation changed overnight. What a break!

There wasn't much else to get excited about in March, though "Christopher Strong" gave the Hepburn fans a chance to pull their favorite line, "Wait until she gets a real story!" And, gee, we can't forget "Hell Below"—picture and box office.

April, probably just because of the connection with April Fool's Day, is the only one that lets us down on our discovery that every month brings something for box offices. Though "Warrior's Husband" is nothing to sneeze at, and picture students at least got a treat with the American debut of "M."

May was a humdinger. For sheer enjoyment it had "When Ladies Meet," for extravaganza; "The Gold Diggers," for a touch of the new in musicals; "Melody Cruise," and it wound up in a blaze of glory on May 29 when the previewer spread himself for two wide-measure columns on "Dinner at Eight."

Jesse Lasky gave us the artistic treats of "The Power and the Glory" and "Berkeley Square" in June, though the reviewer tempered his words on the former with the added phrase—"presents a box office problem."

And in July Columbia hit the bell with "Madame La Gimp." Which, in case you don't recognize it, became "Beggar's Holiday." Or perhaps you'll get it quicker if we say "Lady For a Day." What a title problem that great picture presented!

But July was pretty good all around. It brought us "Tugboat Annie," which the reviewer hit on the nail as a picture, but of which he said, "Dressler and Beery will clean up, though." And the same month was helped with "Morning Glory" as well as "Three Cornered Moon," one of the surprises of the year—but not, we hasten to add, to the Reporter previewer, who called it for "box-office."

August slumped off because, as we warned you, of the way those boys pile up the big pictures for September and October. September got under way with a rattling piece of box office merchandise—even if it didn't cause raves as a picture—"Too Much Harmony." Then it gave us our first American glimpse of Lilian Harvey in "My Weakness," pretty well received, though the reviewer added: "It will take maneuvering for a picture or two to find just what characterization this little lady needs." (Perhaps Jesse Lasky found the answer when he bobbed up in December with "I Am Suzanne.")

But September really got into its stride with "Henry the Eighth," "Bombshell," the long-awaited "The Bowery," "I'm No Angel" and "The Invisible Man."

If you think that is choking box offices, just calm yourself. We're skipping a lot in that month that are better left unsung.

January should have given us a tip on the heartaches of putting radio favorites on the screen, for back at the start of the year we had Kate Smith in "Hello Everybody" — but nevertheless we had to look at Ed Wynn in "The Chief" and Jack Pearl in "Meet the Baron" late in September. Perhaps we'll learn something or other from them.

October? Ogeeoboy! In the order in which they came: "A Man's Castle," "Prizefighter and the Lady," "Eskimo," "Only Yesterday," "Little Women." Put those on your list for one month's bookings, Mr. Exhibitor.

But October has to blush, too—it gave us "Hoopla," and a disappointment when we saw what they had chosen for Dorothy Wieck's first, "Cradle Song."

November started us off with laughs with "Duck Soup" and gave us both laughs and drama—and music, too—in "Dancing Lady." But picture makers still had a hangover of good product from October, for the turkey month also brought "Counsellor-at-Law" and "Gallant Lady," two great bits of picture craftsmanship, and that three-ring circus of showmanship — "Roman Scandals."

And November brought that puzzle of picture-making, "Alice in Wonderland," which let us down a bit after so much anticipation.

Your memory is probably still too fresh on the score to need recounting of the glories with which December faded out — "Going Hollywood," "Queen Christina," "Moulin Rouge" and "I Am Suzanne."

Now It Can Be Told

by

SAM WOOD

NOW that the shaking, the shivering, and the trembling within directorial oxfords has ceased, the story of the charge of the stage brigade over the mountains from Broadway can be told. The shock troops from the Rialto have withdrawn. The siege has ended, and the last rumble of the terrific attack has died. The host of legitimate directors, the illegitimate song writers and the marching hordes of boys with big ideas and small brains have returned to their rightful province, leaving their maimed and wounded to find jobs as real estate salesmen.

The old guard, consisting of supposedly roughly trained and crudely armed silent picture directors, cheer and shout, wave their tattered banners o'er the ramparts of Hollywood and murmur, into their cuffs, so the executives won't hear—"We told you so!"

What an attack it was!

On the defense were those who had served so many years so silently (I beg your pardon) and well — those who had produced such pictures as "The Covered Wagon," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "The Birth of a Nation," "The King of Kings," "Ben Hur" and a few other minor cinematic playthings. The only thing these poor chaps knew was motion picture technique! They were armed only with reputations, and those didn't count because Hollywood changes its mind so quickly.

The attacking band was well armed. It was fortified with contracts, with options, with great ideas, with sales talks, and with stage technique. Show producers how to make talking pictures? Of course they would.

Someone had spoken through a little black box called a mic-ro-phone, someone else had geared the sound to celluloid, and a third party to the crime had started a projection machine. The result was ghastly, but that was the excuse for the invasion of the quiet and somnolent film capital by the Broadway band. Or should we say bands?

Did the directors of silent pictures tremble, and were they frightened? Yes, I regret to say, they were. Did they wonder about the grocery bills and the installments on the car, and the scarcity of positions in other lines of business? Yes, they did.

Will they now confess that when those they had counted on refused to rally 'round the flag for them they became faint hearted and almost surrendered? Oh, no. Not in the main. In a few isolated instances, yes.

I must admit that when I first observed the vast tumult on the eastern horizon I became alarmed. I knew that Hollywood had a new thing-a-majig called sound, which it didn't know how to run and I didn't think I and the rest of the local boys did.

Now, a survey reveals that there was no reason to become excited and throw away all this motion picture technique and climb the nearest tree. It reveals many directors did exactly the right thing when they braced themselves and did not run, not to mention walk, to the nearest exit. In all of Hollywood, few directors of stage fame remain and dialogue is quieting down now and then to give Old Man Action a chance in the scripts. Those who have survived are deserving, having earned their diploma through achievements. They produced results instead of brays.

I must confess that for a while we were worried. Hollywood joined the stage directors and axes started swinging. The most used word, as far as we could hear, when we entered the administration buildings, was "outside."

We divided, at this point, into two factions within ourselves. One faction sat up on its haunches and fought back. It resented the invasion. It refused to accept the stage directors. It stormed and raved and felt insulted and tossed up jobs galore. I didn't belong to that faction. I'm glad. They're still out.

My group got together and held a council of war. We decided that the stage directors could teach us a great many things. When an executive sent seventeen "enemies" to watch over our shoulders and tell us what we were doing wrong, we listened and we made notes. We learned things.

A frank confession, this. I admit, right now, that we were both scared and studious. I admit further that we learned a lot of things which helped us greatly. And then, asked Little Red Riding Hood, what happened?

We found that it was far easier for motion picture directors to absorb the technique of the stage, and to know what to do with sound, than it was for stage directors to use pantomime as we had learned to use it.

The result is obvious. The stage directors, not willing or able to learn about pantomime from the silent lads, found their options lying down on them, and one by one they retreated over the hills of Hollywood.

And, just as rapidly as the Broadwayites fell back in disorder toward Broadway, former directors found themselves back on payrolls, more directorial than ever before. Today, the microphone is no longer a mystery. Instead of being frightened, the old timers march right up to it and say, "Hey, you, do this!" or "Hey, you, do that!" And the microphone does this and that more skillfully all the time, and talking pictures get better and better.

Not only does the microphone improve; the writers improve too. They improve by leaving out a lot of words which aren't needed, so that the old timers can get in pantomime and action and background and beauty and depth which the stage never can have because of physical limitations.

Why should we sacrifice these attributes and produce along the lines of stage technique when they are the only things which make us different from the stage?

There's the answer. Producers are again making motion pictures. The few stage directors who remain have won their spurs; have proven real sports and instead of a superior attitude, stand ready to pat you on the back for a timely suggestion, to which they are always open. Hail to those who overcame almost insurmountable obstacles. The hatchet is buried.

All's quiet along the directorial front!

Critics And Previews

by

WINIFRED AYDELOTTE

PITY THE POOR CRITIC!

All his life long he is on a spot, and a particularly difficult spot.

Consider: A preview of "Scarlet Moment" is about to be shown at the Blitz theater. The house is packed . . . with studio executives, actors, stars, relatives, and just plain audience. And somewhere, lost in the cinemaddening shuffle, is a poor little average guy, with a family to support and a funny way of doing it; who looks to the studio that made "Scarlet Moment" like a limp worm and to the Great American Public like a prophet, and who is expected by his editor to be omniscient.

It is his job, in the eighty minutes that it takes the film to unroll before his weary eyes, to pick out all the flaws and faults, all the excellences and dramatic heights, over which a hundred minds have argued and struggled for a month. In a little over an hour he must, with Olympian perception and no hesitation, assimilate and digest a dramatic meal that has taken weeks to prepare, and then be able in a moment to translate his burps of indigest:ion or pleasure into language that will be neither over nor under the head of the public.

In a way, the task is impossible. In another way, it is simple. If the critic can lose his individuality, submerge his personal likes and dislikes, and become merely an interested part of the audience, he can turn an intelligent thumb down on a production or tell the Mr. and Mrs. Jones of America where to go for an evening's entertainment. For, until the screen reaches the artistic strata of, for example, sculpture, its simple, pure raison d'etre is entertainment.

Criticism is not introspective—or it shouldn't be. It is merely the mental ability of the critic to allow the public to stand back of his typewriter while he phrases the OK or the NG that will direct the destinies of millions of two-bit pieces.

Therefore, although the importance, both constructive and destructive, of the critic is undeniable, his position is extremely controversial. It must seem unfair to the producer that the fate of his brain child, over which he has labored in great agony of spirit for so long, can be disposed of with such abrupt finality by a nod or shake of an empty (he thinks) head. After weeks and weeks of heart-breaking struggle, of re-writing, changing, cutting, adding, subtracting, and other pains in the neck, the producer proudly and fondly offers the result of his genius to the public. To him, it is finished. It represents his all. It is as nearly perfect as he can get it. He beams with pride as scene melts into scene.

The critic realizes all this, and, because he does, it is proof that his opinions leap from a springboard which is embedded in honesty, consideration and tolerance. The critic has no reason to "yes" anyone. He has no strings to pull, no log to roll, and nobody to please but his own conscience.

His opinions may be right or wrong, constructive or destructive, but they are honestly designed to HELP. He goes to a preview neutrally sitting on a fence, as it were, prepared to jump on either side. And it is entirely up to the picture which way he jumps. Nothing pushes him—except the merits or faults of the film.

Going to previews is an exciting, nerve-wracking, earnest procedure, enlivened by the gambling element. It just MIGHT be a good picture! There is not a critic in the world who goes to a preview without high hope in his heart. Anticipation is the keynote of a critic's life, which is why he doesn't live very long. The resultant frequent emotional let-down keeps him in such a constant state of jitters that his nervous system usually cracks under the strain to the dismay of his paper and the joy of the producers.

Critics should be treated always with the utmost consideration, for their lot is a hard one, filled with lights, crowds, stuffy theaters, double features, watery eyes, doubting editors, peeved producers, yes men, deadlines, ancient typewriters, late hours, and a general, disheartening feeling that their opinions read like a moronic stutter. The lot of the friends of a critic, incidentally, is even harder, being subjected to a habitual critical probing, and the lot of a critic's family is deplorable.

However, try to realize what the show world would be without the critics. With no sincere and thoughtful tips on what to see and what not to see, the human race, always skeptical of blind dates, would finally become completely un-show-conscious; theaters would disintegrate into musty sawdust; Hollywood would become a wilderness; weeds would grow over the studio lots; little chipmunks would perch unconcernedly in executives' offices; snakes would coil comfortably in the reception halls; rabbits would make their burrows in the prop rooms, and the film capital of the world would lie in tinseled ruins.

And the critic—where would he be? With his poor, watery eyes, he would be poking around in the glittering debris of what once was Hollywood, picking up little strips of film and muttering at them.

A Supervisor's Best Friend Is His Mother

by

ROBERT LORD

WOULDN'T YOU like to be a supervisor? Wouldn't YOU like to take ads in the motion picture trade papers calling yourself an "associate producer"? Wouldn't YOU like to have double doors on your private office and two secretaries in the outer office? Wouldn't YOU like to have your lunch in the executives' private dining room?

Of course you would. And it's easy. Any unhealthy male adult who is growing a little bald and who will take the trouble to memorize the following simple but effective little phrases can translate himself from an airless cubicle in writers' row to a large, spacious, sumptuous, tastefully furnished suite in the Main Administration Building.

"We had dinner at the Vendome about half past nine. Then we dropped over to the Colony Club. I shot crap and lost fifteen hundred bucks, but I'll get it back tomorrow night." . . . "We need a couple of new writers on this story." . . . "I've worked every night for the past three weeks." . . . "We'd better send to New York for somebody to play this part. There ain't an actor out here who can do it." . . . "It'll be a terrific box office smash after we cut out about thirty-five hundred feet." . . . "The dialogue is flat. We got to rewrite it." . . . "Tell him to wait. I'll see him as soon as I can." . . . "Be sure and shoot a lot of closeups." . . . "We'll get that over with a series of newspaper inserts." . . . "My nervous indigestion is getting much worse." . . . "Tell her to come up to my office about eleven tomorrow night."

"We positively must start shooting a week from Tuesday, so you have five days to rewrite the whole script." . . . "Gee, I saw a grand picture last night. All you'd have to do is switch the story from a farm to a fishing village and we could go right into production." . . . "I don't like it." . . . "I just got a hot inside tip on American Waffle Batter. I'm going to buy myself a couple of thousand shares and get back what I dropped on United States Fertilizer." . . . "The writers got the story all balled up but I straightened them out." . . . "I didn't have time to read the book but I read a synopsis."

"The director didn't know how to shoot it but I showed him." . . . "Remember, Joe, I predicted that months ago." . . . "I've got terrible sinus trouble." . . . "Did I get stinkin' at Harry's party last night!" . . . "Can't we get some writers from New York or London? There ain't a writer on this coast who's got any real feeling." . . . "Let's make a lot of tests for this picture." . . . "Ernest Hemingway? Never heard of him." . . . "It was an artistic success but it died at the box office." . . . "We need a new ending." . . . "We'll fix it in the cutting." . . . "Leo, score in a beautiful love theme under all the love scenes." . . . "Whatever he says his salary is, offer him half."

"The dialogue ain't funny enough. It didn't make me laugh." . . . "I'm going to Palm Springs over the week-end." . . . "I only read the first ten pages but I know it's got to be rewritten." . . . "We can't take a chance on this part. We got to have a big name." . . . "Let's make a gigantic musical picture." . . . "Just say you're a friend of Sam and she'll come to the phone." . . . "I gave him the chance to direct his first picture." . . . "My wife is sore because I haven't been home to dinner in four months." . . . "Sure—a Rolls-Royce. It's only been run fifty thousand miles and I can get it for peanuts." . . . "I'm going to New York to look over the new shows." . . . "We need more comedy. How would it be to write in a Swedish janitor?"

It's as simple as that, litle kiddies. Just memorize the above phrases and pretty soon every agent in the community will be sending you congratulatory telegrams on your birthday.

Good Chinese Earth

by

LEONARD FIELDS

AFTER eighteen months in China, during which I witnessed the Japanese occupation of Shanghai, the firing on Tientsin, the attempted occupation of Peiping, the Rose Bowl Game in Manchuria (score Japan everything, China nothing) and then a trip completely across China from Shanghai to Chinese Turkestan, I am ready to submit my memoirs: "Thru the Dark Continent with camera and sound truck" or "How to go places without doing things," a sequel to "The Rollo Boys Get Their Laundry Done."

Can they get Good Earth in China? You're asking, so I'm telling. A tree is a tree and earth is earth, good, bad or indifferent. All I know is what I see in the papers and I understand that a company is going over there, so for the uninitiated I am offering a glossary of words and things to watch for.

Cumshaw: Learn this word, for it is the most used word in the Chinese language. It simplifies the crossing of the palm with gold. A quaint old gypsy custom. The gyp still remains. The occidental often confuses this word with graft or bribe, but the Chinese meaning is gift. It might also mean a donation to a museum or library. It might?

Hoochow: A passport that doesn't pass or a permit that doesn't permit. China has a recognized central government that no one in China recognizes. Every local big shot issues a Hoochow that is honored only by the local big shot. In return for this favor you meet up with our old friend Cumshaw (see above). Occasionally the passport is honored by the next guy, but before he puts his stamp on it—more Cumshaw.

Now for the sake of argument, assuming that we have secured our hoochows, or permits, let's pass on and meet the Local Hays Organization. Don't be afraid that you might miss him and run into difficulties. He'll find you and bring the difficulties with him.

1. Government representative on set while every shot is taken.
2. Don't show quaint old customs. Bad propaganda. China is progressing.
3. Don't show Rickshaws. Shows Chinaman as beast of burden. Velly bad.
4. Don't show poverty. All Chinese in picture must be well dressed and look well fed.
5. Don't shoot this location now. Wait till next summer when flowers are in bloom. China must look nice on screen.
6. Don't show Chinese fighting. Young Chinese must be brought up with no fear of pain or death and be ready to lay down their lives for China.
7. Don't show bound feet despite the fact that they are still prevalent.

8, 9, 10, etc. Never mind what story says or what conditions actually are. Rest of world must see that China has new deal allee samee like Amelica.

To insure this every foot of film must be developed and printed in China to assure the government that everything is on the up and up. Sometimes the inspector will turn his head if you go for that "Cumshaw business." The inspectors are like relatives in Hollywood. You trip over them.

Now that we have met up with the censor board let's pass to the man in the street. Don't sneer at him. He might work in your picture as an extra, but after all you're in his back yard and you are the foreigner. The lowest coolie has a deep seated feeling of superiority over the occidental and a hatred for foreigners. He doesn't care if you are a supervisor. He knows better and has his own way of doing things, and if you don't like his way go back where you came from.

Is it any wonder that I am now preparing to direct "Manhattan Love Song"? If I had my way I'd change the title to "America, I Love You!"

But, after all, it's expecting a lot to get pictures from a country where you can't even get a good bowl of Chop Suey.

Christmas In Hollywood

by

RIAN JAMES

THE Editor of The Reporter can think of more damned things! Here we are worrying about will Aunt Emily smack our puss because we sent her a wine hamper, when cotton nighties are more up her Alley, and what kind of underwear does our favorite flicker star wear, or will she think we're getting fresh, and what do you do when you live in an apartment and a lady pup goes feminine on you, and along comes the Reporter and nothing will do but you have to write an article on Christmas in Hollywood!

All right, so we'll write an article on Christmas in Hollywood. Let 'em knock the other guy's pictures! We'll write an article to end all articles!

Christmas in Hollywood is like a Sid Grauman Premiere, only longer, and that is SO possible! Christmas in Hollywood is bounded on the north by Vine Street, and on the south by the Gotham delicatessen, which sells swell noodle soup! Christmas in Hollywood is like Christmas in Hohokus, Herkimer, or South Bend, only you don't wear galoshes!

Christmas in Hollywood is Bill Powell rushing up the Boulevard with a Scotty under one arm and a shopping list under the other, and eighty-seven Duesenbergs parked outside Bullock's Wilshire! It's a holiday at Warner Brothers, and Manna for the local lens lads, who take the same pictures they took on Thanksgiving, only now the stock girls are up on ladders massaging Christmas wreaths instead of Turkeys!

It's that happy time of year when Santa Claus, accompanied by Muriel Window, goes tootling gaily down the Boulevard, driving a pair of synthetic reindeer, atop a dazzling float, and the genial Andy Devine tells the local columnists what he's going to say on his Christmas cards, to surprise his friends, who evidently never believe what they read in the papers.

It's another series of turkey table-d'hotes at the Brown Derby, and Al Levy's, and a chance for the Vendome to make the town's mouth water with its swank collection of Fortnum and Mason-ries.

Christmas in Hollywood is a long series of complicated explanations to your niece from Connecticut as to how Santa Claus can percolate through a gas heater, and why he's passed up the sled for Wally Beery's red biplane, and lapsing into a semi-bitter mood because you've already got enough slippers for a centipede, and didn't you tell her fourteen times it was a shooting jacket you wanted!

It's a day of joy for the local columnists, who do a lot better than we used to do back in Brooklyn, where they still send Christmas cards—only, and a push-over for the local newspaper cartoonists, who have nothing to do but dig up last year's cartoon showing a poor kid leading a bent old woman in a shawl past a swanky restaurant window with a big turkey in it. Usually the caption reads: "Don't you worry, Grandma, Papa will come back!"

Christmas in Hollywood is an excuse for Victorville, and Oxnard, and Twenty-nine Palms to put on their sombreros and get out their model T's and come clanking to town, spurred and booted, and ready for anything, and the only time of year a husband can buy a diamond bracelet for his wife, and tell the world about it—in advance!

Christmas in Hollywood is happy and hectic and festive and gay and expensive, as where in hell isn't it.

But, above all, Christmas in Hollywood this year is the day on which the man in the street, happy in an NRA job, can be grateful to the President, and the man in the street, with a snootful, can be grateful to the President, too! And that's that . . . and we hope you had a very Merry Christmas—and you . . . and heavens knows, if you've read this far, you've earned one next year.

Things That Worry Me

by

EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF

DO YOU ever wake up in the middle of the night and start to worry about the darndest things? I do. I don't know whether I'm neurasthenic or not, but the other night I couldn't go to sleep from two till four—just worrying how a man happens to become a trombone player.

At first I thought to myself—well, when he's born his mother looks at him lovingly and says to her husband: "Wilhelm, wouldn't it be wonderful if we could bring little Hans up to be a trombone player?" But then I started to reason things out, and I saw that that couldn't be the way that trombone virtuosos are conceived. Because, in the first place, let us say the mother end of the conception DID say: "Wilhelm, wouldn't it, etc., etc." Where could the father find the boy a trombone teacher?

Oh, that kept me awake for hours. Take Hollywood for instance! Now you'll see all kinds of signs in the windows—"Piano Taught Here"—"Violin Taught Here"—"Screen Voices Developed"—"High Colonics"—but you'll never see "Trombone Taught Here."

About three a.m. I got the happy idea that maybe the child takes naturally to the large wind instrument because of his father having been a wind instrumentalist before him. But then I remembered something I had heard from a psycho-analyst, who substituted for a palmist at a large, fashionable party last year. He said that the trombone player acquires such an affection for his instrument—because of its hanging around his neck so much—that he loses all his taste for women. Well, that disproved my three a.m. theory, inasmuch as you have to start tromboning very young, or you'd never start it at all,—so by the time the young man is ready to have children—if he doesn't like women—well, he's just out of luck, that's all.

I finally gave the problem up, but I've referred it to our Research Department here. They're wiring to New York for some data—and I'm hoping the mystery will be solved.

You'll laugh at me, I know, when I tell you what kept me awake last night. I just kept worrying and worrying why there were so many "Cat and Dog Hospitals" in Hollywood. I think we have even more of them than cases of appendicitis.

Now, I don't recall ever seeing a "Cat and Dog Hospital" in New York. Surely it can't be the lovely climate out here, that wears the animals down. And Hollywood cats and dogs don't smoke, or have any other bad habits to weaken them. What can it be? The strangest thing about it all is that most of the animals hereabouts die naturally by being run over! And yet nearly every block has a "C and D H."

I asked an ace director about it, and he said that there were more dogs out here than in New York. Now I know better than to doubt an ace director, but I happen to have counted the apartment houses on 55th Street in New York, and on that one street there are 9,762 apartment houses. I found that in every apartment house on that block there are twelve kept women. That makes 117,144 retained ladies. Now every retained lady has two Pekinese dogs—so that on one street in New York alone there are 234,288 dogs. So you see New York must outdog us. I can't work the whole thing out!

These are just my big worries, but I have a whole raft of smaller ones. For instance:

How far must the male avocado tree be from the female avocado tree to produce fruit that the mother can be proud of? My tree started off the season last Spring with thirteen children, and not one lived long enough to become a salad!

And then at what does our charming First Lady of the Land always laugh so heartily on all her photos? Surely no one could be THAT happy.

And . . . oh, yes . . . do supervisors get ALL their phone calls when I'm reading a scene to them?

Then I often worry why gangsters in this country aren't kind enough to kidnap the men who write our radio dialogue. Can you imagine the reward they could get for NOT returning them?

What becomes of all the tonsils removed in Hollywood? And are they always tonsils?

Here's a real worry—why doesn't someone make a Yiddish version of the "Three Little Pigs" for release in Germany?

Wouldn't you lie awake nights if you owned Pico, and knew that dogs in the neighborhood had designs to destroy her prestige as "The Virgin of Hollywood"?

Oh, Life is just a bowl of worries!

On The Firing Line

by

JAMES R. GRAINGER

I SUPPOSE a sales manager requested to write a few words for The Hollywood Reporter would be displaying wisdom if he were to gently but firmly decline. For Hollywood does not always take so kindly to either words or whole speeches from any one labeled with that crude commercial word "Sales."

But pictures have to be SOLD. And the men who sell them have to know THEIR trade. So, in the same spirit with which you would bear with a suggestion from the camera man or the electrician, bear with me.

You'll HAVE to bear with the sales managers this year. And how!

For this business is right back where it started from, down to hardpan, to scratching and digging. And it is up to Hollywood to learn all it can about the change that has taken place, and to profit by the knowledge. It is essential, if we are to continue to live in this great business.

First of all, let me tell you that the successful sales manager is on the FIRING LINE this year—right out there in the front line trenches. He is riding the Pullmans, traveling the highways and the byways AND HE HAS TO.

He is spending hours—and weeks—on deals that could once be closed by telephone; he is making a hundred deals to gather in the same amount of revenue that a single contract signature would formerly bring him. In other words he is SELLING—and no longer merely taking orders.

It was pretty soft in those five years or more of boom times when the sales manager sitting in one of those famous swivel chairs in New York could set 70 per cent of his gross in HIS OWN COMPANY'S THEATRES. And even if his company had no theatres, it was comparatively soft. For a mere half dozen calls in New York, a scattered bunch of long distance calls across the country, and he was sitting pretty to start his selling season.

The softness extended to exhibition. Showmanship consisted largely of filling fifty-two or a hundred and four dates at the beginning of the year with bulk buys from Companies A, B and C, charitably allowing a few surplus dates to Companies X, Y and Z, and then sitting back to wait for the coin to roll in.

And why not? It was a cinch. Why the average theatre could have kept a standing sign on the marquee reading "MOVING PICTURES TONIGHT"—and packed the house.

Shed a tear for those days, then a few more for the sales manager and the exhibitor who faces a completely changed condition today.

But before you give away all your sympathy—save some for the creators in Hollywood.

Because it is your problem, too. And a damned serious one.

If picture theatres are not getting the money at box offices, AND THEY ARE NOT; if picture companies are not getting the coin in grosses—AND YOU CAN TAKE IT FROM ME THEY ARE NOT—then you can also take the whole problem and dump it right in the lap of Hollywood.

That is where it is going to land eventually, anyhow.

What is the problem?

The realization, first of all, that the days of fabulous million dollar grosses are over. The realization, secondly, that even the days of those nice and juicy two, three and four hundred thousand dollar grosses on ordinary pictures are over.

You've got to watch the dollars—because the sales manager is digging and scratching, and pulling and tearing for—cents.

The margin between outgo and intake is thinner than a tea room sandwich. And only the sales manager who is out plugging right on the firing line is getting even that slim meal.

Those are facts, boys and girls of Hollywood. Face them.

Do two things primarily—get down to hard pan on expenditures, and DON'T EVEN START the type of pictures that sales experience has proven won't get money no matter how well you make them.

The day is gone when any company can take a financial licking on an artistic success. There is no thick velvet to spread over the flops. The day is past when a company can smile at a gallon of red ink on a picture and say, "Well, it's one of those things we have to try every now and then."

We'll continue to make pictures. We'll continue to sell pictures. We'll stay in business. But only those of us will stay who realize that what goes out of the cashier's window must come back at the box office.

And here's to that BOX OFFICE. For, call it an art, industry or business—I don't care. I know that my boss, and your boss, is that BOX OFFICE.

IT GIVES furiously to work for weeks and weeks and months and months on the part of the entire creative and executive faculty of the modern Athens of the Southwest. Items of whimsy, of rousing action, of robust sentiment, of velvet steel, of eternal poetry, of stop-news breathlessness, of moronic appeal, of mature worldliness, are concocted for the groundlings of a waiting nation. Glendale, Cal.—Government agents today attached the bank account of Cotton Mather Ginseberge, local clubman, on a charge of failing to report an income in excess of $250,000 for 1931 and 1932. An interesting story was told by Field Agent Andreas Gewurra as Mr. Ginseberge was being arraigned.

Ginseberge, according to Gewurra, had made a habit of lounging in the lobby at local previews and contracting bets with supervisors as they entered the theatre that, despite his never having seen the previewed attraction before, he could tell, when the names of the cast were flashed on the screen, which two people, male and female, would be in each other's arms at the end of the picture. Ginseberge's greatest achievement, at odds of one to eight, was the selection of Gary Cooper as the victor in the suit for the hand of Miss Carole Lombard, despite the fact that the first two reels of the picture, with great expense of time, money and supervisors' and writers' ingenuity, had been devoted to a clear exposition of the fact that Miss Lombard was engaged to Bull Montana, who had her father in his financial power. Mr. Ginseberge, at the time, had even insolently gone to a local pool room at the conclusion of the first reel, shouting loudly that he would eat the film if the final fade-out were devoted to an embrace between Mons. Montana and Mlle. Lombard. He even offered generously to regard his bet as lost if the thing ended upon a litter of kittens. When asked the secret of his mysterious insight—he had already won eight times in a row, having selected Robert Montgomery as the triumphant suitor for Miss Hayes over Ralph Forbes, Marion Davies for Bing Crosby over Fifi D'Orsay, Charles Farrell for Janet Gaynor over George Stone, Janet Gaynor for Charles Farrell over Kitty Kelly, George Brent for Ruth Chatterton over Guy Kibbee, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. for Katharine Hepburn over Adolphe Menjou, William Powell for Kay Francis over Paul Lukas, and Bruce Cabot for Fay Wray over King Kong—he maintained a dignified silence. It will be remembered that three cutters were fired on the charge of having given Mr. Ginseberge inside information, inasmuch as he could otherwise never have guessed the solution of stories all of which had been prepared with great care and most of which had been purchased for large sums because of their basic novelty.

Sedalia, Mo.—The local police force today won a hard-fought victory over an enraged mob of picture-goers in front of the Colombo Screen Palace who had discovered that, on a pretext connected with the N. R. A., the price of admission had been increased from ten cents to fifteen cents for an average program consisting of three feature films, four news-reels, three shorts, six trailers and a stage show headed by ex-President Hoover, the Ile de France and the Committee on Admissions of the University of Southern California.

Tintype of a Fellow Acting

by

SIDNEY SKOLSKY

PORTRAIT of a fellow acting—and the fellow is me.

They finally reached my scene in the Paul Muni flicker, "Hi Nellie." Director Mervyn LeRoy gave me orders to report on the set, ready for action, at 9.15 in the morning.

"Hi Nellie" is a newspaper yarn. The sequence I play in is in a speakeasy called the Merry-Go-Round. It is fashioned after the place in New York. There was some question whether I should play a newspaperman or a drunkard.

In the beginning Mervyn didn't want me to portray a newspaperman, as I didn't look the part. However, I told him that I wouldn't know how to play a drunkard. I never take a drink.

For two weeks I tried to study the role of a drunkard. LeRoy and Muni took me to the Colony and Clover Clubs. One sip of anything and I was in a corner sleeping. When a fellow can't play a bum in pictures he's through. It looked as if I were through before I started.

LeRoy, however, decided to take a chance on me. It was the toss of a coin that made Raft a star. It was a nose that gave Durante more profile than all the Barrymores together and made him a star. It's my beard that they're depending on to put me over.

"Take a shave," said Director LeRoy, "so your beard will show and hurry over." It seems that I always need a shave immediately after shaving. LeRoy's last instructions were to come disguised as a newspaperman.

I arrived on the speakeasy set at 9.15 in the morning practically walking in my sleep. On Broadway, just a few hours earlier, I would be leaving. That's Hollywood—night scenes in the morning.

Then I was informed that Muni wasn't going to play in the scene with me. He was afraid I'd steal it. He was going to assist LeRoy in directing me. I'm the kind of an actor that needs two directors.

Ned Sparks of the serious pan is my straight man. I don't want to go ham like most actors, but there's no tougher guy in the business to play a bit with. He can take a scene from the best of them. It took me half an hour of rehearsals just to look at Sparks and not laugh.

Here is the sequence as we played it and as it will appear on the screen.

I am in the telephone booth in the Merry-Go-Round. There is a shot of me in the booth, but all you see is the telephone and the wire. I am hidden from view. It is a disappearing entrance, something new in acting.

Then Sparks, playing the role of Shammy, a newspaperman, walks toward the booth to make a phone call. Excited I see him. I say "Hello, Shammy." He says "Hello, Skolsky." They couldn't give Sparks much dialogue here. He had a tough time remembering the word Skolsky.

After this "Hello" delivered with much feeling, Sparks gives me one of those hard looks for which he is noted. My smart line at this time is to say: "What are you smiling about?" Sparks' reply is: "Because I'm so happy." Then I walk away muttering to myself "He's happy." And I take out a piece of paper and a pencil and start scribbling.

Now, I don't believe this is very smart dialogue. I want to rewrite the scene. There are a couple of good gags I'd like to tell. Director LeRoy informs me that the important point in this sequence is to get Sparks into the phone booth to keep the picture going, and to get me out of the phone booth and out of the picture.

I learned plenty about picture making from my brief appearance. I discovered how movie boners are made. In fact if it wasn't for second director Paul Muni I would have committed a movie boner. That would have been nice. I would have to pan myself in my own column for making a movie boner.

When they shot the sequence of me walking out of the phone booth and talking to Ned Sparks I had my coat buttoned. It took about half an hour to make this scene. Then the camera and the lights had to be set for a close-up. About fifteen minutes later I had to do the same sequence again, but this time stand still outside the booth as I spoke to Sparks. This shot would be a close-up, cut into the walking bit, showing my face.

This is what they call acting in the movies. Bah! When I was a star in the legitimate—that was acting.

During the lapse of time between scenes I had become very warm under the lights. I opened my jacket and had placed my handkerchief in my lapel pocket. On the screen you would see me—if you looked real fast—leave the phone booth with my jacket buttoned and no handkerchief. Then you'd see me stop to talk and my coat would be buttoned and I would have a handkerchief. Then you'd see me start walking and my coat would be unbuttoned and the handkerchief gone.

But Second Director Paul Muni noticed that. I told you that I'm the kind of an actor who needs two directors.

What a performance I give. It's so good that I haven't had any other offers. It's a shame that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences isn't going to make its awards this season. There'd be no doubt about the selections.

Katharine Hepburn, of course, would get one prize—for the best male performance of the year. And I'd get the other for the best female performance.

Greetings
and Sincere
Good Wishes

Maybe THEY THRILL to the CLOSE-UPS ... BUT what do they think of your SOUND

Dolores Del Rio and Gene Raymond from the RKO Picture—"Flying Down to Rio"—RCA Victor Photophone Sound

When the big blond hero and the nation's sweetheart went for the clinch back in the silent days, that's all there was to it. But now there's sound, and the audience thrill as much to those words, those sighs and those million dollar inflections, as they do to what they see . . . if the sound is right. We're not telling you anything new. Every show man learned that with his A B C's. But it points to this undeniable fact: that good sound is a box office attraction; that daily, hundreds of far sighted exhibitors are finding their High Fidelity sound equipment as important to the week's gross as the best product out of the studios.

Definitely: you can't team up first rate pictures with second rate sound and go under the wire a winner. But, back up the product with a new RCA Victor Photophone High Fidelity installation, and you'll know the supreme enjoyment of a mounting box office that has been the reward of every exhibitor who has seen the light and signed on the dotted line.

A Question
ANSWERED

WHAT big picture today does not include backgrounds that call for composite photography? The answer is obvious. . . . The really vital point is: what medium to use in photographing these important backgrounds? . . . Eastman has answered that question. Eastman Background Negative, with its remarkably fine grain, its surprising speed, and its excellent processing characteristics, completely solves the film problem of the composite shot. U-A'S HAPPY NEW YEAR

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•A THOUGHT with which to start the new year? I suppose there could be many. But here's one:

The coming year will prove the greatest test of EXECUTIVE production brains that this industry has yet seen.

And why?

For this reason:

Major production this year will divide itself more sharply, more definitely, more arbitrarily between two main classes than ever in the history of this industry. The classes are:

The great attraction on which an organization is ready to SHOOT THE WORKS, to go to any limits to be sure of getting a BIG box office draw;

And the "organization" picture, where the aim is good entertainment, but within time schedules and budgets that match present average grosses.

And why is this purely an EXECUTIVE problem? For this reason:

Barring the exceptions who would be wrong in any line of endeavor, there will be no difficulty making those "controlled" budget pictures in so far as the MAKERS are concerned.

The crews, starting at director, through the camera gang, rounding up the sound crew, not neglecting the gaffers, grips and props, and following through to the dubbing room, will always respond LOYALLY to any requests for speeded-up efficiency.

We know. We've seen them do it. We've seen them respond when our right hand was making a salary cut and our left hand pleading for help.

So what?

Just this: If there is any failure in delivering top notch entertainment on these "controlled" budget pictures—it will not be from the MAKERS.

It will be at the TOP—the dozen or so executives and their associate producers—to whom is given the decision as to WHAT TO MAKE, and what PREPARATION it is given before it is made.

It's up to YOU, big boys. The MAKERS will deliver. Just as Jack Warner says they are delivering for him. But it is in your judgment that the result lies—on your judgment as to WHAT you decide to make, and the INTELLIGENCE you give the preparation of it before you start.

Sutherland Improves

Bulletins on the condition of Eddie Sutherland over the week-end and up to a late hour last night continued encouraging. The popular director turned for the better Saturday evening, after two transfusions within twenty-four hours, and last night's bulletin reported "improved pulse and general vitality."

Pickford Will Play B & K Chi Houses

Chicago.—Mary Pickford and Balaban and Katz are negotiating for a series of personal appearances here for the famous screen star in the "Twelve Pound Look" vehicle she appeared with at the New York Paramount.

Showmen here, in touch with the New York situation, hear that Mary's personal draw and good performance saved the week at the Paramount with "Alice in Wonderland." The Balaban and Katz negotiations are a result of this opinion.

Wanger and Party Due Here Next Thursday

New York.—Walter Wanger, Major John Zanft, Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson left here by train Sunday for the coast, arriving Thursday.

Wanger, Rivkin and Wolfson have been in New York ten days taking in the new shows.

Par-Famous Name Change

Wilmington.—Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation has changed its name in Delaware to the Lares Theatre Corporation of New York.

Joseph Schenck Cables From Europe Restoring Last Year's Salary Cuts—First Of Majors

New York—It's a real happy New Year in the far-flung United Artists distributing organization. When Joseph Schenck found it necessary to inflict salary cuts last Spring he gave his bond to the employees that the cuts would be restored as soon as business warranted it. And he chose the most appropriate day of the year to keep his promise. For on Saturday he cabled from Europe restoring the cuts as of January 1.

This puts United Artists first in line among the majors to be in a posi-

Col. Negotiates For Jan Kiepura Loan

Columbia is negotiating with Jan Kiepura to take over his one-picture deal that Universal holds. Latter studio is agreeable but the decision is in the hands of the player who is in London. Joe May, who directed Kiepura in "A Song For You," is now under the Columbia pennant.

Corrinne Griffith Returns

Corrinne Griffith, having finished a successful tour of Noel Coward's play "Design for Living," arrived in town Sunday by plane for picture work. M. C. Levee, her personal manager, has two offers for the actress.

Sam Briskin Hurries

New York.—Sam Briskin didn't wait for the New Year's in New York but got away for the coast by train Saturday afternoon.

Studios Fortunate In Rain Damages

Hollywood studios were fairly fortunate in effects from the unprecedented downpour over the week-end that reached flood proportions in many sections.

A late check-up yesterday found exterior sets holding up fairly well at most plants, with crews ready to start work today to repair the minor damage done. Paramount had a crew working all day yesterday to have certain sets ready for today.

Universal, RKO, Columbia and MGM reported no serious damage. At Fox Westwood Hills all but one phone line was out of order. At Paramount chief damage was in flooding the basement, with the accounting storage vaults inundated. All lights at Paramount were off from midnight to 6 a.m.

Rogers Loses Sleep to Save Drivers from Flood

Will Rogers got up out of a nice warm bed yesterday morning at 4 o'clock to warn automobiists the bridge just below his house had been washed away. Many persons are thankful for Rogers' thoughtfulness.

Gene Fowler Complains

New York.—Gene Fowler is in New York stating that he just escaped from Hollywood in time to save his mind. Also complaining that he was docked $1.85 on his last week's check and still doesn't know what it was about.

Marx Rests Another Week

Sam Marx, MGM scenario editor, will not return to his desk today as he had planned. His doctor ordered him to take another week's rest.

REFEREE REJECTS FOX-W.C. TRUSTEES' $152,000 BILL

Applications of trustees and attorneys in the Fox West Coast bankruptcy proceedings for fees of approximately $152,000 were turned down by Referee McNabb, who countered with offers of about $36,000.

Charles Skouras, Charles C. Irwin and William H. Moore Jr. were the three trustees in bankruptcy, while the attorneys included O'Melveny, Tuller & Myers, and Attorney Reuben G. Hunt.

The referee made no comment on the size of the requests, and even expressed his knowledge that the trustees and attorneys had worked long and hard, but based his refusal on an unwillingness to grant such large fees until he had evidence of the estate's value.

T. I. Talley appeared at the hearing protesting against all allowances until he could bring forth evidence of alleged irregularities in the administration of Fox West Coast. Attorney Saul Klein also appeared on behalf of a lawyer's committee investigating the receivership.

U-A'S HAPPY NEW YEAR

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•A THOUGHT with which to start the new year? I suppose there could be many. But here's one:

The coming year will prove the greatest test of EXECUTIVE production brains that this industry has yet seen.

And why?

For this reason:

Major production this year will divide itself more sharply, more definitely, more arbitrarily between two main classes than ever in the history of this industry. The classes are:

The great attraction on which an organization is ready to SHOOT THE WORKS, to go to any limits to be sure of getting a BIG box office draw;

And the "organization" picture, where the aim is good entertainment, but within time schedules and budgets that match present average grosses.

And why is this purely an EXECUTIVE problem? For this reason:

Barring the exceptions who would be wrong in any line of endeavor, there will be no difficulty making those "controlled" budget pictures in so far as the MAKERS are concerned.

The crews, starting at director, through the camera gang, rounding up the sound crew, not neglecting the gaffers, grips and props, and following through to the dubbing room, will always respond LOYALLY to any requests for speeded-up efficiency.

We know. We've seen them do it. We've seen them respond when our right hand was making a salary cut and our left hand pleading for help.

So what?

Just this: If there is any failure in delivering top notch entertainment on these "controlled" budget pictures—it will not be from the MAKERS.

It will be at the TOP—the dozen or so executives and their associate producers—to whom is given the decision as to WHAT TO MAKE, and what PREPARATION it is given before it is made.

It's up to YOU, big boys. The MAKERS will deliver. Just as Jack Warner says they are delivering for him. But it is in your judgment that the result lies—on your judgment as to WHAT you decide to make, and the INTELLIGENCE you give the preparation of it before you start.

Sutherland Improves

Bulletins on the condition of Eddie Sutherland over the week-end and up to a late hour last night continued encouraging. The popular director turned for the better Saturday evening, after two transfusions within twenty-four hours, and last night's bulletin reported "improved pulse and general vitality."

Pickford Will Play B & K Chi Houses

Chicago.—Mary Pickford and Balaban and Katz are negotiating for a series of personal appearances here for the famous screen star in the "Twelve Pound Look" vehicle she appeared with at the New York Paramount.

Showmen here, in touch with the New York situation, hear that Mary's personal draw and good performance saved the week at the Paramount with "Alice in Wonderland." The Balaban and Katz negotiations are a result of this opinion.

Wanger and Party Due Here Next Thursday

New York.—Walter Wanger, Major John Zanft, Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson left here by train Sunday for the coast, arriving Thursday.

Wanger, Rivkin and Wolfson have been in New York ten days taking in the new shows.

Par-Famous Name Change

Wilmington.—Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation has changed its name in Delaware to the Lares Theatre Corporation of New York.

Joseph Schenck Cables From Europe Restoring Last Year's Salary Cuts—First Of Majors

New York—It's a real happy New Year in the far-flung United Artists distributing organization. When Joseph Schenck found it necessary to inflict salary cuts last Spring he gave his bond to the employees that the cuts would be restored as soon as business warranted it. And he chose the most appropriate day of the year to keep his promise. For on Saturday he cabled from Europe restoring the cuts as of January 1.

This puts United Artists first in line among the majors to be in a posi-

Col. Negotiates For Jan Kiepura Loan

Columbia is negotiating with Jan Kiepura to take over his one-picture deal that Universal holds. Latter studio is agreeable but the decision is in the hands of the player who is in London. Joe May, who directed Kiepura in "A Song For You," is now under the Columbia pennant.

Corrinne Griffith Returns

Corrinne Griffith, having finished a successful tour of Noel Coward's play "Design for Living," arrived in town Sunday by plane for picture work. M. C. Levee, her personal manager, has two offers for the actress.

Sam Briskin Hurries

New York.—Sam Briskin didn't wait for the New Year's in New York but got away for the coast by train Saturday afternoon.

Studios Fortunate In Rain Damages

Hollywood studios were fairly fortunate in effects from the unprecedented downpour over the week-end that reached flood proportions in many sections.

A late check-up yesterday found exterior sets holding up fairly well at most plants, with crews ready to start work today to repair the minor damage done. Paramount had a crew working all day yesterday to have certain sets ready for today.

Universal, RKO, Columbia and MGM reported no serious damage. At Fox Westwood Hills all but one phone line was out of order. At Paramount chief damage was in flooding the basement, with the accounting storage vaults inundated. All lights at Paramount were off from midnight to 6 a.m.

Rogers Loses Sleep to Save Drivers from Flood

Will Rogers got up out of a nice warm bed yesterday morning at 4 o'clock to warn automobiists the bridge just below his house had been washed away. Many persons are thankful for Rogers' thoughtfulness.

Gene Fowler Complains

New York.—Gene Fowler is in New York stating that he just escaped from Hollywood in time to save his mind. Also complaining that he was docked $1.85 on his last week's check and still doesn't know what it was about.

Marx Rests Another Week

Sam Marx, MGM scenario editor, will not return to his desk today as he had planned. His doctor ordered him to take another week's rest.

Dr. Giannini Comes West

New York.—Dr. A. H. Giannini of the Bank of America left for Los Angeles on Sunday.

THE LOW DOWN

It may have been the wet weather—inside and out—or it may have just been the winding up of the old year. But you should have heard the wild and woolly rumors that drifted over the news editor's desk as the old year saw its way out. And so many "friends of a friend of a friend" would swear to the truth of each one that it needed a sieve, a sifter, and a yard of cheese cloth to keep them out of the paper.

It started about Tuesday with the "absolute guaranteed" statement that Lasky was hurrying east after the first of the year to settle his Fox deal and move over to Radio.

Much telephoning and scurrying—finally Lasky was reached. You could hear his laugh and almost see his smile over the phone. Then B. B. Kahane. "Well," he said, "If Mr. Lasky is looking for a job I guess we'd be darned glad to grab him. But it just happens to be one of the things that has never been given a thought."

Wednesday it shifted. On the oath of a son of Mohammed you were told that it was B. P. Schulberg who would be signed "any minute" to go to Radio. This died an early death when B. P.—caught on his way to a set—dryly remarked that he still had a contract with Paramount until October 1—and that ought to sette it.

Thursday was New York's day—and the Emanuel Cohen story—quickly denied by Adolph Zukor.

And so it went. Just seeing an old year out, boys and girls. But if you wanted to top them all, it was just necessary to travel to the right spots over Saturday and Sunday. The business was taken apart and put together again. But strange as it may seem—especially if you are a little groggy—those are the same faces you see on the boss's as you return to the desk this A.M. Oh, hum.

New York REVIEWS

"HELL AND HIGH WATER"

Paramount prod.; directors, Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt; writers, Max Miller, Grover Jones, William Slavens McNutt, Agnes Brand Leahy.

Rialto Theatre

Times: The dramatic composition of the scenes runs the gamut of mediocrity from the unbelievably commonplace to the aggresively overdone.

American: It is a good story, well played by reliable Dick Arlen, attractive Judith Allen and Charles Grapewin. The dual direction of Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt keeps the story moving.

Post: The Rialto film fails to carry a credible flavor, and it is further weakened by several cumbrous players whose exaggerated acting brings out the worst in a pretty bad story, which is a strained and unconventional one.

World-Telegram: It is not dull, nor is it without a good idea. But it seems to be just one of those "nice" uninspiring little weaklings that are damned to be only moderately amusing. It is cluttered up with sequences that have no direct bearing on the main idea and which all too frequently hinder what little action and characterization there is.

Journal: Although it hasn't much plot, the picture is told with such charm and human understanding that it goes into the better-than-average class. The dialogue is delightfully natural and diverting.

Mirror: An able and pleasing company struggles with the material, but fails to make it very interesting.

Herald-Tribune: Paramount's production is far from being the delightful diversion that reading one of Miller's books is. It is too often dull and uneventful to be worth the hour passed watching it.

Lesser Forms New Non-Theatrical Co.

Sol Lesser has formed a new organization, Principal Non-Theatrical Pictures Corporation, which with the international affiliations arranged by Lesser on his recent trip abroad will specialize in 16mm. sound on film subjects for the non-theatrical market.

It is a New York corporation with Alfred Cohen acting as general manager from offices in the RKO building, New York City. The company starts with a library of over 200 subjects. Seventy branch offices will be opened for physical distribution before May.

tion and have the willingness to make good on the promises of the salary cut era.

It brings a Happy New Year to more than five hundred employees of the distributing organization in this country alone. Salaries in the brackets under $100, where the cuts hurt the most and the return is most helpful, are restored immediately in full. In the higher brackets an appreciable chunk is restored as of January 1, with the balance to come as business warrants in the very near future.

Al Lichtman, in making the announcement, stated that the restoration is made in view of the fine business done by the company beginning with "The Bowery," and in anticipation of the better business to come with the general release of "Roman Scandals," "Gallant Lady" and "Nana."

The news is easily the big topic today in New York and exchange centers of the country, where employees took so many cuts and heard so many promises over recent years that it sounds like something of a fairy tale to hear of a major exec remembering his promise from far off Europe.

Grier at Bev-Wilshire

Jimmy Grier makes his season's bow in the Gold Room of the Beverly-Wilshire this evening. Gogo Deslys, Harry Foster, Ray Bradford, Craig Leitch and the Three Bad Boys are included among the entertainers.

Credit to Orry Kelly

The gowns which the reviewer raved about in Warners' "Fashions of 1934" were designed by Orry Kelly.

Jeanette M'Donald Exclusive at MGM

Jeanette MacDonald will start the new year off with a brand new contract at a nice tilt in salary. MGM is closing a new deal with the player on a new two-year arrangement, wherein the star will give her services exclusively for that period. Her present contract, which will be destroyed when she signs the new one, calls for the star to make three pictures a year with the right to make an outside picture and also gives her the right to option the studio.

HEPBURN SAVES 'THE LAKE': 'FIRST APPLE' IS MEDIOCRE

Play Looks Like Bet For Screen Though

"THE LAKE"

Jed Harris presents Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake," by Dorothy Massingham and Murray McDonald. With Frances Starr, Blanche Bates, Lionel Pape, Roberta Beatty, Geoffrey Wardwell, Colin Clive, Lucy Beaumont and others. Settings by Jo Mielziner.

New York.—It would, we suppose, be entirely possible to find a play some day that would do Miss Hepburn as much credit as she lends vitality and worth to a vehicle, but what with the holiday spirit and the excitement of having Miss Hepburn in person on the stage there is no sense in quibbling too much over the mediocre material into which Hepburn breathes life. Written in a completely pseudo-intellectual manner, the play nevertheless offers plenty of the stuff that good pictures can be made of in that because of the writing, most of the vital action evidently takes place off stage and with that written in there is nothing to stop any studio from making the most of it. And it does offer a studio the opportunity to make use of a number of contract players who could each do a good bit toward making it a well rounded picture.

Hepburn's is the part of Stella Surrege, a fine, spirited English gal stuck away among the landed gentry in a small town, looking for romance. Infatuation for a good looking, weak, married gent overtakes her first, but the gal has her pride and in order to save it decides to marry John Clayne, a noble fellow who loves her enough to help her out. On her wedding day Stella finds the courage to tell him all, because she has realized at last that it is really John whom she loves. Tragedy dogs Stella's footsteps, however, when as she and John slip away from the reception their car skids and John is drowned in the lake that Stella's selfish mamma had insisted on installing to make the place look like an estate. The play should really have ended then and there. However, there had to be a third act, and that is taken up with platitudes and counter-truisms in an effort to make Stella realize her life is really not over, too.

It is the acting that deserves the notices and Hepburn is no disappointment. And the gal is pitted against two excellent veterans, Blanche Bates and Frances Starr, both of whom do fine work in their respective roles of the lovable, hard-boiled, understanding maiden aunt; and the selfish, fluttery completely bourgeoise mamma. Lionel Pape keeps a badly written role from dripping into burlesque as the downtrodden, spineless father. Geoffrey Wardwell is the attractive soandso who couldn't love enough to give up his comfort. And Colin Clive is the noble gent and sorry indeed are we for him. Mr. Clive's part is just about the vaguest piece of characterization that any two authors had to collaborate on and on top of that he is forced to speak mainly in unfinished sentences and assume awkward silences. Mr. Clive does nobly—if he hadn't, no one would have noticed him at all.

Jo Mielziner has contributed one of those very lovely sets that calls forth appreciative applause as the curtain goes up.

'The Lion Roars'

The luncheon which Jack Warner is throwing for the Columbia football team today will be broadcast over a national hookup. Joe E. Brown will act as master of ceremonies and most of studio's big names will be on hand.

George O'Brien Up For Sol Lesser Lead

George O'Brien's first picture since he severed his connections with Fox will likely be an independent production for Sol Lesser. Lesser is negotiating with M. C. Levee, O'Brien's personal representative, for the star to play the top spot in the Harold Bell Wright novel "When a Man's a Man."

Hackett-Goodrich Team Gets New MGM Ticket

The writing team of Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich scheduled to check off the MGM payroll the end of next month were handed "Naughty Marietta," Victor Herbert's operetta, Saturday. Team will turn in a treatment on this old-timer, and if satisfactory studio plans to ask them to fashion the screen play.

The pair had been set to go east for a Broadway play.

'U' Sets Sloman Scripter

Universal Saturday signed Christine Ames to write the screen play on the picture which Ted Sloman will direct for the studio tentatively titled "Today We Live." Miss Ames recently sold "The Human Side" to Universal for early production.

Wheeler-Woolsey East

Dorothy Lee leaves for the east tomorrow night with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey to make personal appearances and do radio work. Group goes to Detroit first, then on to New York. Will be back in five weeks.

Lyle Talbot Mystery

Lyle Talbot's whereabouts continue to be a mystery. When last heard from the player was on his way to the Hearst ranch at San Simeon, but Warners, wanting him for immediate picture, has yet to locate him.

Krasna Entirely Free

Coincidental with his release from his Columbia long termer, Norman Krasna is off the MGM payroll. Writer's arrangement at MGM was on a loan-out basis from Columbia.

Fox Seeks Jewell

Fox placed a bid with MGM Saturday for the loan of Isabel Jewell. George White wants the player for a featured role in his "Scandals."

Conrad Nagel Good But No Pic In This

"THE FIRST APPLE"

Lee Shubert presents "The First Apple," by Lynn Starling, directed by Bela Blau; setting by Arthur Segal. With Irene Purcell, Conrad Nagel, A. J. Herbert, Nana Bryan, Spring Byington, Albert Van Dekker.

New York.—An unfortunately sad little comedy, which in spite of an entirely capable cast doesn't stand much chance. And despite the fact that it is presented in a prologue and three acts there is barely enough in it for a Vitaphone short.

Mr. Lynn Starling (who was responsible for a hit once) has gone so far in his manufacture of an evening's whimsy as to try to make you believe that a gal wouldn't marry the man she really loved (and to whom she had "given all" under the influence of Brahms) unless her fiance would give his consent to breaking off her engagement to him. Such is honor among the younger generation brought up in a household devoted to phony "isms" filled with a mamma who is a very unfunny cross between Mahatma Gandhi and Aimee Semple McPherson. After a third act devoted to fifth rate Coward dialogue on the value of chives, they all finally get around to marrying off mamma to the honorable fiance, so's the daughter can have her Brahms, and eventually, it is to be hoped, after the first fine flush of love has gone get an opportunity to hear it well played.

It's perhaps a little childish to be quite as bitter about it all, but with such a really good cast, and an author who is no novice, one has a right to expect something with a little less hay in it and at least a fair share of hey, hey. Conrad Nagel and Irene Purcell are really very, very good indeed. But Spring Byington, Nana Bryant and Albert Van Dekker walk around aimlessly in pretty dull roles and most particularly are the comedy talents of Miss Byington completely wasted.

Cleaning Up Odd Scenes On 'Cat and the Fiddle'

MGM will put "Cat and the Fiddle" back in production for retakes and added scenes this week. Ramon Novarro has finished his latest picture, "Laughing Boy," and is now available, and Jeanette MacDonld is between pictures. Seymour Felix is the supervisor.

Oliver Acts for Lloyd

Harold Lloyd was so impressed with Harry Oliver's work on MGM's "Viva Villa" he has signed the art director to supervise the sets for "Cat's Paw," his next picture, which goes into production shortly.

Berkowitz in East

New York.—J. S. Berkowitz, Majestic franchise holder for California, Arizona and Nevada, is in New York for conferences with Herman Gluckman and E. H. Goldstein.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

And, of course, the pay-off on all the stories about who gave what to whom for Christmas is the story about the Strand Theatre Building. All of youse people in Hollywood who ever had anything to do with Broadway and show business must be able to recall a hundred or more slightly sad but amusing stories about that place which is the Poverty Row of Broadway. So things being what they are, the elevator boys in that building decided to chip in and buy presents for the tenants! Not only that, but an "executive" of one of the "big firms" in that building handed in his resignation to take over a city job that pays a comfortable twenty dollars a week. . . . The only thing that ever surprised us about the cycle started by "Grand Hotel" was that nobody ever tore through the Strand Building and made a story out of that. It's got a million laughs and heartbreaks in it all about the most down-to-earth people you can find.

At a large cocktail party the other day that consisted mainly of celebrities somehow a non-professional crept into the crowd who didn't know any one but the man who brought her. After listening to a number of conversations she finally cornered some one and started asking who the people were. And every time she asked who soandso was and what he did she got the answer in hushed whispers that he was a writer, or a playwright, or an author. So at the end of the cross-questioning the gal came out with, "Migod, they've brought me up here to lionize me!"

Ken McKenna has found a play and is directing it for Alfred deLiagre. The name of it is "By Your Leave" and comes into town the very early part of January. . . . Betty Starbuck had to get leave of absence from rehearsals of "Hold Your Horses" in order to get to the Hepburn opening. And to get back to that memorable evening for just a moment, Mrs. Joe Meilzinger had on just about the smartest eveing costume that ever caused a man to want to find out who was wearing it. White corduroy with tailored coat to match and reddish-orange scarf worn in the stock manner. . . . The rumor persists that in spite of the silly Barrymore episode in Philadelphia, Eva LeGallienne sold her bill of goods in Washington that will establish a National Theatre in this country, subsidized by the government and evidently to be directed by Miss LeGallienne. Mrs. Roosevelt is said to be the main sponsor of this idea, which will be run similar to the ones now existing in France, Austria, Mexico and a number of other countries. The theatre will probably functon either here or in Washington.

Rialto Gets 'Ghoul'

New York.—"The Ghoul," Gaumont British picture, has been booked for the Rialto following "Man's Castle." "I Was a Spy," another G-B, will play in the Roxy Theatre about the same time.

MOTION PICTURE DAILY'S HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW

"Gallant Lady"

(20th Century)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 5.—"Gallant Lady" is big and fine. A thrilling picture, throbbing with a measured beat of human sympathy.

Audiences will meet, know, and be pulling for as swell a group of human beings, led by Ann Harding and a stellar cast, as have graced the screen in some time.

Not since "Holiday" has Miss Harding been accorded such a genuine, sincere and meaty role. She handles it with feeling and telling effect.

The story concerns a girl courageous. Her fiance, killed in a take-off on a trans-Atlantic flight, forces her to have her child adopted. Her attachments to three men, her business success, her yearning and quest for her baby boy, and her final break for happiness are meager highlights of an absorbing plot.

Charged with quiet power, suffused with poignant pathos, the picture reveals dramatic heartbreak in a touching and tender mood. Sigh and sob are broken by smiles and laughs. Ann Harding softly etches a portrait that engraves itself on one's memory.

Clive Brook, as a social outcast, elevates human frailty superbly. Tullio Carminati is gay, Otto Kruger is dependable, and both give quality performances as the two other men in Ann Harding's life. Janet Beecher, rich in stage experience, turns in a warm, competent and sincere portrayal. Dickie Moore is a lovable, regular fellow. Betty Lawford, as the female menace, handles a tough job nicely.

Gregory La Cava's direction, keeping the human values well in front at all times, is expert in all departments. Sam Mintz's screen play is a model of craftsmanship.

"Gallant Lady" explores the heartaches and gropings of real people. Its soft symphony reaches the hidden springs of emotions and plays wholesome music on the heartstrings.

Appealing to all classes, "Gallant Lady" may well be considered outstanding, should do standout business where Ann Harding's name pulls and should rejuvenate her popularity elsewhere.

'THE LOCKED ROOM' IS JUST ANOTHER ORDINARY MYSTERY

Not Even Much Film Chance for This One

"THE LOCKED ROOM"

Play by Herbert Ashton, Jr., presented by M. S. Schlesinger and William B. Friedlander; directed by Mr. Friedlander; setting by Amend. Cast: Morton Flamm, Valerie Bergere, Harold Kennedy, Lawrence Keating, Hazel O'Connell, Robert Sloane, Jane Kim, Nena Sinclair, Jonathan Hole, Walter Gilbert, Robert Gleckler, Anthony Blair and Sam J. Park.

New York.—The only apparent excuse for the presentation of this detective mystery play seems to have been the desire of Mr. Ashton to so completely throw his audience off the track that everyone would be fooled as to the identity of the murderer, in doing which he overdid the whole thing and fooled himself. His victim is killed not only once but three times. First off, poor John Burgess is found, as the curtain rises and a knocking heard at the door to his study, shot through the chest and quite dead.

After it has been established as to the method by which he died and that it was a case of suicide to collect double indemnity insurance, and not a case of murder, since the man had no enemies and his family all loved him to distraction, the medical examiner reports that he had been stabbed to death. Sergeant Detective Ryan (played in his usual excellent fashion by Robert Gleckler) is completely stumped by this particular murder-suicide and can make neither head nor tail out of the members of the family or the servants. Ned Parker (Walter Gilbert) the insurance man, who is on the scene to eliminate the murder angle if possible, before his company is forced to pay double indemnity, joins hands with Ryan to help solve the mystery.

Making use of the trick of accusing an innocent member of the family in the hope that the real murderer will come forward to protect her, one of the sons confesses he stabbed the old gent in a quarrel. Whereupon up speaks faithful old Anna the servant who had been with John Burgess for 20 years and admits that she poisoned her master, because he was the lover who deserted her in Germany, and their daughter is the upstairs maid. Both Mother and daughter had been left out of Burgess' will.

With the crime now solved and the murderers accounted for, a sigh of relief is breathed only to have Detective Ryan turn on the insurance man at the final curtain and disclose him as the real murderer, who planted a trick gunfire device on Burgess' desk, to kill his victim mysteriously, without evidences of a gun being found, then turn in a report of suicide and cash in on a heavy commission for saving the insurance company the necessity for paying double indemnity for murder.

Played in an aura of unreality, one gets the feeling that the murdered man never was real, his family isn't real. Instead of poignant grief at Burgess' passing there is nothing but blatant, careless, surface emotion, hardly compatible with such an event in real life. All the members of the Burgess family act as if they were strangers to each other and completely mystified at finding themselves in the midst of something that doesn't concern them. There is the suspicion likewise that the police sergeant and the insurance investigator are simply on the stage to go through with the tricks and circumlocutions laid out for them by the author. Similarly too, the object of the stage director and his performers seemed pointed at a definite comedy effect, with the butler the worst offender, although the fault is not his. Aside from Gleckler, Walter Gilbert and Valerie Bergere, the work of the cast was less than noteworthy. Should the era of silent drama return one day years hence, this play would make a good jumping off place for the start of another cycle of mystery films. And that's all.

Al Green Burns

Al Green is plenty burned up at Warners for not allowing him to attend the Mervy LeRoy-Doris Warner merger, after the director had picked him for the best man. Green could have attended the wedding and been back to Hollywood in time to start his next assignment, "Fur Coats," on January 8.

Movie Ushers Kick At Code Salaries

New York.—Movie ushers in the metropolitan district have complained to the Code Authority that the code is causing them a loss by setting a minimum scale of 40 cents and 25 cents an hour, or $10 for a forty-hour week.

Charles O'Reilly, of the Code Authority, admits that one large theatre chain is paying that scale, but says most of the other theares are paying the old and higher scale.

Efforts are being made here to unionize the ushers. They met with a rebuff at the Roxy, where the ushers declared they were receiving more than the union minimum demands.

Writers Guild Checking Closely on All Credits

Screen Writers Guild, in an effort to protect the interests of all its members, is keeping tabs on all exploitation by writers, demanding that a writer who has worked on a script with other writers specify collaboration.

Practise of scrutinizing all credits has been put in effect in order to offset any beefs from slighted members. Credit grabbing hogs are being brought to book wherever examples of their activity are discovered.

Added Scenes for Col.'s 'Men of Tomorrow'

Frank Borzage puts "Men of Tomorrow" back into work Thursday for three days of added scenes. Picture, which was originally titled "Paul Street Boys," has studio raving. Jo Swerling has written the added material and the same cast of twenty boys will be used for the scenes.

Burton's Next Ticket

Columbia has assigned David Burton to direct the next Carole Lombard story, which is tentatively titled "Sonata," from an original story by Jo Swerling.

Burton directed Miss Lombard's last picture for Columbia titled "Brief Moment."

Breaks for Baby Stars

MGM is giving breaks to its baby stars who appeared in "Hollywood Party." Linda Parker has been given a role in "Viva Villa" and Ruth Channing has been set for a nice role in "Men in White." Pauline Brooks is also up for good roles.

Para. East for Girls

New York.—Earl Carroll held an audition at the Majestic Theatre to select eleven girls to appear in Paramount's "Murder at the Vanities," which will be produced under his supervision. The girls picked will go to the coast.

Set Distribution for 'He'

New York.—Distribution for "He the King of Virtue," an Astor picture, will be handled by Dave Biederman and All Star Features in the Los Angeles territory.

'WINNIE' BLUFFS CHASE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•DURING the last year most every studio in town has had its hands full trying to appease the annoyances of one or more of their important players who had the urge to do a stage play. Most of the producers arguing against such a jump by their important players did so with the thought in mind of not losing their services for that period, but one and possibly two were arguing with a different idea—they wanted to keep the names right in their studios and guide them away from a possible stage flop, not only the flop of the play, but the flop of the artist as well.

We had one producer tell us months ago, "There are not five persons in Hollywood who have had any success in pictures who could go to the stage and do anything that would remotely compare with their picture success and for that reason I try to keep my people here. If I thought they would be a success I would urge them to take that flyer, the stimulus would do wonders; but knowing that few if any could hit under present conditions the flop would do them untold harm."

A shining example of all the above is what has happened, and is happening, to "The Lake" that stars Katharine Hepburn. There are those who think that "Katy" is even a worse flop than the play, and others vice versa. But whatever the thoughts, the venture will hurt (what we consider) the greatest artist in pictures.

We know of at least ten people who tried to talk Hepburn out of the idea of returning to the stage. First she had always been pretty much of a flop before the footlights; secondly, those advisers knew that there were only a handful of people writing for the theatre and her chance of getting a good play, that would measure up to her picture success, was about a thousand-to-one shot. And, too, some of her friends KNEW she could not duplicate her picture success on the stage and wanted not only to save her the money she invested in the play, but the humiliation of a stage defeat.

That angle about ONLY A HANDFUL OF PEOPLE WRITING FOR THE STAGE should hold plenty of warn-

Groucho Peeved

New York.—To the previously published denial that the Marx Brothers had closed a contract with Paramount, Groucho Marx now adds that the brothers are definitely through with that company. The brothers may postpone any new deal until after leaving pictures for at least one Broadway play.

NRA Labor Board Swings Into Action

The Regional Labor Board is swinging into action on studio NRA matters. Dick L'Estrange was on Friday appointed to act individually in handling all complaints prior to their being placed before the board itself.

Already, up to last night, L'Estrange had worked out settlements of disputes with Invincible Pictures, Crescent Productions and a complaint against RKO studios was well on the way to adjustment. KMTR was handled on radio matters.

Bill Rowland East To Close Columbia Deal

William Rowland, of the Rowland and Brice producing duo, left last night from the United Airport for New York. He will be gone a week, meeting Harry and Jack Cohn in the metropolis to polish off the details on the R&B distributing deal with Columbia.

Dick Wallaces Returning

The Richard Wallaces leave New York Saturday for Hollywood, according to word received by the director's representative, Dave Epstein.

Sheehan Calls For Showdown From Bank On His Contract And Wins Full Power Of Okay

The explosion that has been simmering in the Fox organization and ready to burst at any moment has been settled, and the blast has been delayed for an indefinite period. W. R. Sheehan is again the production head of the Fox lot with full power of okay on all pictures. That also includes the productions bearing the Lasky name.

On Sheehan's return here from Europe he became ruffled at the stories that he had been reduced to the head of a single production unit with Radio's 'Rio' Grabs Big Dough in N.Y.

New York.—On the last two days of a two weeks' run it looks as if the Music Hall here will establish another high mark, what with the special New Year's eve show and the town liking "Flying Down to Rio," the Radio musical.

The picture grabbed $102,000 the first week, and with the holiday week, the extra performance, it's a cinch to better the $109,000 take of the first week's run of "Little Women."

Con Conrad Marries

New York.—Con Conrad was married yesterday at the City Hall, the bride being Leona R. Zadeck, a California girl. Mickey Neilan and Dell Campo were the witnesses. The song writer was divorced from Francine Larrimore in 1925.

Herb Somborn Dies After Long Illness

Death came to Herbert Somborn, head of the Brown Derby Restaurants in Hollywood, and one-time husband of Gloria Swanson, yesterday afternoon at 1:50 o'clock at his home in Beverly Hills after a long siege of illness. Somborn has been ill for over a year and his death was the result of complications following a kidney ailment.

Following his recuperation from a recent operation he had been removed to his home from the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital and it was thought that he was on the road to convalescence when death occurred.

Somborn was 53 years old. His body will be cremated and shipped to New York, where his mother and sister reside, for the burial services.

Del Ruth and Warner Still Apart in Deal

With the completion of "Upperworld," now in production, Roy Del Ruth winds up his ten-year association with Warners. Director and studio have not come together on a new deal.

Lasky Goes East

Jesse L. Lasky leaves for New York on January 10 for a three-week business conference. Producer hopes to return to the Fox lot on February 2 to get started on his first 1934 production which will be "Grand Canary."

Cohn Brothers Bereaved

New York.—Funeral services will be held today at Park West funeral chapel for Mrs. Bella Cohn, mother of the Columbia executives. Harry Cohn flew east for the services.

Erik Charrell Arrives

New York.—Erik Charrell arrives today on the Ile de France on his way to Fox for a one-picture deal.

ROGERS, OF STANDARD OIL, STARTS OWN PIC COMPANY

New York.—Some of the biggest money the picture business ever saw is coming in with the formation of Fairhaven Productions by H. H. Rogers Jr., son of the famous Standard Oil magnate. William Alexander, film veteran, is associated as vice president and general manager.

The new company will produce special attractions only and employ new technical processes devised by Rogers. One device claimed is a method by which a picture can be transferred to a screen simultaneously with its being photographed. Figure that one out.

Grant Peeved By Demands of Para.

London.—Cary Grant is bewilderedly trying to figure whether he came here for a holiday or for hard work and has finally decided the only answer is to get back home as soon as he can. Paramount has been running the actor ragged with demands that he make personal appearances, and this on top of a minor operation and a siege in a nursing home.

GOLDWYN'S 'SCANDALS' IS DOING BOX OFFICE TRICKS

New York.—The Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists production of "Roman Scandals" is doing box office tricks that are most strange to this picture business—that is, strange based on the past three-year grosses.

At the Rivoli here, after knocking over a record-breaking first week, the picture rang up a sensational single day, Sunday, with a special performance at midnight. The day's take was $11,814.

In Philadelphia U. A. was forced to take over the Aldine on a weekly rental basis because of their inability to get together with Warners on a split. The house has averaged less than $4,000 a week for a long period. "Scandals" has done an average of $3,700 A DAY since the opening.

The United Artists in San Francisco clicked off $15,200 the first week, over $3,000 better than the "Kid From Spain" in the same spot when it was charging 25 per cent more admission.

Seven houses of the Poli chain in New England, sought permission and were granted the privilege of running the picture for one show New Year's Eve. The seven were sold out completely before the houses opened and in four spots that many additional theatres were opened to take care of the slough business with the result the chain reported a take of $14,110 for the single performance.

Chicago and Milwaukee are doing sensational. In Chicago the picture got a bad start but has picked up and is topping anything that has been in the house for the past year.

Wellman Slated For 'Barbary Coast' Pic

Samuel Goldwyn is negotiating with Twentieth Century for the loan of William Wellman to direct the Gary Cooper starring vehicle "Barbary Coast."

Wellman is now on a loan to MGM to direct "Streets of New York" for the David Selznick unit and will not finish there for five weeks yet, at which time he will go to Goldwyn if Zanuck has no assignment ready for him.

ings to our bets who want to "return to the theatre." If they must return, they should be assured of a good vehicle and have others than themselves sit in on the judgment of what is good and bad.

We brought this question to the attention of Sam Harris, the most successful manager in the theatre today or yesterday, and Sam said, "Other than their box office pull, because of their pictures, I would not give you a nickel for any star in pictures for a play. The stage and the screen are two entirely different mediums of expression and it does not follow that a success on the screen can hit in the theatre and there is a lot of truth to the other side. When a competent stage artist gets the feel of pictures it has a tendency to ruin him for stage purposes."

'ALL OF ME' IS FOR CLASSES: MONO'S 'WOMAN'S MAN' GOOD

Raft, Mack And Dialogue The Tops

"ALL OF ME"
(Paramount)

Director .....James Flood
Original.....Rose Albert Porter
Screen Play.....Sydney Buchman and Thomas Mitchell
Photographer .....Victor Milner
Cast: Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March, Helen Mack, George Raft, William Collier, Sr.

In spite of the fact that a rough—very rough—print of Paramount's "All of Me" was shown at preview, the picture shows pretty definite earmarks of being a good show.

At any rate, it's different, with a shining new plot, a new method of telling a story, and superb direction on the part of James Flood.

The thread of the story is extremely tenuous—almost frail, but it is interpreted by a robust mood and treatment that save it from petering out into thin air. Wherein it is doubly clever, for while the mental conflict, the intangible drama of the thing will appeal to the intelligentsia and be way over the average head, there are enough melodramatics to entertain almost everybody.

It is the story of the struggle between a man and a girl—Fredric March and Miriam Hopkins. Desperately in love with each other, she is nevertheless afraid of losing in marriage the happiness they have now. He argues: "I'm not offering you happiness. I'm offering you hardships, adventure—and love."

There the matter stands—while George Raft and Helen Mack, in their own tragic, profound, courageous love, illustrate what March means, while the audience (and March and Hopkins) look on. It is clever—extremely so, and, as said before, well directed.

Helen Mack and George Raft are the real stars of the picture. Both of them rate raves for their work. Miss Hopkins handles her difficult role with her usual excellence, but March is handicapped by very unbecoming waved hair and quite a group of mannerisms. However, at moments, he is splendid.

Syd Buchman and Thomas Mitchell wrote the story, and Victor Milner handled a clever camera. The dialogue is exceptionally fine.

The picture, because of its radical deparature from formula, probably won't be a howling success anywhere. Audiences which go for thrillers, westerns and slapstick shorts will probably twiddle their thumbs until it's over But it will be talked about and remembered, and the stock of Raft and Helen Mack—especially Miss Mack—will be boosted higher than ever.

Carmel Myers with Vallee

Carmel Myers has been set in for guest star on the Rudy Vallee Fleischmann hour this Thursday, an unusual tribute in that she is the first guest star to be asked for a repeat appearance. Miss Myers appeared on the program when in the east.

Postponed

Warners planned definitely to make a test of Cliff Montgomery, star of the Columbia football team, yesterday, but after one look at the boy's face following a Rose Bowl afternoon in the mud the test was postponed indefinitely.

$30,000 Settles Col.-Borzage Deal

Frank Borzage and Columbia have settled their differences regarding the price to be paid the director for his services in directing "Man's Castle" and "Men of Tomorrow," originally "Paul Street Boys."

Borzage signed a ticket that would give him the option of accepting $100,000 for the two pictures as straight salary or $50,000 salary and a cut on the grosses of both. And he decided on the latter before starting work.

Having finished both pictures, Borzage suggested that Columbia buy out his participation and the deal was closed with a $30,000 cash payment, giving him $80,000 for his work instead of $100,000 had he decided to accept the straight salary.

Zanft on Way For Tie-in with Agency

New York.—The object of Major John Zanft's trip to Hollywood at this time is to complete the details of an agency affiliation on which he has been working. It is understood that he will join forces and take a large cut-in with one of the big tenpercenters in the film capital.

After getting himself established, he is expected to divide his time between Hollywood, New York and London in the interests of his organization.

Para. Signs Clarke At Eleventh Hour

After resigning itself to placing "Man Who Broke His Heart" into production today without a leading woman, Paramount succeeded late yesterday to put through a fast deal with MGM for the loan of Mae Clarke. Carole Lombard had previously begged out of the assignment.

Preston Foster, Victor McLaglen, Alison Skipworth, David Landau and Mischa Auer go to work today under William Cameron Menzies and George Somnes' direction. Al Lewis is the associate producer.

Radio After Swanson For 'I Love an Actress'

Radio wants Gloria Swanson for the lead opposite Gregory Ratoff in the latter's story of his life titled "I Love an Actress." She will play the role which Lenore Ulric was signed for if she accepts. Elissa Landi is also being considered for the part.

Program Job Nicely Written and Megged

"A WOMAN'S MAN"
(Monogram)

Direction.....Edward Ludwig
Original.....Adela Rogers St. Johns
Adaptation .....Frances Hyland
Photography.....Joseph A. Valentine
Cast: John Halliday, Marguerite de la Motte, Wallace Ford, Kitty Kelly, Jameson Thomas, Tom Dugan, Billee Van Every, Wallis Clark, Don Douglas, Leigh Allen, George Mayo, Harry Green, Jack Perry.

Plenty of entertainment has been packed into this Monogram picture, the kind of entertainment that is sure to please nearly any type of audience. Expertly performed, the story is consistently amusing with the single exception of its routine ending. The excellence of what has gone before leads an audience to expect a unique twist at the finale, and, when the addle-brained movie star goes into a conventional clinch, there is a distinct let down. Since this was a first preview we can figure that Producer Ben Verschleiser will have time and opportunity to whip this finish into a shape worthy of the rest of the job.

Marguerite de la Motte plays the selfish, empty-headed star and delivers a whiz of a performance that will cause a lot of people to wonder where she has been these many moons. John Halliday is his usual suave self as the director who, for love of the woman his star has once been, protects her from the knowledge that she is slowly but surely slipping. Kitty Kelly is her other friend, once her room-mate in the early days, now her secretary and companion. It is a part that affords much hard-boiled, wise-cracking comedy in which this Kelly gal scores.

Wallace Ford, in the role of a prize-fighter whom our movie light picks up as a plaything, suffers through no fault of his own. It is a bit of miscasting and the film would benefit by cutting out as much as possible of the ring scenes. The inadept fight stuff only interrupts a story that has been built entirely around the lady in the case. The punch is in the fact the boy with the championship in his grasp allows himself to be knocked out to spite the woman. More should be made of the situation and the actual fight merely suggested. After all, folks are likely to remember a guy named Baer.

The direction of Edward Ludwig maintains a nice pace. Story, too, is commendable, particularly for its many laugh lines. With a new ending it would be even more commendable. Joseph Valentine is credited for the better-than-average photography.

You haven't a heavy name cast to help you sell this picture and the title needs more than a bit of explanation. The original name was "Great God Fourflush," a far better label. The Hollywood angle is perhaps the best, for it depicts a Hollywood the majority of fans believe they know. Once you get them in, the picture will not disappoint.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN G[illegible]

The old Biograph Studios reopened in a blaze of glory this week under the auspices of Harry Goetz and H. J. Yates and really the new version of that studio does the ghosts of yesterday proud. Two gorgeous sound stages, completely soundproofed and glass inclosed so's two different companies can work at the same time apart or together. Dressing rooms that are spacious and airy and not too reminiscent of hospital waiting rooms. Nice wood-paneled offices and enough plans to keep them busy for a long while or until some one else can think up some bigger and better ideas. Above all, the place is so clean that it will take years to acquire any dirt at all with some old fashioned tradition in it. Helen Morgan, Chester Erskine and Jack Kirkland were on hand on account of it will be their combined work that will inaugurate the new studio. Arthur Cozine of the old guard is in charge of something or other up at Biograph and D. W. Griffith sent a long telegram wishing every one well and regretting the fact that he couldn't be on hand to do honor to the old place.

Gene Raymond, in town for a couple of days before sailing, hadda cocktail party for the members of the press which was really very amusing on account of the lad has worked in so many pictures for so many different companies that it looked like a convention of publicity writers, all of whom had a perfect right to try to crash in on the benefits of this particular kind of publicity. Fox, Columbia and Radio all having opuses featuring Gene, they were all there to see that each one was done right by.

And speaking of interviews. It seems that the last time Leslie Howard was in town, just before sailing for England, he gave out for the interviewers while lying in bed in purple pajamas. And the pajamas had a cute little trick of opening wide at the throat, thus revealing one amulet strung around the Howard neck. Whereupon each girl cooed over it and asked what it was and Howard was forced to break down and confess that it was from his mother and he's never taken it off since she gave it to him. Well, Howard is back and the interviewers are clamoring for time just to see what's gonna happen this time.

A bunch of the boys were seated around a table the other evening discussing a certain star and wondering what had happened to her in her last coupla pictures because instead of being so vivid and alive the gal has suddenly gone deadly dull and elegant. And one feller up and said he guessed instead of playing the part the picture called for she had suddenly decided to play audience reaction instead!

Spewack Duo Returns

Sam and Bella Spewack returned to town Saturday from a three months' vacation in New York. Writers go on the script of "Soviet" at MGM.

Indies Refuse Hays' Request To Censor

New York.—"Nay! Nay! Mister Hays," said the independents to a request this week that they allow the same censorship board that works on the majors' advertising to handle theirs.

The Federation of the Motion Picture Industry, the indie producers and distributors organization, figures they can handle their own problems and have appointed their own committee of watchdogs. Harry Thomas, Charles Glett, Eddie Golden and H. Gluckman make up the committee.

Binyon-Butler Did the Job

Claude Binyon and Frank Butler have done the screen treatment for "Should Ladies Listen," which Douglas MacLean will produce for Paramount, a fact that Doug is anxious to have published so that he doesn't get credit for more than he is doing.

Sheehan Bluffs Chase

no more authority in Fox productions than Lasky, Rockett and other producers. He demanded a showdown. He went to Kent and Kent passed the buck on to the Chase board looking after their picture interests. On reaching that point Sheehan reminded them that he holds a contract giving him prior rights to the contract they signed with Jesse Lasky, granting the latter non-interference with his productions. Sheehan demanded the full force of his contract or that Chase settle with him on the basis of the unexpired term of the ticket which had $3,000,000 more to run.

Chase has little thought of settling any contract. They tried that during Tinker's term, with very bad results. So they decided to recognize the full spirit of Sheehan's papers and so advised Lasky, who is understood to have wired, "That's okay with me."

The set-up now is that Sheehan is the boss, that Lasky, Rockett and all other producers must take orders from him, receive his okay on every production, etc., etc.

It is understood that Sheehan, knowing of the terms of the Lasky deal, has been laying low waiting for the full flop of Lasky's efforts and although the Lasky pictures have not set the world on fire they have done a better business and have given Fox whatever legs it still has to stand on. Finding that Lasky's operas were improving instead of flopping, Sheehan demanded this showdown.

It is felt that Lasky reasons that the whole burden is now on Sheehan's shoulders, that if he interferes with his pictures in this new set-up, as much as he did when he was not supposed to have any interference, that the full responsibility for this interference will be credited to Sheehan. Then what?

Lasky has two more years to run on his Fox ticket and the story that has been going the rounds that he would go to Radio was more gossip than fact, with insiders having the opinion though that Jesse would not permit himself to be placed under the domination of Sheehan and as a result would leave the company. If he did Radio was waiting with an offer.

Frank Geraghty Dies

Frank Geraghty, well known assistant director, lost his life in Sunday's storm. The family is left destitute. Dick L'Estrange, of the Assistant Directors and Scripters union, is handling a collection. Universal and Columbia employees have responded generously. Here's a chance to remember a pal.

Warners Host To Victorious Lions

"The greatest time we've had on the trip outside of winning the game," said the Columbia football players and New York news writers after yesterday at Warners' studio. The boys had a lunch, entertainment, intimate chats with the stars, and eye-opening visits to big sets. The affair was keyed to the proper spirit to make the boys feel at home, and they did.

Bill Koenig was a genial host in the absence of Jack Warner; Lou Little and Howard Jones headed the guests; Dick Powell, Frank McHugh, Guy Kibbee and Vince Barnett entertained, and Busby Berkeley showed himself a "reg'lar" by welcoming the visitors to the tricks of the famous "Wonder Bar" minor set.

Two Stage Offers Start Schildkraut's New Year

The New Year started off auspiciously for Joseph Schildkraut with two wired offers for the New York stage. The Theatre Guild wants him for a John Wexley play and the Shuberts for a play based on the romantic life of Chopin.

The player had to turn down both offers because he goes to Columbia on his starring contract immediately after completing his role in "Viva Villa."

MGM Talks New Deal To Rouben Mamoulian

MGM is talking with Rouben Mamoulian to remain on that lot on a several picture deal or a term contract as a result of his work on "Queen Christina." If a deal is worked out it is understood that the assignment of the direction of the next Greta Garbo picture, "The Painted Veil," will be handed him.

Twelvetrees To Fox On One-Picture Deal

Helen Twelvetrees was signed yesterday by Fox on a one-picture deal to play the feminine lead in "All Men Are Enemies," which will be directed by George Fitzmaurice. Production is scheduled to start this month. The William Hawks agency made the deal.

Joan Wheeler Here

Joan Wheeler, who was signed in New York by Warners because of her work in "Growing Pains" on the Broadway stage, arrived here yesterday and starts work next week in a featured role in "Hit Me Again" with Ricardo Cortez and Bette Davis. Robert Florey will direct.

Wynyard on Long Termer

MGM yesterday signed Diana Wynyard to a new long term contract. Her next picture will be "Vanessa," based on the novel by Hugh Walpole.

Para. Director on N.Y. Indicted List

New York.—Frank Bailey, one of Paramount's directorial board, headed a list of prominent men indicted here yesterday in the Realty Associates Inc. case. Three indictments alleging conspiracy to conceal and transfer assets were returned against the group.

In addition to Bailey the others include: William M. Greve, president of New York Investors Inc.; F. T. Pendler, head of Allied Owners Inc.; W. H. Wheelock, president of the Prudence Company.

Spence Quits at Fox To Free Lance Again

Ralph Spence is again back in the free lance field, having completed his short term deal with Fox for the writing of "Mr. Skitch" and comedy scenes and dialogue for the Fox Follies.

The writer will go east to settle a newspaper deal before taking up picture offers.

Lasky Signs Nicholls

Jesse Lasky yesterday signed Dudley Nicholls to write the screen play of the A. J. Cronin novel, "Grand Canary." Frank Tuttle will direct and Warner Baxter has the male lead. No others cast as yet.

Bill Otto Joins Gill

William Otto, recently with the Small-Landau office, has tied in with William S. Gill agency.

Set NRA Scale For Studio Script Clerks

Dick L'Estrange of the Assistant Directors and Scripters Union, acting for the Regional Labor Board, went into session with Pat Casey for the producers and came out with an agreement on script clerks which guarantees them a 54-hour week and a minimum of $40.50. However, wherever script clerks have been receiving above that figure their past salary remains the scale.

Under the agreement script clerks will also receive time and a half for overtime on Sundays and holidays.

More difficulty was found in working out the second assistants' scale, but this is expected to be settled by Saturday.

Barbara Blair Here From Networks to Join Vallee

One of the higher-bracket broadcasting stars of the East, Barbara Blair, arrived in Hollywood yesterday to take part in the next Fleischman Hour, Thursday. The Edington-Vincent office set her for the broadcast, which is her ninth, a record for repeats on the hour.

Star just completed a year's contract with Standard Oil and is due to take a flier in pictures.

Joe Weil on the Job

Joe Weil, for the past several years Universal's director of exploitation in New York, arrived by plane today to take up his new position here as assistant to Carl Laemmle Sr.

EUROPEAN PROSPECTS

•BUSINESS is getting better. Very much better.

Reports from all over the country indicate a gain of better than 25 per cent during the past two weeks. Considering the bottom that was hit during the first two weeks of December, this is not much of a business, BUT IT IS AN IMPROVEMENT.

We have had quite a few letters in the last few days from exhibitor friends scattered throughout the country and EVERY LETTER is filled with anticipation of better business for 1934. Each correspondent is 100 per cent for the Roosevelt administration and believes if the President is given even the least bit of help, his new deal will turn into a GOOD DEAL and this country will jump back to its feet.

Of course the business being done on "Roman Scandals" is nothing short of phenomenal and a lot of the boys are greeting the reports with, "Lucky Goldwyn," and we resent it. Goldwyn is a SHOWMAN, one of our best producers and a credit to the business. He goes out to make the best picture it is possible to make regardless of the cost. He gambles his whole wad to get a fine picture and if the finished product fits in to that qualification and does business, it's not luck, it's BRAINS backed with a determination to produce ENTERTAINMENT.

If most of our other producers would take a few sheets from the production guide of Goldwyn, our industry would be in much better shape. Most of our studios start and finish on the wrong foot. Of course no one can determine the qualities of a picture until it is finished, but where Goldwyn takes his product back after his "dress rehearsal" and tries to improve it, the other studios trim a few feet here and there and ship the print. They won't go after a better picture, when that betterment would only cost an additional few thousand with a possibility of getting a hundred times that amount back as a result of the expenditure in addition to contributing a GOOD PICTURE.

Yes, it's not luck with Goldwyn, it's good producing backed by SHOWMANSHIP.

Erpi's Hands Off

New York.—J. E. Otterson declared today that as far as Erpi is concerned there will be no interference in the management of Loew's Inc.

Miller Would Alter Howard Contract

Trouble arose on the Warner front when the Leslie Howard contract was submitted to Gilbert Miller, to whom the star is under long term contract, who has the right to approve or disapprove of any picture contracts the star signs.

Miller wants the Warner contract to state that Howard has the right to make one picture a year in London as long as the Warner contract runs. The deal is being handled by M. C. Levee.

Kobler, N. Y. Publisher, Will Visit the Coast

New York.—A. J. Kobler, publisher of the New York Daily Mirror and one of the key men in the Hearst organization, will leave for the coast today.

Among the film folk who boarded trains yesterday were George O'Brien and Arthur Hornblow. Mrs. Ad Schulberg leaves today. Claire Trevor, Fox player, leaves Friday.

Mock To Fox East Post

John Mock, assistant to Julian Johnson, Fox story editor, leaves in the near future to take over the concern's New York story department. Mock fills the spot vacated by D. A. Doran's resignation.

Wanger Buys N. Y. Play

New York.—Before departing for the coast Walter Wanger closed a deal getting for MGM the rights to the play "All Good Americans." Purchase price is reported at $20,000.

America Will Have to Pick and Choose for Europe to Hold That Market. 1933 Most Profitable

Paris.—If America is to continue its hold on Europe, they will have to use this market for the best of their pictures and keep the rest of them on the other side of theAtlantic. Too many poor pictures and not enough good ones will crimp the fat profits that have been taken out of Europe during the past 12 months.

That, in a nutshell, is the prospect for this side for 1934 insofar as the Hollywood product is concerned. The American stars and their product are still supreme on this side, but England is coming along fast; Germany is findtheir mistakes; France will make better pictures during the coming twelve months and other European production centers give every indication of concentrating on better pictures.

There is little doubt but what each and every country deeply resents all the money that is going into the American exchequers for motion picture entertainment and will offer ev-

WB Lift Option On Sam Bischoff

Two weeks before his option was due, Warners yesterday informed Sam Bischoff that the company is exercising its option on the associate producer's contract.

During five months he finished six pictures and has three in work. Latter are "Merry Wives of Reno," "Hot Air" and "Fur Coats."

Briskin Back on Job

Sam Briskin, Columbia production chief, returns today from his European trip and will resume his duties immediately.

Boom on for Writers As Pic Rush Starts

Activity among the majors for writers has taken a sharp upturn, every major studio canvassing the field for first-string scenario men. Boom in writers is occasioned by large preparing schedules at each plant, the script boys getting the first call.

Demand for writers is regarded as the first indication of the impending big push in production. Agents about town spent the most of last week sending wires to their eastern affiliates to dig up possible scenarists from the magazine, book writing and newspaper fields. Latter, it is claimed, are the easiest to sell.

Harmon-Ising Cartoons To Get MGM Release

New York.—A deal is expected to be closed in a day or two for Harmon and Ising to make "Bosco" and other cartoon subjects for MGM.

Harmon-Ising made these subjects for some time for Leon Schlesinger, who released through Warners.

MacKenna on N. Y. Stage

New York.—Kenneth MacKenna has been engaged by Richard Aldrich and Alfred de Liagre Jr. for an important role in "By Your Leave," the comedy by Gladys Hurlburt and Emma Wells, which will be presented here the week of January 22. Others included in the cast are Dorothy Gish, Howard Lindsay and Ernest Glendinning.

Guild Election Tonight

The Writers Guild meets at 8:30 tonight in the quarters of the Writers Club to elect a new executive committee. Slate put forth by the board lists Courtenay Terrett, Seton Miller, Wells Root, Gladys Lehman, Horace Jackson, John Lee Mahin, Ray Schrock, Gene Markey, Austin Parker and Helen Thompson.

N. Y. INDIE THEATRES IN COURT FIGHT OVER CODE

New York.—At least one important exhibitor organization is fighting to the last ditch before taking on the obligations of the NRA code.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association here, headed by Harry Brandt, lost a fight with Local 306 yesterday when the courts granted the operators' union an injunction prohibiting the indie theatres from running in violation of the code's forty hour rule pending a trial of the issue January 24.

The theatre men based their opposition on the ground that the NRA code is not yet a part of the law of the state of New York and is therefore inoperative.

THE LOW DOWN

The local deluge caused a lot of minor tragedies along with the major havoc. It will cost Richard Dix thousands of dollars to repair damage to his ranch near Ventura. And the beautiful hillside gardens and terraces up at Ramon Novarro's house were completely washed away—they had just been finished—but they're just a smudge of mud now. And C. Henry Gordon is one of the many who can check off a car as lost—only Gordon lost two of 'em and in the same garage, which was accommodating around eight feet of water over the week-end.

Just heard a prize crack which comes as an amusing climax after all those stories about the battle between Katharine Hepburn and that self-styled genius, Jed Harris. Someone heard that Sid Grauman wants the imprints of the Hepburn's feet for the entrance to his Chinese theatre. And the same someone suggests that Sid merely send for the seat of Jed Harris' pants!

Bert Collins is now collaborating on the script of "Tudor Wench," but Marie Antoinette would turn over in her grave if she knew all the things that he knows about HER! For no particular reason, Collins is a walking encyclopedia about the "let 'em eat cake" girl, and owns hundreds of pictures, prints and books about the beauteous queen. The fact that most actresses usually get the Antoinette coiffure all wrong when they impersonate her, gives Bert a nervous breakdown whenever he thinks about it—which is constantly!

'FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE'? RADIO'S 'TWO ALONE' DULL

Unbelievable Yarn Set In The Jungle

"FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE"
(Paramount)

Director.....Cecil B. DeMille
Original.....E. Arnot-Robertson
Screen Play.....Lenore Coffee and Bartlett Cormack
Photography .....Karl Struss
Cast: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, William Gargan, Mary Boland, Leo Carrillo, Chris Pin Martin, Joe De La Cruze, Delmar Costello, Minoru Nishoda, Tenu Shimada, E. R. Janadas, Tetsu Komai.

Cecil DeMille or Paramount or the authors of "Four Frightened People" evidently started with the idea of giving the public a portion of everything they wanted in the preparation and production of this picture, but they finished with something we believe few of those people will want. It's a hodge-podge that has its moments, but right in the middle of that moment, and right at a time when you believe the production has finally found itself, you are shifted to another side of the conglomeration with the resultant lack of interest and the question, What are they trying to prove?

The picture has romance, comedy, melodrama, thrills, suspense, tragedy and all the other forms of story telling that have been used to fashion entertainment. This is sprinkled with good and bad acting and directing, mounted on jungle background, with all the animal noises of that jungle to remind you that the people are really in a jungle trying to escape a zone ridden with cholera and jungle fevers on the one side and attempting to reach civilization on the other.

Those four, at times, frightened people, plus a guide, plug along for days and days; at the end of some, they are so tired, thorn cut and weary that they sit down and have a game of bridge to keep them from sleeping and getting their rest for the plod on the morrow; and on other occasions they just sit and fight and give each other tongue lashings. The women still retain all their feminine attractiveness while the men are cut and bruised, their clothing torn, from their travel.

It is one of the most unbelievable yarns that has ever been concocted for screen purposes, even worse at times, than the now extinct serial. But there it is, have a look at it and you might too ask yourself the question—what are they trying to prove?

The people who were supposed to be frightened were Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, William Gargan and Mary Boland, wearing a Pomeranian on her arm. Leo Carrillo was the guide and the supporting players were made up mostly of natives. Many of the scenes were shot in Honolulu. The picture was directed by Cecil B. DeMille, who found props for a bathing sequence, even in the midst of the jungle. The picture was expertly photographed by Karl Struss. The story was written by Lenore Coffee and Bartlett Cormack from an original of E. Arnot-Robertson.

The story in these columns yesterday regarding the Columbia-Borzage settlement was a little screwy. Borzage received a total of $105,000 and not $80,000 for directing "Man's Castle" and "Men of Tomorrow."

On "Man's Castle" the director elected to take $25,000 and a 50 percent cut of the gross profit instead of a straight $50,000 salary. The settlement gave Borzage $30,000 for his 50 percent on that picture with his election to take a straight $50,000 for the second picture.

Studios Going in Strong For New York Stage Casts

Studios' yen for New York stage players is growing. Columbia in making "Twentieth Century" is lining up tests of the play's original Broadway cast. Jesse L. Lasky, at Fox, is planning on using the entire New York cast of "Springtime for Henry" in the picture version.

Columbia is testing Etienne Girardot and discussing Joseph Crehan, Jimmy Spottswood and Matt Briggs. Lasky has thus far set Leslie Banks and is seeking to borrow Helen Chandler from Radio.

Stein Will Look Over Coast Radio Prospects

David Stein, of the Music Corporation of America, who is in Los Angeles in connection with the Guy Lombardo coast tour, announces plans to give auditions while here to local stage, screen and radio talent.

A dozen of the nation's biggest orchestra leaders now on national hookups are under the MCA banner.

Roach Assigns Harris

Henry Ginsberg, business manager of Hal Roach Studios, yesterday signed Ray Harris to work on the screen play of "Babes in Toyland." Harris was formerly with Paramount and more recently wrote a treatment of "Girl Meet Boy," the Vina Delmar story, for Radio.

Eddy on New MGM Deal

Nelson Eddy signed a new term contract with MGM yesterday before leaving on his concert tour throughout the country. He will return in the spring and will likely play the lead in "Prisoner of Zenda."

Milestone Starts Jan. 15

Lewis Milestone will put "Red Square" into production for Columbia January 15 after about six months of preparation on the picture. Laurence Stallings has scripted. No cast or director set as yet.

Al Rosen Returns

Al Rosen is due in today from New York with plans to proceed with "Mad Dog of Europe." Producer-agent has discovered a player who is Adolph Hitler's twin to take the leading role.

Drab Tale Buries Director and Cast

"TWO ALONE"
(Radio)

Director .....Elliott Nugent
Author .....Don Totheroh
Adaptors.....Josephine Lovett and Joseph Moncure March
Photographer.....Lucien Andriot
Cast: Jean Parker, Tom Brown, Zasu Pitts, Arthur Byron, Beulah Bondi, Nydia Westman, Willard Robertson, Charley Grapewin, Emerson Treacy and Paul Nicholson.

Making a heroic effort to get back to the soil, RKO-Radio fails to do hardly more than scratch the ground with "Two Alone."

This picture, which started out as "Wild Birds," is not the least entertaining picture ever made, but it will never be fodder for the box office. It is rarely unconvincing, totally sentimental, wholly unimportant in all departments, and it would be extremely depressing if it carried any weight.

It is the story of an orphan girl, a slavey on a farm, and a runaway boy from the reform school, who is caught by the farmer and forced to toil drearily. The two love each other drearily; they are drearily persecuted by the farmer and his wife, and it is only by the grace of the adaptors on Don Totheroh's story that they do not end drearily.

Jean Parker, as the girl, is photographed beautifully and offers, at moments, a fine, young, innocent appeal. Tom Brown is rather stiff as the boy. Zasu Pitts has a very small role; Arthur Byron is so mean as the farmer that he can't be swallowed even with a gallon of salt; and the same goes for Beulah Bondi. Nydia Westman is perfectly cast as the whining, disagreeable daughter, contributing more than anyone else in the way of genuine acting. Charley Grapewin plays the character of an old, slightly insane dodderer, and Emerson Treacy and Paul Nicholson have small roles.

Elliott Nugent struggled nobly with the direction, but failed to overcome the fundamental dullness of the story; Josephine Lovett and Joseph Moncure March did their best with the adaptation, and Lucien Andriot photographed it well.

With no names, a definitely stark and unreal story, and no humor at all to liven the thing, "Two Alone" is a poor bet in any community. Drab, dull, dreary.

'U's' Casting Problem

With the time for casting drawing near Universal is reported trying to borrow Manny Cohen from Paramount for the lead in "Little Man—What Now?"

GOLDWYN'S 'NANA' IS A HIT; ANNA STEN A GREAT BET

Perfectly Produced, Directed and Acted

"NANA"
A Samuel Goldwyn Production

Direction .....Dorothy Arzner
From the Novel by.....Emile Zola
Adaptation by.....Willard Mack and Harry Wagstaff Gribble
Photography .....Gregg Toland
Music .....Al Newman Song.....Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart
Starring .....Anna Sten
Cast: Lionel Atwill, Richard Bennett, Phillips Holmes, Mae Clarke, Reginald Owen, Muriel Kirkland, Lawrence Grant, Jessie Ralph, Helen Freeman.

Mr. Exhibitor—you have been asked for many months now, to "hail" a new star whom you have not yet seen. You have been told that she was coming your way, bringing with her an exhilarating tonic of personality and glamour, ability and beauty to gladden your customers and cram your cash registers. That star is Anna Sten. We have seen her in her first picture and are of the opinion that you have not been deceived.

The Sten, who is Sam Goldwyn's new shining light, has all the attributes mentioned above, and, added to them, the all important and welcome quality of a vivaciousness which has up to now been a missing element in the "foreign importations." This quality will endear Anna Sten even more to a public which cannot fail to accept her with enthusiasm and acclaim.

Anna Sten is superb in her picture debut in a story, which, though it has been done before in many guises, is nevertheless perfectly suited to her, and which has never been given a more beautiful or important production. In every detail "Nana" ranks as an important picture. Money and time have been spent lavishly upon it—but they have not been wasted. There may be critics who will find flaws in "Nana" as a work of art, but it's a safe bet that audiences anywhere will relish this piece of entertainment—for it is entertainment, from start to finish. A romantic and glamorous film, perfectly produced, dominated by the personality of Sten, who is reminiscent of many, but the replica of none, are sufficient to spell a swell hour and more for any chair-filler.

Dorothy Arzner has done a splendid, intriguing job with the direction of "Nana." Her attention to little details—"tags" to what might have been stilted endings of certain scenes, show her ability in innumerable places, together with a definite pace and intelligence.

Lionel Atwill offers his best screen work in "Nana," while Phillips Holmes, as the young lover, has a chance to do some fine work and comes through. Richard Bennett is excellent in his role. Reginald Owen, Jessie Ralph, Helen Freeman, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Lawrence Grant were fine in brief appearances. Mae Clarke plays well as a gutter companion of Nana's.

Gregg Toland's photography and the settings combine to give "Nana" an atmosphere that is not only exquisite but so foreign as to create a perfect illusion, and the musical score by Al Newman and the interpolation of a great single song number by Rodgers and Hart, "That's Love," make the production rate 100 per cent.

Willard Mack and Harry Wagstaff Gribble deserve credit for tailoring "Nana" to perfect screen measurements—which was no easy task. And the total result should be a bell-ringer for Goldwyn and all of you who have been waiting for "Nana" to come along.

N. Y. Embassy Closes

New York.—Film men got one of the biggest shocks of recent months with the announcement by Fox that the newsreel theatre, the Embassy, on Broadway, would be closed. "Operating costs too high," said the statement.

Sullavan Gets Next Assignment At 'U'

Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery were set yesterday by Henry Henigson for his Universal production, "If I Was Rich." Montgomery replaces Roger Pryor, who had been previously slated for a leading role.

Montgomery's deal went through the Selznick-Joyce office. Picture will be directed by Edward Ludwig from a screen play by Harry Sauber and Earle Snell.

Desmond Joins Cantor

Florence Desmond was set by the William Morris office yesterday for a featured spot in the Eddie Cantor unit, which starts a three weeks' tour at the Brooklyn, N. Y., Paramount tomorrow.

Waycoff in Stage Role

New York.—Leon Waycoff has a leading role in "Among Those Sailing" which has its tryout in Philadelphia January 8. Play marks the return to the stage of both Constance and Faire Binney.

Jarrett Tested for 'McKee'

Clarence Brown has been testing Art Jarrett the past two days for the male lead opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee," her next starring vehicle. Picture is scheduled to go into production this month.

Frat Boys Dine Rudy

Rudy Vallee will be feted as guest of honor at the Roosevelt Hotel Monday night by the Hollywood Alumni of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraernity.

Royer Does Reno Yarn

"Reno Flyer," an original by William Bloecher, will be the next picture produced by Fanchon Royer.

Pat O'Brien on Air

Eleanor Barnes tonight interviews Pat O'Brien, Warners' contract player, via an 85 station hook-up.

Warner Tries Hard For 'Napoleon' Lead

Even though Warners went so far as to offer to change the title of the Edward G. Robinson starring picture "Napoleon" to "Napoleon and Josephine," they were unable to get Jeanette MacDonald for the co-starring spot in this picture.

The studio has been trying for the past month to get the star, but with her next picture, "Duchess of Delmonico," for MGM starting at the same time as the Warner picture the deal could not be made.

Warners plan an attempt to get Katherine Cornell for the role, when the star arrives in Hollywood in about ten days.

Mervyn and Doris Europe-Bound For Honeymoon

New York.—The new Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy, Mervyn and Doris Warner, embarked on the Bremen today for a honeymoon trip in Europe following yesterday's wedding at the Waldorf Astoria hotel. Over two hundred attended the wedding, with stage and screen strongly represented.

DeMille Still Seeking An Antony for 'Cleo'

Carl Brisson is the latest of the "Antonys" to be tested by Cecil B. DeMille in an effort to find the right foil for Claudette Colbert in the forthcoming "Cleopatra," her next picture.

Filling this part has been one of Paramount's major headaches the past month.

Expect an Agents' Code

Charles F. Lowy, deputy state commissioner, stated yesterday that action in regard to complaints against agents would be held up pending the formulation by NRA officials of a code of procedure for theatrical and picture agents.

Bainter Delays N. Y. Trip

Fay Bainter's departure for New York is being delayed for another week. The reason for the delay is that MGM still has more scenes to make on "It Happened One Day," in which she appears.

More Footballers at WB

Joe E. Brown was host yesterday to the All-East football team that lost to the All-West aggregation in San Francisco Monday. Group was shown through the Warner plant.

Ruth Etting Going East

Ruth Etting will return to the east shortly to accept a radio network deal. Both Old Gold and Tidewater Oil have offered her spots on their new programs originating from New York.

Col. Closes Offices

New York.—Columbia's home offices will be closed for the hour between one and two in respect to Mrs. Bella Cohn, whose funeral will be held today.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

With New York in the grip of the worst cold wave known to New Yorkers in thirteen years, we pause a moment for a silent prayer for those noblemen of the newsreels who have to go on what is known as "ice duty." And every one of them at some time or another, finds himself shipped up to the far North with his trusty camera and film to spend several gay months aboard an ice-cutter or patrol boat. It's not as though the newsreels couldn't use the same shots of ice each year, because take it from one who has seen ice, after you've seen one piece, you've seen practically all of them. No, they send them up there in the fond hope that they'll run into a wreck or see one happen or aid in the rescue, cameras grinding all the time to make exclusive pictures of Arctic Follies for movie audiences. And that's our idea of the dullest job in the world.

There's an actor in town at the moment who has scored one of the biggest personal successes seen on the stage in recent years. Now this actor has been pretty snooty about picture offers, giving out the fact that he doesn't know whether he really wants to wreck his art in Hollywood, and the stage is the place for an actor, etc., etc. And in the midst of it all, it is discovered that this same actor has been making tests almost every day at a certain studio at the rate of fifty dollars a day and with the understanding that if they ever decide to make a picture from the test material, he is to have the lead.

You-all probably have seen a copy of the very arty magazine, "Experimental Cinema." So the editor of that is a man by the name of Lou Jacobs and his mission in life it would seem, is to debunk the cinema and tear the Hollywood run of pictures completely apart. And this same man gains his steady income from making trailers—trailers that must be attractive and exciting enough to sell the very pictures he so blithely condemns in his magazine. He seems to be sorta living that old adage about "Let not thy right hand know what they left hand doeth."

Maxie Baer was at the fights this Friday night and it is hereby suggested that in his next picture he fight the American heavyweight "champ," Impellittiere—just for a laugh. If there had been movie cameras at the ringside for that fight between Impellittiere and Neusel they'd have made a record of one of the funniest comedy sequences that ever was incorporated in a picture. No foolin', the crowd laughed so hard they forgot to get mad. Neusel literally won the fight by a mile, (run). And at one point Impellittiere got sooo tiahed that he leaned too long on Neusel and the two of them leaned right through the ropes and out of the ring. Besides which, the big hunk of flesh that was Impellittiere, couldn't make a move without instructions from his corner and he really lost the last two rounds because his corner was having hysterics from laughing so hard.

Here's what other critics say:

The New York Morning Telegraph—11-10-33 . . . However, the best bit in the picture is that showing Max Baer tossing a mean step about as a vaudeville actor, when he isn't warbling a ditty or two in approved Bing Crosby manner. THAT SCENE ALONE IS WORTH THE PRICE OF ADMISSION.

New York Daily News—11-11-33 . . . Giving the fight sequence tops for thrills, the most "SURPRISING, AMUSING, CHUCKLING bit in the film" is the revue scene in which the grinning, self-confident Baer warbles a song in best crooner style and goes into his dance with all the utterly unembarrassed abandon of a real hoofer. Truly an amazing lad and an amusing picture.

New York Herald Tribune—11-11-33 . . . There are several dozen individual incidents in the film which I should recommend to you. . . . In addition, you should pay attention to the INCOMPARABLE scene in which Baer goes into his dance with the show girls in his vaudeville appearance.

New York Daily Mirror—11-11-33 . . . A ten-round world's championship fight, a floor show, a Broadway revue, an elaborate special movie: "The Prizefighter and the Lady" is all of these things, the stupendous entertainment bargain of the season. It is Baer who carries the leading role and comes through as the biggest surprise in recent film history. He can act. He can sing, dance, clown, emote, make love and fight. HE SINGS AND DANCES AS THE STAR OF A BROADWAY SHOW.

New York Evening Journal—11-10-33 . . . And SPECIAL MENTION should be—and here is—made of the diverting dance routine which gives Max a chance to hoof, and very nicely, too.

Here's what other critics say:

The New York Times—11-11-33 . . . Mr. Baer is a versatile individual, for when the occasion demands he SINGS and DANCES A GOOD DEAL BETTER than some of those who consider themselves experts.

Time—11-13-33 . . . Max Baer was directed not to act, but to depend exclusively on a hyper-thyroid ebullience which was most appropriate in the scene where Baer, on a vaudeville stage, SANG and DANCED with a female chorus.

Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News—12-15-33 . . . MGM inserted an effective musical sequence, which made Max Baer shine like a diamond in comparison with some of the Hollywood hoofers, for this lad's footwork has speed, and he has genuine grace.

Hollywood Filmograph—10-21-33 . . . His work on the vaudeville stage in the dancing sequences, as produced by Seymour Felix, is just as big a sensation as is his swapping punches with the Man-mountain, Primo Carnera.

The Hollywood Reporter . . . Seymour Felix's musical act for Max Baer and a troupe of girls, which is one of the best interludes in the story, is both novel and effective with its moving sets and its fast action.

. . . And Even In Omaha . .

Bee-News, Omaha, Neb.—11-13-33 . . . The most amusing bit in the flicker is the scene in which Maxie sings and dances his way through a vaudeville act.

Col. On Hot Hunt For Needed Stories

Columbia about has the flag upside down in a hunt for stories and writers to shape the screen plays for production during the next two months. As is the practise at the studio, a considerable period of time is given to the preparation of scripts, but with seven pictures awaiting shooting each passing day is adding pressure to the demand.

The majority of the seven productions need stories. These are "Hello Big Boy," "Men Need Women," "Criminal Within" (previous story for this title being released under another tag), "Blind Date" and an untitled Jack Holt feature.

Columbia has stories for "Too Tough to Kill" and "Produce the Body," but is seeking screen play experts to translate them to the medium of the screen.

Lining Cast Up For Bergerman's 'Countess'

June Knight is seriously being considered for the lead in Stanley Bergerman's next production for Universal titled "Countess of Monte Cristo." Reginald Owen has been signed for one of the featured roles. Paul Lukas, who was set for the male lead, will not be in the picture due to injuries received in a fall from a horse. Karl Freund will direct.

Television Worker Here To Talk To Studios

R. V. Newcomb, who has successfully produced radio television shorts in the midwest, is in town to talk over possible motion picture cooperation. He is conferring with picture executives on the idea of producing two-reelers for excusive radio television release.

Schertzinger To Meg Grace Moore Musical

Victor Schertzinger was signed yesterday by Columbia on a one-picture deal to direct the Grace Moore starring vehicle. The yarn being written by Jo Swerling is yet untitled. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney offce made the deal.

Knechtel Films Trafalgar

London.—Lloyd Knechtel, American cinematographer and A.S.C. member, has just completed a trick sequence on the Battle of Trafalgar for British-Gaumont which has them talking. His next assignment is in Korda's H. G. Wells yarn.

Draper Gets an Agent

Paul Draper, whom Sid Grauman brought from New York for a top spot in his "Little Women" prologue at the Chinese Theatre, has been placed under a managerial contract by the Lichtig and Englander office.

Fox Wants Connolly

Fox is negotiating with Columbia for the loan of Walter Connolly. Actor is wanted for one of the featured spots in a current picture which may be "All Men Are Enemies," which will be directed by Henry King.

New York REVIEWS

"QUEEN CHRISTINA"

MGM prod.; director, Rouben Mamoulian; writers, Salka Viertel, Margaret LeVino, S. N. Behrman.

Astor Theatre

News: The picture moves a little slowly, but with grace, from one lovely setting to another. It is a picture that must not be missed, because Garbo is at her best in some of its scenes.

Herald-Tribune: Greta Garbo returns to her public, after a long absence, as a greater artist than ever. She is helped, too, by Mr. Mamoulian, who seems inspired by the sincerity of his star. Mr. Behrman's dialogue deserves praise. It matches the simple directness of the story.

Mirror: Garbo is matchless. Garbo is still supreme. Gilbert gives a splendid performance. But he also seems to inspire Garbo. And it is her picture. It is an impressive, stirring and lovely picture, glorified by the greatest work of the greatest actress in films.

World-Telegram: Miss Garbo, as Christina, is truly magnificent. It is easily the finest piece of acting she has ever done. John Gilbert is superb. Due praise to all the others in the cast, too, who are in every way excellent. In the writing, story, acting, direction, costumes and settings it is a superb and beautiful film, and most decidedly must be seen.

Post: The continuity and direction of "Queen Christina" have done more to take the life out of the picture than any other factor. Miss Garbo is disappointing in her stilted and self-conscious posturings. However, it is beautiful to look at; beautifully mounted, and beautifully costumed, but this effect has been gained at the expense of action and drama.

American: Perhaps Garbo has never evidenced so great and diverse an appeal as in the role of Christina. Gilbert makes a dashing lover as of yore, and plays his fiery role with proper intensity. He seems now a better actor than before.

Journal: Superb. The elaborate settings and costumes are impressive, and so well is the story constructed that they very properly remain as a background instead of intruding as "historical" props. The dialogue, contributed by S. N. Behrman, is excellent.

Times: Looking as alluring as ever, Garbo gives a performance which merits nothing but the highest praise. S. N. Behrman is responsible for the dialogue which is a bright and smooth piece of writing.

Sun: There is brightness and cheer in S. N. Behrman's smooth and often cleverly turned dialogue. But Garbo seems to be suffering from an acute case of glamour. And that probably is not her fault. Gilbert tried very hard, but his performance appears a little stilted. "Queen Christina" misses fire, somehow, and that is disappointing.

Competition Hot Between Electrics

New York.—The rebuilding and reopening of the old Biograph studio by RCA interests has brought a counter move from Erpi with the decision to completely overhaul the Eastern Service Studios in the Bronx, and installation of the latest in sound equipment at that plant.

During the overhauling the present equipment and productions being made will be shifted to the Astoria plant.

Ban Stage for Jean Muir

Warners will not allow Jean Muir to take the lead opposite Francis Lederer in the local stage production of "Autumn Crocus." Studio feels the stage contract will tie the actress up for too long a time and will interfere with her next picture assignment which will be ready soon.

Ethel Hill on Col. Job

Ethel Hill has been assigned to write the dialogue on the next Jack Holt picture for Columbia, "Whirlpool," which is scheduled to get under way January 15. Dorothy Howell has just completed the continuity of the Howard Emmett Rogers story.

'U' Seeks Elliott Nugent

Universal is querying Radio for the loan of Elliott Nugent. Edmund Grainger wants him to direct "American Scotland Yard."

Lewis Gets Added Duties On 'U's' 'Monte Cristo'

Gene Lewis, who wrote the dialogue in "I Like It That Way" for Universal, will write and direct dialogue for "Countess of Monte Cristo" for same studio.

Picture is scheduled to go into production January 10, but may be held up if Paul Lukas' shoulder injury has not healed by that date.

Levenson in Book Deal

Macauley Publishing Company has signed Lew Levenson to a three novel contract. The deal was closed by Lee Furman, Macauley representative, before he returned to New York. The first novel, which is to be published this fall, will be a story based on the life of a famous musical comedy star titled "Butterfly Man."

Next McCoy Starts

Columbia puts the fifth of the eight Tim McCoy action pictures, "Storm at Midnight," into production January 10 with Buddy Coleman, recently elevated from an assistant director, directing. Irving Briskin produces.

Sale in 'Cowman's Loss'

Chic Sale's first short on his two picture deal with MGM will be "Cowman's Loss," based on the poem of the noted poet, E. A. Brininstool. Jack Cummings will supervise and direct this subject.

ery encouragement to their own producers to meet the American challenge.

A survey of the principal European territories made by the various representatives of The Hollywood Reporter is summarized as follows:

France: Imports are going to suffer because French production is in a state that can be described by the word "inflation." Both big companies and independents have enlarged schedules while Paramount, Fox and Universal plan from six to twelve pictures to be made here. On top of that the French as a nation are getting very peeved because they feel French pictures do not get a break in foreign countries. But experience with "Back Street," "All Quiet," the MGM specials, and United Artists pictures has shown that France will always welcome real box office attractions.

Germany: The German market needs product badly, particularly quality product, but American companies have shown weakness and indecision at a time when strength and perseverance were needed to handle a delicate situation, with the result that this market is greatly in danger of slipping away.

Spain: Once a good market for American pictures it is now not only becoming more independent by encouraging domestic production, backed by Tobis financing and facilities, but there is a changing attitude that is increasing the popularity of French pictures to the detriment of American. But with German pictures slipping to the rear position, there is still a possibility for Americans to make a bid for this market with real quality.

Poland: This is a new headache, as Poland is considering boosting tariff walls and establishing quotas. The French have quietly slipped in and taken the cream left by the disappearance of German product. The public likes American pictures but the French so far have shown the greater enterprise.

Belgium: The French are going to blanket this market, with British Gaumont making a new strong bid, unless American distributors forget volume imports and concentrate on their quality attractions. The collapse of German production created a wonderful opportunity here which is not being taken advantage of.

Italy: Here is the brightest spot for American pictures, due to a favorable attitude on the part of Mussolini and the Italian people, and the complete failure of Italian picture makers to deliver quality entertainment since talkies came in.

Norway, Sweden and Denmark offer good possibilities for the coming year because here too, Germany always dominated, and the Hitler debacle leaves a choice spot open.

A concluding word should be that American companies must resist a tendency to sell outright in certain countries where branches have been established for years. This will be disastrous in the future, and the lost ground might never be regained.

One outstanding attraction in any European country will show returns equaling those of ten ordinary pictures put together.

FROHMAN'S 'YOSHE KALB' HAS ONLY LIMITED APPEAL

Classical Piece Has No Screen Hopes

"YOSHE KALB"

Daniel Frohman presents "Yoshe Kalb," adapted from the novel by I. J. Singer by Fritzi Blocki; directed by Maurice Schwartz; music by Leo Koutzen; settings by Alex Chertov. With Erin O'Brien-Moore, Fritz Lieber, Horace Braham, John Wexley and a large cast.

New York.—Daniel Frohman, "after having seen the play in the original Yiddish on two occasions, found it of such general human interest—transcending, as it does, the limitations of language, race and creed—that he was prompted to come out of retirement to sponsor the English version." We quote verbatim from the program notes, and while we find no reason to quarrel with Mr. Frohman's idea on the subject we can find no reason to agree with him. The production has been beautifully staged, in the episodic manner, with many of the scenes notable for their beauty, but to us at least it is not the stuff that transcends the limitations of language, race and creed. In fact it seemed to us very definitely circumscribed by those limitations, plus the fact that it is not a play but a spectacle throwing very little light on the main characters or any motivation for their acts, so that unless one is fairly well steeped in Jewish lore the English translation is more bewildering than Yiddish cadences. One can but appreciate Mr. Frohman's finer feelings and the loving care and artistic manifestations in the production of this Jewish classic.

Erin O'Brien-Moore (believe it or not) is the best thing in the play as the young girl with leanings toward the Gypsy in her blood, who is married off to the seventy-year-old Rabbi. In her determination to satisfy youthful longings she fires the temple and uses her wiles to seduce young Naum, the Rabbi's son-in-law, to forget the teachings of the Talmud and commit adultery. For this the girl dies with her unborn child and Naum is condemned to eternal suffering and becomes the Chassidic version of the "Wandering Jew" and incidentally gains the name of Yoshe Kalb, which evidently means "fool."

Horace Braham is the Yoshe Kalb who is given over completely to agonizing sorrow. Fritz Lieber is magnificently Shakespearian as the Rabbi and John Wexley (yes, the playwright) has himself a gay time of it as one of the Chassidim. Joanne Myers as the half-wit daughter of a grave-digger gives a superb performance of one in whom the animal suffers no binding allegiance to the ruling of a sound mind.

Mono Buys Keeler Novel

Monogram yesterday closed the deal for "Sing Sing Nights," a novel by Harry Stephen Keeler, and will produce it on the next year's program. Mitchell Gertz of Al Kingston agency handled.

Cohn Came Thru

New York.—There has been some kidding about Jack Cohn and a Christmas bonus for Columbia employees here, but the fact remains that when the dust settled it was Columbia alone that did give something to the boys and girls of the home office.

WB Repeat Cast on Van Dine Mystery

Warners will recruit the same cast and director in "The Dragon Murder Case," the S. S. Van Dine murder mystery, as was used in "The Kennel Murder Case" with the exception of the leading woman, yet to be selected.

William Powell will again portray the role of Philo Vance, Eugene Pallette will play Sergeant Heath, and Robert McWade will again play Markham. Michael Curtiz will direct.

'Alice' Clicking Outside of London

London.—Even though West End and London did not go for "Alice in Wonderland" the provinces are rolling up quite an attractive gross for this Paramount production. This is true especially in the industrial centers such as Manchester and Leeds.

Roach Studios Reopening

With the reopening of the Hal Roach studio next Monday, Laurel and Hardy resume production of "Oliver the Eighth," which was postponed when Laurel's brother died two weeks ago. Studio will shoot the balance of the current program in quick succession with 24 subjects scheduled for completion in the next five months.

Orsatti Calls Trip Off

New York.—Frank Orsatti has abandoned his European trip and will leave for Hollywood about January 10. While here the agent closed deals for the sale of the picture rights to James Barrie's works, A. M. S. Hutchinson's "If Winter Comes" and other well known novels.

West Into United Artists

Paramount has booked the Mae West picture "I'm No Angel" into the United Artists theatre following the run of Eddie Cantor's picture, "Roman Scandals." This is the first popular price run of this picture in Los Angeles.

La Sullavan on Radio

Margaret Sullavan has been signed to appear on the Fleischmann hour today as guest star on the program with Rudy Vallee. The Selznick-Joyce office made the deal.

Landy-Hunt N.Y. Tie-Up

Landy and Hunt, local publicity purveyors, have arranged a New York contact with Jeannette Sauer, headquartering at the Marguerite Hotel.

Lesser To Remake 'Peck's Bad Boy'

With the majors combing the files for classics to duplicate the "Little Women" success it looks as though Sol Lesser is coming up with a smart showmanship bet in plans to revive "Peck's Bad Boy."

In 1918 with Jackie Coogan in the lead the picture grossed better than $600,000. Lesser plans a selling campaign similar to his "Tarzan The Fearless," making a combination eight reel feature and eight two reel episodes to follow.

Production is set to start about the middle of February and deals are now on for director, writer and star.

Wood and Felix on New 'Cat and Fiddle' Scenes

Sam Wood has been assigned to direct the added scenes and retakes on the Jeanette MacDonald-Ramon Novarro picture "Cat and the Fiddle" for MGM.

Wood will handle the dramatic scenes and Seymour Felix will direct the musical numbers. William K. Howard, who directed the picture originally, is tied up at present on "It Happened One Day."

Mono Has Three Ready

Because "Numbers of Monte Carlo" is ready to get under way with Paul Malvern producing, Monogram will not shoot the two westerns which were to have started this week until next month. Norman Houston has scripted from the E. Phillips Oppenheim novel. Ben Verschleiser's next production, "Jane Eyre," and "Manhattan Love Song," which Leonard Fields will direct, are ready to start.

Neil Pratt Dies

Neil Pratt, actor, who came to Hollywood about a year ago from stock work in Toledo, Detroit, and New York, died yesterday of heart failure at the age of 44. A widow and two children survive. The player had appeared in Radio and Educational shorts and indie features.

Goldsmith After Kiddies

Ken Goldsmith yesterday signed Jackie Searle for a series of four six-reel subjects designed for children's trade. Besides the twelve year old Searle the first, which goes into production March 10, will have Lobo, a wolf dog, and Bingo, a horse, in the cast.

Rian James' Novel Out

Rian James' new novel, "Ladies in Waiting," a yarn with a Hollywood background, will be on the street today. Alfred H. King is publishing the book.

Lila Lee in 'Follies'

Lila Lee was signed by Fox yesterday for a role in the "Fox Follies," which Hamilton McFadden is directing. The Selznick-Joyce office set the player.

UP TO THE MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Raymond Milland set through Bernard and Meiklejohn for Paramount's "We're Not Dressing."

Vivian Oakland signed for Warners' "Merry Wives of Reno." Deal handled by Al Kingston agency.

Johnny Arthur goes into "Hot Air," Warners.

Three Randall Sisters added to "Fox Follies," Fox. Bernard and Meiklejohn set.

Fox tests Margaret Nearing today for a spot in "Fox Follies."

Virginia Sale, having just completed role in "Registered Nurse," was signed again by Warners for a spot in "Hit Me Again." Al Kingston negotiated.

Reginald Owen signed through William Morris for "Countess of Monte Cristo," Universal.

Julian Rivero into "Viva Villa," MGM. Set by Howard Seiter office.

Grace Hayle through Howard Seiter for "Hot Air," Warners.

Francesca Moran for "Napoleon," Warners.

Mickey McGuire, Arthur Jarrett, John Davjd Horsley and Sumner Getchel were assigned roles in "It Happened One Day," which William K. Howard is directing for MGM.

Theodore Lodi signed by Twentieth Century for a spot in "House of Rothschild." O'Reilly-Mann set the player.

Mickey Daniels and Billy Taft into MGM's "High School."

Mawita Castenada signed through Bernard and Meiklejohn for Warners' Spanish picture "Fortune Teller."

Forrester Harvey engaged for "Old Hannibal," MGM.

Wilbur Mack into the cast of "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" at Radio.

Russell Hopton signed through MacQuarrie for a featured role in "Men in White," MGM.

Russell Hardie added to the cast of "Men in White" at MGM.

New O'Neill Play In New York Monday

New York.—Eugene O'Neill's play, "Days Without End," will open on January 8 at the Henry Miller Theatre here, replacing "All Good Americans." The play is a conflict between atheism and religious faith, and faith is triumphant. In the cast are Earle Larrimore, Selena Royle (Mrs. Earle Larrimore), Stanley Ridges, Robert Loraine and Ilka Chase.

Yohalem Scripts at 'U'

George Yohalem has returned to the ranks of the scenario writers. Universal has engaged him to work on the script of "Man Who Reclaimed His Head" under Henry Henigson's supervision. William Wyler is discussing the directorial assignment.

Joe Rock Getting Set

Murray Rock, brother of Joe Rock, has been commissioned by the latter to negotiate deals in Hollywood for the London picture which Joe is lining up. A release through British International Pictures is understood to be set.

UNIVERSAL NOT FOR SALE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•ANOTHER of those family affairs, always prevalent at Universal, has been ironed out with the result that Carl Laemmle Jr. remains here to make Universal pictures, instead of running to Europe for a three month vacation.

Never has there been a man so loyal to his family and relatives as "Uncle Carl" Laemmle and the wonder of it is that he is still in business because of that loyalty, that love for his blood relations.

This time the family arguments reached Junior and Junior, rather than argue about it, decided to vacation until the matter was settled. But it has been settled before he could get away from town and now instead of a vacation, he goes back to work, to the great benefit of Universal.

Picture costs in this industry are a bit insane. Companies will start out on the preparation of a yarn that, never at any stage of its development or production, has a box office chance. The company head knows it, but still okays the expenditure. A waste of money. And that same company head will see a picture in preview that could be greatly helped with the reshooting of a few scenes, but he will not permit the expenditure even though he believed that thousands of dollars could be tacked on to its gross. What kind of logic is that?

Thalberg is the father of the greatest production idea this business has ever known. He was the originator of taking a picture out of the preview house and planting it right back on the shooting stage, IF it were determined that the picture could be helped with part of it remade. He considered the preview as his dress rehearsal; a showing that would determine the merits of the production; a test of what was right and wrong and starting work all over again.

They laughed and kidded the Thalberg idea, but it made GREAT PICTURES and will continue to make great pictures IF you have a man or organization who can recognize the rights and wrongs of a picture in preview and be able to tell the remedy.

Never, in the long history of this business, has anyone been able to tag the right values of a pictures until it was finished and before an audience. When a picture reaches preview, it should be considered as just half completed.

Radio Chiefs West For Studio Talks

New York.—J. R. McDonough, active operating head of RKO and Radio, and O. R. McMahon, comptroller of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, leave here for the coast Sunday for a number of important conferences with studio officials. It is also possible that other home office execs may accompany them.

Insiders discount rumors of any shake-up or radical meaning to the gathering. They point out that this is the first opportunity McDonough has had to visit the studios since taking over the reins and the trip is really made for first hand study of production conditions.

Brent Suspended In Row With Warners

Warners have suspended George Brent from the studio salary list and the wrangle is on between the two, with the player seeking a settlement of his contract in order to become a free lancer.

Difficulties date back to the making of "Mandalay" recently when Brent rejected a role in the picture and put in his claim to approve assignments or quit.

Hays Plans Long Stay

New York.—Will Hays, who leaves here the 15th for Hollywood, plans to remain in the film capital longer than his customary two weeks, as he expects to be plenty busy interpreting certain ramifications of the NRA code.

Harris Here for 'U' Talks

Robert Harris, New York story head for Universal, gets in by plane tomorrow from the east.

Carl Laemmle Flatly Denies Rumors Of Katz Deal — "No Negotiations Of Any Kind On"

New York rumors current all this week that negotiations were nearing completion for the purchase of Universal by Sam Katz and associates were vigorously denied yesterday by Carl Laemmle, Sr., who added: "You cannot make my denial too emphatic; there are no reservations to it. Universal is NOT for sale."

"Futhermore, just to clear the air completely, you may state that there are no negotiations of any kind on or in prospect, either here or in New York. If there were I would certainly know about it. Certainly no one is going to sell Universal without my

Lloyd's 'Catspaw' For Fall Release

Harold Lloyd's delivery of "The Catspaw" to Fox is pretty definitely figured for a Fall release, probably starting off the organization's next year's release schedule. Preparation has taken so long that the comedian had the choice of hurrying for Spring release or getting too close to the Summer season, with the final decision to take the time needed and aim at Fall.

Jack Gain 'Flu' Victim

J. J. Gain is confined to his home with a severe siege of the flu. An overload of work also has the Fox exec threatened with a nervous attack and he is planning a brief rest at Palm Springs when he is well enough to leave for the resort.

N. Y. Hears Rogers And Warner Deal On

New York.—While here for the LeRoy-Warner nuptials Jack Warner is understood to have told intimates that a deal is close to closing by which Charles R. Rogers and his organization will move to the Warner tent on the conclusion of the producer's Paramount deal.

Believed possible that Rogers will produce at the old Sunset Boulevard studios of Warners, keeping his organization's identity as he has at Paramount but promised greater cooperation in the use of stars and stock players.

M-G-M Dickers on Two Max Gordon Plays

New York.—MGM is negotiating with Max Gordon for the screen rights of his two productions, "Roberta" and "Her Master's Voice." The first is the Kern-Harbach musical, while the latter is by Clare Kummer, with Roland Young in the lead of the stage play.

Del Ruth To Europe

Roy Del Ruth plans a trip to Europe, his first vacation in ten years, at the expiration of his contract with Warners in six weeks.

Expected on his return to go with Darryl Zanuck's Twentieth Century Company, the two being close friends since early Warner days.

Sam Briskin Back

With a sigh of relief, Sam Briskin walked into the Columbia studio yesterday, glad to be back from his European jaunt.

The travel from New York to Hollywood was made via plane, train, train and plane.

Zukor Plans Trip West

New York.—There is a possibility that Adolph Zukor will leave for the coast in about ten days.

EXHIBITORS MUST SIGN UP OR LOSE ALL CODE RIGHTS

New York.—Machinery for the organization of the local grievance, zoning and clearance boards was put in motion yesterday at the second meeting of the Code Authority with a decision to immediately send out 20,000 letters to exchanges, theatres, etc., calling for signatures of assent to the code.

Only those signing will be allowed access to the operations of the code

New York REVIEWS

"CONVENTION CITY"

First National prod.; director, Archie Mayo; writers, Peter Milne, Robert Lord
Strand Theatre

News: First National makes this film an opportunity to poke a little fun at commercial conventions and to put to work most of the old familiar faces on the company's roster. It is all a lot of fun if you like seeing the same old faces in the same old predicaments.

Herald-Tribune: While the picture seems a little shoddy in its content, a little cheap in its diversion and not altogether inspiring in its message, it has been presented with sprightliness and will amuse those familiar with the traveling salesmen's problems—or their jokes.

Post: "Convention City" is rowdy, raucous and hilarious.

World-Telegram: There are plenty of good old-fashioned guffaws in "Convention City," which is, further, acted with gusto by its large and competent cast.

Times: An accurate appraisal of "Convention City" should include the information that the Strand's audiences laughed long and loud. Adolphe Menjou is the best thing in the new film.

American: Spritely, wise-cracking fun awaits the Strand customers in this fast moving comedy.

Journal: It's rowdy and rough, perhaps not designed for the children home from school, but consistently funny. The plot is lightweight, and serves merely but very satisfactorily—as a framework on which to hang a collection of spicy lines and gags. Each member of the cast contributes excellent work and Director Mayo sets and sustains a tempo that makes this one grand entertainment.

Small and Lloyd In Deal For 'Mutiny'

Edward Small and Frank Lloyd, Fox director, have jointly taken an option on "Mutiny on the Bounty," the story that ran serially in all the Hearst papers recently.

Small plans to make this one of his biggest productions of the year. Lloyd, who is under contract to Fox, will likely swing over to the Small outfit for this one picture. Lloyd produced a money-making seagoing special, Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk," for First National in the silent days.

Bickford Talks 'U' Deal

Carl Laemmle Jr. and Charles Bickford were in a long huddle yesterday in an effort to work out a deal for the player to take the top role in "Sutter's Gold," which Universal plans for one of its big specials this year.

O'Brien and MGM Huddle

George O'Brien and his new manager, Mike Levee, will go into a huddle with MGM on a possible deal when the player arrives this week-end from New York.

Universal Not For Sale

consent or talk about it without my knowledge.

"Make it an absolute, emphatic denial. There's not a word of truth in it."

The current New York rumors are believed to be late echoes of negotiations that were on almost a year ago and which reached the point of an option to the Katz group, but when the time came for exercising the option the deal fell through. Since then Universal has swung into one of its most consistent production seasons, and with Jimmy Grainger hitting the ball on sales is, in the senior Laemmle's concluding words:

"Too busy and happy to have any time to talk deals of any kind."

Rogers May Angel For Jack Lait Stage Play

Charles R. Rogers, Paramount producer, is considering putting up half the dough for the stage production of "That's Radio," by Jack Lait and Stephen Gross, in return for picture rights and other remuneration if the show should click.

May Find 'Antony' In London Actor

New York.—Paramount has now turned abroad in the search for a Marc Antony and has hopes that he may have been found in Harry Wilcoxon, who played in the London production of "Eight Bells" and is now appearing in the Evelyn Laye picture "Prince Charming."

He has been placed under contract and has the possibility of the Antony role if he can finish his present picture in time.

WRITERS GUILD RECOGNIZED IN ELECTING CODE MEMBERS

Jubilant Meeting Gets Job Started

The Screen Writers Guild has been delegated the authority to supervise the election of film writer representatives on code affairs, Ralph Block, acting Guild president, informed the organization meeting last night.

The Guild regards this as "a notable victory" and sees in it the virtual recognition by the producers of the organization. Since the majority of Hollywood's screen writers are Guild members, it is a foregone conclusion that writer representatives will also be members. The writers are to elect ten of their number from whom Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt will select five to meet with five producer representatives on adjudicating writer problems. Another writer will be elected to the code authority and one more to the agents' committee.

Jubilant over the turn in events, the Guild quickly set about setting up the machinery for the election which takes place Monday, January 15, at the Writers Club.

Six Guilders were appointed to act as a nominating committee. Dudley Nichols, Horace Jackson and Harlan Thompson are executive board appointments. A vote from the floor of the meeting added the names of James Gleason, Winifred Dunn and John Goodrich. Nichols is chairman.

Committee will select a slate to be presented to a meeting of all writers, including non-Guild members. The vote, at Monday's meeting, will select twelve names. Of these, ten will be submitted to the deputy administrator, who will select five for the 5-5 (writers-producers) committee. Of the remaining two, one joins the code authority, the other goes to the agents' committee on code matters.

Block also read telegrams from John Howard Lawson, who is in New York; the Dramatists Guild and the Authors League of America, all of whom are giving the writers their support.

Through the newly-invested authority, the Guild foresees eventual success in securing their two most important aims, collective bargaining and a basic standard contract for scenarists.

Meeting also elected Courtenay Terrett, Wells Root and Gladys Lehman to replace John Meehan, James Creelman and Joseph Mankiewicz on the executive board. Latter trio, it was disclosed, "withdrew" owing to their failure to take an active part in the organization's business. The replacements were warned, before accepting their nominations, that they would have to attend all meetings.

Bill Howard Goes East

William K. Howard is scheduled to leave town tomorrow for New York, combining a rest with a round of the current plays.

Flu Lays Bren Low

Milton Bren gave in to the flu yesterday and vacated his office, leaving both partners of the Bren-Orsatti agency absent. Frank Orsatti is east.

Credit to Mack

In all the praise heaped on "Nana" Willard Mack deserves mention for the dialogue direction, inadvertently omitted from Reporter's list of credits.

Warners-Donnelly Agree to Disagree

Warners and Ruth Donnelly agreed to disagree yesterday and the player finished her long term deal with the company.

Studio asked her to continue on her old deal instead of going to $1,250 per week called for on her option. Refusing, she becomes a free-lancer. Columbia is querying her for a role in "Twentieth Century."

Novarro and MacDonald Sing for French Version

MGM will also make a French version of the special musical number to be made of "Cat and the Fiddle," as both Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald speak French. The remainder of the picture for French distribution will be dubbed in that language.

Deny IATSE Injunction

Judge Leon P. Yankwich yesterday denied the application of Studio Technicians No. 37, IATSE, to enjoin members of Local 40 of the IBEW from working in studios for which the IATSE claims jurisdiction.

Maude Fulton Recovering

Maude Fulton has successfully weathered two operations at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital and is set to spend a two month vacation at Glen Ranch. Writer-actress is shelving pictures until fit.

Burglars Hit Barty

While Jack Barty and his wife were playing golf Wednesday the Roach contract player's home was burglarized of over $4,000 worth of clothes and jewelry. Mrs. Barty lost a $2,000 mink coat and the balance in jewelry.

Blondell At Studio, Assigned Davis Role

Warners yesterday made a last minute change in the femme lead in "Hit Me Again," starting Monday, when they substituted Joan Blondell for Bette Davis.

This picture marks the star's first appearance since her operation last month. She returns today with her husband, George Barnes, from a Death Valley vacation.

Other members of the cast are Ricardo Cortez, Edward Everett Horton, Claire Dodd, Frank McHugh and Joan Wheeler, studio's latest acquisition.

Bob Florey will direct and Bob Presnell supervise the production.

'Flatheads' Radio's Next For Wheeler and Woolsey

Wheeler and Woolsey's next picture for Radio will be "Flatheads," from an original story by Edward Kaufman and Mark Sandrich, with the latter set to direct. Thelma Todd and Dorothy Lee have the feminine leads. Lou Brock is producing.

Curtiz To Meg on WB Leslie Howard Picture

Michael Curtiz has been assigned to direct Leslie Howard in his first Warner picture. It will be "British Agent." Howard arrived on the Warner lot yesterday and immediately went into a huddle with Hal Wallis and Curtiz on the picture.

Dunlap Returns to Job

Scotty Dunlap found his legs again yesterday, returning to his office at Frank and Dunlap, after a two month absence during which he went through an operation for goitre.

Coward Sails for Eng.

New York.—Noel Coward is on his way back to England on the Majestic. Ben Blumenthal is on the same boat.

McGuinness on 'Tish'

James K. McGuinness is at work on the screen play and dialogue of the "Tish" stories at MGM.

STUDIO READERS CLAIM SWEATSHOP CONDITIONS

First-hand knowledge of the state of affairs among the studio readers, since the inception of the code, created a furore at last night's meeting of the Screen Writers' Guild when they were laid wide open by Don Gordon, a former reader for Universal.

In a candid, unemotional manner that stressed the severity of what he called "sweatshop conditions," Gordon brought the writers bolt upright when he pointed out that studios have taken advantage of the code to slash the reader's salary to the minimum scale.

Readers in one studio, he said, were getting fifty cents an hour, or $20 a week. Other studios were maintaining an outside staff of readers on a piece-work basis, paying $15 for reports on nine plays. These readers were laid off at will, hence cutting their pay still more. This practice is increasing, he stated, to the detriment of all readers and writers on whose work reading reports were made.

On the motion of Lester Cohen, the Guild determined to take up the readers' plight the very first thing when arbitration by the 5-5 committee of writers and producers is established in the next few weeks.

Belasco-Curran Flood Town With Cut Rate Tickets

Evidently figuring that word of mouth advertising will put "Sailor Beware" way up in the money class and determined to get it there as quickly as possible, Belasco and Curran are understood to have flooded the town with 40,000 cut rate tickets for this attraction, making it possible for a person to see the show for 40 cents any night.

Dorothy Dell Gets Para. Lead With McLaglen

Paramount gave Dorothy Dell the call over other applicants for the femme lead opposite Victor McLaglen in "The Man Who Broke His Heart," which started shooting yesterday.

Studio had planned on Mae Clarke, but MGM needed the player and refused to make the loan.

George Somnes and William C. Menzies will co-direct the picture.

McGuire on 'Little Man'

His four picture deal winding up, William Anthony McGuire has accepted a one-picture assignment with Universal to do more script work on the Jo Swerling screen play of "Little Man, What Now."

It is the Frank Borzage production in which Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery will have the leads, an erroneous report here yesterday placing them in "If I Was Rich."

Wingate Extends Rest

Doctor Wingate, director of studio relations at the Hays office, now on vacation in the east, has been granted a further two weeks leave of absence.

Joe Breen, who has been pinch hitting for Wingate, will continue to occupy the latter's desk until he returns.

Try to Settle Union Row

New York.—Representatives of the indie theatre association and the unions of stage hands and operators are holding a series of conferences in hopes of ironing out their differences without necessity for the court hearing January 24.

Mae Busch at Roach

Hal Roach yesterday signed Mae Busch for the feminine lead in the Laurel and Hardy comedy, "Oliver the Eighth," which goes back to work Monday, ending the studio's two weeks' rest period. Lloyd French directs.

Arno Up for Cantor Script

Sam Goldwyn is after Peter Arno to work on the script and also the sets for the next Eddie Cantor picture. The story is being written by Nat Perrin and Arthur Sheekman and is as yet untitled.

Sten To Palm Springs

After waiting for the preview of her picture, "Nana," Anna Sten leaves Saturday for Palm Springs for vacation before starting her next, "Resurrection," under the banner of Sam Goldwyn.

TWENTY STARS TO JOIN BIG ZANUCK EXPLOITATION STUNT

To Tour Key Cities Starting February 1

New York.—The plans for a monster duplication of the great "Forty-second Street" train stunt by Twentieth Century Pictures have shaped up to the point of definite names, dates and routing. Over twenty picture stars will leave the coast January 24 on a special train, arrive here for the opening of "Moulin Rouge" and then join the big caravan of automobiles organized by the Standard (Socony) Oil Company for a personal appearance tour in the principal key cities.

Though the tie-up is with Twentieth Century, a number of players not with that company are going along as guests of the twin sponsors. Leaving New York February 1 they will make fifteen key cities, then jump from Kansas City to San Francisco by train, rejoining the caravan for a coast tour.

The list of players will not be definitely completed until near departure because of commitments in pictures in the making. Those who have already accepted include:

James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Hoot Gibson, Leo Carrillo, Anna Q. Nillson, Sally O'Neill, Molly O'Day, Sally Blane, Arline Judge, Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian.

Bill Scully, who maneuvered the "42nd St." tie-up and who has been with the Zanuck organization since its start, is in charge.

Schreiber Brings Clients To Wm. Morris Office

Under Lou Schreiber's deal in joining the William Morris office the clients he handled independently follow him to the big organization. Schreiber retains a fifty per cent interest in his personal list, as well as his arrangement on other business secured for Morris.

U. A. Manager Engaged

New York.—Sam Horowitz, United Artists branch manager in Kansas City, who is in New York on a vacation, announces his engagement to Sadie Feuerstein, secretary to Al Lichtman.

Max Arnow Due Mon.

Max Arnow, Warner caster, will return to Hollywood Monday after spending three weeks in New York looking over the talent on Broadway.

Carewe's Daughter Weds

Mary Jane Carewe, seventeen year old daughter of Edwin Carewe, was married to Douglas Scott, entertainer, in Santa Ana on December 26.

Solow-Lee Assigned

Warners have assigned Gene Solow and Robert Lee to adapt their original, "The Return of The Terror," to the screen for Spring production.

'Bombay Mail' on B'way

Dollars and Cents

When Warners issued an order to their writing staff that no outside calls were to be made, one of the higher paid writers figured out that in saving the nickel it cost Warners from $25 to $40 a call. By the time the writer finishes talking to everyone he meets on his way to the pay station and then stops off for a bite to eat, maybe it would be better to put a pay phone in every office.

20th Interested In 'Benedict Arnold'

New York.—Twentieth Century's home office here is reported making overtures to Edward Dean Sullivan for the purchase of his book, "Benedict Arnold, Military Racketeer," which the Vanguard Press is just putting out.

Twentieth is also offering him a ticket to Hollywood to do the screen play and is seeking to bring all ends together in order to make it a George Arliss vehicle. Sullivan is working on the Boston American.

Boyle's 'Sweden' Feature Winning Success in East

John W. Boyle is meeting with success in roadshowing "Sweden—Land of the Vikings," a feature-length color travelogue he photographed in Scandinavia.

The film opened at the Tremont Temple, Boston, early in December, and had a successful run. It opens at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse, New York, for a run immediately.

Educ. Goes For 3 Reels On 'Poppin' the Cork'

Educational has decided to release "Poppin' the Cork" as a three-reel featurette. Decision was made after attempts to cut the picture down brought objections from the staff working on it.

Picture was produced at the Long Island studio and has Milton Berle in the leading role. Jack White made it.

Breslau on MGM Staff

Lew Breslau became a member of the MGM writing staff yesterday and has been teamed with Michael L. Simmons to write the screen play of "Cabby." Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper are slated for the leading roles. Harry Rapf produces.

Prepare Marx Bros. Play

New York.—The plans for a return to the stage by the Marx Brothers have reached the point of definitely assigning Robert Sherwood and Moss Hart to write the vehicle. Sam Harris will produce.

'U' Moves Offices Feb. 15

New York.—Universal will move into the RKO Building about February 15, taking over three floors for its three hundred employees.

Monogram Budgets Boosted One-Third

Investigation discloses that Monogram's budgets have been appreciably boosted on the second half of the company's year's program now going into work.

While state righters always announce seasonally that "budgets are to be tilted" Hollywood consistently pays little attention to the publicity knowing by sad experience that the budgets never move. But the figures show Monogram running consistently about a third over the schedules on the first productions of the year.

Ratoff Getting Orchids On 'Let's Fall in Love'

New York.—Columbia is getting hot on "Let's Fall in Love" and will trade show it to Irving Berlin and other music publishers.

Peculiar angle is that the boys at the home office are now calling it "Gregory Ratoff's picture," which may be an advance tip on who steals the works. Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern and Miriam Jordan top the cast.

Fay Wray For 'Cristo'

Fay Wray was signed yesterday by Stanley Bergerman for the feminine lead in his next picture, "The Countess of Monte Cristo," for Universal. Roger Pryor and Patsy Kelly were also assigned feature roles. Paul Lukas has the male lead. Karl Freund will direct.

Caesar Tagged by 'U'

Arthur Caesar was signed yesterday by Universal to write the screen play of "Elizabeth and Mary," which Lowell Sherman will direct and in which he will play a featured role. Margaret Sullavan will have the top spot.

Ince Widow Divorced

Request of the court for permission to return to her name of Mrs. Elinor Kershaw Ince disclosed the fact that the widow of Tom Ince and Holmes Herbert, actor, were divorced in Mexico on December 22.

Howard Beats Schedule

William K. Howard today brings in MGM's "It Happened One Day" six days under the original shooting schedule set for it. The twenty-six day shooting slate included three days' retakes.

Neil Pratt Rites Today

Funeral rites for Neil Pratt, deceased actor, will be held today at the Leroy Bagley Mortuary, with cremation following at Los Angeles crematory.

Wanger Party Arrives

Walter Wanger, Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson arrived in Hollywood from the east on the Chief yesterday.

Greenblatt Opens Exch.

New York.—Arthur Greenblatt has opened an exchange in the Film Center Building.

Grainger Happy Over 'U' Situation

James R. Grainger, sales manager of Universal, pulled out of town on The Chief last night going direct to New York this time without exchange stopovers.

The "U" sales chief is happy over the unusual position of Universal this year which finds nineteen pictures of the year's program already in exchanges. This carries releases to March 12; ten subjects ready to go into production immediately will carry to June, leaving only the seven pictures for June, July and August to prepare. Universal is thus assured of delivering the thirty-six productions sold on this year's list.

Grainger returns for another visit to the studio in May.

'Sequoia' Once More in Works at MGM Plant

After a lapse of nearly a month, owing to impossible location weather, "Sequoia," MGM's unique picture, is slated to go back into production next Wednesday on a three weeks' schedule to complete it.

Owing to the uncertainty of obtaining necessary scenes with deer, MGM has had Ann Cunningham and Sam Armstrong rewrite a portion of the script to match in the location shots already made with the story at hand. Chester Franklin resumes the direction under John Considine's supervision. Jean Parker rates top billing in the story of Malibu, the deer.

Spewacks on 'Soviet' Yarn

Sam and Bella Spewack returned yesterday to the MGM writing staff, resuming their long term deal which allows them periodical leaves of absence for other literary work. Team starts for Irving Thalberg on "Soviet" and will be joined later on the screen play by Richard Schayer.

Scientists Team for Educ.

New York.—H. L. Woodard, scientist, will join his brother Stacy Woodard in the productions of the Educational "Battle for Life" series. The brothers will alternate. While one is in the wilds exploring for new material the other will produce the current releases.

Keighley Given 'The Key'

William Keighley has been assigned to direct "The Key" as his next job for Warners. Kay Francis was announced for this picture, but there is talk around the studio that Diana Wynyard is wanted on a loanout deal from MGM for the top spot.

Gov't To Sue Fairbanks

United States Attorney Peirson M. Hall announced yesterday that he planned immediate suit against Douglas Fairbanks Sr. for the return of $72,186 paid by the Government as a refund on income taxes and which he now declares was paid in error.

Col. Youngster on Air

George Breakston, 11-year-old Columbia player, has been signed to a radio ticket with the H-Bar-O Rangers. period.

Here's what YOU are up against

Motion Picture Producers' Association Bulletin No. 1 Regarding Extras

(Verbatim Copy)

Article IV, Section 3 (Provisions Regarding Extras) definitely states that there shall be a Committee appointed by the Code Authority to interpret the terms and provisions made for extras and to supervise same. Until such time as that Committee is appointed, the following conditions shall remain in force regarding extras:

"3" of Sub-division "A," of Section "3" reads as follows:

"'Extra Players,' $7.50 per day, with this minimum graded upward according to the character and importance of the performance and the personal wardrobe required, the minimum for Class A 'dress' people to be $15.00 per day; provided that, if any 'extra player' employed as such is required to play a part or bit with essential story dialogue, such 'extra player' shall not be deemed to be an 'extra player' and shall become a 'bit player,' and his compensation shall be fixed by agreement between such player and the producer before the part or bit is undertaken, but the minimum compensation to such 'bit player' shall not be less than twenty-five dollars ($25.00).

(1) This does not mean that any "bit player" engaged as such shall receive a minimum of $25.00, but it does mean that if an extra is engaged AS AN EXTRA, and after having started to work as an extra is then taken from the extra ranks to play a bit where essential dialogue is required, that an arrangement must be made with the said "extra player" and the person in charge of production as to what the remuneration shall be for playing that part or bit, and in no case can it be less than a minimum of $25.00 for the BIT or PART to be played.

As to bit players, if they are engaged to play a bit, that is a matter between the employer and the employee, and as for what the remuneration is for doing the work required, that also is a matter of negotiation, as there is nothing in the Code establishing either a maximum or a minimum for such work.

(2) As to what constitutes "essential story dialogue," that is a matter which should be left for the present at least up to the man in charge of the production.

As to who constitutes "Class A Dress People," that should be left to the decision of the Central Casting Bureau.

(3) As to sub-division "C," it is practically impossible to make a ruling or decision as to what number constitutes a crowd, and therefore each studio will have to decide for themselves, being sure they can justify their decision to the Committee at a later date.

As to sub-division "D," regarding transportation to and from location, which shall be paid to extra players, each studio shall continue to handle this situation as they have in the past, without any deviation.

(4) As to the balance of clause "D," referring to the interviews and fittings, etc., it should be carried out as per the Code provisions.

As to paragraph "4," Section "3," sub-division "A," which states:

"In Casting Bureaus casting and employment interviews of women and children shall be by women casting officials, and men by men."

this means that instead of the casting being done by a woman, that a woman shall be present at all interviews between the employer and a woman applicant.

As to the other sub-sections under paragraph "4," the provisions of the Code shall be lived up to.

There is no question but that there will be many complaints because we fully realize that we cannot satisfy everybody, and while it is our belief that certain people engaged as extras have been abused in certain places, and have been afraid to complain because of losing their jobs, that condition is now changed because they now have a tribunal where they can make complaint, and obtain redress without fear.

Although a few dollars might be saved in a particular instance a continued practice of that will cost thousands in the long run. Therefore, everyone should do everything he possibly can where extras are concerned to have his house well in order before the Committee takes action.

PAT CASEY.

THE BULL IN THE BULLETIN

(1) The Code plainly states extras shall receive $7.50 to $15.00 per day and bit players at least $25.00 per day — that's fair enough!

But it forgot to say POSITIVELY!

The Bulletin tells Producers how to evade the Code and pay less.

(2) Q: When is "essential dialogue" NOT "essential dialogue," Mr. Bones?

A: When you can chisel an actor out of pay for speaking it.

(3) "Three's a crowd" used to be a gag; but now it will be the rule.

The Code says pay atmosphere people $5.00. The Bulletin says call them a crowd and pay them less.

(4) Well, well, well. They're REALLY going to live up to something in the Code. . . . . .

If it doesn't cost anything!

Here's what the GUILD has done about it

LONDON NEWS LETTER

Connery Chappell, the film critic of the Sunday Dispatch, after a jaunt through the provinces comes back with the astounding news that Robert Montgomery is the biggest male star in pictures for those audiences and that Norma Shearer is the greatest female attraction, even greater than our own Gracie Fields. . . . Chappell writes also that the most popular picture recently was "42nd Street." . . . He also spins the yarn of standing in front of a house displaying posters of "Gabriel Over The White House" and having a prospective ticket purchaser ask, "I say, old man, who is this fellow Gabriel?"

The Twickenham studios are to be enlarged to three times their present capacity. Construction will be completed in April. . . . This is the spot where Julius Hagen makes the quota pictures for Radio and Universal and an occasional release for one of the big British companies. . . . Sidney Carroll, in the Daily Telegraph, does a tremendous rave for Elizabeth Bergner, the German lass who has the feminine lead in "Catherine the Great." Carroll says, "I bow to her as a reed bends to the storm; I sink in her presence as a stone drops in the sea."

The Ian Hay-A. E. Mason play, "A Present From Margate," opened with little enthusiasm at the Shaftsbury. . . . London is still waiting for that Ramon Novarro play script, "It's Another Story." . . . He promised not only to write and produce it here, but to star in it as well. . . . Most of the Russian pictures, at least the best of them, are not being made in Moscow, but in Georgia, the land of the Mdivanis.

The next Robert Flaherty picture will be made in Australia. He will leave for that country soon, expecting to be gone about a year. . . . London critics took a nice slap at the Paramount production of "Alice In Wonderland." Ernest Betts in the Standard says, in part, "It turns out to be a mixture of 'Alice' and 'Through the Looking Glass,' with what one might describe as a slight kick in the pants." . . . The Evening News said, "Well, it's over! I have just been through the ordeal of seeing 'Alice in Wonderland' and both Lewis Carroll and I have survived pretty well. It's a horrible shock to find that Alice (Charlotte Henry) talks with a Philadelphia accent and Rosco Ates, as Fish Footman, stuttering through his part."

French Government Will Finance Films

Paris.—On the authority of the Minister of Education and Fine Arts it is stated that the French Government will this year establish a financial institution the purpose of which will be to aid domestic producers, with the particular aim to encourage big productions that can compete with such English pictures as "Henry the Eighth" and the American specials.

'Kong' on High in Britain

London.—"King Kong" booking figures are expected to reach £150,000 in the British Isles, according to latest estimates. The picture is running about 20 per cent above Radio's best expectations in its general release showings.

Will Film Rembrandt Life

Brussels.—Rembrandt is to come to the screen. Jacques Feyder, Belgian born French director, has written a screen play around the famous artist and plans early production.

No Swedish Monopoly

Stockholm.—Government spokesmen have vigorously denied reports current in German film circles that a Government monopoly was planned for motion pictures.

Film Anatole France Novel

Paris. — "Crainquebille," Anatole France's famous novel, is being filmed by Jacques de Baroncelli. Jacques Feyder once made it in a silent version.

Mexico Will Make 25 Pictures in 1934

Mexico.—Walter Gould, general manager for United Artists in Mexico, states that at least ten producing companies will be active in the country next year and will make about 25 picures for Spanish-American distribution. There are about 400 wired houses out of a total of 600 theatres. Superimposed Spanish titles on American-made films are gaining in popularity, but films made in Mexico are favored.

Ufa Closes Big Deal For Sound Outfits

Berlin.—Ufa and Tobis-Klangfilm have just concluded a million mark deal calling for the building of seventeen new sound recording outfits, bringing in the results of Ufa's latest experiences. With nineteen outfits already, the completion of this new order will set Ufa in a top position among European producers.

Prize for Swedish Story

Stockholm.—The Svensfilmindustry will pay ten thousand crowns in prizes for the three best screen plays submitted before March 1, 1934, with an additional five thousand crowns if a picture is made from the story. If you can write Swedish the offer is open to you.

Belg. Opposes Foreigners

Brussels.—The Belgian Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a move to insist on dubbing of imported pictures here to aid Belgian artists, and also to create jobs for Belgians by eliminating the large number of Frenchmen in the film organizations.

Judy Kelly on Termer

London.—Judy Kelly has been placed under contract to Julius Hagen of the Twickenham Studios. Reported that the player could have got a deal with Alexander Korda but felt she would get a better individual chance at the Twickenham plant.

Joyce Boosting Oberon

London.—Frank Joyce, American agent, is quoted in papers here as declaring that Merle Oberon is the most promising player here. Miss Oberon will be seen opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "Exit Don Juan" and played Anne Boleyn in "Henry the Eighth."

Wales Investigates Films

Sydney.—The government of New South Wales has appointed F. W. Marks to investigate the film industry because of exhibitor complaints that certain distributors are boosting rentals to a point that will drive them out of business.

Reduce French Duty

Paris.—Duties on American negatives have been lowered seventeen per cent by the Government due to the fall of the dollar.

Dec. Low in Hungary Pics

Budapest.—A single two reeler was the total of production activity in Hungarian studios for the month of December, a new low.

Gossip Around Paris

J. Carlo Bavetta, Fox chief in Europe, is in New York conferring with home office officials on the coming year's productions. . . Max Reinhardt has announced here that he will soon journey to the United States. . . "International House" got a warm reception in local press reviews. . . . Louis Marx, "U's" sales head, is busy on a deal to sell the "U" product outright for Belgium. . . . Harold L. Smith, Hays office man here, is doing a great job in the Legion drive for funds to help needy Americans. . . . United Artists chief, Koerpel, in Russia on important matters. . . . Monogram's "Oliver Twist" is due to be presented here in a French dubbed version. . . . Max Friedland conferring from morn to night with directors, etc., and just waiting the word from Uncle Carl to get started on Universal's French production. . . . Will probably have to wait now for Junior Laemmle's arrival. . . . Lily Damita putting on her prop smile for everyone approaching her at the Joinville studio. . . . "Dinner At Eight" getting great houses. . . . The King of Belgium saw Gaumont's "I Was A Spy" and "Red Dress." . . The entire royal family are film fans. . . . There's an awful lot to read in the February Screeland, but not much will stick with you, except "Medals and Birds," by S. R. Mook, and, perhaps, "If She Hadn't Been Born in Brooklyn" (Clara Bow), by Lillian Montanye.

"Medals and Birds" is Mook's annual rave and squawk, and it's mighty swell reading.

Betty Shannon tells all about "Katharine Hepburn's College Days"; James M. Fidler asks "Will Hollywood Accept Nudism?" "Arliss Tells What Happy Marriage Has Taught Him" to Ada Patterson; Ruth Tildesley quotes A. A. Freudman in "Use the Movies in Home-Making"; and Leonard Hall has "East Coast, West Coast—Where Are the Movies Bound?"

Interviews are "Jean Harlow Confides Her Secret Ambition" (to have a baby), by James M. Screen Book for February has a slight edge over Screenland. Art is better, and the writers took a little more time over their stories.

Helen Louise Walker has two good yarns, "Alice White Starts Another Fight" and "I'll Never Be Afraid Again" (Claudette Colbert).

Dena Reed also has two stories, "Mae West Loses Her Man" and "Why Tragedy Haunts Ralph Morgan."

B. F. Wilson is another two-story contributor, with "So He Decided to Marry" (Gary Cooper) and "From Duck Soup to 'Opbwkn" (Harpo Marx).

J. Brien Chapman has "How the Stars Are Fighting Scandal"; Eric L. Ergenbright writes "Chaplin — the Mystery Man of Hollywood"; Radie Harris has "The Story Sylvia Sidney Never Told" (about her father); Dick Mook tells of "Secret Marriage Discovered" (Lyle Talbot); and Whitney Williams outlines the arsenal tendencies of Velez in "Jewel Thieves Beware of Lupe Velez."

Dr. Louis E. Bisch's article, "Movies Will Get You If You Don't Watch Out!" is the usual psychological data; Al Sherman quotes Ernst Lubitsch in "Ambition Is to Blame for Divorce in Hollywood"; Lew Garvey has a story on Janet Snowden, "Hollywood Robs Fifth Avenue"; and other interviews are "Max Baer Is Afraid of Hollywood," by Eleanor Packer, and "One Girl They Couldn't Change" (Margaret Sullavan), by Northam Bryan.

The action passes the buck plainly to Allied, which has advised its members not to sign assents.

The Committee of Assents, Nathan Yamins, Ed. Kuykendall and J. Robert Rubin, will make the appointments subject to the approval of the entire Code Authority.

Only Eddie Cantor, Dressler and Aylesworth were absent from today's meeting, the first two because no matters concerning production were to come up. The meeting also named Jack Cohn permanent alternate for R. H. Cochrane.

The Authority will move into permanent quarters in the Radio City buildings on January 10, when the next meeting will be held. John Flinn did a good job yesterday in his first as executive secretary of the body.

Rosco Ates To Drop The Stuttering Act

Rosco Ates, who swung into feature prominence as a player owing in part to his expert stuttering, is determined to lose his pseudo-defect, figuring its novelty is pretty well shot.

Warners have booked him into a stutter-less role in "Merry Wives of Reno," which Lucky Humberstone is directing, and Edwin Carewe has engaged him for "Are We Civilized?" The Beyer-MacArthur office is lining up his non-stuttering assignments.

Para. Tests Col. Players

Paramount tested two Columbia players, Billie Seward and Harriette Lake, now known as Ann Sothern, for the lead in "Melody in Spring" with Lannie Ross, Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles. One of the two girls is slated for the part. Norman McLeod will direct. Douglas MacLean is supervising.

Gladys Unger at 'U'

Universal yesterday signed Gladys Unger to do additional dialogue on "Countess of Monte Cristo," which Karl Freund puts into production next Wednesday. Picture has been scripted by Karen de Wolfe. Unger recently wrote "Coming Out Party" for Jesse L. Lasky and Fox.

Levine Signs Schaefer

Armand Schaefer has been signed by Nat Levine to direct Mascot's next serial, "The Lost Continent," with Clyde Beatty and the Hollenbeck and Wallace animals. Picture is scheduled to get under way by the middle of next month.

Kull and Minter To Meg

Ken Goldsmith has set Harold R. Minter, production manager, and Edward Kull, cameraman, as co-directors on the outdoor series with Jackie Searle. First is scheduled to start March 10.

MGM Buys College Yarn

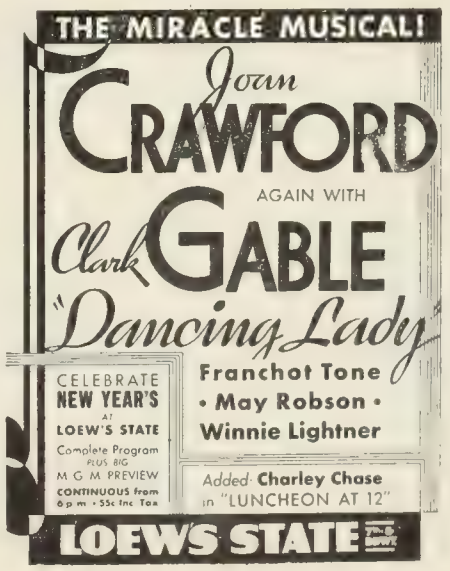
New York.—MGM is getting its college yarn lined up for next season, having purchased "One Part Cheese Cloth," a story of the campus by Bernard DeVoto, Saturday Evening Post writer.

Krasna's Last Laff

Norman Krasna has the last laugh after his simultaneous conclusion of an MGM contract and a Columbia loan-out. He goes to Stanley Bergerman's "U" unit on a four weeks' deal at $1000 per—a jump from a $350 figure

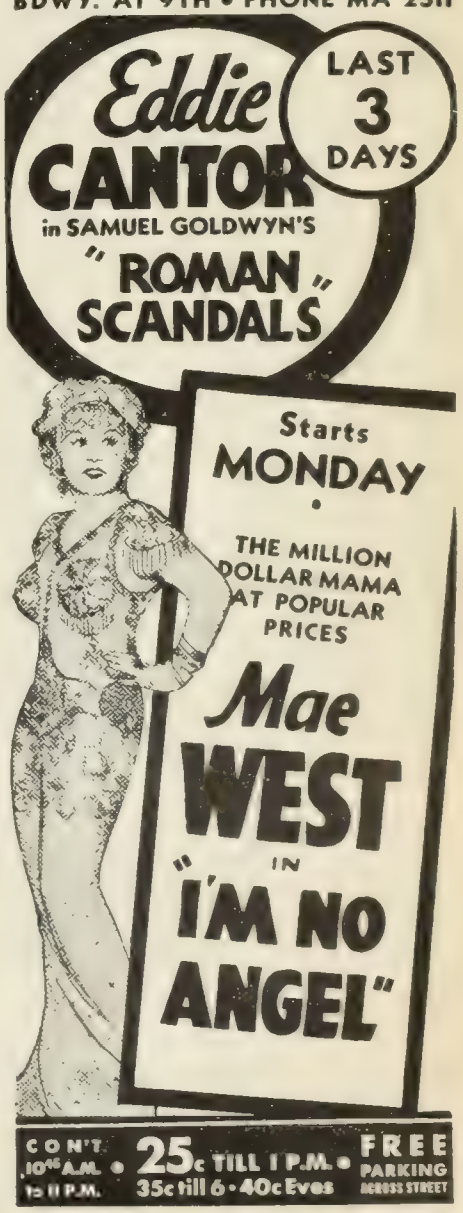
MGM Recalls Jean Dixon

MGM is bringing Jean Dixon, New York stage player, back to Hollywood for a featured role in the Joan Crawford picture, "Sadie McKee," the Edington-Vincent office negotiating the deal.



Player was here several months ago for a brief period.

Rainger-Robin Assigned



Paramount has assigned Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin to write the words and music for "Come on Marines" and "The Trumpet Blows." Team's last work was for Bing Crosby's forthcoming picture, "We're Not Dressing."

Patsy Kelly to 'U'

Universal has put through a deal with Hal Roach for the loan of Patsy Kelly for a comedy spot in "Countess of Monte Cristo." Ralph Farnum grabs credit for the deal.

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•"WHERE do you get that phrase 'controlled budget pictures'?" an exhibitor writes us. "Don't you mean 'short budget pictures'?"

Decidedly not. Because there is a difference.

In the first place, when you use the phrase "short budget pictures" as a blanket covering for all pictures made to entertain at intelligent costs, you do an injustice to the sincere maker.

Because you lump him with everything that is CHEAP.

And a "controlled budget picture" does not have to be cheap—in quality of entertainment.

True—at least fifty per cent of the time a picture made at a moderate cost in this business HAS BEEN CHEAP IN ALL WAYS.

Because most major executives by some darned freak idiotic twist of logic get the attitude that ANYTHING goes in a moderate cost picture.

The story, script and dialogue creak—but instead of taking even another week to iron out the wrinkles you hear: "Oh, hell, it's one of the cheap ones. Anything goes with them."

The casting is spotty and uneven, and you hear: "Rats, she's a washout, but she'll get by in this one. It's one of our cheap pictures."

Those are really "short budget" pictures.

But "controlled budgets" are the order of the day this year. They mean giving the same time, attention and care to story, casting and preparation to the moderate priced picture as to the big one—but when you start shooting controlling the reins so that you hit the mark you aim at. And controlling it so well that there's a margin of a few thousands to fix up anything that may go wrong.

And "control of budgets" also means the making of the BIGGEST pictures. In this sense: When things are under control a company can afford to say:

"Here are four, six or eight ideas out of our entire list that are BIG—we'll shoot the works on them, go the limit. But we are not doing it blindly. WE KNOW WHERE WE ARE GOING."

So we give you: "Controlled budget pictures."

Cooper Back Mon. Will Decide Then On His Activities

New York.—Merian C. Cooper will be back in Hollywood Monday and together with B. B. Kahane, J. R. McDonough and others will decide his future activities with Radio Pictures.

It is understood that Cooper's contract with Radio as production head of the studio, expires February 1 and that his future activities will not be as studio head but as the producer of the "Jock" Whitney series of pictures that the organization will make on the lot and release through the Radio exchanges.

Cooper is understood to have told intimates that he does not care for the burden of being in charge of the production of any studio, that he would like to make two or three pictures a year and those pictures with the Whitney financing.

Week-end Sailings of Film Folk To Europe

New York.—Week-end sailings among film and theatrical folk include Irving Asher of Warners, Friday on the Mauretania; Carlyle Blackwell, Friday night on the Europa; Mitzi Mayfair and Jules Demaria, honorary president of the French Cinema Syndicate, Saturday on the Lafayette.

Siff Resigns at MGM

Phillip Siff has resigned as executive assistant to David Selznick effective next Monday. He returns to New York.

Chatterton To Rest

Ruth Chatterton will leave for Palm Springs today for a month's rest. The star has been ill the past week with a bad cold.

Stock Players Never So Busy And Inter-Studio Loan-Outs Being Pushed To The Limit

With the rush of pictures to start the new year free lance players and their agents are awakening in alarm to the fact that the jobs are not as plentiful as the pictures. The famine condition is caused by an intensive drive on the part of the majors to absorb every dollar of stock players' time even to the extent of dropping name actors into comparative bits; combined with a close knit spirit of cooperation to the same end between studios that is moving the stock players around like pieces on a checkerboard.

The situation is well illustrated by "Merry Wives of Reno," at Warners, a moderate cost negative which finds the

Brent To Court In Warner Scrap

George Brent filed suit yesterday in Superior Court, through his attorney, Peyton H. Moore, against Warner Brothers studio, asking the court to interpret his contract.

Brent admits his refusal to play the role assigned him by Warners in "Mandalay," after the studio would not comply with his wish to be released from the assignment. He claims the role was that of a drunken doctor who when intoxicated allows a baby to die. He felt that the role would hurt him.

Cohn Returns Monday

New York.—Harry Cohn, Columbia's boss, leaves by plane today for Hollywood and will be at his desk on Monday morning.

Adela R. St. Johns Will Sue Columbia

Adela Rogers St. Johns, prominent Hearst writer, is filing suit early next week through Attorney Jerry Geisler against Columbia Pictures for unpaid balance on the story "Take the Witness."

The writer alleges that after telling the idea of the story to Harry Cohn she was instructed to go ahead with the development, receiving one-fourth down on a purchase price of $7500. Later, in New York, the first treatment was put into script form on approval of Nate Spingold, of Columbia, and the author returned to the coast with a completed job.

And since then, she says, she hasn't even been able to see Harry Cohn.

Hammell of Paramount To Locate at Studio

New York.—Bob Gillam of Paramount left for the coast yesterday accompanied by John Hammell of the company's distribution department. The latter will eventually locate permanently at the studio, with John Barry, formerly of the Publix organization, being groomed for Hammell's home office post.

Mrs. Selznick Under Knife

Mrs. Lewis Selznick, mother of David and Myron Selznick, underwent a major operation at the Good Samaritan Hospital yesterday. Her condition was reported as satisfactory at a late hour last night. Dr. Maurice Kahn operated.

'L. B.' to Frisco

Louis B. Mayer left for San Francisco Thursday taking his wife there to a hospital for observation. The MGM chief will be back in a few days.

Joe 'Mank' East

CASEY DEFENDS POSITION ON CODE EXTRA BULLETIN

Pat Casey, Producers' Labor Representative, yesterday defended his Bulletin number 1 issued to all producers regarding extras, and denied the charges in the Screen Actors' Guild's telegram to Sol Rosenblatt in Washington that "it is an insolent attempt by studios to evade the code."

"The code clearly states," said Casey, "that extra players are to re-

'HERBERT' FORMULA PLAY; DOMINATED BY J. C. NUGENT

'Grumpy' Routine Too Old For Pics

"BIG HEARTED HERBERT"

Eddie Dowling presents "Big Hearted Herbert," adapted by Sophie Kerr and Anna Steese Richardson from a story by Sophie Kerr; staged by Dan Jarrett. With J. C. Nugent, Elizabeth Risdon, Norman Williams, Dorothy Walter, Alan Bunce, Marjorie Wood, Betty Lancaster and others. At the Biltmore Theatre.

New York.—Just as it is inevitable that at least one story of this type make its appearance on every picture program, so it is inevitable that a study of an irascible old gent with a heart of gold be given the opportunity to romp around the stage at least once a season. In this case, despite the fact that nothing new has been manufactured to make the idea any different from the rest of this particular school of thought, there is J. C. Nugent grumbling all over the place and getting laughs from those who really know better than to encourage this kind of thing. It's his show and he makes the best there is of it.

This particularly "Grumpy" is a self-made man who abominates college men, especially the Harvard breed. (Laugh situation number three.) He is also a "plain" man who will not wear tuxedo. (Laugh situation number four.) He also refuses to give up dominating his family and ruling his children's lives until his wife (who has been gallantly hanging on to her idea of what she thought she married twenty-three years ago) takes the situation in hand. The proper results are gained through the exceedingly simple ruse of taking the chintz covers off the hideous old-fashioned furniture and having the daughter of the house slap down a "plain" meal of Irish stew and apple pie before "Grumpy's" very best customers whom he wishes to impress. (Stock situation number five.) The wife also threatens to leave home unless Papa agrees to allow his daughter to marry a lawyer and allow his older son to become an engineer instead of going into Papa's manufacturing business. There is also a younger son who is the only one in the family with brains enough to realize his father is a fool and love him for that.

As has been said before, this is J. C. Nugent's show, but along with him are Elizabeth Risdon as his wife, who does right well by an incredible part, and Norman Williams as the younger son, who is one of the pleasantest and most natural kids we've ever seen on the stage; and Betty Lancaster as the daughter, who is a very attractive lass and studiously and successfully avoids being the least bit coy. It is too bad that the gal's voice is slightly high and rasping. With that defect removed, she'd be okay for sound. And Dan Jarrett's direction comes through the pretty tough task of having eight people on the stage at once while one completely dominates the conversation.

Wide Open

P. J. Wolfson shot himself in the arm accidentally yesterday while cleaning his shotgun. He was taken to the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital for treatment. You should hear the sympathy (?) he gets from the boys.

Warners Dust Off 'Beau Brummel' Pic

Warners are dusting off their "Beau Brummel" property and looking at it this way and that with an idea of remaking it. Silent picture was made ten years ago with John Barrymore, Mary Astor, Irene Rich, Alec B. Francis, Carmel Myers and Richard Tucker, most of whom are ever-present today.

ceive $7.50 per day, with this minimum graded upwards according to the character and importance of the performance and the personal wardrobe required, the minimum for any class A 'extra player' to be $15.00 per day. Producers are without exception paying this minimum scale.

"If any extra, employed as such, is required to play a bit such player becomes a 'bit player' and the minimum compensation shall be not less than $25.00. The code does not specify per day, but $25.00 minimum for that 'bit,' whether it takes ten minutes or ten days. This minimum scale does not apply, nor was it meant to apply, to anyone not originally hired as 'an extra player,' so that a producer who hires a player for a 'bit' may make any arrangement with that player as shall be mutually satisfactory.

"As to what is and what is not 'essential dialogue' and what constitutes a 'crowd' obviously this can only be decided by the man in charge of production..

"This bulletin, signed by me, was issued as an aid to the studios in understanding this phase of the question and I am convinced that every producer today is living up to the spirit as well as the letter of the code. The charges made in the Guild's telegram are without foundation in fact."

David Selznick Ends First Year At MGM

David Selznick this week rounds out his first year with MGM and starts the second on his two-year contract with that company.

In addition to many months spent assisting L. B. Mayer on organization matters due to the illness of Irving Thalberg, Selznick has claims to a successful year with such pictures as "Dinner at Eight" and "Dancing Lady" and the bouquets he is receiving for bringing "Little Women" to the screen. Great expectations are also held for "Viva Villa," the picture which rounds out his year.

Four Selznick productions are already in the works for the coming year, "Streets of New York" for Gable, "Sacred and Profane Love" for Crawford, "Prisoner of Zenda" and an unnamed historical subject for George Cukor direction.

'PALOOKA' PACKS LAFFS; 'LET'S FALL IN LOVE' GOOD

Great Casting Tops All Around Job

"PALOOKA"
An Edward Small Production

Director .....Benjamin Stoloff
Screen Play: Jack Jevne, Gertrude Purcell and Arthur Kober.
Photographer .....Arthur Edeson
Cast: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Rambeau, Robert Armstrong, Mary Carlisle, William Cagney, Thelma Todd, Franklyn Ardell, Tom Dugan and Stanley Fields.

There are almost as many laughs in "Palooka" as there are feet in the film, and when a little discreet cutting is done on a few dull places the picture will be one continuous laugh.

It drags a little in the beginning, until Stu Erwin gets to the big city to become a prizefighter and Lupe Velez appears on the scene. From then on it's a wow.

The story is a cinch any way you look at it, and it is embellished with dialogue that crackles. The cast romps through the thing with all the gusto in the world, and anyone who is looking for a boisterous, noisy, slightly cock-eyed and rowdy evening's entertainment can find it in "Palooka."

Jimmy Durante has the part of his life in this picture. He plays the fight manager who persuades Stu Erwin to leave his farm and come to New York to become world's champion, as his father, Robert Armstrong, was before him. Marjorie Rambeau is Erwin's mother, who has seen her husband about twice in the past twenty years and has no desire to see her son follow in his father's footsteps. But Erwin becomes champion, through a series of phony fights arranged by Durante, and it isn't until he steals a rival's girl and has a fight on the level that he realizes that he's a fake in the ring.

Erwin lumbers away with his part in the typical Erwin manner, only doing it a little better than usual. Miss Rambeau and Armstrong are splendidly cast as his parents. Jimmy Durante works hard and seldom has had a better advantage to do his stuff, and Miss Velez is extremely alluring as the girl who flits from champ to champ.

William Cagney is a natural born actor. He has a hard part in this film and he gets away with it brilliantly. Mary Carlisle, Thelma Todd, Franklyn Ardell, Tom Dugan and Stanley Fields have smaller but colorful roles.

With the exception of those few, dull, stiff bits, the direction of Benjamin Stoloff is fast and clever. Jack Jevne, Gertrude Purcell and Arthur Kober wrote the screen play, and Arthur Edeson photographed it. Credit for additional dialogue is given Ben Ryan and Murray Roth, so they must be mentioned.

There's no box office worry about "Palooka." You'll probably have repeaters coming back to catch the dialogue and action they missed while laughing so hard.

Hail Columbia!

A committee headed by Irving Briskin, Sam Nelson and Wilbur McGough raised $1500 on the Columbia lot in a few hours for the widow and five children of Frank Geraghty, veteran assistant director, who was a victim of the flood.

'Wheels of Destiny' Weak For Maynard

"WHEELS OF DESTINY"
(Maynard-Universal)

Directed by.....Allan James
Original and Screen Play..Nate Gatzert
Photography by.....Ted McCord
Cast: Ken Maynard, Dorothy Dix, Philo McCullough, Frank Rice, Jay Wilsie, Ed Coxen, Fred Sale Jr., Fred MacKaye, Jack Rockwell, William Gould, Nelson McDowell, Big Tree, Tarzan.

This picture was made at a cost way below even Maynard's average. It looks it.

A group of easterners are preparing to trek to California to work a claim one of their members has found when they are attacked by outlaws seeking a map of the gold fields. Maynard arrives in time to save the day, thus making an excuse for a chase in the first hundred feet of film. From this point on the little band suffer more trials and tribulations than did the chosen people on their flight out of Egypt into the Promised Land. The outlaws appear from time to time as do several thousand Indians. These dealt with, a prairie fire and a cloud burst equaling the late Los Angeles flood, remain to be overcome but Maynard managed to get the little band safe at last on the sunny side of the Rockies.

There are more chases than usual and these might get the kids' money.

Tarzan, who usually can be counted on, didn't receive his usual opportunities. Photography and direction have to rate along with the routine air of the whole affair.

SE May Ask Another Injunction

Studio Technicians No. 37, IATSE, has called a general meeting to be held Monday evening at headquarters to discuss the court denial of its application to enjoin members of Local No. 40 of the IBEW from working in studios for which the IATSE claimed jurisdiction.

L. C. G. Blix, business representative of the IATSE, will seek permission from the members to file another suit against the IBEW on the question.

Blix said that the adverse decision will not affect his suit for $33,900,000 against a large proportion of the film capital, now pending.

Ratoff a Hit; Sothern a Bet

"LET'S FALL IN LOVE"
(Columbia)

Directed by.....David Burton
Story and Screen Play by Herbert Fields
Photographed by.....Benjamin Kline
Music by.....Harold Arlen
Lyrics by.....Ted Koehler
Cast: Gregory Ratoff, Ann Sothern, Edmund Lowe, Miriam Jordan, Tala Birell, Greta Meyer, Kane Richmond, Marjorie Gateson, Sven Borg, Arthur Jarrett.

With the exception of "Lady for a Day" this picture is the best that Columbia has had on its program for a long time. It reaches the top spot in program attractions and should return a big profit to the studio and equally as big returns for the theatres.

It's nothing pretentious, shows nothing new, has an antique story idea, but the manner in which the whole production is handled turns it into a swell piece of entertainment.

Gregory Ratoff walks away with the picture in the role of a Hollywood picture producer. Several times during the preview the run of the picture was interrupted by applause for his standout scenes and it was well deserved. However, Ann Sothern (formerly Harriet Lake) grabs her share of the cake in what, we believe, is her first major part in a picture. She is good to look at, reads her lines most convincingly and has the marks of a big bet. Either the recording was bad or she is no great shucks in song, but in either case she's O.K.

Much credit should go to David Burton for a direction that was, at all times, most charming. It's pretty tough to hold screen interest with a story in which you can call every sequence before it is played, but Burton did that and more. Other credits should go to Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler for a certain smash song hit, "Let's Fall in Love," and Edmund Lowe for his performance in a rather stilted role.

Plot is laid in a studio background with a star walking out on a picture and the efforts of the director (working on his pet picture) to uncover a girl to take her place. He finds her in a circus and of course she is a hit and of course they fall in love. Although the yarn is formula, it is told convincingly and with plenty of amusement.

You can spot this one any place. It's not a musical, although having a cinch hit number, thereby presenting musical qualities without the general drawbacks of that type of entertainment. Don't let the picture sneak in on you or your audience; it should be ballyhooed to get the effects it deserves.

Melton on Long Termer

Frank Melton, youngster who scored in "State Fair," and then went to work in Muller's Gas Station while waiting a decision from Fox on his future, was yesterday signed to a long term contract by the Westwood studio.

Yesterday in New York with Helen Gwynne

Well, my foes and friends, THAT was a New Year's celebration. All those who were not out of town were at the Mayfair party which was one gorgeous champagne bubble until 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning, and with all the best intentions in the world it was impossible to keep a record of those present, on account of things were just a blur after 12 that completely blotted out that which went before. . . . Lotsa people took advantage of the elegant week-end to go frolicking out of town. Kay Francis celebrated the New Year down on Long Island with the Donald Ogden Stewarts and the thing that exhausted her was watching the tennis. George Oppenheimer went up to Arden, N. Y., to visit with the Harrimans and got more sleep than he's had in years. And, incidentally, out of those two parties we said had been given for Miriam Hopkins by Bennett Cerf, at least one of them was in honor of George Oppenheimer, and Bennett Cerf thinks he should be given credit for it. . . . Julie and Arthur Hornblow (who spent most of the holidays down in ole Virginny) had themselves a farewell cocktail party on Arthur's return to Hollywood and Julie's return to the old homestead. And a goodly crowd was there with Carl Van Vechten, Marion Saportas (with a very new and gorgeous diamond bracelet), Eddie Wasserman, Tullio Carminati (who's about to decide where and when he wants to leave town suddenly), Kay Francis, Dwight Fiske, Joan Carr and George Oppenheimer. . . . Arthur Lubin has finally made up his mind about what he's going to do next and that is to direct a play called "Brief Nocturne," by Victor Whotkenstein. This recounts the story of that grande passion between George Sand and Chopin, and if plans don't go astray one of your very favorite actresses will play the George Sand role.

We've just discovered that a lot of these eye-arresting marquees are done that way a-purpose. Anyway, one theatre we know of makes it a practice to book pictures that'll cause comment when billed together and that's the Edison. The one they had for the holidays reads: "Aggie Appleby Maker of Men" and "Little Women." . . . And so, to get back to New Year's once more, Helen Morgan had a Tom and Jerry party the afternoon of the eve and we still don't know what they are since we never got past the Planter's Punch. . . . BUT, ladies and gents, the best celebration this town has had in years was over the victory of Columbia. Telephone and telegraph wires burned with congratulations from old grads to older grads and it's absolutely impossible to even talk to a Columbia man. And whata break for God's country—Graham McNamee couldn't talk about the weather and the beautiful mountains and it sorta put a stop gap to all the boasting about western football as compared to eastern. But what it has really done is to give eastern production the biggest boost it's ever had.

Londoners Rate 'La Maternelle' Best Pic of 1933

London.—The French production of "La Maternelle," now playing the Academy here, has been rated by most of the film critics of Great Britain as the best picture of any manufacture during the past twelve months.

"La Maternelle" was made by Productions Photosounor of Paris at a total cost of $48,000. It stars Madeleine Renaud and was directed by Leon Frapie from the story of J. Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein.

Picture is being released here and in France by Universal.

'Elizabeth' for MacMahon

Continuing to build Aline MacMahon towards starring, Warners have placed on their schedule a costume production under the title "Elizabeth" to star the player. She rates top billing in "Fur Coats," which goes into work next week. No other cast members set.

Zanuck Seeks Laughton

Darryl Zanuck has not given up hope of getting Charles Laughton for the Duke's part in "Affairs of Cellini," although Paramount, which has the player under contract, has not given the deal its okay to date.

Stuart in 'Campus Queen'

Gloria Stuart returned from Carmel yesterday and was assigned by Universal for the top spot in "The Campus Queen," from an original story by Lou Foster.

Double Cross

Universal is reported ready to slam Columbia before the Code Authority. Basketball teams of both companies met Thursday, Columbia walking through their opponents to a 60-28 win, Universal alleging now that Columbia had run in last year's UCLA champs as their team.

'Ziegfeld' Lands On Shelf At Universal

Universal has postponed production on "The Great Ziegfeld," for which Billie Burke had been signed at one time. Extraordinarily lavish demands for such a picture are regarded at this period as contrary to the company's policy.

Lyle Talbot Excused

Threatened with suspension owing to his disappearance when Warners demanded him for retakes in "Upperworld," Lyle Talbot cleared the air when he told Hal Wallis how a fog had forced him to stop off at Santa Barbara while the studio wired frantically to the Hearst ranch for him. Wallis told him to forget the incident.

Meeting on Code in Feb.

Washington.—General Johnson announced today that he was calling all Code Authorities to meet here early in February for general instructions and to iron out in open discussion the problems of four or five industries where complaints have been heard.

following members of the stock list falling over each other: Glenda Farrell, Guy Kibbee, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Donald Woods, Margaret Lindsay, Ruth Donnelly, Hobart Cavanaugh. Kibbee has jumped from "Wonder Bar" to "Harold Teen," to "Merry Wives"; Cavanaugh from "Harold Teen" to "Very Honorable Guy" to "Merry Wives," schedules being interlocked like a cross-word puzzle.

A survey of the principal majors concerning percentage of stock players at work or scheduled for pictures within a few days is here summarized:

Columbia, with fourteen stock contract players, will have ten working by the end of the week on the three productions scheduled to be under way by that time.

At MGM, with the recent production spurt tapering off, studio still has 70 per cent of the star and featured players active and this list will be raised to around 80 per cent before the end of the month. MGM lists fifteen stars and 42 featured players.

Sixteen of Radio's stock list of 22 are either working or scheduled for pictures on the early slate.

Warners figures are astonishing. With 16 stars, ten are working or scheduled for the next week; of 31 featured players, 28 are already cast in pictures now in production.

Paramount is using the loan-out route to keep their percentage high, about sixty per cent of the players keeping consistently busy over the current month either at home or abroad. Universal, due to the youngsters carried in stock for future possibilities, shows a surplus of idle players but "Countess of Monte Cristo," "If I Were Rich," and others scheduled for quick shooting are counted to absorb all of the big overhead this month. Fox is the only unhealthy exception to the rule, with only 20 per cent of the stock list at work, and the average only due to go up slightly in the next two weeks. Fox, under Sheehan's rules, also cagey about loan-outs.

Poli in Five Year Deal With MGM

New York.—One of the biggest blanket booking deals on record was concluded yesterday with the signing by the Poli Circuit of a five-year deal for MGM product.

The circuit, now controlled by Nathanson and Blumenthal interests, plans to do its own vaudeville booking and looks to a revival in that field.

Colbert Back for Retakes

Claudette Colbert returned from Furnace Creek Inn in Death Valley yesterday.

She goes to Columbia Monday for retakes under Frank Capra's direction in "It Happened One Night," formerly known as "Night Bus."

Rosenblatt Sets the Date

Washington.—Sol Rosenblatt now definitely plans his Coast trip to start the 19th or 20th. He was made a Kentucky Colonel today.

ACAD-GUILD FIGHT AGAIN

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IT seems to be an undeniable fact that the individuals at the production helm here in Hollywood (with possibly one or two exceptions) know less about the making of pictures than anyone else connected with the Hollywood industry. And still those very men, who have ALL the say, seem to be continually doing everything to thwart the creators, men and women, who could and would make successful pictures.

Go over the list of studio heads (you know them as well as we do) and pick more than two men who could stand on their own in production. Then go over the same list of men, and those of you who are familiar with their actions jot down the number of pictures they have ruined during the past twelve months by their insane ideas, absolute child-like decisions or Napoleonic attitudes. It's a damned disgrace and is THE reason for bad pictures and the huge cost of those bad pictures.

It should be the duty of a studio head to surround himself with an organization that can make GOOD PICTURES. It should be his desire to assemble a group of producers who can produce and permit them to produce unhampered. It should be his duty to watch the purse strings, to attend to the business details of the studio and let the creators CREATE. But who of them are doing it?

We saw a picture the other night the production of which has been the talk of the town for almost a month. It was a cheap picture, made in a cheap studio (one of the majors) that in its completed form was SWELL ENTERTAINMENT. In addition, it brought to the screen a new personality. For making this good picture at a low cost, for digging up the story, for getting it written so that it would play logically, for bringing to the studio a new personality, the producer was FIRED. All because he was "tough to get along with." All because he KNEW how to produce but his stupid studio head failed to recognize it. Because the producer would not countenance stupid interference.

Now that the picture is a success the studio is trying to get the producer back. But it's too late. He has been snapped up by another organization, by a man desirous of per-

Para. Chairman On Way Here To Look Things Over

New York—Duncan Holmes, chairman of the shareholders committee of Paramount, is on his way to Hollywood to look over the studio and its product in the interests of the committee he represents.

It is understood that Holmes will conduct a thorough investigation to determine the reasons for the defection of most of Paramount's stars to other companies and to receive first hand information on the cost and poor quality of the product during the past year.

Eddie Small Carries 'U' Peeve to the Hays Office

Edward Small is burning plenty at Universal for using the title "Countess of Monte Cristo" and plans to go to the Hays organization this week to try and prevent Universal from using that title.

Cormack and DeMille Part

Bartlett Cormack, who has been a DeMille story ace for the past year, resigned Saturday after inability to agree with Cecil B. on the treatment of "Cleopatra." Writer was immediately snapped up by the parent Paramount organization to work on "The Trumpet Blows," George Raft vehicle.

Lie Passed On Writers' Claim That Their Body Will Control Code Committee Nominations

They're at it again—the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the Writers' Guild. On Thursday evening a meeting of the members of the Writers' Guild was told that their organization had been authorized to handle the machinery for nominations to the Fair Practices Committee which will guide the operation of the code. On Friday, Donald Gledhill, acting executive secretary of the Academy, displayed a telegram from Sol Rosenblatt which in his opinion denies that any moves have

Mamoulian Signed For Next Anna Sten

Samuel Goldwyn signed Rouben Mamoulian Saturday to direct the next Anna Sten picture, "Resurrection," in which Fredric March will be co-starred.

Willard Mack is writing the screen play of the Tolstoy novel. Production on this picture is scheduled to get under way around April 1.

Sound Men's Election on Tuesday and Wednesday

Contrary to reports that the IBEW has effectively spiked the IATSE's efforts to hold an election to decide which organization shall represent the craft, Campbell McCullough of the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board Saturday requested all studios to notify their sound men that the election will be held as planned in the Writers' Club January 9 and 10.

MGM Producers May Be Cut to Five

New York.—It is understood here that when Nicholas Schenck gets to Hollywood in about two weeks, that Louis B. Mayer and himself will cut the production staff of the studio to five, instead of the more than a dozen holding portfolios there now.

The slice in producers will be done in the belief that the five topnotched men at the plant can account for the whole program of MGM pictures and will tend to better organization, better production and at much less cost than at present.

Twelvetrees and Agents To Air Trouble in Court

The Rebecca and Silton office's battle with Helen Twelvetrees is headed for a court room airing.

Action against the player alleging unlawful discharge from a managerial contract is slated to be filed today through Ralph Blum, agency's attorney. Dispute is claimed to be similar to the Bruce Cabot-Collier and Wallis fracas which resulted in the latter winning a victory for the entire field.

Goldwyn to New York

Samuel Goldwyn left for New York on The Chief Saturday night to be gone six weeks. During that time he will look after the opening of "Nana" and also discuss the next Cantor picture with the writers.

Leonard on 'Rip Tide'

Robert Z. Leonard is now directing the Thalberg production of "Rip Tide" at MGM with Edmund Goulding, who has been directing, shifted over to the writing end of the picture.

THE LOW DOWN

Ric Cortez and Christine Lee are getting married this morning at Phoenix, Arizona—even though the honeymoon must wait. The pair returns to Hollywood tomorrow and Ric goes right to work at Warners. If the stujo gives out with a couple of weeks between pictures, the newlyweds will go to Honolulu when "Hit Me Again" is finished.

LISTEN! About the most sensational bit of news we've heard concerns a famous star and her actor-husband. Finding themselves unhappy in their present state, they want to get a divorce. But they CAN'T—not here or anywhere else. Because they are not and never have been married! Their union began several years ago when both were on the stage and even though they have spent little time since then under the same roof, they would like to sever the ties completely—but don't know how! There is the matter of the "dear public" to consider—and they naturally enough, don't want to face what might be termed another "movie scandal." Their marriage would soon be legal as a common-law union, since they announced more than five years ago that they were married—but for some reason they want to be free right now—and are lying awake nights trying to figure out HOW!

Virginia Cherrill and Cary Grant got as far as the registrar's office in London the other day with the intention of getting married. Then Virginia discovered that she had left her divorce papers from her first husband in the good ole U.S.A. If the matter can be straightened out satisfactorily they'll be married in England before they return—otherwise they'll tie the knot as soon as they get back.

Didja know that Jean Harlow and MGM are still tiffing—and that Jean hasn't set foot in the stujo for weeks and weeks? She's holding out for the entire raise in salary that she asked for—and the studio says she won't get a thing until she returns to work. They've suspended her from the salary list, too—so things are what is laughingly called, a standstill.

PARA'S 'SEARCH' ENTERTAINS; 'FOG' FAILS TO HIT THE MARK

Gleason And Pals And Director Top

"SEARCH FOR BEAUTY"
(Paramount)

Director .....Erle C. Kenton
Original.....Schuyler Grey and Paul R. Wilton
Adaptation .....David Boehm and Maurine Watkins
Screen Play.....Frank Butler and Claude Binyon
Dialogue .....Sam Hellman
Photography .....Harry Fischbeck
Cast: Buster Crabbe, Ida Lupino, Robert Armstrong, James Gleason, Toby Wing, Gertrude Michael and the thirty winners of the Search for Beauty contest.

Search for entertainment will be rewarded in Paramount's picture "Search for Beauty."

While it is not a great picture in any sense of the word, there is nothing that will keep it from being classed as "above average" except a few slow and dull spots that can be readily brightened up, especially in the beginning. It takes rather long to get under way. The very last shot of the picture will probably also be eliminated.

There's not a kid in the country who won't go for this picture, and their parents will probably trot right along with them. It is built by and for the American youth, especially those who are crazy about athletics. It is young, innocent, full of high ideals and sugar-coated advice that, inasmuch as it is humorously and dramatically presented, is not hard to take.

The story concerns two Olympic champions, Buster Crabbe and Ida Lupino, who launch a magazine on health and exercise, using as examples of their preachments the winners of a world-wide search for physical perfection. The struggles of these two to keep the magazine and their health farm on the level, with James Gleason, Robert Armstrong and Gertrude Michael working against them, make up the Horatio Alger complications.

The scenes on the health farm, at which have gathered a crowd of tired business men and bored matrons who hope to revive their spirits with not-so-innocent parties with the athletes and who are forced to get up at six-thirty in the morning and follow the rigid routine of an athlete's day, are very amusing. The picture all the way through is amusing rather than dramatic, exuberant rather than sophisticated, and it is all very "high-minded."

Gleason and Armstrong make a swell comedy team. They have good gags, good business, and they make the most of it. Ida Lupino shows what she used to make herself a musical comedy star in England, and Gertrude Michael is funny as the brains of the Gleason-Armstrong team. Buster Crabbe is not as stiff as usual and turns in an almost convincing performance. Toby Wing is surprisingly amusing. The Paramount winners of the Search for Beauty contest are marvelous to look at, and that boy who says he's from Louisville is a riot. Erle C. Kenton directed steadily. David Boehm and Maurine Watkins wrote the yarn for the screen and Frank Butler and Claude Binyon made the screen play.

The youth of America will swarm to see this picture, being particularly thrilled at the elaborate athletic pageant. Adults also will find plenty of amusement in the antics of Gleason and Armstrong, with the exception of highbrows, who will favor it all with a faint, superior sneer.

Hitting on High

New York.—Are they smiling at the Universal home office? Figures for the week ending January 6 show it to be the best sales and collections week since March, 1932. And no sign of the pace slowing up.

Whitbeck to MGM; Smith to Shorts

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has appointed Frank Whitbeck to head the studio advertising department under the direct supervision of Howard Dietz, publicity and advertising head of the company.

This shift sends Pete Smith to the production of the MGM short reels exclusively. Prior to this, Pete had been handling the shorts and the advertising end as well.

The studio publicity department will continue to function under the guidance of Howard Strickling.

Morris-Rowland Brice Deal Fails to Jell

Contrary to reports that he has been signed by Rowland and Brice for "Benefit Performance," Chester Morris' deal with the Columbia independent producers has failed to jell. Player goes into Universal's "Practical Joker" as his next assignment. Stanley Bergerman is supervising the picture.

New York.—Helen Lowell, stage actress, has been signed by Warners and her first picture will be "Fur Coats." She will leave for the coast in about a week.

Moss Hart's "Once in a Lifetime" was a child's fairy tale compared to the real conditions in the production of pictures here. Direction and Cast Okay; Story Foggy

"FOG"
(Columbia)

Direction .....Al Rogell
Screen Play by.....Ethel Hill and Dore Schary
Story by.....Valentine Williams
Photographed by.....Benjamin Kline
Cast: Donald Cook, Mary Brian, Reginald Denny, Robert McWade, Helen Freeman, Samuel Hinds, G. Pat Collins, Edwin Maxwell, Maude Eburne, Marjorie Gateson, Reginald Barlow, Greta Meyer, Montagu Shaw, Dell Henderson, Edward McWade and Selmer Jackson.

This Columbia programmer proves all over again that it is easy to go around in circles in a fog without getting much of anywhere.

Though all of the elements of a good, routine mystery thriller are present, the tale lags wearily just at the moment when it needs a smash climax, and the audience works up neither enthusiasm nor regret when the arch villain jumps off into the ocean.

On board a mist shrouded liner hurries an irascible old millionaire, played strenuously by Robert McWade. He is running away from Madame Alva, a fortune teller who is determined to inherit some of his money. He is searching for his son whom he never has seen.

One after another the fog reveals the faces of the other passengers. Reginald Denny plays a likable, matter-of-fact physician. Donald Cook is a mysterious young man who peers portentously around corners at the suspicious goings-on of the other characters. Maude Eburne has an amusingly written part as a bridge fiend. Edwin Maxwell is stern and controlled as the captain. Helen Freeman lends the proper theatric quality to the fortune teller. Well cast in other parts are G. Pat Collins, Greta Meyer, Dell

'HIPS HIPS HOORAY' GOOD; 'TO EVERY WOMAN' PROGRAM

Direction Skillful; Has Real Song Hit

"HIPS HIPS HOORAY"
(Radio)

Director .....Mark Sandrich
Original and Screen Play—
Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar
Photography .....David Abel
Cast: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Ruth Etting, Thelma Todd, Phyllis Barry, George Meeker, Dorothy Granger.

Wheeler and Woolsey pictures are made for Wheeler and Woolsey audiences. For the benefit of the latter we can report that this ranks as one of the best of the Wheeler and Woolsey concoctions.

It has its share of laughs, an abundance of pretty girls and a touch of class in production; it has one reprised song that deserves its repetitions.

And while we're telling what it has, we might as well add that it has less of the broad suggestiveness that has marred some recent Wheeler-Woolsey offerings. For which we, and many exhibitors, will sing praises for the producers.

The preview audience was definitely not a Wheeler-Woolsey audience, if we judge by the nonchalant applause that greeted their names—so the way the picture picked them up, kept them in a fairly continuous run of laffs, and left them satisfied is a pretty good indication of its rating.

But some day we'd like to see this team in a picture that gave evidences of some of the time in story preparation, gagging and all-around work that results in those high-water riotous laugh sequences of the Marx brothers. Some day we'd like to see a Wheeler-Woolsey that didn't have that uneven jerkiness that indicates running through the cutting room ringer. A sequence like the adagio dance by the leads, for example, funny as it is, would be ADULT if there had been planted any reason for it.

But enough of the hypercritical when all present at the show seemed to have a good time. Mark Sandrich shows again that he has it on the ball, and as usual surprises with some unusual touches. Thelma Todd, whom they kept bouncing from brunette to blonde for some unknown reason, does a good job, and Dorothy Lee is happily back where she always registers, as foil for Bert Wheeler.

We liked the stars better than we usually do. There's more restraint, and less shouting. This picture will help them.

Camera work, both straight, and in the optical printer department, is class. Dave Gould's dances, within the limitations set by the producer, are effectively done. As for Kalmar and Ruby, we'll excuse a slim musical comedy story for their catching "Keep On Doing What You're Doing To Me," if that's the title.

The story is a slim peg that kicks Wheeler and Woolsey around a bunch of beauty shop complications with Thelma and Dorothy, and then tags on a cross-country auto race when they didn't know what else to do.

And summing it up for the exhibitor, we repeat: It's aces among the Wheeler and Woolsey offerings. You can't ask any more in the way of feed box information.

A Tip to the Guild

Paris.—When a French author doesn't like what the picture maker does to his brain child his friends take up the cudgels. Catcalls, whistling and booing greeted "The Adventures of King Pausole" at the Paramount here because Pierre Louys considers it a travesty on his story.

John Buckler Latest 'Antony' Candidate

New York.—Still another bet is up for the part of Antony in DeMille's Cleopatra film. In addition to Herbert Wilcoxon, English actor, as exclusively announced in The Hollywood Reporter, Paramount is also considering John Buckler, who made a big hit here in the stage production of "Eight Bells." He will get the part if Wilcoxon cannot reach Hollywood in time.

Howard Set To Do Radio Picture First

Leslie Howard will definitely make "Of Human Bondage" for Radio under the direction of John Cromwell as his first picture.

Howard's contract with Warners is not definitely set and will not be settled until Jack Warner returns to the studio in a week or ten days.

Block's Ticket Renewed

Warners punched Ralph Block's ticket Saturday and the writer continues for another six months.

Story Lags in 'Fog'

Henderson, Edward McWade and Selmer Jackson.

There is nothing wrong with the cast. Al Rogell's direction lends the first part of the story interest and a staccato quality with short scenes which count. But the tale falls to pieces at the moment the millionaire is found hanging by the neck in the misty rigging, and no one hurries to cut him down. From there on we have that same old court-room scene. The fact that the cross-examination is on board ship, that it includes the raising of the murdered man's ghost, and the exposing of the least likely person as the killer does not lift the weight of weariness from the latter half of the tale.

Photography is excellent. There are some moments of tenseness, but one cannot help suspecting that the fog blotted out part of the plot before the tale ever got into production.

Direction and Neat Casting Lift It Up

"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"
(Columbia)

Directed by.....Lambert Hillyer
Story by.....A. J. Cronin
Screen Play.....Jo Swerling
Photography .....John Stumar
Cast: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy, Walter Connolly, Mary Carlisle, Walter Byron, Mary Foy, Georgie Caine, J. Farrell MacDonald, Leila Bennett, Billie Seward, Ben Alexander.

"Once To Every Woman" is no great shakes as to newness of story, and is certainly not the answer to an exhibitor's prayer—but it manages to be a good program picture in so far as it has been given a fairly big name cast, is well directed by Lambert Hillyer, contains some first rate writing by Jo Swerling and high quality photography by John Stumar.

The entire action of the piece takes place during one day, in and about the wards of a large city hospital. It goes to prove (just as we've always suspected) that the days of doctors, nurses and internes are not completely taken up with sutures and thermometers. There not only can be, but there are, love and romance mixed in with it all!

The big scene in this opus is filled with suspense and realism and shows Walter Connolly (as Selby, the head of the hospital) performing a delicate brain operation. He breaks down at the critical moment and his protege (expertly played by Ralph Bellamy) takes over the operation, wins Nurse Fanshawe (Fay Wray) for himself and ends by replacing Connolly, his life-long friend, as head of the hospital.

Connolly, as always, turns in a top notch performance and Fay Wray as the "head nurse" looks alluring and does good work. Walter Byron plays the "internal philanderer" well, and Mary Carlisle is O.K. as the girl who spends a lot of the hospital's time on the roof with him. Ben Alexander, Georgia Caine, J. Farrell MacDonald and others contributed well-played bits.

Even those who don't care much about "operations" will find "Once To Every Woman" a pleasant enough piece of screen fare, and it should go over well if you don't overdo the ballyhoo.

Hardie Appendix Causes Shift on 'Men in White'

An emergency appendix operation Saturday compelled Russell Hardie to withdraw from the cast of MGM's "Men in White." Player is at the Glendale Research Hospital. His scenes in the picture will have to be retaken with a replacement.

Para Buys 'For Love'

New York.—Paramount announces the purchase here of a yarn titled "For Love," by Roy Flannagan and Eulalie Spence.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Well, of course, at the moment, there's nothing better to write about than the LeRoy-Warner wedding festivities. There's never been anything like them and we doubt whether there ever will be again. There's only one word for it—san-sattional! Cameras, lights, microphones, sound mixers and sound, sound, sound. Poppa Warner's gift to the bridal couple (among other things) was the complete camera and sound record of the wedding and our blessing to Doris and Mervy is that we hope it's a good "take." The highlight of the evening was Will Hays in a jovial mood leading the orchestra. And one of the funniest things was a group of people who were drinking cock-eyed toasts to practically everything in sight, among them Elder Hays' collar, and just as they were about to drink the toast Will Hays caught the gesture toward him, and thinking it was something he ought not to overlook got up and took a bow.

Gwen Heller was maid of honor and the flower girl was Lina Basquette's little daughter who's been living with her grandparents. Among the two hundred and fifty invited guests were: The George O'Briens, Jack Pearl, Charles Einfeld, the Sam Morrises, Irving Asher, Chester Erskine, Ad Schulberg, the Ed Sullivans, Minna Wallis, Louis Shurr, the Jules Brulatours, the Sam Saxes, the Adolph Zukors, the Eddie Cantors, Harry Goetz, the Herb Harrises, the Leon Schlesingers, the Artie Stebbinses, the Al Lichtmans and omigosh, hundreds of others.

Tallulah Bankhead is back from Georgia and looking really beautiful again. The gal's completely cured, recovered and the picture of health and reading a play a day to find the right one in which to reappear on the stage again. . . . This should pique the movie industry's interest. Alexander Kirkland is definitely not interested in making pictures and doesn't expect to go to the coast again for that purpose. Ho, hum. . . . Donald Ogden Stewart claims he never even thought of that cute line that was spoken at the opening of "Jezebel." Well, whoever made it certainly got behind a good blind awful fast and then spread the good word. . . . Repercussions from one of the New Year's West Indies cruises keep popping up. In fact, just ask Ben Atwell what kind of a time they all had aboard the Majestic. Seems that thirteen hundred people were crowded into accommodations for eight hundred. Then the pipes on the boat froze. And then when they got to Nassau it was discovered that some big meanies who had wanted to take over the cruise in the first place and had been thwarted went and cornered the tender market so that the Majestic couldn't land anyone. And to add insult to injury everyone on the cruise had to pay a head tax in advance, and if they want that money back they have to go through a mess of formal red-tape. Some fun!

WARNERS SHOOT THE WORKS ON FUTURE BRITISH PICTURES

Enlarge Studio and Exchange Players

New York.—As a result of Irving Asher's recent visit here, Warners have decided to expand their London production plant and take steps to make the company a leading factor in the English production field.

Decision is a surprise in view of the fact that the London unit had been established for quota purposes and was never looked to as any great shucks. Harry and Jack Warner are said to have changed their attitude toward the Teddington studio after a glance at the studio statements which disclosed that pictures made there at costs of less than one-third the cost of Hollywood product have been grossing figures four times their negative price on the British market alone.

It is understood that approximately $100,000 will be tossed into the London studio for improvements. At the same time Asher will be given enlarged budgets for his pictures and the chance to import Hollywood names for his casts. Intention also is to give the London-made films greater prominence on the United States market, practice heretofore being practically to disregard them.

A schedule of 26 productions is set for the coming season. One group of four will bring together again in a co-starring bracket the team of Reginald Denny and Laura LaPlante. Another group will star Esmond Knight, the current find of the year in London. Warners have placed him under a straight three year ticket and will bring him to Hollywood with the idea of giving him a build-up here also Practice in London has been to make pictures on a catch-as-catch-can basis, similar to the Hollywood independent producers' methods where the money is short. Asher himself has pitched in and written original scripts to keep things humming, shooting in a picture every two weeks. That, however, is a thing of the past, now that he has been given the okay to enlarge his staff, buy good outside stories, engage names and take time for preparation.

Not Much Difference

The title on the next Wheeler and Woolsey Radio picture is "Frat Heads" and not "Flat Heads" as erroneously printed. Picture is being scripted by Ben Holmes and Eddie Kaufman and will start production about February 15.

Warners Talk to Pascal

Warners are talking turkey to Ernest Pascal on a term writing deal. Writer is polishing off a novel while listening to a 26-week proposition which he is reluctant to accept.

Hawks Sees Carole Lombard For Lead

Howard Hawks left for New York last night for conferences with Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, with his mind made up for Carole Lombard to play the lead opposite John Barrymore in "Twentieth Century."

After seeing the test the studio is satisfied with Lombard. The only thing holding up the decision is Harry Cohn's okay. Cohn, now in New York, will get together there with Hawks and reach a decision.

If Miss Lombard gets this role it will not affect her next picture, "Sonata," as the Barrymore picture does not start until February 9, by which time the other picture will be completed

Goldberg Opens Office

Jerry Goldberg, son of the late indie sales chief, Joe Goldberg, has opened a managers' office with Jack Kenney and Harry Marks. Firm is located at 9000 Sunset.

Aben Kandel to N. Y.

Aben Kandel, New York playwright, returned to the east by train Saturday. Kandel finished his assignment on the script of "American Scotland Yard" for Universal.

Four Pic Deal At Para. For Flood

Due to his work on "All of Me," Paramount immediately signed James Flood to a four picture deal, with the right to make outside pictures.

Flood will direct "Little Miss Marker," the Sylvia Sidney picture, for the B. P. Schulberg unit, as his first assignment on the new deal. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Adolph Zukor Chairman Famous Theatres Board

New York.—Adolph Zukor will have his hands in Famous Theatres, the new organization formed to take over the old Publix Theatres. The board has elected Zukor as chairman.

Other officers are Ralph Kohn, president; Frank Freeman, vice-president; Sam Dembow, Jr., treasurer.

Estelle Taylor on Tour

Estelle Taylor leaves next Tuesday for Denver for vaudeville work with Fanchon and Marco. Miss Taylor will appear a week there and a week in Salt Lake and may do ten weeks additional on the F. & M. circuit.

Kober Back at MGM

Arthur Kober finished the script of "Twentieth Century" for Columbia Saturday and returns to MGM today, his home lot.

Offner Joins Vidor

Morton Offner has been signed by King Vidor as a production assistant.

'Dancing Lady' Big Hit in London

London.—The Empire has just completed two swell weeks with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Dancing Lady." "Christopher Bean" is in the house now.

The business over the holiday was all right, but below general expectations. "Angel Turkey Time," "Aunt Sally" (British pictures), "Voltaire," "Sitting Pretty" and "Henry the Eighth" were the top draws.

The only new picture of the week is at the Empire.

Para. Exploiteers Shift

New York.—Realignments in the Paramount exploitation force find Jimmy Ashcraft going to the Chicago territory, Ed Corcoran to Philadelphia, and Gerald Westergreen to Dallas.

Para. Having Grief

that the circuit has shelved too many pictures, and is also seeking reductions in too many spots in the percentage arrangements.

Paramount is also having trouble with one of the larger independents, the A. H. Schwartz circuit of twenty houses. The chain signed for "I'm No Angel" on a percentage arrangement but later canceled when Paramount insisted on preferred playing time. The indies have an agreement that they will not be forced by contract into preferred time for any distributor.

New York REVIEWS

"ROMAN SCANDALS"

Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists prod.; director, Frank Tuttle; writers, William Anthony McGuire, Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin, George Oppenheimer.

Rivoli Theatre

News: This is Eddie Cantor's show from beginning to end. It has been photographed lavishly, and set with considerable taste. Mr. Berkeley's dance patterns are less spectacular than usual, but have more of the real "Follies" essence. Mr. Tuttle has directed the picture with clarity and a literal rather than fanciful imagination.

Times: Mr. Cantor does as well as possible in his role and he is exceptionally good in the episodes in which he sings. Busby Berkeley is responsible for the costly numbers with the dancing girls.

Mirror: Eddie Cantor never has appeared in a more lavishly beautiful setting than that provided him by "Roman Scandals." It is as entertaining as any other picture Cantor has made, and far more lavish. His fans will enjoy it heartily.

Post: The film is elaborate, lavish, spectacular and sometimes very funny. But sometimes it is so elaborate that it isn't funny at all, and occasionally it gets all glutted up with plot so that you begin to wonder if the authors weren't trying to steal some of the thunder from the Goldwyn Girls and Mr. Cantor.

World-Telegram: It is vivid, pictorially beautiful production, with some tuneful numbers and some eminently funny scenes imbedded in it.

American: It is lavishly produced, handsomely invested, spectacular in its beauty and hilarious in its wit. Mr. Goldwyn again demonstrates his superior genius in creating this type of show. He is the Ziegfeld of Hollywood. Besides some spectacular dance ensembles there are several songs which further enliven the occasion. "Roman Scandals" is exciting film fireworks all the way through.

Journal: This is Cantor's fourth annual screen musical and tops even his other picture efforts for lavishness of sets, decorative choruses and general magnificence of production. The musical numbers are done with much splendor.

Sun: The film is full of beautiful girls, gorgeous sets, catchy tunes, gags and the energetic Mr. Cantor. It is first-rate holiday entertainment. It is handsomely photographed and full of good-looking, tricky sets.

Pumping Air Names Into WB 'Hot Air'

Warners are planning to bolster up the cast of the radio yarn now in production titled "Hot Air" and are negotiating with several big radio names to appear in this picture.

The studio is negotiating with the four Mills brothers and Guy Lombardo and his band to make appearances in this picture. It is likely that the Mills brothers will be signed, but unless Guy Lombardo agrees to meet the terms that Warners are offering the deal may fall through.

Columbia Building Up Studio Publicity Staff

Building up the publicity staff, Columbia has signed Carter Ludlow, formerly of the Examiner; Stanley Briggs, recently with the Eyepowell Photographic Service, and Jack Hardy, last with the Associated Press, to handle special work in the publicity department. Hubert Voight is the publicity director for the plant.

MGM Wheels Slow Up For January

MGM is slow to get under way with its new pictures after the holidays with only two pictures and a possible third to go into production this month. The studio will put into work this month the Joan Crawford picture, "Sadie McKee," which will be directed by Clarence Brown under the supervision of David Selznick; the Marion Davies picture, "Operator 13," which Raoul Walsh will direct for the Walter Wanger unit, and the possible third picture in the next Jeanette MacDonald production, "Duchess of Delmonico," that is, if the script is ready before the first of February.

The pictures now in production which are scheduled to be completed within ten days are "Tarzan and His Mate," "Men in White," "Viva Villa" and the Irving Thalberg production, "Rip Tide," starring Norma Shearer. "Sequoia" is going along on a schedule all its own.

Gillstrom Starts Next

Arvid Gillstrom puts the fifth comedy of his series of six for Paramount release, "Get Along Little Dogie," into production Tuesday with Harry Langdon and Vernon Dent in the leads. Gillstrom will direct from the script by Vernon Dent, Dean Ward and Jack Townley.

Academy-Guild Fight

yet been taken in connection with the committee organization.

So the battle is on.

Acting under instructions from Ralph Block, president in the absence of Howard Lawson, the Guild on Friday evening formed committees which are proceeding with the drawing up of nominations for the code body.

Hearing the news Friday, the Academy dispatched a wire to Administrator Rosenblatt asking if the NRA had officially decided on any methods of nominations for the various workers' committees, and if so, what rules had been set.

Rosenblatt's reply, received Saturday, is as follows:

"No nominations required for appointment of standing committees on extras and freelance players. No method of nomination submitted or approved respecting members other standing committees under production sections of code required therein. Administrator has not undertaken to set up committees under Article 5, Part 4 as yet. Ample notice will be given all organizations and method of nominations will be communicated publicly in advance."

When contacted by The Hollywood Reporter yesterday Ralph Block declined to amplify statements made at the Guild meeting by giving his authority for claiming Guild recognition and would make only this statement:

"We are going ahead authoritatively in accordance with the code to set up the proper machinery for representation of the writers."

And that's the last from the firing line.

Paul Kelly Argument at 20th Settled Happily

Negotiations between Paul Kelly and Twentieth Century for the release of the player from his long termer owing to his dissatisfaction with roles offered him on loan-out deals were quietly dropped Saturday when the company allowed Kelly to take the spot opposite Aline MacMahon in Warner's "Fur Coats."

Kelly wanted the part and both Twentieth and Warners used the situation to end their six months' feud, casting chiefs of the two organizations getting together to work out a series of trades to follow. William S. Gill was the medium through whom the Kelly loan was set.

Morgan Maneuvers Release From Fox

Three months of negotiations between Ralph Morgan and Fox for the settlement of the player's long term ticket bore fruit Saturday when the company submitted to his demands for a release. Morgan objected to the numerous loan-out deals through which Fox has been carrying him, insisting that if he is to work for other studios he wishes to do so as a free-lancer.

His first assignment as a free-lance player is in Columbia's "Men of Tomorrow," the William Morris office setting him. The Borzage picture goes back into production for added scenes, making room for Morgan in the cast.

Rivkin-Wolfson on '13'

Walter Wanger has assigned Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson to the script of "Operator 13," which goes into production in two weeks at MGM with Raoul Walsh directing. Marion Davies and Gary Cooper have the leads. Writers collaborate with Harvey Thew.

'HALFWAY TO HELL' TAKES AUDIENCE ALL THE WAY

Mystery Even Too Wild For Screen

"HALFWAY TO HELL"

Play produced by the indomitable Elizabeth Miele at the Fulton Theatre; authored by Crane Wilbur and staged by him; settings by Philip Gelb. Cast: Carleton Macy, Austin Fairman, Van Lowe, Lida McMillan, Mitchell Harris, Ann Mason, Grant Richards, Katharine Locke, Richard Elwell, Mabel Kroman, Robert Williams, Guy Standing Jr. and John Regan.

New York.—Oh Mr. Wilbur, how could you! "Half Way to Hell" is a misnomer. It should have been called "All the Way to Hell" and back again. If these playwrights don't stop writing expressly for the purpose of a movie sale the legitimate theatre is due for a very bad season, despite the excellent start it made back in September. There hasn't been a good, honest, edge-of-your-seat mystery melodrama all season and this play is about the last straw.

Imagine the central character—an old, swashbuckling, intrepid, hard-swearing sea captain, who is portrayed on his death bed in such physical condition that his physician doesn't give him more than several hours to live—but who nevertheless is able to get down off his sick bed, roam through his converted residence—a former lighthouse on a deserted island, murder two persons and almost succeed in his plan to dispose of six more characters! Piling it on rather thick, our author then introduces into the eerie and desolate atmosphere an escaped lunatic, a sinister Chinaman and a wax dummy of the old sea captain Brant, packed into a treasure chest—all intended to befuddle and becloud the interest of the audience in ascertaining what the pay is all about and who killed whom!

Shutters clatter open, doors close mysteriously, arrows, spears and knives flash in the dark to find their human marks and accusations and cross accusations, all done in an unskillful manner, contribute to a ridiculous evening in the theatre. The captain expires before he can complete his fiendish plans, and the play and audience with it.

So What?

London.—The Sidney Bernstein circuit here has banned all news reels. Bernstein says the news subjects were growing "alarmingly monotonous" — and those that weren't were censored anyway until they had no value.

Nazi Grip Tightens On German Distribs

Berlin.—Active interference in the distribution field has resulted from the Nazi formation of a central government office to supervise that branch of the business.

The special bureau was created on the pretense that every picture shown here was destined for exhibition before school classes, hence should be carefully inspected and stamped for fear of failing to live up to the propaganda demands of the administration, latter desiring to constantly keep before the nation's children the fact that Nazism now reigns.

Mono. Tags Joe Santley

Monogram yesterday signed Joseph P. Santley to direct "The Loudspeaker," a radio story, which will be Ray Walker's fourth vehicle for the company. Picture is scheduled for production during the month. W. T. Lackey supervises.

Robinson Returns Suit

Edward G. Robinson Saturday filed a cross suit for $1250 against Charles Feldman, who recently sued him for $11,000 for legal services. The actor claims that Feldman ceased practicing law before the end of a year for which he received a $5000 annual retainer.

Code Helps Small Chap

Washington.—Administrator Rosenblatt was happy today over a settlement worked out in the New Orleans territory under code rules by which smaller theatres will get a break from the big circuits, the claim having been that the big fellows were overbuying to kill competition. The circuits have relinquished 206 features in favor of smaller competitors.

Ayres in McGuire Play

Universal yesterday set Lew Ayres in the top spot of the William Anthony McGuire original, "If I Were Rich." Roger Pryor has the second lead. Story is being scripted by Harry Sauber and Earle Snell. Edward Ludwig directs.

Caliente on the Air

Agua Caliente's new broadcasting station, XEAC, goes on the air Saturday, marked at 820 kilocycles. The station plans an "international" type of program that will make listeners realize the treats they are missing at Caliente.

Discord in Indie Ranks

New York.—Slight discord in the ranks of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York. The Springer-Cocalis circuit has been suspended for non-payment of dues.

IMPORTANT TO EXHIBITORS!

The UNITED ARTISTS Corporation proudly announces the National Trade Showing tomorrow of another 20th Century Picture: CONSTANCE BENNETT in "MOULIN ROUGE", with FRANCHOT TONE, a brilliant romantic comedy with music, presented by Joseph M. Schenck, produced by Darryl F. Zanuck and directed by Sidney Lanfield.

This Exhibitors' preview will be held in key cities throughout the country and is destined to duplicate the great success which attended the National Trade Showing of 20th Century's preceeding smash hit, "GALLANT LADY".

Trade showing of "MOULIN ROUGE" for LOS ANGELES DISTRICT EXHIBITORS will be held tomorrow, 1:00 p.m., at the BOULEVARD THEATRE. Admission by invitation only.

SOUND MEN IN MUDDLE

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•IF you don't think the big time exhibitors are hungry for real attractions we wish you had been with us yesterday to see the stack of telegrams that flooded Darryl Zanuck's desk as a result of the trade showings on "Gallant Lady."

Not particularly because it was "Gallant Lady." It might have been any other picture. The interesting part to us was to see names like that of the hard-boiled showman, John Hamrick, at the bottom of telegrams to a producer.

Yessir, boys, it looks as though they'll stand right up and kiss you these days—if you give them an attraction.

It is interesting this season to notice the resurrection of the old trade show idea on which the business was founded. Of course, producers are only trade showing now when they KNOW they have the goods. But that's beside the point. If the test is going to be: "Will this picture we are making be big enough to stand trade showings before shell-backed exhibs?" —then maybe more pictures will be made to meet the test.

And one thing is certain. If you've got the goods just now, use trade shows or any other means possible to let the exhibitors know it BEFORE they play the picture.

Too many of the few good attractions we are getting right now are ending their engagements before the exhibitor discovers what he has.

In Zanuck's case on "Gallant Lady" there was a peculiar problem. As long as we can remember exhibitors have been told about each succeeding Harding picture, "This time they found the secret again—it's another 'Holiday'." And then the after-grief.

The same condition exists on "Moulin Rouge," which is nationally trade shown today. How many build-ups exhibitors have taken on this star since her first big hits—with subsequent disappointment.

It was no mean problem for a chap with well over a million invested in two pieces of property.

The Axe Swings

Winnie Sheehan, apparently, is boss again. He has canned Fox's test department, leaving producers to make their own tests. Sheehan is just flexing his muscles.

Una Merkel Choice For Lloyd's Lead

Una Merkel grabs off a juicy plum as a result of a deal which Harold Lloyd has put through with MGM for the loan of the player to go into the spot opposite him in "Catspaw."

New York.—Harry M. Goetz, president of Reliance Pictures, brought up the Reliance peeve against Universal for using the title "Countess of Monte Cristo" to the Hays organization yesterday.

The Hays office has set the hearing of the case before an arbitration board within ten days.

'Wonder Bar' For Chinese

Warner Brothers are already negotiating with Sid Grauman to open "Wonder Bar," starring Al Jolson, in the Chinese. Picture is still in the shooting stage.

Arnow Back on Job

Max Arnow, Warner casting head, returned to town yesterday after a three weeks' stay in New York. Was there looking over Broadway talent.

NRA Forbids Today's Election But IATSE Will Go Ahead; Non-Union Group Is Forming

Events in the ranks of the sound men happened so rapidly yesterday as to leave all concerned in a dizzy daze at midnight, with outlying precincts still to be heard from. At last accounts there will be an election today at the Writers Club to decide something or other, but no one knows whether the election means anything or not.

The story has to be told chronologically to get it straight.

A little over a week ago Campbell McCullough, secretary of the Los Angeles Regional Board, announced that an election would be held today and tomorrow at which sound men in the studios would be allowed to decide whether they wanted the IATSE or

Mono. Boosts 1934 List to Thirty-Six

New York.—W. Ray Johnston announced here today that Monogram would increase its year's schedule from twenty pictures to thirty-six, being alone among the national distributors to announce a tilt in lists this year.

The announcement also stated that Monogram would concentrate on the features and include no shorts in this year's program.

Col. Signs Pertwee

New York.—Columbia has signed Roland Pertwee, well known English writer, and the scribe will sail for London in a few weeks.

Para. Creditors Go To Supreme Court

New York.—While the New York Court of Appeals chided Referee Davis of Paramount for undue haste in election of the Paramount trustees it decided against a petition of Paramount creditors seeking to remove Trustees Hilles and Richardson on the ground that the ability and integrity of the trustees was such they should not now be removed.

Attorney Zirn, for the creditors, says he will carry the case to the United States Supreme Court alleging against the trustees "illegal election and disqualification through outside connections."

Ile de France Loaded With Picture People

New York.—Picture and theatrical arrivals on the Ile de France today are headed by Harpo Marx, after Russian triumphs, and include Maurice Chevalier, Eric Charrell, Marcell Velle and Charles Boyer, of the French cinema, and Arma Abram Frankel, French film distributor.

Del Rio-Gibbons Grounded

Dolores Del Rio and Cedric Gibbons were forced to continue their journey to New York by train yesterday when their plane was forced down at Kansas City. Pair will arrive in New York today for a two weeks' vacation.

Doran to Radio in N.Y.

New York.—D. A. Doran has been signed by Radio to head its New York story office. He replaces Kay Brown. Doran formerly held the same spot in the Fox organization.

Harry Warner Sails West

New York.—Harry Warner is on his way to Hollywood, leaving here by boat for the Canal trip Saturday.

ROXY QUITS AS HEAD OF RADIO CITY'S THEATRES

New York.—All reports finally come to a head—and yesterday J. R. McDonough, general manager of the RKO Corporation and president of Radio City Theatres, confirmed the smouldering reports that Sam Rothafel had resigned from the Radio City Theatres.

The resignation, tendered last Saturday, is effective February 16. A settlement of the unexpired term of the contract has been reached. No change is contemplated in the policy of the houses. Leon Leonidoff will continue producing the stage shows.

New Tag for Sothern

On the strength of her first picture, "Let's Fall in Love," which Felix Young produced for Columbia, the studio signed Ann Sothern to a new long term contract. The deal was handled by the Ivan Kahn agency.

Ford Returns to Fox

Fox has assigned John Ford to direct "The World We Live In," a story by the Katek brothers, writers of "R. U. R." Winfield Sheehan produces when the picture starts in the near future.

Nominations Made To NRA Committee

With the dust settling on the Academy and the Writers Guild battle it appears that Administrator Rosenblatt has said to the boys, "Go ahead and make nominations if you want to, boys. It's perfectly proper. But, of course, when you get through we will hear from other groups."

So the Writers Guild proceeded with nominations last night, and on next Monday night all writers with credentials as to work on the screen will have an opportunity to vote on them at the Writers Club. Or to make their own nominations from the floor if they care to.

Announcing their plans to continue with the election despite the challenge on authority given by the Academy, the Guild issued the following wire from Rosenblatt:

" Nominations to be made by any group of authors and writers do not of themselves set up standing committees nor are such nominations sure of final selection. Nominations are accepted at that time if made by a representative group. The calling by an association of a meeting of all qualified members and non-members of a class for the nominations of representatives is entirely proper and we have no objection to the same; but in receiving all such nominations it is understood that we will, as a matter of policy, give due notice to other groups before closing nominations."

Appended to this was a statement from the Guild executive board as follows:

The executive board of the Screen Writers Guild, in commenting on Rosenblatt's wire, pointed out that in view of the fact that the Guild represents more than 90 percent of all the screen writers in Hollywood, the telegram gave final authority to the general election called by the Guild.

"The conditions of the election to be held by the Guild," stated the executive board, "are such as to give full representation and voting power to all qualified screen writers, regardless of whether they are members of th Screen Writers Guild or not. In this connection the executive board invites non-members who have had screen writing credits on American-released pictures during the last 18 months not only to present their own slate for election, but also to make nominations from the floor."

The nominations to be voted on next Monday were as follows:

For the Code Authority: John Howard Lawson.

For the Agency Committee: Ernest Pascal and Wells Root.

For the Five and Five Committee, to be composed half of screen writers and half of producers: Oliver H. P. Garrett, Rupert Hughes, Ralph J. Block, John Natteford, Seton I. Miller, Gladys Lehman, Samuel K. Ornitz, John Emerson, Courtenay Terrett, James Gleason, Dudley Nichols and Raymond Schrock.

Open to All

The Screen Writers Guild is anxious to add the following to its announcement yesterday regarding nominations for code committees: "In addition to nominations from the Guild, every opportunity will be given to non-Guild members to make further nominations from the floor." January 15 is the date of the meeting at the Writers' Cub.

Silvers Signed To Do Col.'s Musical Chores

Lou Silvers has been signed by Columbia as musical director for the studio. Silvers will handle the score on "Men of Tomorrow," which will finish a week of added scenes next Thursday with Frank Borzage directing.

No adjectives or smooth tongues could be counted on. They'd all been used before.

So Zanuck threw his cards on the table face up—and called for a showdown on the screen.

Good showmanship.

You'll see more of it, this season and next, when producers KNOW they have something.

Pickford Hit in Chi And Set For Boston

Chicago.—Mary Pickford has hit the bell here at the Balaban and Katz ace house, the Chicago, with a vengeance. She has lines outside from early until late.

As a result Miss Pickford is now booked to continue the personal appearance tour she started at the Paramount in New York, with a booking at the Metropolitan in Boston set for the week of January 19, and a Philadelphia engagement in the wind.

Mary is drawing down $12,000 here for the week's work, plus a percentage that is going to be healthy with the business.

'Family Man' Up Again

Radio has again placed the Salisbury Field yarn "Family Man" back on its schedule and Clive Brook will have the top spot. The picture is scheduled to go into production on February 15. No director has been assigned yet.

Remake 'Witching Hour'

New York.—Paramount is closing a deal through the American Play Company for the talkie rights to "The Witching Hour," the Augustus Thomas play which they made once in a silent picture.

WARNERS' 'MANDALAY' IS DULL AND DREARY PICTURE

Cast and Director Buried in Gloom

"MANDALAY"
(Warners)

Directed by.....Michael Curtiz
Story by.....Paul Hervey Fox
Adaptation by.....Austin Parker and Charles Kenyon
Photography by.....Tony Gaudio
Cast: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez, Warner Oland, Lyle Talbot, Ruth Donnelly, Lucien Littlefield, Reginald Owen, David Torrence and Halliwell Hobbes.

An unhappy and bewildered audience greeted Warners' "Mandalay" at its preview with a complete and disapproving silence. Not a handclap broke through the gloom.

There were two reasons. One is that Kay Francis is afflicted with a part in which she should never have appeared. The Francis fans—and they are legion— are not going to appreciate seeing their favorite in a role so far beneath her and so foreign to her usual good taste on the screen. In addition, she is handicapped by a hairdress that is weirdly unbecoming.

The second reason is this: If the screen is as powerful propaganda as is popularly supposed, the picture is dangerous. Or it would be if it weren't so dull. It suggests that murder can be gotten away with rather simply and that it is justifiable. In fact, Miss Francis' last line, which she speaks to Lyle Talbot, is: "He won't come back . . . because I killed him." And they both walk on, smiling serenely.

Cortez is the villain who trades Miss Francis to Warner Oland for a carload of guns. This swapping of "arms" naturally peeves Miss Francis, but it peeves her so far that she determines to USE men after this — and not love them. But along comes Lyle Talbot, a drunken doctor who has to be saved from himself. She does a pretty good job of it until Cortez reappears, and for a while things look tough with her trying to choose between the two men. But she finally poisons Cortez and settles the matter.

The one bright spot in the film is Miss Francis' singing of a good, catchy song. She, aided by Cortez and Talbot, evidently tried very hard to breathe some life into this old warhorse, but they ran out of breath. Michael Curtiz struggled nobly with direction. Austin Parker and Charles Kenyon adapted the Paul Hervey Fox story. Tony Gaudio photographed, and did it well.

Of course, you'll get the Francis fans in to see this picture, but they'll be wary the rest of their lives. It's only a lemon, with the juice squeezed out of it, leaving a lot of rind but no reason.

Fox Buys Charlie Chan Yarn from 'U'

Despite the death of Earl Derr Biggers several months ago, Fox is planning on continuing the Charlie Chan series of mystery features.

Sol Wurtzel has acquired ownership of "The Chinese Parrott" and lists it on his production slate with Warner Oland, who played the Chan character in foregoing productions, once more up for the spot. Universal made it as a silent with Paul Muni directing. Seton I. Miller has been offered the job of adapting it to the screen.

OPEN FORUM

The Hollywood Reporter.

I am in receipt of a letter from the head of a boys' orphanage way down south in Bay St. Louis, Miss., who is desirous of getting some old prints of pictures (silent) which he can project for the inmates.

It is a very pathetic letter and tells of the very small allowance they have even for food and of nothing which is allowed them in the nature of entertainment. He goes on to say that they have a silent projector and are willing to pay the transportation charges there and back for any prints of old pictures which anyone might be willing to send to them.

Do you think there is any way that you might be able to help?

Very truly yours,
WALTER A. FUTTER.

The Hollwood Reporter:

Unfortunately, the otherwise very creditable report in The Hollywood Reporter of the meeting of the Screen Writers' Guild at the Writers' Club on January 4, 1934, contained one important mis-statement of facts. The story stated that the retiring members of the Executive Board, Messrs. Meehan, Creelman and Mankiewicz "withdrew owing to their failure to take an active part in the organization's business." On the contrary, Mr. Meehan withdrew because of added pressure of business affairs as a writer-producer at MGM.; Mr. Creelman because of his indefinite stay in New York and Mr. Mankiewicz because of his departure for the East.

I will appreciate it if you will correct these facts in your column.

Yours very truly,
RALPH BLOCK,
Chairman, Executive Board
The Screen Writers' Guild.

Leonard Only Aided On 'Rip Tide' Scene

The story in The Reporter that Robert Leonard was directing scenes on "Rip Tide" for Irving Thalberg was right in part, but wrong in giving the impression that he had taken over the reins from Edmund Goulding. In connection with the item, Irving Thalberg yesterday issued the following statement:

"The report is entirely untrue and without any foundation of fact.

"Mr. Goulding is not only the director of this production but is writing the story as well.

"As has been my custom many times in the past, and in a spirit of complete cooperation with directors and writers, Eddie and I asked Bob Leonard last week to direct one short sequence of 'Rip Tide' which would give Mr. Goulding and myself a little extra time to work out important phases of the story. In the same spirit of cooperation Bob kindly consented to shoot this one sequence.

"Mr. Goulding is the director of 'Rip Tide' and will continue as such."

Elder Faversham Talks Deal at Universal

William Faversham, one-time star during the days before pictures found their tongues, is due for a return trip. The noted Broadway player, here visiting his son Phillip, is discussing terms on a deal which Universal is offering him for the spot of Lord High Chancellor in "Elizabeth and Mary," the Lowell Sherman picture. Dave Todd is representing him.

Mary Carlisle to N. Y.

Mary Carlisle leaves shortly for New York to open a month of personal appearances in the east on January 24. She will appear with Anna Q. Nillson in a skit. On her return to MGM she goes into "High School" and "Stealing Through Life."

Phil Holmes in BIP Pic

Cables from Phillip Holmes indicate he will go into a British International picture about January 15, with plans to get back to New York for a Theatre Guild play if the picure finishes in time.

MGM Considers Crooner

Lief Erickson, recently a featured crooner with Ted Fiorita, is being seriously discussed by MGM for the male lead in Joan Crawford's next, "Sadie McKee."

Grant Garrett has been signed by Radio to write gags for the next Wheeler and Woolsey picture, "Frat Heads," which Mark Sandrich will direct.

Miskell Coming to FWC

New York.—William Miskell, who was formerly with the Paramount Theatre in Omaha, has left for the coast to join the Fox West Coast theatres.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Of course, there are some proprieties that must be observed, but just listen to this for a way of getting around one. Recently there was the death of a very near and dear relative in the family of the head executive of a motion picture company. It was understood that on the day of the funeral the company would be closed for a couple of hours as a mark of respect. The day before the funeral services the following notice was sent around to all the employees: "We do not want our employees to work between the hours of one and two tomorrow, therefore we suggest they take their LUNCH HOUR at that time!"

The AMPA had another of those very interesting luncheons this week, this time presided over by Lou Goldberg of Columbia Pictures, who had specially arranged for a number of newspaper publishers to be present so that they might hear the advertising man's side of the moral code of the picture industry. This was to have been handled by Hector Fuller, an old newspaper man himself, and better known as a public relations counsel. Mr. Fuller did speak—but from the wrong side of the fence. His remarks were startling by reason of the fact that he neither defended nor explained the advertising man's position and rather remarkable for a number of platitudes and much flag-waving that said exactly nothing and exhibited a particularly narrow range of thought. We are afraid that if pictures do what he asks they will have to go three steps back for every step forward and never get out of the rut made by the commonplace. It seems to us that it's about time that pictures attempted to start something, rather than to cover things up, for the common good of the producers and the public. And Mr. Fuller certainly did not advocate any as sensible as that. Rather he suggested the ear of "Way Down East" and other such completely elevating drammers. And this is over and beyond any question of mere morals. . . . Bernard Ridder of the Staats Zeitung gave a short talk on the subject of Hitler and took the opportunity to thank everyone for the marvelous cooperation he has received from all over the country on his stand against that menace.

Marjorie Goulding has been a very sick gal indeed for the past few weeks, so sick that everyone is terribly worried and hoping for that miracle of the best. She's lonesome, too, so send the gal as many words of good cheer as you think of in the course of a day, and then add ten more for good luck. To the Waldorf-Astoria, in case you didn't know. . . . Dorothy Parker is in rare form again, and the other night, just before Coward sailed for home, she strolled into a party at his place and said, "Let's all go down to see 'The Lake.' Let's go see Katharine Hepburn run the gamut from a to B!"

IATSE GOES AHEAD WITH ELECTIONS FOR SOUND MEN

Anti-Union Workers Also Plan To Vote

the IBEW to represent them on code committees.

So for a week the wheels were greased with an election in view.

Yesterday the news must have reached Washington concerning the election. (Some union men assert that the fine Italian hand of Pat Casey must have filed a telegram.) At any rate Secretary McCullough received a wire from Senator Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, which expressly forbids the election.

"Such an election," said the Senator's wire in substance, "is nothing else but the settlement of a jurisdictional dispute. This question was settled by the National Labor Board by agreement last August. There is no occasion for calling an election and thus reopening the entire question.

"It was the intention of the National Labor Board to close the whole case in accordance with the terms of the original decision last Summer. THE NATIONAL LABOR BOARD RECOGNIZES THE EXISTENCE OF AN AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS UNION AND THE PRODUCERS COVERING SOUND EMPLOYEES."

When you strip those words down they mean two things, first, that the National Labor Board will not pay any attention to any local election by sound men; second, that the IBEW is officially recognized as the representative of the sound men in dealings with producers.

Which left the IBEW happy, and the IATSE going ahead regardless last night with plans for today's election.

After you have digested that situation, prepare for the new element.

With Kenneth B. Lambert, of the MGM sound department, acting as spokesman, a large group of sound men yesterday announced that they were out for complete freedom from unions, and recognition as craftsmen without union entanglements.

Their statement said:

"The election to determine the representation of studio sound workers under the NRA code may result in a new non-union organization having the say.

"Several strong anti-union groups from the various studios are affiliating to form an independent organization. NRA officials have indicated that such a choice may be marked on the ballot—that we are not confined to choosing between the IBEW and the IATSE.

"Union affiliation does not satisfy the professional character of the sound men and AFFILIATION WITH THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CINEMATOGRAPHERS IS CONTEMPLATED. The ASC is a non-professional society composed of outstanding cameramen in the industry."

That's a bombshell that makes its own noise without interpretation.

In explaining his reasons for the IATSE proceeding with the election today and tomorrow Harold Smith of IATSE Local 695 said:

"While we should have preferred to have had the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board supervise the balloting such supervision is not necessary. This claim is based on a telegram sent by Robert F. Wagner on October 5, 1933, to Campbell McCullough of the local board, interpreting this point in the National Recovery Act. This wire reads in part as follows:

" 'It requires them (the employers) to deal with duly authorized representatives of their employees chosen by employees through representatives of employees' own choosing. If there is dispute as to who properly represents the employees election by secret ballot should be held under supervision of an impartial person who has the confidence of both parties. After such an election employers must deal with such representatives and make the agreements with them covering relations of employer and employee.'

"We shall hold the election," said Smith, "under the supervision of several well known clergymen or other persons of similar probity and expect the producers to abide by the result."

Happy Birthday!

Yesterday, January 8, was the fourteenth birthday of the American Society of Cinematographers. In view of current conditions it looks as though the organization is entering its most important year at the age of fourteen.

'OLIVER OLIVER' A HIT; 'WOODEN SLIPPER' WEAK

Great Vehicle For Brady or Boland

"OLIVER OLIVER"

Dwight Deere Wiman presents "Oliver Oliver," by Paul Osborn; staged by Auriol Lee; settings by Raymond Sovey; at the Playhouse. With Ann Andrews, Alexandra Carlisle, Thomas Chalmers, Hugh Rennie, Helen Brooks, Bretaigne Windust.

New York.—Dwight Wiman gets the palm this year for being not only the most prolific producer of the season but as the best picker of the lot since three out of four of his offerings have the definite stamp of success on them. The second of this week's offerings by Mr. Wiman turns out to be a mad picnic for the Mesdames Andrews and Carlisle written by that same Paul Osborn who turned out the "Vinegar Tree." And it is a vehicle that will probably have MGM and Paramount bidding themselves into a hoarse whisper because the former must have material for Alice Brady and the latter really owes it to Mary Boland to buy her this one since they slipped up on the one she originally created. P.S.—We hope Boland gets it.

Mr. Osborn again lightly and devastatingly wields his pen to bring out another portrait of a slightly silly, completely amusing woman, this time one who is seeking to mend her fortunes through the profitable marriage of her son to an heiress. And the setting for this is a week-end party in the country. Now the son and the heiress are really in love but the son is a graceful waster who won't work and the girl seems to feel her husband should be able to protect her, just in case, so the gal has meanwhile sorta promised to marry another boy whom she unceremoniously brings along to the house-party. The gal's mother comes along too and that lady is an acid-tongued, slightly dense person given to practical statements and questions. The son, however, has plans of his own, which eventually marry his mother off to the richest man in Ohio and since that marriage makes him the son of a rich man and since that man has dissuaded him from wasting his particular gifts on hard work, the son proposes to the heiress and she takes him.

The plot is paper thin but something to be worked on, and with the exception of the fine drawing of the two women characters and the small part of the Ohioan, Mr. Osborn didn't trouble much over clarifying the others. This may be in great part due to the fact that Bretaigne Windust is again listed as an actor for this play and has the part of the son. Mr. Windust just isn't an actor and his part has at least twice the laughs in it that he is capable of having you believe because as Jack Cohn once said of an actress, (who should be nameless,) "comedy is as lead in her dainty hands." However, with that stumbling block removed, it remains for us to sing the praises of Ann Andrews and Alexandra Carlisle, both of whom are grand actresses and who stage a two-ring circus all their own, Miss Carlisle's matter-of-fact statements making a perfect foil for Miss Andrews' ridiculous effusions and impolite drawing room manner. Hugh Rennie is uncomfortably cast, as the other suitor, because his physical make-up screams aloud for him to play only nasty young men. Helen Brooks is the heiress. AND Thomas Chalmers is the richest man in Ohio, and what a joy he makes of the part—not a word of dialogue gets past him without its due measure of correct delivery. And there are very few lines that Osborn has written that don't deserve it.

No Deal

MGM phoned Warners yesterday and placed a bid for the loan of the sheep the latter studio is using in "Merry Wives of Reno" for its production of "Sequoia."

The deal went cold as Warners have another week's work for the sheep in the picture. Besides they are handy insomnia cures, an aid in conferences.

Bickford Plans Pic Made in Russia

Charles Bickford has purchased the screen rights to the Russian novel "Immigration," by Herman Schwartzberger, and plans to produce this picture in Russia in June. Bickford will also play the starring role in addition to producing the picture.

The French publishers of the book have agreed to withhold it from the bookstands until September, at which time the picture will be ready for release.

Bickford has obtained financing from an English film concern for this picture.

New York.—Roadshow dates are being set up around the country for "Queen Christina," which MGM expects to be one of the biggest of the year.

The picture will open in Pittsburgh at the Nixon on January 15; in Cleveland at the Ohio, January 22; and the Majestic in Boston on the same date.

N.V.A. News Suspends

New York.—The N. V. A. News, issued weekly, has suspended publication until February 2, at which time it will have a new dress and the subscription price will be $2 a year and 5c per issue. Heretofore it was distributed free to members, and this is being done to meet the publication's budget.

Hellinger Sues 'U'

New York.—Mark Hellinger has entered a suit against Universal and Rowland and Brice jointly for $500, alleging breach of contract in not accepting stories for the Walter Winchell shorts after he delivered the first one entitled "I Know Everybody's Racket."

Might Be Better For Screen Than As Play

"THE WOODEN SLIPPER"

Dwight Deere Wiman presents "The Wooden Slipper," by Samson Raphaelson; staged by the author; settings by Raymond Sovey; at the Ritz Theatre. With Dorothy Hall, Ross Alexander, Cissy Loftus, Montagu Love, Ruth Altman, Alice Reinhart, Paul Guilfoyle, John Halloran.

New York.—Listed as a romantic comedy, this play by its lack of determination to be one thing or the other and through the unevenness of its tempo and moods, turns out to be a whatnot that sounds as though it were a poor translation. Either it should have been high comedy throughout or they should have added a few songs and dances, and if pictures would be willing to do either they could have themselves a good vehicle for a couple of stars and a grand comedy part in the supporting cast.

Dorothy Hall as Julie Zigurny is the one member of a family long famous in the theatre, in whom acting is no talent. Before this is definitely established in the last act, the gal is a plain little nobody who runs away from home when the boy she thought she was going to marry throws her over for her more gorgeous and glamorous sister. Julie meets up with a chef, who is an artist in his line, and whose wife has just left him. The chef gives her a job in his kitchen. Result, they fall in love, BUT Julie's family catches up with her and in a typical first act musical comedy curtain the young lovers part. They are reunited, however, when Julie is a miserable failure as an actress and the chef comes back into her life as the proprietor of a large restaurant in Paris and offers her the job of being his cashier for life.

Ross Alexander is simply a joy in the role of the chef, and by comparison with the rest of the company and the lines given them it's a little hard to figure out whether he had all the best lines to say or whether he really managed to say them better than the rest. Paul Guilfoyle as the rich lover, who woos Julie back home with the promise of making her a star, works hard to catch up with the mustache and goatee they pasted on him, but somehow they manage to keep just a little ahead because his sense of comedy doesn't meet the physical requirements of the part. Cissy Loftus is grand—whenever she's around, which just isn't long enough. And Alice Reinhart shows up in the first act of this one again and we really could wish that some day real soon now that gal gets a chance to go right through a play.

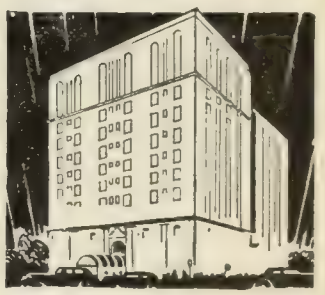
Samson Raphaelson has directed his own play all by himself, so he can't complain. In both the writing and directing there are generous hints of what the play might have been. Especially in the two delightful scenes in a railway compartment. Mr. Raphaelson seems to do his best work in close quarters.

Lou Metzger Sells Foy Picture Abroad

New York.—Lou Metzger, San Diego exhibitor and former Universal sales executive, is going to continue an exhibitor but still get a taste of the old selling.

Metzger announces here that he plans to sail for Europe next month to handle foreign sales on Bryan Foy's "Elysia." He has just been to Canada, plans a jaunt to Mexico City, then a few days at the theatre in San Diego and following that the European trip.

Nice Boys, Those Warners



Warners and Ricardo Cortez are "even Stephen." Player postponed his wedding owing to production demands of the company. Now Warners have postponed the start of "Hit Me Again," slated to start today, pushing it to Saturday to accommodate "Ric." Cortez and Joan Blondell get top billing.

'THE GODS WE MAKE' FAILS TO MAKE COMEDY OR DRAMA

Lloyd Hughes Seen In Late N. Y. Play

"THE GODS WE MAKE"

Produced by James Cameron; authors, G. H. McCall and Bouvet de Lozier; directed by James Cameron; setting by Cleon Throckmorton; at the Mansfield Theatre. Cast: Ara Gerald, Joan Blair, Lloyd Hughes, Frank M. Thomas and Eve Casanova.

New York.—This is the first play to put most of its cast on the back walls of the theatre instead of on the stage. With only five flesh and blood thespians performing behind the footlights, they had to compete with at least a dozen other unseen characters mentioned in the play, who are caricatured in brush and ink in the art exhibit in back of the orchestra section. Whether it was economy in production, the unnecessariness of their speaking lines or an exploitation tie-up with the play itself can only be conjectured at.

Suffice it to say that whatever the purpose it hardly helped to stimulate the audience's interest in the slight and innocuous story. Described as comedy drama, it wasn't much fun and certainly undramatic. Mado Glendon, a writer, and her bosom crony, Merle Cavendish, a widow, maintain an apartment together. Merle, who is comfortably fixed, having been left about a million dollars' worth of securities, has been the recipient of Dick Webster's love, without the blessing of the marriage tie. You see, Webster has a wife in Dallas who won't divorce him. Merle, after quite a few years of this sort of life, realizes that she is living in a too secluded world, whereas he is free to roam and mix socially.

Comes the depression and the threatened collapse of Dick's oil business. Unknown to her lover, Merle throws her entire fortune into the breach, but imposes strict secrecy on her broker as to the source of the loan. Webster's firm is saved. Then rumors of his entanglement with another fair charmer reaches Merle's ears, but she disbelieves them. Laurelton, her broker, in the meantime has declared his love for Merle, trying to persuade her that her lover is unfaithful. She eventually hears about the matter direct from Dick and she puts him out of her life. In the end, however, everything rights itself. It was all a dastardly plot of the broker. The lover is now divorced and able and willing to marry her.

Two clever performances are given by Ara Gerald, as the widow's best friend, and Frank Thomas, as the smooth and scheming broker. Lloyd Hughes acquits himself just so-so.

Checkbooks Ready!

Armed with baseball bats a committee of the Screen Actors Guild will invade the studio lunchrooms today to pull the wind-up on sales of tickets for the ball Saturday night. Jimmy Cagney, Robert Montgomery, Boris Karloff, Chester Morris and Mary Astor are the committee.

Para. May Clean Slate Up by June

New York.—It looks as though the affairs of Paramount as a bankrupt should be wound up by June. The referee is going over claims against the corporation daily, disallowing most, and only about two hundred remain for settlement.

Of course a reorganization plan can be affirmed before June, and any undecided claims settled afterwards if the courts approve the reorganization suggested.

Fisher Books Butterfield

New York.—According to reports all acts in the Butterfield circuit in Michigan will be booked by Arthur Fisher, the New York independent booker. This will be a great break for acts in and around New York on account of the operation of the Fisher main office being in New York. This will also make Fisher the leader in the independent booking field.

Walter Israel Signed To United Costumers Post

Wallace W. Kerrigan, president of the United Costumers, Inc., yesterday announced that the company has signed a five year contract with Walter J. Israel to continue with the United Costumers as production manager and costume designer. Israel has been associated with a number of the most important costume productions of the stage and screen.

Soviet Pic State Righted

New York.—William M. Pizor, of Imperial Distributing Corporation, has signed a contract for world distribution with James Stuart, an American engineer, who is under contract with the Soviet government since 1927. Product will be three 3-reelers and shorts on Russia. First picture is under title "My First Five Years in Russia."

Rube Wolf at Roxy

New York.—Rube Wolf will be the master of ceremonies at the Roxy Theatre here starting January 12. He was booked for the Paramount in Los Angeles to start January 5, but Howard S. Cullman had this canceled with Mike Marco, operator of the L. A. house.

Jay Emanuel Coming Here

New York.—Jay Emanuel, publisher of eastern regionals, will leave for the coast on January 12, being his first visit to Hollywood, and will stay there for about a month.

REELING around LONDON

A British movie director (not very at home with matters filmic), when asking the reason for delay before a shot and told by the assistant that they were waiting for interlock, said: "Interlock? Interlock?? I didn't call him today—we won't wait for him—let's shoot it!!" . . . No kidding, it's on the level. . . Someone here should grab Dorothy Bouchier and give her a long term contract, in the right sort of parts—she'd knock 'em cold; we remember her in the days they called her Chili and was she hot; filmically, of course! . . . Sartorial note: Tony Nelson Keys, Triumph Films assistant director, riding in the Row of a Sunday morning.

Lovely Merle Oberon will warble in her Twickenham pic . . . tee hee that featured player famed for her tall stories is talking about her Paramount contract now! . . . One pic made this side got swell rating from a critic who thought the serious story was a burlesque and so gave it a nice notice; not realizing that it was played in deadly earnest. . . . Sally (Booful Blonde) Stewart dancing at the Savoy, where quite a mob of movie celebs watched "Les Debutantes" giving their rendering of a cabaret. Did we say rendering? . . . Wee Georgie Harris is up for a swell part here, and if he gets it he'll make a quick trip to the coast to confer with some execs about an indie organization he may start this side. . . . Donovan Pedelty, Para talent scout and movie scenarist as well, must be feeling a bit off color—he hasn't signed any one for two weeks; maybe the Fox "imports-exports" have got him disheartened—they seem to have most every one. . . . Jack Hulbert back in town and saying swell things about American radio stars. . . Binnie Barnes giving away presents to the kiddies at the Selfridge store. . . . Eric Burnand Mount suggests to Brit companies that they should make some shorts of England with narrative by H. V. Morton; sounds like a swell idea.

Frank Ditcham, Universal chief here, and Jack (Selznick-Joyce) Votion amongst the group greeting James Whale into town. . . . As far as Cyril Gardner is concerned, you cannot say anything bad about Lewis Milestone; Cyril is one hundred per cent for Millie, and how! . . . Evelyn Laye recovering from an electrician falling onto her on the set; she went to Brighton; you remember Brighton, don't you, Eddie Cronjager? . . . That movie producer and his leading lady are still sighing aplenty and she SO fresh and innocent before she free lanced!! . . . Basil Dean having difficulty in finding writers for the screen; of course an idea would be to employ screen writers and scenarists—or would that be too cinematic? . . . S'funny how American directors like one character or another to give the heroine a lil' pat on the back side; it's a Hollywood complex! . . . John Loder has a rep in this burg for being the champeen cook bar none; and how John knows how to deal with a goose; yeah, we said goose!! . . . The lovely Dorothy Hyson at the theatre after studio hours.

Metro kept Tracy out of the blurbs on "Blonde Bombshell" as soon as he was fired, but my! how that Harlow gal can pull 'em in in this town! . . . It started as long ago as "Platinum Blonde," and since then she's been real box office here. . . . Hugh Findlay, chief of Gaumont publicity at the studios, lunching with Director Bob Flaherty. . . . Charles B. (Fox Films associate producer in his spare time) Cochran watching the audience reaction to Bergner at the Apollo Theatre, and Elizabeth is the talk of the town. . . . David Bader getting an eyeful of "Ball at the Savoy." . . . This week's handclaps, laurel wreath and illuminated scroll goes to the gang that made "Dancing Lady"—what a swell job from Clarence Brown onwards. . . . Ewart Hodgson, Cedric Belfrage, A. Jympson Harman just three of London's ace film scribblers eating at the Cafe Royal.

Socialists Help French

Paris.—Mme. Andree Forine, a leading socialite here, has formed the Land of France Association, numbering a group of blue-bloods who will lend their personal aid and influence to help the French picture producers. Their plans are still indefinite

Loew in Australia

Sydney.—Arthur Loew and J. Vogel reached here on their tour. Sir Benjamin Fuller, local theatre magnate, returned from his United States trip.

Slovakian Censors Hit At German Pic Imports

Prague.—Slovakian censors are using their blue pencils to keep German pictures out of the country, banning everything with the Hitler stamp on it.

At the same time the French are getting the break. "Le Petit Roi," which has been having censoritis in other European countries, was passed without remark.

Austrians Okay in Poland

Berlin.—Word has reached here from Poland that Austrian pictures are allowed to be released there so long as they carry an Austrian trade mark. These are the only German-speaking films countenanced.

Big Sydney Prospect

Sydney.—A combined theatre and apartment house will be built here through a project backed by David N. Martin, local film distributor. It will be a fourteen story affair, costing $1,500,000.

Para. Changes in Aust.

Sydney.—Looks like a new head here for Paramount's office. William Clarke is en route back to New York and is reported out, with John E. Kennebeck replacing him in charge of distribution.

Leishman on Far East Tour

Last Move Taken In Publix Break-Up

New York.—At a stockholders' meeting of Theatre Management Co., whose stock is owned by the trustees in bankruptcy of Paramount Publix, the name of the company was changed to Paramount Theatres Service Corporation. Officers are: Ralph A. Kohn, president; Sam Dembow, vice president; Frank Freeman, vice president; Walter B. Cokell, treasurer; J. D. Van Wagoner, secretary. In explaining the change of name Kohn stated that Paramount's present management is definitely committed to decentralize theatre operation, so that the name of Theatre Management Company was a misnomer, because under the present set-up the functions are strictly of a service nature, assisting the managers in the field, it doing no managing of theatres from New York. Freeman will supervise contact in the field pertaining to real estate, leases, deals, pooling agreements, insurance, purchasing, maintenance and building operation. Dembow will supervise the actual theatre operations, contacting the distributing companies and have charge of booking artists for stage performances.

RCA Has an 'Honor List'

New York.—There are 474 theatres on the honor roll of the RCA High Fidelity installations throughout the United States during 1933. The RCA Victor have put out a handsomely lithographed presentation book describing the new equipment in these houses.

'Josephine' For Francis If WB Make 'Napoleon'

If Warners do decide to produce "Napoleon," with Edward Robinson in the title role, and there is considerable doubt in certain quarters that the picture will ever get by the talking stage, the part of Josephine will be handed to Kay Francis.

Katherine Cornell could have the part for the asking, but her decision to keep out of pictures seems to be as firm as ever.

'56th Street' Clicks

"House on 56th Street" is doing better business than any Warner picture within the past year except "Footlight Parade," a musical. All records for dramatic pictures have been broken at the Hollywood and Downtown theatre in Los Angeles by this film, with Kay Francis in the role Ruth Chatterton refused.

Will Wait on Hardie

Russell Hardie will not be replaced in the cast of "Men in White" at MGM. The player, who was rushed to the hospital for an appendix operation Saturday, has only one remaining scene and the studio will make that when he returns to the fold.

Cabot Up For '5th Ave.'

Radio puts Bruce Cabot through his paces today in a test for the role bracketed with that of Frances Dee in "Just Off Fifth Avenue." If Cabot does not click, Charles Starrett is understood to be the alternative for the spot.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE CASTING NEWS

T. Roy Barnes and Andre Cheron were added to the cast of "Rip Tide" for MGM.

Harry Holman and Matt Briggs set by Leo Morrison for featured roles in "A Very Honorable Guy," Warners.

Frank Conroy into "Upperworld," Warners. Through Leo Morrison.

Paul Stanton into MGM's "Viva Villa." Beyer-MacArthur set the player.

Sidney Toler for a featured role in "Upperworld," Warners, through Beyer-MacArthur.

Robert McWade goes into Universal's "Countess of Monte Cristo."

James Marcus signed for Ken Maynard's "Honor of the West."

Leonard Mudie has been added to the cast of "Viva Villa" for MGM. Lew Cantor made the deal.

Marie Wells into "Merry Wives of Reno" at Warners.

MGM signed Edward Arnold for "Sadie McKee."

Helen Lynd by Paramount for "Melody in Spring."

Guinn "Big Boy" Williams by Radio for a two reel comedy titled "Undieworld."

Jack Barty added to Hal Roach's "Oliver the Eighth."

Harry Seymour and Henry Otto signed for "Hot Air," Warners.

James Durkin signed through Max Shagrin for "Upperworld," Warners.

Marie Wells added to the cast of "Merry Wives of Reno," Warners. Deal set by Max Shagrin.

Luis Alberni spotted in Warners' "The Fortune Teller" by Max Shagrin.

MGM Saturday signed Ned Sparks for a featured spot in "Operator 13."

Warners signed Dorothy Tree Saturday for a featured role in "Fur Coats," Aline MacMahon's next starring vehicle which is scheduled to start this Wednesday under the direction of Al Green. The William Morris office set the player.

Cecilia Parker was signed Saturday for the feminine lead in the Ken Maynard western, "Honor of the West." Alan James directs when the picture starts production Tuesday.

Armand Kaliz and Christian Rub have been signed for the new sequences in "Cat and Fiddle," MGM. The MacQuarrie office negotiated.

John Sheehan engaged for a featured role in "Countess of Monte Cristo," Universal, through MacQuarrie.

Walter Brennan into "Old Hannibal," MGM.

Richard Tucker for "Countess of Monte Cristo," Universal. Set by O'Reilly and Mann.

Griffith's Second at Radio With Dunne

Radio has set the next Irene Dunne picture, "Age of Innocence," as the second picture on E. H. Griffith's three picture deal. Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman are writing the screen play.

Griffith will start production on the Ann Harding picture, "Alien Corn," for Radio next week.

'Prizefighter' Out For MGM Pic in Canada

The fight angle of "The Prizefighter and the Lady" having proven to MGM officials to be a box office frightener as far as the women are concerned, MGM has changed the Max Baer picture to "The Conquering Sex" for Canadian distribution.

Young Rapf on Story

Maurice Rapf, son of Harry Rapf, leaves Wednesday for Dartmouth to resume his studies and is taking back with him a commission from MGM to write a short subject about the "Winter Sports Carnival" around the event that is held annually at Hanover.

MGM will send a camera crew to photograph the carnival when it is run.

Billie Burke at Radio

Radio has signed Billie Burke on a one-picture loanout deal from Samuel Goldwyn, to whom she is under a long term contract, for a featured role in "Finishing School." George Nicholls and Wanda Tuchock will direct this picture.

" . . . moments of such breathless suspense, such deep pathos and such high excitement . . . . . Jack Cunningham made a swell adaptation . . . " —Hollywood Reporter.

"Jack Cunningham's script is well sustained."

FAMINE ON FOR INDIES

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•SOMEONE said to me the other day: "Why don't you write something that would answer the question, 'What is the big opportunity in the picture business for 1934?' "

The temptation was great.

We could have gone back to our youngster's copy books—"Honesty Is the Best Policy," "Quality Pays," etc., and so on.

It would have been so easy.

And just when we had virtuously discarded all the easy routes and worn out phrases, up bobbed one of the oldest platitudes in the picture business and it demanded recognition.

So, with an apology for bringing up old thoughts, and not a darned bit of apology for mentioning the subject at a moment when it should be mentioned, we give this thought:

One of the greatest opportunities awaiting a distributor this year is on the doorstep of the man who will show that he will give the CREATORS an honest accounting, that he will sell honestly the product of the creator's brains.

Sure, it's an old subject. But it means something this year.

Before twelve months have passed you are going to find more creators—directors, writers, players, or what have you, so long as THEY have something to sell—dealing with major distributors and producers on a salary plus a percentage basis.

It's coming. It cannot be dodged. And it will be a good thing for this business when it arrives in full force.

But what can hold it back?

Only that age-old, firmly grounded conviction on the part of the creators that there never has been and never will be a distributing machine that will give an honest break to the creator.

Let some one man break down that psychological wall and he'll have this business by the tail.

Boy, what a wealth of creative energy is straining at the leash around this town, ready to go off "to the races" if they find the man or organization that will dispel the cloud of distrust existing between producers and sellers in this business.

It is waiting. So we give you, with brilliant originality and startling cleverness, a motto for 1934:

"Honesty Is the Best Policy."

Sensahumor!

Chicago.—Interviewed in Chicago by a Hollywood Reporter representative, Sam Goldwyn said: "Be sure the Reporter continues to credit me with all those funny cracks. They keep my name in print."

Cooper Says He Is Back to Take Reins

Merian C. Cooper returned to his post yesterday as production chief of Radio studio, and in an interview with a Hollywood Reporter man declared he will definitely remain in charge of production at that studio.

Cooper also stated that all departments in the studio would start working full blast, as he plans to get 28 pictures under way this season.

Para. Pays $40,000 For 'Master's Voice'

New York.—The high mark this year for New York plays was $90,000, which MGM paid for "Ah Wilderness," but Paramount also went high for the rights to Max Gordon's "Her Master's Voice." It is reported that Paramount parted with $40,000 for the piece.

Gillam in Town

Robert Gillam, head of Paramount's advertising and publicity departments, arrived here on the Chief yesterday afternoon. He came west to discuss advertising matters and the year book for the coming year.

Jack Warner Uses Trains

New York.—While brother Harry is taking his time going to the Coast by way of the Panama Canal, Jack Warner left for the Coast yesterday by train.

Levine Visits Exchanges

Milwaukee.—Nat Levine, of Mascot Productions, was here yesterday on a national exchange tour in the interests of his Clyde Beatty serial.

Reporter Survey Shows Buyers Just Awakening To Hollywood Situation—Quickies Are Dead

Checking back on frantic requests from independent exchanges for information about current production, The Hollywood Reporter has uncovered the fact that the key cities of the country are filled with exchanges just awakening to the news that the shoestring Hollywood producer has been starved out of existence.

Monogram has set itself as practically a national distributor, Chesterfield-Invincible has its own group, Majestic is folding and unfolding, the veteran Freuler, first man to give Charlie Chaplin a million dollar contract, is hanging on through sheer personal persistence.

With most of the majors willing to double feature quite a lot of their product this year—despite the big speeches and oratory at code hearings—the problem is made more difficult for the independent who, with Hollywood starved, must now look to foreign importations for the bulk of his offerings.

Goldwyn May Go To Russia With 'Nana'

Moscow. — Announcement was made to the press associations here today that Samuel Goldwyn's picture "Nana" would be given a spectacular opening here within a month or so. It is the first American talkie to be given such a privilege. The expectation here is that Sam Goldwyn will probably visit Russia for the opening.

Carole Lombard Will Not Play Columbia's 'Sonata'

Despite conflicting reports it now may be stated that Carole Lombard will probably not appear in "Sonata" with John Barrymore for Columbia. "Twentieth Century" is more likely to be Lombard's next at Columbia, and if she can do it in time she will play in "We're Not Dressing" with Bing Crosby.

Hughes' 'Scar Face' Finally Breaks Chi

Chicago.—After a two year battle that has set records in censor fighting in the picture industry, Howard Hughes' production of "Scar Face" has at last received the valued ticket which allows exhibition in this territory.

Ben Judells, local indie distributor, has been active in the battle and will profit by doing the distributing of the picture. He made his deal with Neil McCarthy, attorney for Howard Hughes.

Sheehan Still Hot On Foreign Imports

New York.—Winnie Sheehan, Buffalo boy, is still foreign in picture tastes. Yesterday, Hans Schwartz, Ufa director, left New York to take up a Fox contract. He will also be greeted by a big dinner with Ernst Lubitsch as the host.

Schwartz directed "Princess at Your Service" abroad which was good enough for Sheehan to decide to buy, the story and the picture became "Adorable."

'Christina' and 'Dinner' Hitting Ball in New York

New York.—MGM's production, "Dinner At Eight," did over $60,000 at the Capitol theatre here last week and is being held over another week.

"Queen Christina," finishing up in its second week at the Astor, has done over $20,000 with one day to go to complete the week.

Zukor Trip Important

New York.—Adolph Zukor leaves for the Coast today, Wednesday, and though you try to discount all the rumors the thought still remains to a news gatherer that the trip has been handled in such a portentous manner that something of a shake-up is due.

Film Daily's Ten Best

New York—The Film Daily today made public the results of its national pool of "The Ten Best Pictures of 1933." The list follows: "Cavalcade," "Forty-Second Street," "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth," "Lady For a Day," "State Fair," "Farewell To Arms," "She Done Him Wrong," "I Am A Fugitive," "Maedchen in Uniform" and "Rasputin and the Empress."

THE LOWDOWN

Well, mebbe "night-life in Hollywood" is really picking up. With Lombardo packing 'em in—and the Mills Brothers crowding 'em in nightly—in different places—and Gene Austin opening at the Clover tonight—perhaps we're in for the same kind of post-prohibition gaiety that so far has manifested itself every place BUT here! Sam Coslow has reserved space for a few thousand guests at the Clover tonight—and a lot of others are getting ready to welcome Austin to town at the same time.

An "ingenue" recently signed by Paramount, was getting ready for her first set of interviews with the newspaper and magazine tribe the other day. The publicity office of the studio called her in to give her some advice on what to say to the press boys.

"Listen," said the gal, "after a season in the 'Follies' with Harry Richman—I can take care of myself!"

They tell us that Harry Ruby, the song writer, and the missus, are reaching that futt-futt stage and that papers will be filed at any moment.

Mrs. Pat Campbell, who used to give out with terrific tongue-lashings against Hollywood, has been converted. Not only is she toiling in the movies, but she's gone for a house in Beverly Hills. And are we leffing! Because of the recent rains, her house is full of ANTS! Which is a NEW place to have them!

'Tis to snicker! At a big studio, which has the reputation for being the most lecherous lot in town—where almost all the execs lead double lives between their families and their affinities, a telegraph boy was recently fired because he was making goo-goo eyes at a pretty blonde in one of the offices! The exec who fired him has been dating her up regularly. And all the time we thought this exec was the perfect "fireside type"!

Don't tell us that it doesn't pay to be a good steno and secretary. Patricia, John Considine's girl Friday, gets a test before the cameras today. And a lot of the susceptible boys are betting that she comes through with flying colors. . . . Omigosh, now we hear that Bing Crosby has another heir or heiress due about May. . . Why do they tell us such things so early?

New York REVIEWS

"LADY KILLER"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, Roy Del Ruth; writers, Rosalind Keating Schaffer, Ben Markson, Lillie Hayward.

Strand Theatre

World-Telegram: "Lady Killer" turns out to be a sprightly, more or less daring, thoroughly entertaining film—the best Mr. Cagney has made in some time. It is all good stuff, fast moving, frequently bawdy in its humor. Mr. Cagney is excellent; the others in the cast are all effective.

American: The film is flip, fast, rough-house comedy, slipping sometimes into farce and occasionally hesitating for a stab of melodrama and a big punch sequence. It's Cagney's picture all the way through, but good support helps lots, and so do the gags and wise-guy situations besprinkling the action. Director Roy Del Ruth has kept this story moving rapidly and maintains a speedy tempo right up to the big moment and the final chase.

News: This is going to be a disappointment to some of his ardent admirers. It is not a consistently funny film. Some of the stuff that is supposed to be very humorous falls flat. There is some exciting melodramatic action in it, but too much padding slows the story and takes the bite out of the satiric bits on the Hollywood scene. Cagney dominates the story and plays his role of movie usher-crook-screen actor in the traditional Cagney manner. Roy Del Ruth keeps the picture from lagging by putting plenty of action in all the scenes. The whole adds up to a fairly entertaining picture, but it is not one of Cagney's best films.

Post: It is all premeditated hokum, redeemed to a certain extent by Mr. Cagney's vivid personality.

Herald-Tribune: On the whole "Lady Killer" is good Cagney entertainment. A great deal of the narrative is inclined to be implausible and its decidedly episodic manner has a way of weakening its force. Nevertheless, it is so vigorously managed, so attractively played, and above all so pleasantly filled with the Cagney vitality that it emerges as agreeable entertainment.

Journal: "Lady Killer" is more a collection of gags than a sustained narrative. Cagney is amusing, as usual.

Sun: The story is a fast-moving melodrama, with enough comedy, and it suits Cagney from the ground up. He is as flip and as hardboiled as ever.

'Roxy' Expected to Return to 7th Ave.

New York.—There is a strong report here today with all the earmarks of authenticity that Sam Rothafel, following his resignation from the Radio City theatres, may land back at the Seventh Avenue Roxy which he founded.

As the rumors have it, if Herbert Lubin can swing the deal, Roxy will get a fifty-one per cent interest in the theatre if he will return to the Seventh Avenue.

Red Cross Party Tonight

A benefit for flood sufferers will be held this evening in the Glendale auditorium at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Red Cross. Among others of the film colony who have volunteered their services will be Joe E. Brown, Pert Kelton, Vince Barnett, Dick Powell and Margaret Lindsay.

'Henry' Wows Chicago

Chicago.—"Henry the Eighth" is the picture that is wowing them in this town. It continues a Loop sensation after a great run at the United Artists by moving into the Roosevelt for a stretch. And it is now in its third week at an arty theatre on the Lake front.

Nan Blair at Fox

Fox has signed Nan Blair to replace John Mock as assistant to Julian Johnson. Mock leaves February 1 for New York to become Eastern story head for the studio. Miss Blair was formerly a literary agent.

900 Out for 20th Showing

Twentieth Century's trade showing yesterday at the Boulevard theatre proved very successful. Over 900 exhibitors from towns between San Diego and Bakersfield came to see "Moulin Rouge."

ALL SCREEN WRITERS

—who have one screen credit on an American release in the eighteen months before January 15, 1934—

ARE ENTITLED TO MAKE NOMINATIONS AND TO VOTE for Writer Representatives on the NRA Motion Picture Code

(a) CODE AUTHORITY
(b) AGENTS' COMMITTEE
(c) COMMITTEE OF FIVE WRITERS AND FIVE PRODUCERS ON WRITER-WORKING CONDITIONS

Writers not affiliated with the Screen Writers' Guild and Guild Associate members are urged to present their voting qualifications to the Credentials Committee, Screen Writers' Guild, Hollywood Center Building, Cherokee Avenue and Hollywood Boulevard, before 12 o'clock noon, January 15, 1934.

If you lack the necessary screen credit you may present such other qualifications as are required of active Guild members, your eligibility to be determined by the Credentials Committee.

No credentials will be issued after 12 noon January 15, 1934; and no writer will be admitted to the meeting without authorized credentials.

Active Guild members will receive credentials by mail. Proxies will be provided for accredited writers who are unable to be present.

SHADOW OF A. S. C. HANGING OVER SOUND MEN'S ELECTION

Large Group Ready To Quit Both Unions

Balloting in the three cornered fight which may or may not decide which group will represent the sound men started yesterday at the Writers' Club at 10 a.m. and continued until midnight. It will continue today during the same hours.

Before the polls opened Harold V. Smith, business manager of the IATSE, made a last minute effort to persuade H. P. Brigaerts, vice president of the IBEW, to sanction the election being held under the supervision of an impartial committee consisting of Rev. James Cunningham, C.S.P., chairman; Rev. Harry T. Lewis, Attorney Orris Hedges, Attorney Franklin MacCarthy and Rev. A. P. G. Anderson. Brigaerts, however, with a contract between the producers and his union safely in his pocket, refused to recognize the validity of the election, which is taking place without the sanction of the National Labor Board.

In the meantime some twenty-odd sound men from various studios met last night in the Bell & Howell auditorium to air their dissatisfaction with both unions and attempt another solution to this problem. Claiming to represent more than 200 sound men those at the meeting, under the chairmanship of C. S. Pratt, decided to mark their ballots A.S.C. in the hope that if enough ballots so indicated are cast the A.S.C. will find a way in which the sound men may be taken into their organization.

This proposal was placed before the board of directors of the A.S.C., but at a late hour last night Bill Stull, the board's secretary, said: "It would be unethical for me to comment upon this question at the present time. I can only say that the A.S.C. has neither refused nor accepted the proposition offered us by certain sound men."

When the polls closed last night it was understood that approximately 300 ballots had been cast. The IATSE officials claimed 250, with the remainder being split between the IBEW and the A.S.C.

Rockett Clinches Cast And Starts Next Fox Pic

Signing Halliwell Hobbes and Rafael Ottiano through Dave Todd, Al Rockett has placed "All Men Are Enemies" into work at Fox. Helen Twelvetrees and Hugh Williams rate top billing under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. Mona Maris and Greta Meyers also set for cast.

Samuel Hoffenstein and Lenore Coffee fashioned the screen play from the Richard Aldington best seller.

Morris Tagged by Radio

Gouverneur Morris has been signed through Edington and Vincent to write the screen play for "Sea Girl" at Radio. Shirley Burden is producing the picture.

Press Will Greet Colman

Twentieth Century is throwing a press party for Ronald Colman today to give the actor a chance to renew old acquaintances.

Strong Arm Work

The strong arm squad of the Screen Actors' Guild, consisting of Chester Morris, Bob Montgomery, Mary Astor, Boris Karloff and Jimmy Cagney, invaded the Colony and Clover clubs last night. Object was to sell tickets to the ball the Guild is holding Saturday night in the Sala d'Oro of the Biltmore. And they were successful in a big way. Today several squads are swooping down on various spots around town.

Fox Wins 'Montez' Dispute Over MGM

New York.—A Hays organization arbitration committee today sat on the title of "Lola Montez" and a dispute over it between Fox and MGM.

MGM was planning a picture under that title by virtue of buying the Hearst syndicated feature built around the life of the famous California charmer. But Fox owned world rights to a play by Adolph Paul called "Lola Montez."

Fox won the Hays committee's decision, so now Hearst and MGM are left with an idea without a title.

Ben Jacksen, Back Home, Casting for His Own Play

Ben Jacksen, former Fox studio executive, accompanied by Mrs. Jacksen and their son Raymond, has arrived in Hollywood for a brief stay in connection with his Eastern production activities. While here Ben will do some casting in connection with the picture version of his play, "Big Hearted Herbert," now current on Broadway.

'Paradine Case' Dies

MGM has quietly shelved "Paradine Case," by Robert Hichens. Story was wrangled over as a possible vehicle for Greta Garbo, but no go, owing to a character problem which could not be cracked.

Lou Holtz Back to Air

Lou Holtz was set yesterday, through the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office, to appear on the Fleischmann hour this Thursday with Rudy Vallee.

Burt Kelly Plans Return to Indies

Burt Kelly, of the old KBS unit, is completing plans for a return venture into the production field.

The producer has arranged to locate at Talisman Studios, taking offices Thursday. It is reported that William Saal, also a KBS alumnus, will join Kelly, operating from a vantage point in New York.

It is said that the new company will inaugurate a novel development in distribution, establishing its own organization for first runs in the various territories through its own broad contacts and subsequently disposing of territorial franchises for the remainder of the field.

Fox Importations Split Plans in New York

New York.—Those new French actors signed by Fox can't agree on plans. Erik Charrell has decided to remain in New York for at least ten days, but Charles Boyer, French colleague, can't wait and will precide him to the Coast.

Radio Pulls Mystery Yarn

Radio has pulled the Stuart Palmer mystery thriller "Murder on the Blackboard" off the shelf and has set George Archainbaud to direct this as his next assignment.

The murder mystery, which is a sequel to the "Penguin Murder Case," is being adapted to the screen by Willis Goldbeck.

May Will Meg Own Yarn

After turning down a trio of assignments suggested by Columbia, Joe May, company's foreign directorial import, will pilot "World's Record," an original story of his own. It is a satire on sport champions.

Censors Worry MGM

In an effort to combat censorship obstacles facing "Should Ladies Behave" in Great Britain, MGM is shooting added scenes for the picture before shipping it to that territory.

Tearle Ready for Business

Conway Tearle yesterday signed a managerial contract with Al Kingston, who will negotiate the player's deals in the future.

CODE ALREADY HITS SNAGS IN EASTERN TERRITORY

New York.—Administration of the NRA code is already striking trouble in the east. Although the code specifies that a forty-hour week shall be employed for operators Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt has already made an exception for Boston and allowed a 49-hour week.

In New York the battle is fierce. The unions insist on the 40-hour scale set by the code, but without any change in weekly pay over the previous rates. Regional Chairman James F. Hodgson yesterday heard the two sides and in the end dodged the issue by saying it was something for the Government to decide. He said:

"If there are certain clauses in the motion picture code which are loosely drawn they should be reopened and a wording given which will settle these factional disputes."

The situation is complicated by figures from the Local 306 which show that in the metropolitan district operators are working over 40 hours, some 35 hours, but in most cases are on a 36-hour basis.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

The Fifty-fifth Street Theatre pulled a fast one last week at the time they were running "He," a dubbed version of a French farce based on a story by deMaupassant. It seems that in order to attract the attention of the dear buying public they (the theatre) had added a subtitle which managed to come out in much larger type than the real title. This subtitle read: "The Virgin Man." Now someone walking along the street read it, and figuring it was either a challenge or a deliberate affront to American manhood complained to the censor board. The censor board sent a man around posthaste to demand that the management do something about it, or else—. The management chose to do something about it and manufactured a brilliant new subtitle which now reads: "King of the Virgins." Which puts an entirely different complexion on the whole matter.

Of course, Lillian Gish is about to go back to the stage in the Phillip Barry play that was originally written to star Maude Adams for her Broadway comeback. Miss Gish will play a nun in this. . . . Claudia Morgan's got herself a new play, too. She'll have a leading role in Frank Merlin's next production, "False Dreams, Farewell." And, by the way, Miss Morgan is quite the heart-breaker around town with at least one swain we know of practically dying for love of the lass.

Of course, there's only one trouble with a Dorothy Parker story. As soon as you've heard it, so has everyone else, so just for spite because all the papers printed the one we wrote yesterday, we'll print the pay-off to it. When the remark was repeated to the wife of one of our better known advertising execs she said, "You mean the gamut of emotions from a to a flat." . . . And incidentally Miss Hepburn is an excellent example of how too much fanfare can act as a terrific boomerang. In fact, the whole business of "The Lake" and Mr. Harris and Miss Hepburn is a story that's just too bad and we hope the same thing doesn't happen to Margaret Sullavan, who, we understand, has promised and signed to do a play for Harris.

Buddy Kusel (H. L. to you), the third writer in the Kusel family, has turned into a right busy shorts thinker-upper writing in conjunction with Art Jarrett Sr. They've done "The Life of the Party," starring Lillian Miles; "So You Won't Talk," with Frank Parker, Meyer Davis, Irene Taylor and others, about to go into production, and right after that Bert Lahr will star in something called "Honky Tonk, Jr." at the moment. Monroe Shaff is the producer of these, which are part of a program of fifteen he is making for Van Beuren-RKO release, with Leigh Jason directing.

Pertwee Here Jan. 20

Roland Pertwee, who was recently added to the Columbia writing staff, is scheduled to arrive here January 20.

PEGGY FEARS' NEW PLAY 'DIVINE MOMENT' FEEBLE

One Act Playlet Is Stretched Too Far

"A DIVINE MOMENT"

Peggy Fears presents "A Divine Moment," by Robert Hare Powell; staged by Rowland Leigh; settings by Dodd Ackerman; at the Vanderbilt Theatre. With Peggy Fears, Tom Douglas, Charlotte Granville, Royal Stout, William Ingersoll, Dulce Fox, Roy Gordon, Allen Kearns.

New York.—From what happened on the stage of the Vanderbilt Theatre, it is impossible to judge Miss Fears as an actress or Mr. Leigh as a director, but one can take exception to Miss Fears' right to call herself a producer. For the first talent of a producer must be the ability to recognize a play, and definitely even with a great stretch of the imagination "A Divine Moment" doesn't for one second come under that classification. As a one act playlet one might have dismissed it as feeble A. A. Milne complex and one could have felt how relieved the author must have been to have gotten rid of it so easily. Three acts of such feebleness just make one wonder about Miss Fears and Mr. Leigh.

The whole thing takes place in Newport with the scenes divided between an aged aristocratic spinster's bedroom and a very lovely garden. The spinster comes from old sea-faring stock, thinks everything modern is vulgar and is trying to persuade her grandnephew to marry a gal who will fill the old house with the patter of baby feet and keep the lamps full of whale oil. Well, the nephew finds the gal in the garden and brings her up to meet Aunty, and Aunty is moved to give the couple her blessing when she finds that not only can the gal indulge in as much whimsy as Aunty can, but she comes of the old, old stock that pronounces Rockefeller correctly, whereas it would seem that all nouveaux riches go nice Nellie on it and say Rockefellow. Unfortunately the gal happens to be married, but fortunately for Aunty Aunty passes away before the gal passes out of the boy's life forever to go back to the husband who doesn't quite understand her but makes enough money to keep her in whims and fancies all the rest of her life.

It isn't as though the play were a one girl show for Peggy. Peggy doesn't appear until the second act and goes out oh, long, long before the third act ends. Not only that, but her lines are so few and meagre that they would try the poise and facility of a far more experienced actress. Miss Fears is not an experienced actress, but she is lovely to look at, has a beautiful voice and one can only hope she'll be persuaded to go into pictures because she seems to be a great picture bet. Tom Douglas is the only one who manages to rise above his lines and turn in an attractive performance. The rest of the cast just about make the standard set by the play. Mr. Leigh should have written a play and allowed someone else to direct it. And as was mentioned before, the garden set of Mr. Ackerman's design is very lovely indeed.

Selling Whole Show

Paris.—A Herald news item from Moscow states in regard to a picture theatre, "Spectators will see, hear, smell, feel and taste the performance."

Universal Plans Arty Build-up for 'Beloved'

Planning an exploitation build-up on the West Coast similar to that given "Be Mine Tonight," which ran for over 20 weeks in one house locally, Universal has booked the B. F. Zeidman musical, "Beloved," into the Filmarte for an indefinite run starting around February 1. Picture features John Boles and Gloria Stuart.

Studio ran "Be Mine Tonight" in art theatres throughout the country piling up long runs before its general release. Plan is to handle "Beloved" in the same manner—at least on the West Coast.

Colleen Moore Finishes In Radio's 'Success Story'

Finishing last night in "Success Story" at Radio, Colleen Moore's next spot will be as guest star Monday on the Shell hour, which is broadcast from San Francisco. Radio still has an option on her services for another production.

Young With Colman

Loretta Young was definitely set yesterday for the lead opposite Ronald Colman in his first picture for Twentieth Century, "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back." Roy Del Ruth will direct this picture as his first on his term contract.

Moore Confers at Col.

Grace Moore popped into town today from Palm Springs to confer with Columbia officials on her forthcoming picture, "Don't Fall in Love," which is set to go in two weeks.

Minna Wallis Back Home

Minna Wallis of Collier and Wallis agency, arrived here last night from New York on the Chief. Her partner, Ruth Collier, is still in England on a search for material and talent.

Quarberg Remains at 'U'

Handing in his script on "Where's Brown?" an original newspaper story which will star Edmund Lowe, Lincoln Quarberg stays on at Universal to write an untitled screen play.

Kent Breaks Into Criterion

Willis Kent's independent picture, "Road to Ruin," breaks through for a first run at the Criterion, where it opens Friday. Glen Boles and Helen Foster in top spots.

Walt Strenge Heads Cameramen's Union

New York.—Walter Strenge was yesterday elected president of Camera Local 644 covering the New York territory, and O. V. Johnson, re-elected as business manager.

Strenge, scion of an old cinematic family, was on the Pathe staff when that organization produced in the East and also went to France for that company.

Frank Smith Story Gets Under Way at Paramount

Douglas MacLean today places "Melody in Spring" into work at Paramount under the direction of Norman McLeod.

Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland rate top billing. Story is by Frank Leon Smith, Benn W. Levy and Jane Storm working out the screen version. Henry Sharp is handling the cameras.

Para. Signs Pete Arno

Peter Arno was signed by Paramount yesterday to do the art direction and also aid in production ideas for the next Bing Crosby picture, "We're Not Dressing," which Norman Taurog will direct. Barney Glazer is the producer.

'Reunion in Vienna' Okayed in Austria

Vienna—MGM got into an unpleasant mess here with the Austrian government over "Reunion In Vienna" and for a time it looked pretty bad, an official ban being threatened on all of the company's product. Officials protested the picture, claiming that it ridiculed the Austrians by making them seem frivolous drunkards.

However, company's local offices went to the bat, dished out a brand of diplomacy which the Austrians understand and succeeded in smoothing things over by promising to cut the picture so as to make it agreeable.

Chesterfield Aiming High On 'Understanding Heart'

Emma Dunn and Glen Boles were signed yesterday by Maury Cohen for Chesterfield's next production, "Understanding Heart," which Richard Thorpe places into work at the end of the week at Universal.

Charles Grapewin and Billy Bakewell are also set. The Boles and Grapewin deals went through the Beyer-MacArthur office.

Grace Moore Col. Pic To Be 'Don't Fall in Love'

Columbia has signed Edward North and James Gow to write the screen play of "Don't Fall in Love," which will be Grace Moore's first picture for the studio on her new contract. Leonard Praskins adapted from a play by Charles Beahan and Dorothy Speare.

LET THE CRITICS DO THE TALKING ABOUT

"GOING HOLLYWOOD"

Two big musicals are now about the town. The better of them is "Going Hollywood," with Marion Davies and Bing Crosby. Its moments are musical. —The New Yorker.

Catchy melodies are contributed by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed.—New York Daily Mirror.

The songs that Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed provide have a tinkle and a lilt. From the competent routine sentiments of "Our Big Love Scene" and the pleasing little pastoral lyric "We'll Make Love When It Rains," they range down to that brooding song which Mr. Crosby, loaded with whiskey and sorrow, sings across a Mexican bar while the glamorous Miss Davies is far away.—New York Times.

There must be laurels, too, for Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. No need to tell you about "After Sundown," "Cinderella's Feller" and the other song hits they have given, for they're hits already.—New York American.

The music is catchy. Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, who wrote "Wedding of the Painted Dolls," have collaborated on the musical numbers, which include "Our Big Love Scene," "Going Hollywood," "We'll Make Hay While the Sun Shines," "Temptation," "Cinderella's Feller," and "After Sundown," any one or all of which may be hits.—New York Daily News.

Frankly, I had the pleasantest possible time at "Going Hollywood," which I recommend to you as a tuneful, witty, gay and tasteful entertainment.—New York World-Telegram.

"Going Hollywood" is filled with contagious songs. If you aren't already whistling or humming the hit melodies of the show, by the time you leave the theatre you'll be whistling or humming "We'll Make Hay While the Sun Shines," "Our Big Love Scene," "Cinderella's Feller," "Going Hollywood," "After Sundown" and "Temptation."

Los Angeles and NY Name Code Choices

New York.—Nominations for the local Clearance and Grievance boards throughout the country are coming in rapidly to John Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority.

Among the territories already listed in public are New York and Los Angeles. New York nominees are Leo Brecher, Rudolph Sanders, Leo Justin, Jack Hadden, Maurice Brown, Hyman Rachmil, Fred Small, L. F. Blumenthal, Harry Shiffman, Harry Brandt, L. S. Bolignino, Joe Seider and A. H. Schwartz.

The Com-Pix Company, in conjunction with Joe Bonomo of the Institute of Physical Culture, has invented a process by means of which a photograph of any person may be printed in composite form with any picture of that person's favorite movie star for a modest fee.

The inventors approached the Hays office for its indorsement but the latter, after considering what far-reaching effects these stills might have on American home life, yesterday refused the company its okay and warned all studios of this ambitious scheme.

Wellman Swings To Radio For One

William Wellman swung over to Radio on a one picture loanout deal from Twentieth Century yesterday. He is reading the Salisbury Field yarn "Family Man," which Myles Connolly is supervising, and will direct that picture if he likes the story.

Wellman was over on the MGM lot on a loanout deal to direct "Streets of New York," and the studio agreed to let him go to Radio, because their script would not be ready for another two or three weeks, thereby saving some salary overhead on the picture.

Combo Shows Chi Hit

Chicago.—Apparently they want combination shows here because of all the Loop houses the only ones doing consistent week in and week out business are the Palace and the State Lake with that type of offering. The selling of pictures as pictures is becoming more and more tough.

Seek Lead for 'U' Serial

Universal is negotiating with Paramount for the loan of Judith Allen for the feminine lead in the serial "Vanishing Shadows," Lewis Friedlander directing it under Henry MacRae. Deal expected closed today.

O'Brien Stops in N. O.

New Orleans.—George O'Brien was a stop-over visitor here yesterday on his way back to Hollywood. The boy got a great local reception from the autograph hounds.

Columbia Musical Chosen To Meet Stiff Competition

New York.—Columbia's musical picture is going to get a real break in New York—it has been set in for the Rialto to open January 17. That's going to be a tough week on New York competition, as Warners have set one of their best, "Fashions of 1934" to open on January 17 at the Hollywood.

Healy Spotted As Lead In MGM Salvage Job

Ted Healy has been set for a top spot in "Louisiana Lou" at MGM, which has been taken off the shelf and assigned to Lucian Hubbard to produce. Picture is the salvage of "Bride of the Bayou," for which the studio sent a company to Louisiana to photograph background material.

Wampas to Choose Officers for Year

George H. Thomas, chairman of the Wampas nominating committee, has submitted to the membership of that body the following names from which to choose the 1934 officers:

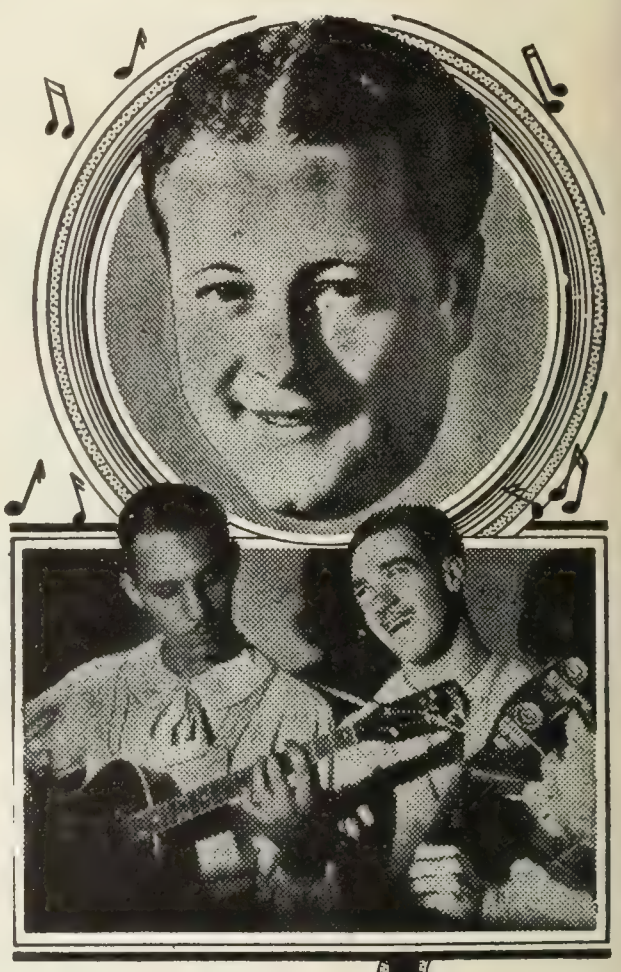
Board of directors, Harry Brand, Dave Epstein, Dick Hunt, Barrett Kiesling, Norman Manning, Herbert Moulton, Thornton Sargeant, Maxwell Shane, Joseph M. Sherman, Paul Snell, Ed Thomas, Hubert Voight.



Here Are New Pictures Now Set For Broadway

New York.—New pictures of the week include "Man of Two Worlds" at Music Hall; "Easy To Love," Strand; "Sons of the Desert," Rialto, on Thursday. Friday, "Eight Girls in a Boat," Paramount; "Fugitive Lovers," Capitol; "I Was A Spy," Roxy. Monday, "Myrt and Marge," Mayfair.

Jarrett Hot For Lead at MGM With Crawford

Clarence Brown has done more work testing than he will probably have to do shooting the picture of "Sadie McKee" for MGM. Yesterday Brown had both Arthur Jarrett and Esther Ralston before the cameras. It looks as though Jarrett may get the male lead opposite Joan Crawford.

COHEN OKAY FOR ZUKOR

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WALTER WINCHELL can mention his family, Eddie Cantor can gag about his. So perhaps we will be forgiven for yielding to a personal note that interested us very much last night.

Our youngster of high school age was doing the talking. Unfortunately for him, he has probably heard enough picture talk since he was able to hear, to be inoculated with the germs. So his words blend the pseudo-wise picture attitude with the straight frankness of youth.

And he said:

"The only thing the fellows talk about at recess periods in school now is the picture they saw the night before. Do those big producers realize how much business can be made or killed by this conversation?

"The big topic right now is 'The Invisible Man.' Instead of football, basketball, or anything else, the kids are all telling each other how those tricks were done.

"And for every two fellows in a crowd of ten who have seen the picture, there are eight who have their minds made up to see it when they get home that night."

It's cheating in a way to let the youngster write this whole Tradeview, but we'll just let him give one more opinion, and we'll change the subject.

We asked him for the opinion of his "word of mouth advertising group" on a number of pictures. And "Prizefighter and the Lady" came up. We thought we had him floored. Here was one for the kids. What did he hear?

"Sure, daddy, it was a fine show. But they're all kidding about how a guy could lose a fight for eight rounds and then get a draw in two rounds because his girl smiled at him. It's the joke of the school."

Try and tie that. And hide your head in a bushel basket the next time you think you're making pictures for people with LESS intelligence than you have.

It can't be done—if you take 'em from the age of seven to seventy.

And having let the youngster run over the allotted space, we're going to finish on our own. The title "The Invisible Man" reminded us of something.

Chase Offers Help In GTE Rebuilding

Wilmington, Del.—The reorganization plan of General Theatres Equipment will come up for a hearing here February 13. One of the first steps will be the ratification of the reduction of the debt of GTE to the Chase bank of $15,000,000.

The bank has agreed to participate in the reorganization provided the bondholders' protective committee turns over to the reorganized company all claims and to give the reorganized company an option to purchase 325,000 shares of Fox A stock at $15 a share and Chase to lend the new company enough working capital to enable it to continue business.

Dudley Murphy To Meg Next Shearer

Dudley Murphy is slated to direct Norma Shearer in "The Green Hat" on his one-picture deal with Irving Thalberg at MGM.

He is discussing the story treatment with Zoe Akins, who is writing the script. This story will likely be Miss Shearer's next production.

Cornell Role for Shearer

Irving Thalberg has secured "Barretts of Wimpole Street," the play about Robert Browning and his wife, from Cosmopolitan and will use it for a Norma Shearer vehicle. Play was originally purchased for Marion Davies. Katherine Cornell, who has it in her repertoire, was sought for the lead at the time Cosmopolitan Productions bought the piece.

Party for Fox Stars

New York.—The Fox Company was host yesterday at a cocktail party at the Waldorf to allow the press to meet the newest importations, Erik Charrell, Charles Boyer and Marcel Vallee.

Para. Head Talks Cold Turkey In Exclusive Interview Given Reporter On Studio Situation

By W. R. WILKERSON

New York.—"You fellows who have been demanding Manny Cohen's scalp—name me a better man, and I will talk to you!"—that was the highlight of an interview with Adolph Zukor shortly before Mr. Zukor boarded the Twentieth Century on the first lap of his journey to Hollywood. It was a new Adolph Zukor—or rather the old Adolph Zukor of the boom days—whom the writer met. He looks well, the lines of worry that the depression years put on his face are lifting, and he is obviously—very obviously—happy.

And the grand old veteran is ready to roll up his sleeves and go to the wars to tell what he thinks of Manny Cohen, and the Cohen regime at the studio. It was a pleasure to see the old Adolph Zukor again, and it was big news to hear him talk plain, cold turkey, mincing no words on the Paramount situation.

After giving the keynote—"Find

Para. Digging Deep For Laughton Yarn

Taking a tip from Alexander Korda's "Henry the Eighth," Paramount has its nose to the ground in an effort to discover a scent that will guide them to a similar type of period production as a starring vehicle for Charles Laughton.

Wellman Picks 'Stingaree'

William Wellman has selected "Stingaree," out of the several stories he read, as the picture he will direct for Radio on his one-picture deal. The selection was made yesterday.

Warner Pays $35,000 For 'The Dark Tower'

New York.—Jack Warner grabbed one of the play prizes of the season while here, closing before his departure for the coast for "The Dark Tower," Sam Harris hit.

The reported price for the play is $35,000. It is understood that Warren William will play the lead on the screen.

Stevens Burns Over 'U' Serial Assignment

Onslow Stevens goes into top spot in "The Vanishing Shadow," Universal's next serial. Other members of the cast will be Ada Ince, Walter Miller and Richard Kramer.

Stevens, who has recently worked in pictures which he considers of a higher quality, is plenty burned over this assignment.

Postpone Tri-Ergon Suit

New York.—Upon request of Attorney David A. Podel, counsel for William Fox, trial of the infringement suit by the American Tri-Ergon Corporation against various exhibitors has been postponed until January 25.

Batcheller Back in Town

George R. Batcheller arrived in Hollywood yesterday after a three weeks' swing across the country visiting exchanges in which his company, Chesterfield Pictures, has an interest.

Commandini in Hospital

Adele Commandini, who has been writing "Jane Eyre" at Monogram, is still in the Wilshire hospital as a result of an automobile accident Sunday night.

Moscowitz on Cruise

New York.—C. C. Moskowitz of MGM has sailed on a West Indies cruise.

CIRCUITS AGREE TO BAN ON THEATRE PRIZE CONTESTS

New York.—The ban is definitely on contests or other stunts in motion picture theatres involving giveaways or premiums. The decision was reached yesterday at a meeting of the Hays censorship committee on advertising and publicity.

Warner representatives at the meeting, headed by Joseph Bernhardt, opposed the ban as taking away a fundamental of showmanship, but expressed willingness to abide by the rule in order to live up to the letter and spirit of the NRA code.

Col. Schiller of Loew's theatres was the chief advocate of the ban, this despite the fact that MGM is in the midst of one of its most successful contest campaigns on "Fugitive Lovers" opening Friday at the Capitol.

IATSE WIN A VICTORY AFTER TWO DAYS OF BALLOTING

Other Groups Smile As New War Looms

At two o'clock this morning the Sound Men's Union was declared the winner of the plebicite held to determine the preference of sound men for a representative of their own choosing.

The result was: Local No. 695, 448 votes; American Society of Cinematographers, 93; IBEW, Local No. 40, 9. There were two blanks and 2 invalid.

The average membership of the Sound Men's local before the strike was 600. The election accounted for 555, which was by the sound men looked upon as a remarkable example of loyalty by its membership.

"The men want the IATSE to represent them," said Harold V. Smith, business manager of that union, "and I intend to do just that. If any producer thinks otherwise after this election I shall insist that the Department of Justice force him to recognize us in accordance with the National Recovery Act."

H. P. Brigaertz, vice president of the IBEW, decided the day's events were not important enough to keep him on the firing line. Before leaving his office for the day he said: "Let them vote their heads off, on this or any other question. I have a contract with the producers, recognized by the National Labor Board, which gives my union sole jurisdiction over the sound men, and that's that. The IATSE won the election? So what?"

C. S. Pratt, chairman of the group which marked their ballots A.S.C. in the hope a way might be found in which the sound men may be taken into this organization, claimed some sort of moral victory.

"Whatever the final count may be we have proved that there is a large group which is dissatisfied with all unions, and sooner or later we shall follow the A.S.C.'s example and have our own organization. The unions' only weapon is the strike and look where that got us."

Pat Casey, the producers' representative, said nothing at all. He seemed perfectly happy to let the boys fight among themselves to their hearts' content, and if none gets off with a whole hide, well, that will be just too bad.

In other words the IATSE won the election and now the war is on in earnest.

Lombardo Run Extended

Guy Lombardo and his orchestra were brought out here by the Ambassador on a four weeks' contract and clicked so well that the hotel signed the band for another eight weeks. The orchestra is now scheduled to remain there until April 1.

Last Call!

The way the ticket sale jumped yesterday as a result of the Strong Arm Squad's work, it looks as though a last call will have to be sent out to members of the Screen Actors' Guild, regarding the ball on Saturday evening. Executive Secretary Kenneth Thompson is trying to hold out the remaining tickets for "folks who belong."

Cohn Bows Out of Job As Wampas Prexy

Sam W. B. Cohn, Roach publicity head, yesterday declined the nomination to the presidency of the Wampas because of the pressure of studio work. Cohn and Phil Gersdorf were nominated to succeed George Landy, whose term ends in March. The organization's constitution requires nominations for office be made at the first meeting in January with the winners taking office in March.

Baer Personals Extended

New York.—Loew's has taken another three weeks' option on Max Baer and will push the champ around their circuit for that number of weeks' personals in addition to his present deal.

Incidentally, Jack Dempsey has arrived here to set the details of the forthcoming match between Baer and Primo Carnera.

Erin Moore Due Today

Erin O'Brien-Moore is due to arrive in Hollywood today for another sally at pictures under the Leo Morrison wing. Player, who created considerable commer* in recent Broadway plays, was here last year under MGM contract, but was lost. This time she is determined to try again as a free lancer.

Two More Wind Up Wood's MGM Deal

MGM has set Sam Wood to direct two pictures in a row, which will terminate the director's contract with that studio.

Wood will direct "100 Percent Pure," an original story by Anita Loos and John Emerson, as his next assignment, supervised by Bernie Hyman, after which he will direct "Forgotten Girl," the Wilson Collison story, which Harry Rapf is supervising.

'Scotland Yard' in Trouble

Laurence Blochman has been assigned to write a new screen play for "American Scotland Yard," which Edmund Grainger is producing for Universal. Treatments by other writers have faied to click to date.

Photography, Music Highlight the Film

"LEGONG"
(Bennett Pictures Corp.)
Story Told by....Henry de la Falaise and Gaston Glass
Photographed by....William H. Greene
Titled by.....Hampton Del Ruth
Edited by.....Edward Schroeder
Music supervised by.....Abe Meyer and S. K. Wineland
Cast: All Native.

Very simple and charming and beautiful is "Legong," the picture Henry de la Falaise made on the Isle of Bali in Technicolor.

First honors go to de la Falaise for having the courage to make the film in the first place and for not letting it go Hollywood; second honors to William Howard Greene, whose camera has an artist's eye; third honors to Abe Meyer and S. K. Wineland for the interpretive musical accompaniment, and fourth honors to the all-native cast which lived the simple story so vividly.

"Legong" is as childlike as the natives who are seen in it. It is unassuming, quietly dramatic, and full of a primitive charm. Photographed in color, the picture is a jewel—not very large, but rare and valuable.

It is the story of a temple dancing girl, Poutou, who falls in love with a musician, Nyong. But the Balinese believe that when a girl shows love which is not reciprocated disgrace and shame will fall upon her, and the frown of the gods will bring evil to her. So when Nyong openly shows his preference for Saplak, Poutou's sister, Poutou appeases the anger of the gods by committing suicide.

That is all the story—but the rituals, the dances, the great, spectacular cremation ceremony at the end; the naive, childlike acting of the native cast; the gorgeous photography; the music—all these form a colorful and charming setting for the simple little tale.

Well, you know your own box office, Mr. Exhibitor. This picture is as unpredictable as a sunset, but just as beautiful. If your audiences like sunsets, give 'em "Legong." If they don't go for it, the picture is still an artistic success.

Radio Tags Designer

Lanvin, internationally known fashion designer, has been signed by Radio on a three-year optional contract. He was brought out here by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

Beck Hits Road for 20th

New York.—Meyer Beck, of United Artists, is going out as advance man ahead of the big Socony-Twentieth Century caravan. Hits the road Monday.

Col. Likes 'Hell Cat'

Columbia likes the sound of the title "The Hell Cat" and has commissioned Arthur Phillips to write a story to fit. Nothing but the title and the writer has been set to date.

Woods on the Spot

There won't be any argument about the honesty of the count on January 15 when writers vote for their nominations for the code committees. Frank Woods yesterday consented to act as teller at the election. That settles it.

Boyle's 'Sweden' Pic Well Worth While

"SWEDEN"
John W. Boyle presents "Sweden, Land of the Vikings," in natural color with narrative and music.

New York.—This is a full length feature travelogue which, once it gets itself off the boat and into Sweden, provides one of the most interesting and at the same time educational hours that anyone could wish to see.

Done entirely in color, it captures the charm of far places as no mere recording in black and white could possibly do. And the color work in this picture is far superior and easier on the eyes than anything that has yet come along in that medium.

Mr. Boyle gives the complete low-down on the land of Sweden and its people. He carefully remembers and pays homage to its fine history and then goes on to take you right into the lives of the people and the result is so good that a great feeling of nostalgia overtakes the onlooker and the impulse is to rush right down to your favorite travel bureau and make reservations for the first outgoing Swedish ship. Not only that, but Mr. Boyle found no end of beauty in the country that has given us Garbo. In fact, the natural blondes of that land make the Goldwyn Girls look pallid by comparison. So if you have an audience that goes for travel pictures even the least little bit, you can feature this one on your program and give the travel lovers a break. And, incidentally, give your box office a break, too, because, strangely enough, "Sweden" is standing them up right at the Fifty-ninth Street Theatre.

Thew Set for Next MGM

Harvey Thew has been assigned to script "The Darling of the Delmonico's," a new title for "Duchess of Delmonico's," in collaboration with Edgar Allan Woolf at MGM. Thew's last was the script of "Operator 13," on which Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson are now working. Jeanette MacDonald is slated for the picture.

Line Up Vallee's List

With Chic Sale signed yesterday through Leo Morrison for his second broadcast, the line-up on the Fleischmann hour tonight includes Lou Holtz, Roger Pryor and Stanley Fields. Rudy Vallee tops.

MGM Seeks English Play

MGM is negotiating for the purchase of "The Old Folks at Home," a play by H. M. Harwood, co-author of "Cynara." "The Old Folks at Home" is now running in London.

Goldwyn Busy Man In N.Y. Just Now

New York.—Sam Goldwyn unfolded further news about his planned visit to Moscow for the premiere of "Nana" on his arrival here.

Goldwyn admitted that he had both a play and a writer in mind whom he hoped to sign while in the Russian capital. Just now he has also set himself in the spot for great publicity by announcing that he is seeking "the most beautiful girl in New York" for the next Cantor picture.

Incidentally, Goldwyn says the Cantor picture, while having a more serious part for the comedian than his past screen efforts, will in spite of all be "colossal."

Becky Gardner Again On Radio's 'Stingaree' Yarn

Becky Gardner was signed yesterday by Radio on a one-picture assignment and for the third time was assigned to write the screen play of "Stingaree."

Radio has again pulled this story off the shelf and Irene Dunne is slated to do this as her next picture.

Novis Up For Roach Lead

Failing to get Ramon Novarro for the romantic lead in "Babes in Toyland," Hal Roach is now negotiating with Donald Novis for the spot. Studio is also testing winners of the national Atwater Kent auditions for featured spots in the screen version of the Victor Herbert operetta.

Retakes for 'Bolero'

With retakes needed on the George Raft-Carole Lombard picture "Bolero" and Wesley Ruggles, who directed the picture, in New York, Paramount has assigned Mitchell Leisen to take over the direction of the retakes.

Roy Neill Assigned

Columbia has assigned Roy Williams to direct "Whirlpool," an original screen play by Ethel Hill and starring Jack Holt.

Picture is scheduled for production next week.

Morgan Finishes 'Wench'

Ainsworth Morgan has completed the screen play "Tudor Wench," which Radio has set for Katharine Hepburn's next, and is now working on an original as yet untitled for Francis Lederer.

Reade Adds To Chain

New York.—Walter Reade, who operates in New Jersey and New York City, has added the Englewood Theatre, Englewood, to his holdings.

New N.Y. Distributor

New York.—J. D. Trop and Randolph Crossley have organized the Pinnacle Productions, with plans to distribute features and shorts.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

A friend of ours went down to Florida for a week or two of warmth and sunshine and while down there he spent quite some time in the company of a big film exec, that is until he mentioned the fact one day that a banker friend of his was going out to Hollywood to produce pictures. The film exec was immediately interested in the banker's qualifications for such a move and asked whether the banker had ever had any picture experience. It seems that the banker had none. The exec then started puffing and snorting about how did the banker expect to make pictures if he knew nothing about the industry, etc., etc., and finally came out w.th, "Why i've been in this business for thirty years and still don't know pictures." Whereupon our friend said, "There's an obvious answer to that remark." And the exec, calling up every ounce of dignity, replied, "My boy, you're a very fresh young man." And stalked away, thus breaking up the beginning of a beautiful friendship.

The Wednesday Luncheon Club that meets on Fridays went back to its old haunts for its weekly meeting—the place being again made possible by the repeal of prohibition. George Bye had invited quite a number of people to welcome back the intrepid hunter, Frank Buck, and then didn't show up himself claiming he was snowbound in his Connecticut hideout. Anyway Buck is back—and with a whole new string of stories including his infected leg from a tussle, (scratch to you) with a honey bear and the one about the python that wrapped itself around him and which he had to shoot off'n his arm. He also got into close quarters with a man-eating tiger. We really love the Buck yarns, but we always have the feeling that one of these days he'll have to end one of them with the line, "And do you know what happened? We were all killed!"

Crosby Gaige has finally gone into production with "A Hat, Coat and Glove." Which play has aroused considerable interest along with plenty of casting difficulties. A. E. Matthews and Nedda Harrigan head the cast and Millicent Green, Lester Vail, Homer Mason, Helen Wynn, Romaine Callendar, Joseph Spurin-Calleia, Clare Woodbury, Oscar Berlin and George Allison are in support. Gaige himself is directing and one of our favorite geniuses, Aline Bernstein, is doing the sets. . . . Colin Clive seems to have found the brightness in this country in the very attractive Dorothy Lee, whose beauty has smiled at you from lotsa ads and who is understudying Leona Maricle in "Dark Tower."

Collison's Assignment

Wilson Collison has been assigned to write the screen play of "Mademoiselle" for MGM. Alice Brady and Frank Morgan will have the top spots.

Fox Tempts Comedy Team

As a resut of their work in "Scandals," the comedy team of Mitchell and Durant are being offered a long term deal at Fox.

Up-to-the-Minute Casting News

C. Aubrey Smith set for "Elizabeth and Mary," Universal. Small-Landau represent the player.

George Meeker into "Melody in Spring," Paramount. Set by Beyer-MacArthur.

Leonard Carey signed through Dolge and Corder for "Hit Me Again," Warners.

Harvey Clarke for "Countess of Monte Cristo," Universal, set by Lichtig and Englander.

Berton Churchill signed for "Men in White," MGM. Al Kingston negotiated.

Robert Grieg signed for "Wonder Bar," Warners. Deal set by Freddie Fralick.

Lilian Miles was tested yesterday by Universal for a featured spot in a Stanley Bergerman production.

Fred Kohler was signed yesterday by Ken Maynard for the second lead in "Honor of the West," which Alan James directs. Mitchell Gertz of the Al Kingston agency set the deal.

Walter Miller by Henry MacRae for heavy in the Universal serial, "Vanishing Shadows." Howard Seiter office set the deal.

John Davidson for a featured spot in "Murder in Trinidad," which Seton I. Miller is scripting for the Sol Wurtzel unit at Fox.

Oscar Apfel into Edwin Carewe's "Are We Civilized?"

Asther and Gibson Set In Radio's Dix Picture

Nils Asther and Wynne Gibson have been set by Radio for featured roles in the next Richard Dix picture, "The Crime Doctor."

John Robertson has been definitely set to direct this picture and production is scheduled to start next week.

Warren-Dubin Writing Mills Bros. Screen Song

Harry Warren and Al Dubin are writing the songs Mills brothers will sing in "Hot Air," Warners' radio story now in the works.

Healy Doing Two-Reeler

Ted Healy and his Stooges will make another two reeler for MGM titled "An Employment Agency for Stooges." The comedy sketch was written by Herman Timberg. The picture will go into production next week under the supervision of Jack Cummings.

Del Ruth Finishes Friday

Roy Del Ruth is scheduled to finish "Upperworld" on Friday, a couple of days ahead of schedule. The director will then take up his plans for a European vacation and his offer from Darryl Zanuck.

Universal Changes Title

New York.—"The Crosby Murder Case" is the new title of Universal's production "Special Investigator."

Pitts, Cold to Script, Bows Out on Vallee

Owing to differences between Zasu Pitts and Hal Kuhl, the J. Walter Thompson representative for the Fleischmann radio hour, the deal which had been set for Miss Pitts on tonight's program was canceled yesterday.

Player is claimed to have evinced coolness towards the material which George Faulkner and Grant Garrett, radio writing aces, conceived for her. When she asked to have her managers approve it, Kuhl called the booking quits rather than argue over it. Also canceled out through no fault of hers is Virginia Sale, whose deal was contingent upon Miss Pitts' appearance.

Girl Lead Delaying Col.'s 'Precious Thing'

Columbia's "Most Precious Thing in Life" is all set to go but production is being held up due to girl trouble. Director Lambert Hillyer and Supervisor Bobby North are searching frantically for the right femme lead but so far have not found one who suits the role.

Exhibs Dine Yamins

New York.—A testimonial dinner was tendered to Nathan Yamins, New England exhibitor leader and member of the Code Authority, by the Independent Exhibitors of New England January 9 at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston. Max L. Levenson, vice president, was in charge of the arrangement committee.

'Scandals' Hit in Philly

Philadelphia.—"Roman Scandals" established a new house record at the Aldine Theatre in Philadelphia. In its second week the receipts including a New Year midnight show far surpassed the money taken in on any other production. It will probably have a four weeks' run at this theatre.

'Roberta' in Big Money

New York.—"Roberta," the Max Gordon operetta, is selling out these nights and has climbed into the list of the five biggest hits in town, and what a fine musical picture and fashion film it will make.

'Sadie' Off Without Man

Clarence Brown will put the next Joan Crawford picture, "Sadie McKee," into production this Friday minus the leading man. Larry Weingarten is supervising this production for MGM.

Mancall Joins Majestic

New York.—E. H. Goldstein, vice president of Majestic Pictures, announces that Boone Mancall has been appointed advertising and publicity manager.

Coming and Going

"What we want here," says Merian C. Cooper, just back from the east, "is nothing but clean pictures, such as 'Little Women.'"

Radio yesterday registered the title "On the Make" with the Hays office.

Fox and Radio Huddle Over Foster and Cabot

Fox and Radio are in a huddle over a deal for an exchange of actors. Fox wants Bruce Cabot for the lead opposite Sally Eilers in "Three on a Honeymoon" and Radio wants Norman Foster in exchange for the lead in "Finishing School" opposite Frances Dee.

The deal for the exchange of these two players is expected to be closed this week.

Ohio Exhibs Elect

Cincinnati.—The Ohio Valley Independent Exhibitors League of Cincinnati elected the following officers: Willis Vance, president; Frank Huss Jr., vice president; Harold Bernstein, secretary; Harold O. Krent, treasurer. Directors are Harold Bernstein, Frank Huss Jr., Henry Levy, Leo Stephany, William Gerves, Willis Vance, Charles Fine, Sam Turk, H. O. Krent. Offices are at 1635 Central Parkway.

Union Watches Code

New York.—The National Theatrical Federated Union, a labor group of stage hands, operators, musicians, etc., in upper New York State, has engaged Attorney Louis Grilihaus to represent them at the code hearings here.

'Cellini' Goes Back To 'Firebrand' Title

Darryl Zanuck has changed the title of the Fredric March-Constance Bennett co-starring vehicle from "Affairs of Cellini" back to "The Firebrand," which is the title of the stage play from which it is adapted.

Twentieth Century yesterday signed Frances Dee and Frank Morgan for featured roles in this picture, the latter to portray the same role that he played on the stage in the play. Bess Meredyth is scripting the yarn and Gregory LaCava will direct.

Ada Ince for 'U' Serial

Unable to get Judith Allen on a loan from Paramount, Universal signed Ada Ince for the lead in its forthcoming serial "Vanishing Shadows." Lewis Friedlander will direct the picture under the supervision of Henry MacRae. Jerry Mayer's office handled the deal.

Wheeler-Woolsey Hit

Trenton.—Wheeler and Woolsey and Dorothy Lee opened at a theatre here in their personal appearance tour and broke all house records of that theatre to date. They will open at the Earl Theatre in Washington next week.

Brown Seeks Locations

Clarence Brown flew up to San Francisco yesterday to look for locations for his next picture for MGM, "Sadie McKee," the Joan Crawford starring vehicle.

'FIND ME A BETTER MAN' SAYS ZUKOR OF COHEN

Coming Here To Help All He Can

"Cohen has done a fine, workmanlike job for Paramount, and neither we ourselves nor any one else can name me a man who would have done as well. Cohen knows where he is going every minute of the day; he is turning out product at a reasonable cost, delivering it on schedule, and doing all that for an organization that was bankrupt a few months ago.

"His product is on a par with the best, and better than the majority—if you don't believe so, ask the exhibitors who are playing the pictures.

"He has done all this despite a bankrupt condition, and in the face of a situation at the studio with high strung people who were ready and willing to poke fun and sarcasm at all our efforts to get out of the hole.

"BUT WE HAVE GOTTEN OUT OF IT—and Cohen played as big a part as any other individual in this effort.

"Certainly Manny Cohen has his drawbacks. Who of us hasn't? There are probably a lot of things that he does not know about production—but he will eventually know those things just as he now knows how to turn out a product that is averagely good, at the right price. A product that is doing sufficient business for us to meet all our obligations, pay all our running expenses, and put a substantial profit for the year in the Paramount account."

Mr. Zukor went on with a statement which indicated that he realized Cohen, for some reason or other, has missed in handling personnel to the point where the studio forces may seem disorganized, but he countered this thought with the words: "Supposing we get a man who can handle the personnel, and he lets costs mount, and quality slip?—wouldn't we be better off to let Manny Cohen work his own way out of the personnel problem and build up the enthusiasm on the lot that you and I would like to see at any studio?"

About this time the quiet-spoken, never-excited picture veteran worked up to his climax. He said:

"I have been in this business for a quarter of a century, and I will tell you now that I have never had a man come through for me and my organization as Manny Cohen has.

"When you were here six months ago and we talked frankly as we are talking now, you asked me questions that I could not answer. I had to say to you that I 'thought' this and that, or 'thought' so-and-so.

"But now I can tell you definitely that Paramount is out of its hole, that Paramount will regain its spot in this business, and that Paramount will hold that spot."

The time for the train was not very far away, which is why he probably closed with this thought:

"I am going to Hollywood to do anything and everything that I can to help Cohen. I have not been there since August. But I am not going there to make trouble. I am going there to help in any way I can to find out how we can overcome any weaknesses that exist."

And just before he ran for the train he repeated the keynote of the whole interview:

"Cohen will do until a better man comes along. And name me a better man."

Writers Still Lifting

George Thomas said that the next time he goes to the Writers Club he'll wear a bathing suit. A year ago someone stole George's hat and last Tuesday night someone walked off with his overcoat. If things keep on going the way they are now, George will likely join a nudist colony.

MGM Speeding Up Beery-Cooper Yarns

MGM has started preparation on three Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper co-starring vehicles and will make an attempt to put out some more box office smashes similar to "The Champ."

The studio is preparing a story titled "O'Shaughnessy's Boy," which is scheduled to be Charles Reisner's next directorial job, one titled "Cabby," the Michael Simmons original, which is being adapted by the author and Lou Breslow, and an untitled story which John Mahin is scripting to be directed by Victor Fleming. The latter is a Hunt Stromberg production.

'Monte Cristo Countess' Finally Set on Cast

Replacing Roger Pryor with Paul Page for the juvenile lead and adding Carmel Myers to the cast yesterday, Universal puts "Countess of Monte Cristo" into production today. Page, who has been out of pictures since an automobile smash-up three years ago, was set by the Artigue agency. Karl Freund directs from the Karen de Wolf screen play with Fay Wray and Paul Lukas in the leads.

Marjorie Ford Has Hopes

Starting the ball rolling with Irving Thalberg for a possible term deal for the player, Jack Gardner is bringing Marjorie Ford out from New York in order to put her through the paces for the MGM producer.

Player appeared in "Little Jesse James" and "Shady Lady." She arrives Saturday.

Waxman Exploits Film

New York.—A. P. Waxman will handle publicity, exploitation and advertising on Messmore and Damon's "World a Million Years Ago," which was one of the attractions at the World's Fair. Picture opens at the Warner Theatre here January 18.

Elissa Landi Steps Into Lombard Role

Elissa Landi will play the leading role in the Jo Swerling original story "Sonata," which was originally scheduled as a starring vehicle for Carole Lombard. This will be Miss Landi's first vehicle on her long term contract with Columbia. Joseph Schildkraut has the male lead and David Burton will direct.

Miss Lombard will return to the studio later to play the lead opposite John Barrymore in "Twentieth Century" as the last picture on her three picture deal with Columbia instead.

Universal Rushes Prints Of French Train Wreck

New York.—Special pictures of the appalling French train wreck in which almost 200 were killed during the holidays were rushed to United States screens by the Universal newsreel during the past weekend as the result of a striking instance of newsreel enterprise. The picture arrived aboard the Europa late Thursday night. Allyn Butterfield, editor of the newsreel, rushed it to Universal exchanges as a special rather than wait until this week's newsreel issues. The Universal newsreel staff worked all Thursday night for shipment Friday to all parts of the United States.

Wald Van Beuren Exec

New York.—Jerry Wald, who has just arrived from the coast, will be the story editor and associate producer of the Meyer Davis-Van Beuren organization, which has dropped the name of Magna Pictures.

MGM Buys Caffey Story

New York.—MGM announces here the purchase of a story by Edward Hope Caffey called "Calm Yourself," which is likely to be Robert Montgomery's vehicle.

Alf Goulding at Col.

Columbia has signed Alf Goulding to meg the next Lou Holtz short. Comedy has been scripted by Tommy Dugan. Zion Myers produces.

Junior Laemmle deserves a wagon load of orchids on this one. It is an honest-to-goodness SHOW. It will be bringing money back to Universal twelve months from now when some present supposed hits have died the death.

And Junior made it over the opposition of everybody.

Maybe it was some of that same youthful psychology that has wandered about the above paragraphs.

But at any rate it was SHOWMANSHIP. Give him a hand.

Shadoplay, "spill-over" magazine sister of Photoplay, comes out the little end of the horn for January. Stories are trite and art is mediocre.

"Nobody Wanted Dressler," by Vera Mason; "I Don't Want to Be Funny" (Aline MacMahon), by the same author; and a fictionization of "Advice to the Lovelorn," by Virginia Maxwell, are the only items worth mentioning with any enthusiasm.

Other yarns are "The Miracle of Arrowhead Springs," by Sally Reed; "When a Hollywood Star Comes to Broadway," by Helen Ware; "A New Way to Crash Hollywood," by Richard Fulton; "Mae Answers the Letter of Her New Boy Friend," by Hester Lane; "So This Is Wonderland," by Grace Merton; "Wanted: A Wife" (Lyle Talbot), by Rita Ryan; "The Friendly Triangle" (Forbes, Brent and Chatterton), by Dana Rush; "The Pineapple Pirate" (Frank Melton), by Kirke Rascom, and "Borrowed Into Fame," by George Worth.

State-Lake Crowd Roars as "In the Money" Shows Antics of Family

By ROB REEL
(Chicago American)

Like another shot of "Three Cornered Moon"? "In The Money" is your prescription.

The State-Lake screen offering unfolds a plot very similar to the Rimplegar family's ups and downs. Another screwy menage, motherless this time, featuring an inventor father who occasionally blows up the house by mistake, and a motley assortment of brothers, sisters, and in-laws, shepherded by Lambie, the big sister.

Little sister goes in for nudism and eugenics and shows up one eventful day with a prize fighter for a prospective husband. Warren Hymer is the title challenger who decides to give up the manly art in favor of Shakespearean histrionics. His manager, played by Skeets Gallagher, doesn't take too kindly to this proposition and starts a campaign to change his pug's mind, if any.

The situation is further complicated by a sister who has artistic leanings and a yen for the Left Bank, and who is married to a third-rate actor. Also by a young brother who takes joy in risking his neck on a motorcycle.

The family finances fall suddenly and Lambie tries to make the others realize their plight. In an effort to bring home a little bacon, young brother, played rather self-consciously by Junior Coghlan, gets himself badly hurt in a motorcycle race. Five figured money then becomes a grim necessity if buddy is to have the important operation, which will restore the use of his legs.

The only source of some quick cash is the championship boxing bout, which will net prize fighter "Gunboat" $65,000, win or lose. All that stands in the way is Gunboat's newformed prejudice against fisticuffs. Smart manager Skeets finally takes care of that, just in the nick of time. Then Skeets and the good sister (Lois Wilson)—well, you know the rest.

"In The Money" is amusing . . . in fairness it must be chronicled that the State-Lake audience roared.

A WOW! Says the Press

Funny Bone Gets Workout "In the Money"

By MAE TINEE
(Chicago Tribune)

CALL "In The Money" anything but a bundle of nonsense and you'd be stretching half a dozen points. But characterize it as ingratiatingly amusing idiocy and you'll be telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

"In the Money" is the story of the Higginbotham family—a collection of nuttier nuts than the Marx boys ever dreamed of being.

Maybe all of this doesn't look funny written, but if the movie itself doesn't reduce you to a state of helpless laughter, I miss a guess.

Warren Hymer is swell as Gunboat. All the other acting is just as it should be and direction is perfect. Apparently everybody connected with the piece took it in the spirit in which it was written—and the result is an hour of simple enjoyment for the observer. HOW simple you couldn't fathom without beholding "In The Money" for yourselves.

A RIOT! Say the Critics

THE NEW FILMS "In the Money"

By CLARK RODENBACH
(Chicago Daily News)

"IN THE MONEY" is the story of the financial straits of a screwy family—much the same sort of folks you meet in "Three Cornered Moon," the Mary Boland, Claudette Colbert picture—and the manner in which they are solved by a yet screwier prize fighter and his quick-witted manager.

It is, of course, comedy, with just a dash of near-tragedy for flavor. It concerns the household of the wealthy but woefully absent-minded scientist, Prof. Higginbotham; his daughter, Lambie, the eldest, who mothers the widely assorted sack of nuts; Babs, whose interest in biology is centered about a man with a capital M; Genie, whose head is in the clouds in art; her husband (who lives on the family), Lionel, whose motto is "Down With Capitalists"; and Dick, a sane youngster in military school.

CODE COMMITTEES SET

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE have an idea that quite an interesting discussion could be worked up in an attempt to answer the question: "Where are tomorrow's production executives coming from?"

What's your opinion?

Will the pooh-bahs of, let us say, five years from now, come from the ranks of the writers, the directors, film editors, or what? Or will some of the new timber be, like Manny Cohen, transplanted from the eastern fields?

Look around the lot on which you are working now. You are undoubtedly rubbing shoulders with someone who will be tomorrow's big shot.

How good are your powers of prophecy?

Taking relief in hindsight ourselves we have just made a brief mental survey and come up with a strong impression on the number of writers who eventually make producer material.

Off-hand some of the names that come to mind are Darryl Zanuck, Lucien Hubbard, Benjamin Glazer, the Jones-McNutt team, and the newest writing recruit to producing ranks, Howard Green.

There are many others. But just about the time you get impressed with the number of writers who don executive togas, you find yourself going down a list of names that just can't be catalogued.

So perhaps it is that office boy whom you just sent out for a pack of cigarettes who will be guiding tomorrow's pictures.

It's an interesting game, this guessing on the futures of men and an industry. Try it.

We played it the other day with an executive on a big lot, and after much scratching and forehead creasing, he came up with the names of two men on the lot who, in his opinion, were potential big time material.

And it's one of the biggest lots.

After which we came to the doleful conclusion that if we took in all the lots we'd have a hard time finding a half dozen men destined to wear the big shoes tomorrow.

But the funny part about it is that some insignificant film cutter whom we were passing by without a thought is probably the Irving Thalberg of 1940.

Goldwyn Sour on Code

New York.—In a statement today Samuel Goldwyn asserted that if code conditions are lived up to it will cost the big studios as much as $1,000,000 a year more to operate. Goldwyn added that he has not as yet signed the code.

IATSE Tries Again With Court Action

L. C. C. Blix, business representative of Local 37, IATSE, has received permission from the members to file another suit against Local 40 to enjoin members of the latter union from working in studios over which the IATSE claimed jurisdiction. In the first suit the court ruled in favor of the IBEW.

Attorneys for the IATSE are working on the new case and expect to file papers within ten days.

Lubitsch Spikes Rumors About Eastern Production

New York rumors that Ernst Lubitsch was slated to go east for Paramount and supervise the making of twelve pictures for next year's program at the Long Island studio were discounted yesterday by the director. Lubitsch says he knows nothing of the plan. There is a possibility that it is one of the things in Adolph Zukor's mind on his coming visit to the studio.

Emanuel Due Feb. 15

Jay Emanuel, publisher of the important "Exhibitor" group of papers in the east, is now due to arrive here for a studio survey on February 15.

Rosenblatt Announces Labor Group and Committee To Handle Problems Of Extras

Washington.—The code machinery is reaching the functioning stage with the naming by Administrator Rosenblatt today of two of the most important committees in the set-up under which the industry will function for some time to come. The two named today are the Studio Labor Committee and the "Standing Committee for Extras."

Ford Bids High For Radio Talent

New York.—Henry Ford has opened the gold bags and is out after the biggest screen and stage names for a national broadcast to start February 4.

Will Rogers has been signed as the first guest star. Ford is also dealing with Maurice Chevalier, who is asking $8000 per appearance, with the deal apparently a stalemate.

Charlie Mack Auto Victim

Mesa, Arizona.—Charlie Mack, of the famous "Two Black Crows" team, was killed here last night in an auto accident. Mrs. Mack is in the hospital, seriously injured. Mr. and Mrs. Moran, accompanying Mack to the coast for the making of Educational shorts, escaped with minor injuries. Mack was 46 years old. He was the owner of the "Black Crows" title.

MGM Interested in Roxy Theatre Plans

New York.—MGM's hand is understood to be involved in new financing plans being considered for the Seventh Avenue Roxy. N. L. Nathanson, A. C. Blumenthal and Halsey Stuart Company, have put forth a plan by which they will take over the theatre provided present bondholders agree to take a new issue of stock as a swap for their bonds.

MGM figures in the deal on an angle that will give them a choice of dates at the house to tie in with their Capitol show and avoid delays in breaking pictures in the territory.

Ray Long in East for Fox

New York.—Ending a wild variety of rumors about the Fox eastern story post it may be stated that Winnie Sheehan will name Ray Long to the post before the end of this week. Long is at present doing special work at the studio.

PARA'S 'STRANGE HOLIDAY' CREDIT TO ALL CONCERNED

March and Unusual Direction the Tops

"STRANGE HOLIDAY"

Directed by.....Mitchell Leisen
Story by.....Alberto Casella
Adaptation by....Maxwell Anderson and Gladys Lehman
Photography by.....Charles Lang
Music directed by.....Nat Finston
Cast: Fredric March, Evelyn Venable, Sir Guy Standing, Helen Westley, Henry Travers, G. P. Huntley, Cecil Patrick, Kent Taylor, Kathleen Howard, Katherine Alexander and Otto Hoffman.

Fredric March has another individual success to his credit, as important artistically and dramatically as "The Royal Family" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

"Strange Holiday," which used to be "Death Takes a Holiday," is one of the most relentless pieces of fantasy ever to reach the screen, and in spite of an intelligent, well-balanced, consistent cast, March easily dominates. Of course, the part itself is dominating, but, in lesser hands, the Dark Figure would have been a terribly ineffectual peg upon which to hang the tenuous drama. March, with long, sinister strides, walks away with the picture.

It is the story of Death, who is given three days in which to live as a mortal and discover why human beings fear him so. Of course he falls in love, and he finds that life is not nearly so simple and peaceful as death, and that the losing of love is the darkest of tragedies. And after the three days are up, he leaves his human form, taking with him the girl who taught him what life is; still wondering what there is about death that is so fearful.

This film is what dreams—and nightmares—are made of, but so persuasively is it presented, so romantically is it set, that any audience, no matter how slap-stick minded, will find in it an evening's full, but strange, entertainment.

Sir Guy Standing stands out beautifully as the Duke who is the unwilling host of Death; Evelyn Venable is misty and charming as the young girl and everybody else in the cast forms an effective background.

The direction by Mitchell Leisen is careful, exact, and luminous. Maxwell Anderson and Gladys Lehman handled Alberto Casella's play with a poetic and sympathetic understanding, and the photography of Charles Lang is beautiful. Nathaniel Finston's musical accompaniment is superb.

This is a picture for the discriminating audience, but nobody will fail to be impressed, in one way or another, by it. The March fans, who sang his praises after those two earlier pictures and who wish to see him again in full dramatic regalia, will rave about "Strange Holiday." But the picture is like an olive—or an avocado—not everybody likes them, because they have such a distinctive and different flavor.

THE LOW DOWN

So George Cukor gave a very select Chinese supper. David Selznick, f'r-instance, selected the most fragile chair in the room to lean upon, with terrible results. He selected a very fancy lampshade to toy with, too, and after most of the crystal ornaments had fallen off, and after a couple of settees had given 'way, and the radio just got tired and stopped—Cukor gave in and announced publicly that the house would soon be completely redecorated. The eminent director lost several pounds (not that he couldn't spare them!) trying to keep his guests comfortable, and finally compromised by lighting a roaring fire in the grate and opening all the doors and windows. He was very upset. Among those who "ate his good food and drunk his good likker" and who tried to win an argument with Myron Selznick, were Carole Lombard, Billy Haines, Lewis Milestone, Herbert Marshall, the Mesdames Selznick and a gorgeous brunette.

A big chunk of Hollywood turned out for Gene Austin's debut at the Clover Club Wednesday night—and the boys he has with him are not bad—not bad at all. Especially the bass-fiddle feller. Glimpsed in various sections of the late spot were Lou Holtz with Helen Vinson, Lou still being in pursuit of charm; Colleen Moore, Ad Schulberg, the Felix Youngs, Ann Sothern (nee Harriet Lake), Roger Pryor, the Fred Peltons, Mary Carlisle, Edgar Allan Woolf, Sam Coslow, Esther Muir, Count Carpegna, Hugo Riesenfeld, Eddie Silton, Claudia Dell and more.

You'd be surprised to know what heavily married director asked for the telephone number of a visiting N. Y. beooty a few weeks ago. Which was all right—because the girl figured he meant to give her a part in the picture he was just starting. But the director made the mistake of waiting until the picture was finished before calling the number—and met with the icy retort. Y'see—the girl wasn't interested in his society at all—besides which she didn't dream this particular husband would be using the dials for a date!

Gratitude

After reading an article in Liberty by Adela Rogers St. Johns, in which she praised him highly, George Cukor sent the following wire to the writer: "Just finished reading your article in Liberty Will You Marry Me?"

$4000 a Crack for Marx Duo on Radio Show

New York.—Harpo Marx, back from Russian triumphs, will rest while brothers Groucho and Chico take to the air for the paltry stipend of $4000 per broadcast.

The new Marx Brothers show, now being written by Irving Berlin and Moss Hart, will go into production early in the Fall season.

Fox Signs Starrett

Charles Starrett was signed yesterday by Fox for the lead opposite Sally Eilers in "Three on a Honeymoon," which will be directed by James Tinling. Starrett just completed a featured role in "Transient Love" for Radio. The deal was made through the Collier-Wallis office.

Flu Hits Bachmann

New York.—Jack Bachmann, here to settle next year's program and possibly tie in with Majestic, has been laid low with an attack of the flu.

Para. Gets Sothern For One-Pic Deal

Paramount has signed Ann Sothern on a one picture deal to play the feminine lead in "Melody in Spring" which Norman McLeod will direct under the supervision of Douglas MacLean. Miss Sothern is on her six week lay-off period at Columbia, having just finished the lead in "Let's Fall In Love."

First Division Entertains

New York.—First Division Pictures, the Harry Thomas organization, will hold a house warming Saturday at their new quarters in the RKO building.

Code Committee

Dick L'Estrange, of the Assistant Directors and Scripters union.

The committee to handle the problems of motion picture extras is headed by Dr. A. H. Giannini, of the Bank of America, and includes Mabel Kinney, Mrs. Una N. Hopkins, Fred Peltman, Dave Werner, M. H. Hoffman, B. B. Kahane, Pat Casey, Charles Miller, Larry Steers, Lee Phelps, Allen Garcia and Fred D. Burns.

Miss Kinney, M. H. Hoffman, B. B. Kahane, Charles Miller and Larry Steers will be the executive committee of this body.

Do You Realize

that you must provide today for the comforts of tomorrow. To do this you should adopt a policy of placing a definite amount of your income in sound investments.

High grade Municipal bonds for years have been the choice of conservative investors who require safety of principal, together with a dependable income. They have stood the test of the past three years, and those fortunate enough to have placed their funds in such securities find themselves today with their investments unimpaired.

'RICH WIDOW' POOR FARE; 'B'WAY RAINBOW' LIKED

Pic Can't Overcome Robson Miscasting

"RICH WIDOW"
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Directed by.....Charles F. Reisner
Story by.....Dudley Nichols and LaMar Trotti
Screen Play by.....Zelda Sears and Eve Greene
Photography by.....Len Smith
Produced by.....Lucien Hubbard
Cast: May Robson, Jean Parker, Lewis Stone, Mary Forbes, Reginald Mason, William Bakewell, Tad Alexander, Walter Walker, Reginald Barlow, Claude Gillingwater.

Surely the height of something or other is reached by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when May Robson is made to play the mother of a 12-year-old boy. There is not an actor in Hollywood who does not honor her for her vigorous years, a producer who does not appreciate her box office value, or a fan who will not be appalled at this piece of casting.

Miss Robson has an especial appeal, but it is not that of young motherhood. All the way through the somewhat long "Rich Widow" (temporary title for "Old Hannibal") the audience waits for the big scene when she will be disclosed as the child's grandmother or old nurse, and that is the reason the audience filed out without applause.

The tale deals with a woman embittered at being left waiting at the church by a young banker. What did she expect? They're always up to tricks. To show what she thought of bankers she married a spendthrift. Then, to show what she thought of spendthrifts, she became a miser.

Her child goes to a charity ward. She lives in a miserable room. And she speaks crossly to all of her childhood friends.

Throughout her life she cherishes venomous hatred of the banker. Panic in Wall Street gives her a chance to show it. Craftily she lends him money on a demand note and calls it in a few hours later. This bit of high finance enrages her son to such an extent that he flings off with the banker's daughter to become a reporter. He wasn't interested in making money, anyway, so that is one convincing note.

May Robson's expected hearty emphasis draws laughs in many heavily played scenes. The rest of the cast has nothing much to do. Lewis Stone plays the banker, William Bakewell her son as a man, Tad Alexander as a boy. Other roles are taken by Reginald Mason, Walter Walker, Reginald Barlow, Claude Gillingwater and Mary Forbes.

Two talky sequences dragged in to explain events which transpired in the past might just as well have been spoken in asides, so creaky are they in screen play construction.

Here is a swell story of a colorful, credible character muffed mainly by miscasting, but possibly still salable with emphasis on Miss Robson's recent successes and the story itself.

Will Revise Code

New York.—The general feeling among picture execs and leading exhibitors here is that the motion picture codes will be reopened for drastic changes when the big code gathering on all industries is held in Washington next month.

'Rip Van Winkle' Up on Eddie Small's Schedule

Edward Small is making plans to make a modernized film version of "Rip Van Winkle" for Reliance Pictures. The producer has engaged Herbert Fields to write an original story based on this idea, which will be produced as a musical.

Arlen Marine Yarn Goes Into Work Next Week

Paramount will put "Come On Marines" into production next week with Richard Arlen in the top spot. Erle Kenton will direct.

This production has been on and off the Paramount production schedule for the past year and a half.

Radio Interested In Dreiser's 'Sister Carrie'

Radio is negotiating for the screen rights to the Theodore Dreiser novel, "Sister Carrie." Vivian Gaye of the Polimer-Joy agency, while in New York, made a deal with Dreiser to handle the sale of the screen rights of his works.

Andrews on Col. Deal

Columbia yesterday signed Del Andrews to a one-picture deal. Director will be given an assignment in the near future. Andrews was signed to meg "Murder at Rexford Arms" about a month ago for the same plant, but didn't go through with the deal.

'Sonata' Under Way Tues.

With Elissa Landi and Joseph Schildkraut set in the top spots, Columbia will definitely put "Sonata" into work next Tuesday to make a March 12 release date. Picture will be directed by David Burton from the Jo Swerling script.

Lachman Starts on 'Follies'

Thornton Freeland wound up the dramatic and dialogue sequences of George White's "Scandals" at Fox yesterday, leaving Harry Lachman handling the balance of the picture. Lachman directs the dance numbers.

Laemmle Host at Stag

Celebrating his sixty-seventh birthday, Carl Laemmle will be host at an informal stag party at his home January 17. Laemmle was born in Laupheim, Germany, in 1867.

Tidden-Kingston Split

Fritz Tidden resigned from the Al Kingston agency yesterday, planning other connections. The story department which he operated will be handled by Kingston.

Script, Direction Come in for Bows

"RAINBOW OVER BROADWAY"
(Chesterfield)

Produced by.....Maury M. Cohen
Directed by.....Richard Thorpe
Story by.....Carol Webster
Screen Play by.....Winifred Dunn
Music by.....Albert von Tilzer
Photography by.....M. A. Anderson
Cast: Joan Marsh, Frankie Albertson, Lucien Littlefield, Grace Hays, Mae Beatty, Del Henderson, Glen Boles, Gladys Blake, George Grandes, Nat Carr.

This one's got it. As entertainment it's a stack of blue chips on the double "O" just as the little round ball drops into that slot.

Classify it according to picture terms and you'll label it "a down-to-earth production for the whole family." It's built on a dramatic story of a family's viscissitudes, such as was started by "Three Cornered Moon," garnished with a pack of laughs, and sprinkled with music of the catchy sort.

Heading the family is Lucien Littlefield, a hopelessly helpless man married to a former theatrical queen, Mae Beatty, whose exorbitant demands for hare-brained luxuries come at a time when the family is financially distraught. Mae is the stepmother of Joan Marsh, George Grandes and Glen Boles, all of whom dislike her because she only aggravates their misfortunes.

Joan and George write songs, hoping to save the family by selling them. Frankie Albertson, in love with Joan, conceives the idea of bringing the former Broadway queen back and succeeds in doing so after a series of tribulations.

Analyze it and you'll be surprised that the story is so plainly simple and artless. Its component elements, which contribute each and every value to the story, consist of individual characterizations—much the same, if accurately recalled, as "Three Cornered Moon." Each character seems slightly daffy. Put together on the screen their actions bring laugh after laugh. Particularly deft is the brief set-to between Mae Beatty and Grace Hays, playing two old battle-axes, once in the chorus together, jealously meeting twenty years later to rip each other to pieces first in dialogue and then in actual fighting.

Winifred Dunn did a major studio screen play of the Carol Webster story and Richard Thorpe put it on film with creditable efficiency.

In Albert von Tilzer's music there is at least one song hit, "Let's Go Places."

As a matter of fact, the picture is badly titled and should have been labeled with the name of the song number. And, Mr. Exhibitor, that's a tip to you; this picture, although an independent restricted by that field, is going places.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Splendid addition to the saddest complaint of the week department. During the first intermission of a show that has already closed, a very elegant looking high-hatted gent was wearily saying to a gal, "Isn't it the most awful feeling in the world when you want to go to sleep in a theatre and you can't?"

It would seem that film fame doesn't exactly extend to all the far corners of the earth. In fact, it evidently doesn't even get into a couple of good corners in New York. F'r-instance, the other day a film company was very anxious to get in touch with Maurice Chevalier and by mistake called the Waldorf-Astoria. However, the error has nothing to do with the story. What happened was this, when they asked to speak to Chevalier, they promptly asked for his initials or first name, and after they got that they wanted to know how you spell it. And that last request had the moving picture company stumped, too.

One of the really sad things we've heard about recently has to do with the plight of Merritt Crawford, who was at one time a prominent trade paper editor and always highly thought of as a worker. Mr. Crawford made a big mistake in getting married. That was remedied by divorce. But the cure was evidently worse than the illness because his ex-wife has had him thrown into Alimony Jail for non-payment of his alimony. And the situation now is that if Crawford can be assured of a job they'll release him so's he can earn the money to pay the alimony. But no job and no freedom. And meanwhile a good man is languishing in jail and incidentally his ex-wife's two children, whom he adopted at the time of his marriage, are both on his side.

Nat Dorfman, who's been getting a lot of good publicity for shows that had a habit of folding quickly this season, hasn't been wasting much time regretting his lost work. He's written two plays that several producers are interested in, "The Gag Man" and "Errant Lady." And provided that Mary Boland can be signed for it, "Errant Lady" will definitely see production in the spring.

Dent-Ward Team Busy

With "Just an Echo" playing at the Paramount this week the writing team of Dean Ward and Vernon Dent is rounding out a busy season that has seen their names on six Harry Langdon stories, two for Crosby, two for Leon Errol. Four more are scheduled for Langdon.

Aussie Visitor Returning

E. J. Tait, managing director of the J. C. Williamson theatre circuit, in New Zealand, who has been visiting Leon Gordon, MGM writer, started the return journey to Australia yesterday.

Standing's Option Lifted

Paramount has exercised the option on Sir Guy Standing's contract for another period.

Brock Assigned To Another Musical

Following the success of "Melody Cruise" and "Flying Down to Rio," Merian C. Cooper has commissioned Lou Brock to produce another all star musical production.

Brock has signed Herbert Fields to write an original story titled "Down to Their Last Yacht." The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office set the writer.

Ruth Waterbury Due Mon.

New York REVIEWS

"SON OF KONG"

Radio prod.; director, Ernest B. Schoedsack; writer, Ruth Rose.

Roxy Theatre

Journal: It's all pretty absurd, but absurdity of this sort makes for amusing entertainment, since it isn't planned to be taken seriously. "Son of Kong" makes no attempt to be a hair-raiser. Juvenile audiences ought to hail it with delight, and adults will find it good-natured comedy hokum that is neatly put together and nicely played by Robert Armstrong, Helen Mack and Frank Reicher.

News: Like the majority of successors "Son of Kong" lacks the novelty of the original, which naturally lowers the interest. But for patrons who enjoy a little hokum in a movie and are delighted to find a picture that they don't have to take seriously, this current edition ought to satisfy. The kids will get a big kick out of it.

Mirror: You never suspected, did you, that King Kong left a dear little orphan on that far mysterious isle? Well, he did. Little Kong is the hero of the story and a captivating little monster he is! King Kong addicts will be diverted by the exploits of Crown Prince Kong.

Times: This sequel to last season's hair-raiser is a low melodrama with a number of laughs that are loud and satisfying, although the comical intent of the producers is open to argument. "Son of Kong" is not the masterpiece of mechanical ingenuity that "King Kong" was. Crowds reminiscent of the halcyon days besieged the Roxy for a look at "Son of Kong" yesterday. Compounded chiefly of youngsters, they enjoyed themselves, if their pleasure was proportionate to the noise they made.

Sun: This sequel doesn't begin to come up to the level of the first Kong picture, not in rapidity of action, drama, suspense or daring technical achievement.

Herald-Tribune: If you liked "King Kong," doubtless you will like his son. The picture is full of thrills, the comic, but very little sense.

World-Telegram: It is a pretty silly and bad movie, really, but if you accept it for what it is—either a conscious or an unconscious burlesque of its predecessor—it will afford you some gleeful moments.

"MAN'S CASTLE"

Columbia prod.; director, Frank Borzage; writers, Lawrence Hazard, Jo Swerling.

Rialto Theatre

Sun: As a film director Frank Borzage has shown exceptional talent in the handling of love stories. Under his expert direction "Man's Castle" emerges as a tender and appealing love story in this now fading year of depression. A simple story, simply told, it might easily have become unbearably sentimental had it been intrusted to less capable hands. Another asset is the dialogue, which flows easily and naturally. The chances are you will like "Man's Castle."

Journal: A delicate, sincere and utterly charming love story. It was directed by Frank Borzage, who stands alone when it comes to translating tenderness to the screen. And it co-stars Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young, whose work here is outstanding.

Times: Even though Frank Borzage in his direction of "Man's Castle" gives an occasional fleeting reminder of his successful silent film "Seventh Heaven," the story is by no means as plausible or as poetic as that memorable old work. Toward the end this current offering is unnecessarily melodramatic and the incidents are frequently lacking in the desired spontaneity.

Herald-Tribune: Frank Borzage has had scant chance to demonstrate his talents in "Man's Castle." His staging is assured and sensitively executed, but he has made little effort to give the work any more significance than is contained in the preposterous plot. At best, "Man's Castle" is a monotonous little romance about a prince charming and a fairy queen, disguised this time as a couple of tramps.

Post: Frank Borzage has done what he could to evoke a wealth of tender sentiment from this idyll of the dump heaps, and thanks to the first aid he receives from Spencer Tracy he almost succeeds in making the story convincing.

News: The deft touches of Frank Borzage and the true portrayal of Spencer Tracy are stronger than the vehicle. Frank Borzage stands alone as a director who can make you laugh, cry, sympathize and understand. The picture carries a capable cast.

American: A splendid cast and a talented director supply laughter and tears in proper proportions in "Man's Castle." Its principal assets are the charm and appeal of the players, each of whom enacts his role with a sincerity that cannot help but reach the heart. Borzage has endowed his picture with exciting quality.

Mirror: No actor could have played Bill as flawlessly as he is played by Spencer Tracy. Infinitely touching, "Man's Castle" is saved from sweetness by spicy, frank and realistic comedy. It is a beautifully proportioned picture, balancing pathos with humor, and sentiment with drama. Borzage has made another fine film.

Colleen Moore Up For Lead At Col.

Looks as though Colleen Moore will get the important top spot in "Most Precious Thing in Life" at Columbia.

Player goes through a test today, question of her handling an assignment during which she goes from youth to old age in a graceful manner deciding it. Miss Moore accomplished the trick creditably in "Power and Glory" for Fox. Lambert Hillyer shoots the picture into work the moment the deal is okayed.

Junior Laemmle Goes In For Sport on Big Scale

Carl Laemmle Jr. yesterday issued orders to go after basketball in a big way and has instructed Jack Pierce, studio make-up man, to organize a Universal Pictures basketball team that will meet all comers on the Pacific Coast and throughout the nation if necessary. The new quintet will be entirely separate from the Universal City Club five and will contain the best amateurs obtainable. The Universal City Club's team now plays local organizations every Monday and Thursday. Pierce hopes to have his team in shape for a game February 1.

Getting Next Dieterle Yarn Ready for Camera

"Five Fragments," George Dwyer's novel which was purchased by Warners, is being adapted for the screen by Gene Solow and Robert Lee.

Wilhelm Dieterle will direct the picture which starts in about three weeks. No members of the cast have been set to date.

Fifth McCoy Starts

Columbia starts the fifth of the eight Tim McCoy action features, "Storm at Midnight," Monday, with C. C. Coleman megging. Harold Shumate has scripted and Irving Briskin produces. No additional cast set as yet.

Campbell New Pres. For the Chase Bank

New York.—Of interest to picture people is a shift in the Chase Bank reins by which W. W. Aldrich steps from the presidency to the chairmanship of the board, with H. Donald Campbell succeeding him.

The shift still leaves the Rockefellers in control, and is largely made because Aldrich feels he has spent enough time untangling the bank's post-depression worries.

Robson and Parker in MGM Louisiana Yarn

May Robson and Jean Parker have been assigned the top spots in "In Old Louisiana" and George Seitz will direct.

"In Old Louisiana" is an original story written by Lucien Hubbard and the studio will salvage as much of the film as they possibly can from the picture, "Louisiana Lou." Hubbard is the associate producer on this producation.

Fanchon Royer's Latest Is 'Hollywood Hoodlum'

Fanchon Royer's latest production, featuring June Clyde and Frank Albertson, has been titled "Hollywood Hoodlum." Other members of the cast of this studio press agent story include Jose Crespo, Tenen Holtz and John Davidson.

IATSE SOUND MEN PREPARE FOR PRODUCER SHOWDOWN

Campbell McCullough, secretary of the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board, in commenting on the sound men's election, said that the balloting had given jurisdiction over the men to the IATSE.

According to McCullough a ruling of the National Labor Board in Washington held that in such elections the majority vote ruled and therefore the IATSE had won the battle in spite of the fact that some members of the IBEW had failed to vote.

"However," continued Mr. McCullough, "the IBEW has a contract with the producers to do all the representing there is and in my opinion the election will not nullify this contract."

Harold Smith of the IATSE said he was not disturbed by this last statement of McCullough's and is now preparing for a show-down with the producers, tentatively scheduled for next week.

Para. 'Meg' Team Pulling Two Ways

Dissension is riding the Paramount unit shooting "Man Who Broke His Heart," with George Somnes and William Cameron Menzies, placed together for the first time, unable to match their ideas on how to take individual scenes.

During the first two days of shooting, it is reported, five out of seven scenes had to be remade because of differences in tempo of the shots over which each director had his say. Al Lewis put the pilots on the carpet yesterday and the production continues with the same directors under the associate producer's strict supervision.

'Beast of Borneo' to Open In San Francisco Strand

Far East Productions' jungle picture, "Beast of Borneo," is set for an indefinite run at the Strand, San Francisco, January 20. The film was made in part in Borneo and features Borneo Joe, 2-year-old orang-utan. The cast includes Mae Stuart, John Preston, Eugene Sigaloff, Doris Brook and native Borneans.

Warner Britisher Leaving

H. Brock Williams, head of writers at Warners' English studios, leaves for New York Saturday and sails January 19.

He is taking with him several stories which have been whipped into shape on this side for production abroad.

Early 'Gallant Lady' Runs Top 'The Bowery'

New York.—Early reports on "Gallant Lady" engagements indicate that this picture is likely to pass "Bowery" figures for Twentieth Century.

In Buffalo the first three days business totaled $7500 against $6500 for "The Bowery." In New Orleans the total for the first three days shows $6300 against $5500 for "The Bowery."

New York.—The Brooklyn Vitaphone studio, turning out Warner Brothers shorts, is so far ahead on production that they will shut down next week to reopen about March 1.

OPEN FORUM

London.

Editor, Hollywood Reporter:

May I take this opportunity of bringing to your notice a leading article in the Hollywood Reporter dated 12th April, referring to the native picture "Samarang."

You state that the lead Ahmang is doing the stuff as only a Malay native built like this one knows how to, etc.

This native Ahmang was in England last week and I accompanied him to a London picture house and saw the picture. During the past few weeks I have seen many press representatives on behalf of Ahmang and pointed out that Ahmang is not a Malay native, furthermore it will interest you to know he is really a British officer, Captain A. V. Cockle, M.C.

I feel sure you will appreciate the fact that Cockle would stand little chance of any further film work if he gets no publicity—not even his name and that a native one.

Perhaps you would like to mention in one of your next publications that Ahmang is a white and furthermore not a Malay native, the powers that be in Hollywood would then be able to find this gentleman should they so desire at any future occasion.

Yours faithfully,
CAPT. E. H. JEFFRIES, M.C.

Hecksher Asks Ten Million From Rockefeller Interests

New York.—The planned removal of Universal to three floors in the Rockefeller Center Building next month is the last straw for the Hecksher Foundation Interests, present Universal landlords at 730 Fifth Avenue.

Hecksher has instituted suit in the New York Supreme Court against the Rockefeller interests for $10,000,000 alleging unfair methods in luring tenants away from Hechsher and other buildings to the Radio City site.

Clive Brook Up For Julius Caesar Role

Paramount is concluding a deal with Clive Brook to portray the role of Julius Caesar in Cecil B. DeMille's forthcoming production, "Cleopatra," with Claudette Colbert. Brook has been set for the role and the studio is now talking money to the player.

This is the actor's first picture with Paramount since he and the studio decided to call it quits.

Otto Brower Set To Do Radio's 'Sea Girl'

Otto Brower has definitely been set by Radio to direct "Sea Girl," which Shirley Burden will produce. Joel McCrea will have the male lead.

This picture has been on and off for several months. The studio will use the exteriors made by Shackleford and Drumgold, which the two men photographed on their recent voyage to the South Seas.

Warner Trailer Hits

The "Convention City" trailer, first of the new type of ad reel being turned out for Warners by George Bilson, went over to good audience reaction at both the Hollywood and Downtown theatres. The subject consists of three black-outs and laugh titles and scenes from the picture.

MGM Buys Mystery

MGM has purchased L. du Rocher Macpherson's unpublished mystery play, "She Takes the Wheel." No producer has been assigned to the production as yet.

Code Machine Working

vides that pending such arbitration there shall be no strikes or lockouts. Early on January 4 Division Administrator Rosenblatt was advised that the motion picture machine operators of Chicago had disagreed with the Exhibitors Association of Chicago and that a strike had been ordered effective at 9 a.m. on January 4.

"Immediate communication with Thomas E. Maloy, representing the motion picture operators, directing his attention to the provisions of the code resulted in withdrawal of the strike order and an agreement to arbitrate immediately.

"The National Recovery Administration has just been advised that on January 10 the arbitration was entirely successful and satisfactory to all parties concerned. The Administration expresses its gratification to Mr. Maloy and to the Chicago Exhibitors Association for their cooperation and entire compliance with the code."

UNCLE SAM DIGS FOR DIRT

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE happened to have been close to the preparatory work on three pictures within recent months. Somewhat by accident, largely through friendships. And after all these years of a hectic picture experience a great big fact has just come up and hit us between the eyes.

This picture business needs two things more than anything else:

Larger, broader, wider, deeper WASTE BASKETS for stories that should never be started;

And secondly, executives with the courage to throw a story overboard when it begins to develop the type of headaches that could be called "chronic."

It is positively appalling—the number of cases, week in and week out, where executives are doggedly driving through on stories on which there isn't one hundred per cent confidence.

Sick stories, wobbly stories, stories that develop their ailments in the first script and the first conference—but which for a variety of reasons are given incubator treatment, wet nursing, and what-not in the faint hope that MAYBE they'll end satisfactorily.

And ninety-nine times out of a hundred they are just as sick the night they are previewed as they were the day the steno put her first sheet of paper in the typewriter.

Sometimes the weakling story is kept alive because a director has fallen in love with three or four situations on which he is certain he can show a "fine" touch; or the writer is still in love with the theme even though development has shown it won't work out for entertainment; or the producer is on record with the front office and won't admit he made a mistake.

In any case the result is another two hundred thousand or so thrown down the chute. With everybody concerned with the spending just "hoping" that they might come through at the preview.

So we give you today two needs:

Bigger waste-baskets for stories that should never get past the first draft;

Executives with nerve enough to call everything off when the story begins to creak and groan.

Jesse Lasky's Stand

New York.—The first time that Winnie Sheehan seriously interferes with Jesse Lasky—the latter will walk out of Fox. It is stated definitely here that Lasky's loyalty to S. R. Kent caused him to agree to playing along with Sheehan as boss, but with the stipulation about what would happen at the first interference.

Reeve and Yorke Swap Fox Posts

Winnie Sheehan is going back to a stunt he tried once in the regime of Vic Shapiro and Glen Allvine, and planning an interchange of Fox advertising execs between the east and west.

Under the arrangement Gabe Yorke comes west to handle studio publicity duties, while Arch Reeve goes to New York to the home office advertising post. Expected that Sheehan, as before, will play checkers with the boys every few months.

Jake Wilk to Talk to Agents on Story Deals

New York.—Jake Wilk will arrive in Hollywood Thursday to confer with Warners on the coming season's program, but while there he is also scheduled to address the Agents Association on the question of handling picture story material.

Colman Welcomed Back

Twentieth Century threw the press a party yesterday in the former Pickford bungalow to welcome Ronald Colman, recently returned to Hollywood.

Ted Curtis In Tomorrow

Ted Curtis, sales exec for Eastman Film, arrives here tomorrow from Rochester on his semi-annual visit.

Questionnaire Mailed Every Company For Lowdown On All Salaries, Bonuses, Etc.

Washington.—Uncle Sam has taken the gloves off and is going to find out about this picture business. Disclosure here yesterday of the contents of the questionnaires being mailed in connection with the NRA salary investigation show that he is digging right down to the bottom. The questionnaire is going to producers, distributors and circuit theatres. It is three pages long and minute in detail.

From corporations it wants to know gross receipts, capital investment, cost of supplies and materials, and surplus reserve for the period from 1931 to 1933.

As to individuals, over this same period, it wants group figures on the

Expect Protest On Extra's Committee

The code committee to handle the problems of motion picture extras, appointed by Administrator Sol Rosenblatt, is awaiting official notification, now in the mail, before calling its first meeting.

If the notification is received in time the meeting will be held Tuesday in the neutral Regional Labor Board's offices in the Federal building.

It is rumored that at that time some of the names on the committee will be protested by extra groups.

Chevalier Starts Sunday

New York.—Maurice Chevalier, accompanied by his personal manager, Max Ruppa, leaves here tomorrow for Hollywood to begin preparation on his next picture, "Merry Widow," for Irving Thalberg at MGM.

Franklin-Moss Give Offer to Monogram

New York.—Despite conflicting rumors, it may be stated definitely that Harold Franklin and B. S. Moss are tied in on plans for future picture production.

Just now the two are looking around for a means of setting their distribution and are understood to be drafting a proposition for Ray Johnston by which they would buy in on Monogram Pictures. The plan involves increasing of the budgets on Monogram pictures, bringing in of additional producers, and in general aiming at the building of a big producing and releasing organization.

Green and Radio at Parting of the Ways

Howard J. Green, writer-producer, and Radio will part next week.

Green has been with RKO for the past year and has written the screen plays of "Man of Two Worlds," "Morning Glory" and "Success Story" and has produced "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" during that period. His future plans are indefinite.

Cohen Due Today

Harry Cohen gets in by train today from New York after having been away two weeks to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Bella Cohen. Cohen was forced to return by train because of unfavorable flying weather.

'Scandals' in 5th Week

New York.—"Roman Scandals" is going to go over five weeks in Philadelphia, to establish a new-day record for time of run and gross cash taken in at the box office.

Doug Jr. Sails Today

New York.—Sailing on the Ile de France today are Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Carlos Bavetta, Fox representative in France.

New York REVIEWS

"A CHANCE AT HEAVEN"

Radio prod.; director, William Seiter; writers, Vina Delmar, Julien Josephson, Sarah Y. Mason.

Rialto Theatre

Herald-Tribune: The appeal of the story lies in the simplicity of its telling by Mr. Seiter, the director, and also in the unpretentious performances especially by Marian Nixon, as well as Joel McCrea and Ginger Rogers.

News: It is well acted by the principal players, but even if it were brilliantly played, and that it is not, the acting would still not disguise the thinness of the plot and the lack of anything approaching brilliance in the dialogue. Marian Nixon's performance is good characterization and the outstanding achievement of the film.

Times: With the evident hope of appealing to young persons in love, the Rialto is exhibiting an innocuous domestic tangle labeled "Chance at Heaven." It is one of those frail, disarming features in which psychology is considered unimportant. The author and director see to it that the leading characters fall in love and decide to part without much of an excuse in either case.

Journal: The principal surprise in the film is its casting of the feminine leads. It's mild film fare, with the players superior to the story.

American: A well acted program picture in which Marian Nixon steals honors in a not too sympathetic role provides interesting entertainment at the Rialto Theatre with a simple romance that has both appeal and charm. All the players do well with the not too exacting roles allotted them, and Miss Nixon is especially effective.

World-Telegram: The cast is a pleasant one, with Joel McCrea, Ginger Rogers and Marian Nixon playing the featured roles, and helps to make this "Chance at Heaven" much more palatable than it essentially is.

Goldwyn-Lichtman Going On The Spot

New York.—Sam Goldwyn and Al Lichtman have accepted an invitation to appear before the local indie exhib organization and answer questions on percentage bookings and preferential dates. With the gang that makes up the indie group you can put it down in your book they are in for a hot session.

Walter Connolly East For Hurried Vacation

Finishing his role yesterday in "It Happened One Night," Walter Connolly last night hopped a train for a two weeks' vacation in Cincinnati with his mother and two brothers. From there he will probably go to New York to visit his wife, Nedda Harrigan, who opens soon in the Broadway play "Hat, Stick and Gloves."

Durante's Writers Set

Jimmy Durante has signed Jack Harvey and Milton Raison to write the programs for his 26 broadcasts on the Chase and Sanborn hour which begin in April. The writing team wrote the sketches for his last broadcasts.

Rogers in Gargan Lead

Ginger Rogers has been assigned the feminine lead opposite William Gargan in "Blarney Smith," which Lou Brock is producing for Radio. No director has been assigned as yet.

New Orleans Theatre Tiff Up to National NRA Board

Washington.—Senator Robert Wagner, of the National Labor Board, announces that hearings will be held here January 16 on a dispute between Loew's State Theatre, of New Orleans, and local stagehands. This is the first movie industry case since the Hollywood jurisdictional strife to be called before the national body.

Basis of the dispute is that Loew's change from stage shows to straight pictures while the code was being drawn and simultaneous with the expiration of the old union contract, after which they refused to reinstate four stage hands whom the union wants retained in jobs.

Sherman-Radio Deal Off

Radio's discussions with Universal for the loan of Lowell Sherman to direct Irene Dunne in "Age of Innocence" have been dropped. Director will not clear with "Elizabeth and Mary" in time for the picture and is also wanted by Universal to follow his first picture with another as rapidly as possible.

Building Up 'Louisiana'

MGM will form a new comedy trio in its forthcoming production "In Old Louisiana," which George Seitz will direct. The trio consists of Lupe Velez, Nat Pendleton and Ted Healy. May Robson and Jean Parker have already been cast.

Rockett Sets His Next

Al Rockett takes over the producer reins on "Fledglings," at Fox, and Lee Garmes is definitely scheduled to handle the picture as his first directorial assignment. Lew Ayres tops.

Tinling on 'Honeymoon'

James Tinling has been nominated by Sol Wurtzel at Fox to pilot "Three on a Honeymoon" for Fox. Zasu Pitts is set for one of the top spots.

Lloyd's 'Catspaw' Staff Finally Set

Harold Lloyd has completed his staff for the production of his next picture, "Catspaw," at Metropolitan studios.

Big Shakeup Likely

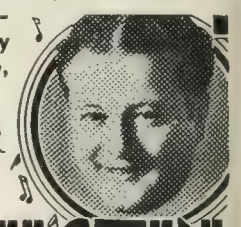
backing of Loew's and with N. L. Nathanson and Halsey Stuart also interested.

Back of the proposition is the fact that MGM's lease on the Capitol expires shortly; but of equal importance in the calculations is the temptation of that big seating capacity at the Roxy and what it can do for a picture as compared with the Capitol.



MGM is understood to be seeking an agreement with Warners by which both companies would split their first run product between the Roxy and the Capitol, and in this event the Warner Strand, with only three thousand seating capacity, would be closed and possibly torn down as having outlived its usefulness.

The figuring is that with both MGM and Warners to choose from the Roxy could be assured the choicest of first run product consistently.

The Blumenthal-MGM community of interest seems to have started in the recent deal by which the Blumenthal-Nathanson interests closed for five years for MGM pictures over the Poli circuit. Report also has it that if the Roxy deal goes through the same group will make a deal with the bondholders of the Fox Brooklyn theatre to take that house over.

BRITISH MADE 'I WAS A SPY' WELL LIKED IN NEW YORK

Misses Greatness By Script Weakness

"I WAS A SPY"
(Fox-British-Gaumont)

Directed by.....Victor Saville
Story by.....Martha McKenna
Cast: Herbert Marshall, Conrad Veidt, Madeleine Carroll, Nigel Bruce, Anthony Bushell, Gerald DeMaurier.

New York.—England arrives first in the field of the new cycle of spy stories that are about to hit the screen. And this first picture is good. It's entertaining and it has a cast full of personalities, including a brand new blonde one, Madeleine Carroll, who is something to look upon and to watch. It is just a little sad to report that the picture could have been great IF that old bugaboo of English pictures, a good, tight script with climactic build-ups, hadn't again escaped the producers. It is still a good picture—there's no quibbling on that score—but it is mild where it should be exciting and bland where it should be incisive.

This is the story of Martha Cnockhaert, native and resident of a town in Belgium, occupied by the Germans. She becomes a nurse and then is forced into becoming a spy for Belgium, forced because she was not sure she hated enough to take the risk. In the same hospital is a sub-officer, also a spy for the Allies, and the two of them work together. Martha is finally trapped through the finding of her watch at the scene of the dynamiting of some German supplies. She is saved from death, however, when the sub-officer bargains for her life by confessing to being the brains of the spy system in that sector. That is what it reduces itself to and that is what you remember because the important parts of the story are glossed over both in the writing and the directing. There are three chances for stirring drama in the fact that the girl is at first unwilling to be a spy and then takes desperate chances. In the fact that she is decorated by the German government for her services and heroism when she was the direct cause of the tragedy that proved her courage under fire. And also in the fact that the girl gives up her honor for her country when she never receives the note telling her that a change in plans makes that sacrifice unnecessary. And all these things are treated as mere everyday incidents and trimmings to a spy story. And there is very little development of the love story between the two spies.

However, the acting of Herbert Marshall as the other spy, Conrad Veidt as the German commandant and Nigel Bruce, Gerald DuMaurier and Anthony Bushell in minor roles, is all excellent and as has been said before this Madeleine Carroll is something to make the boys sit up and take notice. Give this picture a break on exploitation and give your customers a chance to appreciate good English pictures.

'Sorrel' Looks Good

New York.—The United Artists home office just received a print of "Sorrel and Son" made in England by British and Dominions, with H. B. Warner starred, and are so tickled they are putting on a healthy rave.

Leonard Will Meg Crawford's Next

Robert Z. Leonard was yesterday assigned to direct the next Joan Crawford picture for MGM, "Latest From Paris," which is scheduled to start in February after the completion of her current vehicle, "Sadie McKee." Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson, after having finished their work on "Operator 13," return to the script of "Latest From Paris" on Monday. Leonard will not become a producer, as previously announced, because of the studio's new policy of having only five producers.

Col. Seeks Roscoe Karns For '20th Century' Role

Columbia is negotiating with Paramount for the loan of Roscoe Karns to portray the role of the press agent in "Twentieth Century" with John Barrymore.

Columbia tested William Frawley, who scored a hit on Broadway, for this role but later swung to Karns.

Borzage Ready to Move

Frank Borzage winds up the additional scenes and retakes on "Men of Tomorrow" at Columbia today. Director now moves over to Universal to start preparations on "Little Man, What Now?" which will have Margaret Sullavan in the lead.

'Born Bad' Overhauled

Twentieth Century is sending "Born to Be Bad" back to the stages for doctoring. Studio decided changes were necessary following a sneak preview early this week.

Picture featured Loretta Young and Cary Grant.

Gropper in Rehearsal

New York.—Milton Gropper starts rehearsals today for "When Ghosts Meet" with a cast including Ernest Truex, Sylvia Field, Brian Donlevey, and the possibility that it will open at the Belasco Theatre.

Ettinger to London

Margaret Ettinger is making arrangements to open a publicity office in London. She has secured Alexander Korda as a client and will leave for London this spring to make plans for the opening of the office.

Pizor Visiting Coast

New York.—William Pizor left for the coast yesterday in connection with plans for Imperial's series of shorts and for feature production. Sam Krellberg also departed yesterday.

London Business Holding Up Well

London.—With "I'm No Angel," "The Bowery," "Lady for a Day" and "Voltaire" getting the cream of the business there are no complaints here for the past week. All four, in addition to "Turkey Time" and "Henry the Eighth," are hold-overs.

Business on "I'm No Angel" is holding up amazingly, "The Bowery" is going great, and Arliss is always good here.

Newcomers for the week are "The Prizefighter and the Lady," called "Every Woman's Man" here, at the Empire; "Bed of Roses" and "Girl Without a Room," at the Plaza; with "Broadway Through a Keyhole" starting Monday at the Tivoli.

Cortez Romance Helped by Talbot

Lyle Talbot gave Ricardo Cortez a break when he volunteered and was given the latter's role in Warners' "Hit Me Again" so that Cortez and his bride, the former Mrs. Christine Lee, could take their postponed honeymoon to Honolulu.

Others in the cast are Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton, Claire Dodd and Joan Wheeler.

Changes in Ranks of Radio's Publicity Dept.

Mike Malone and Carroll Young of the Radio publicity department will leave that studio today, while Edwin Martin, Citizen-News columnist, will join Eddy Eckles' staff Monday.

Young goes over to MGM to work for Frank Whitbeck in the advertising department and Malone is taking over his old newspaper job in the east.

Bromley Stays at Radio

Negotiations between Fox and Haworth Bromley, assistant to Frank O'Heron at Radio, for Bromley to take over Phillip Klein's spot as scenario editor have been placed in cold storage. Fox could not offer the exec terms attractive enough to grab him away from Radio.

Capra Pic Finished

Frank Capra yesterday wound up Columbia's "It Happened One Night," establishing a long time schedule for production at the studio. Picture started shooting on November 13, and after being off the stages for several weeks came back to work recently for added scenes.

Wingate Back on Job

Dr. James Wingate, director of studio relations for the Hays office, returned from the east last night and will be back at his desk today.

Joe Breen, who has been pinch-hitting for the doctor, continues on the board of code of morals.

'Thunder' Clicks in Lon.

London.—"Thunder Over Mexico," with plenty of controversial argument going on in the press, is doing nicely at the Marble Arch Pavilion.

Yesterday in New York with HELEN GWYNNE

Of course, the neatest trick of the week was accomplished at the opening of Peggy Fears' show. Some of that California rain found its way east and there was pretty much of a downpour that filled the streets with little puddles. Mme. Jules Brulatour's car couldn't quite make the curb and Mme. Brulatour (Hope Hampton to you) tried and tried, but she just couldn't step over that nassy little puddle and so the gallant chauffeur picked her up, and to the plaudits of the crowd carried her to the car. It was a nice touch of chivalry that just about topped off the evening. . . . You really should have seen Blumey's face that night. He did show up for the opening, whereas Peggy saw his show the closing night and we're afraid there won't be much difference. . . . Tallulah Bankhead, who swears she became the season's success and the best actress in New York just because she was too sick to do "Jezebel," was there and so were the Dick Wallaces with Marion Saportas, Bennett Cerf, George Oppenheimer, Catherine Dale Owen and the Herb Cruikshanks all among those present.

Jascha and Florence Heifetz will be in the midst of a concert being given for the benefit of Destitute German Professionals, by the time you read this. We say in the midst of advisedly because the concert is being given in their little shack, the living room of which can hold three hundred people and the hall another three hundred, and at $25 a ticket it's one of the nicest gestures we know of. Heifetz plays the violin, Jose Iturbi the piano and Lawrence Tibbett sings for the occasion. Incidentally, the Heifetzes made no joke out of celebrating New Year's. A select list of invited guests showed up at the appointed hour of 5 a.m. for a string quartet concert. Breakfast was at about 7:30, and after several rounds of black coffee the string quartet went back and played a Debussy numbah that considerably helped the sun to rise in splendor.

D. A. Doran lunching with Charles deGrandcourt at the Algonquin and simply jubilant over the grand reports of his wife's health, which is well on its way to being excellent. . . . Jean Dixon and Edith VanCleve, Groucho and Chico Marx, J. C. Nugent, Johnny Weaver, Marc Connelly and Harold Ross, John VanDruten and Denis King, Tommy Mitchell and Richard Wallace, Ernest Truex and Lilian Bond with Geoffrey Wardwell all lunching at the Algonquin, too. Very gay, indeed!

Lupino Struts Her Stuff

Ida Lupino, Paramount's 16-year-old English player, showed her stuff to the studio execs last night in "Double Doors," produced by the Paramount studio stock company.

New Orry-Kelly Asst.

Charlotte Stiber, New York fashion designer, arrives in Hollywood tomorrow and joins Warners as assistant to Orry-Kelly.

NEW O'NEILL PLAY CONFUSING EFFORT ON RELIGIOUS THEME

Ilka Chase Liked; Nothing for Screen

"DAYS WITHOUT END"

The Theatre Guild presents "Days Without End" by Eugene O'Neill; directed by Philip Moeller; settings by Lee Simonson. With Earle Larrimore, Selena Royle, Ilka Chase, Stanley Ridges, Robert Lorraine, Caroline Newcombe, Frederick Forrester, Margaret Swope. At the Henry Miller Theatre.

New York.—Mr. O'Neill here steps forward and presents his tribute to the glory of religion in what he is evidently very pleased to call "a modern miracle play." And for this very modern miracle play Mr. O'Neill chooses to employ a device that must surely have been creaky theatrical effectiveness in the days of ancient Greek drama. However, though the term "modern" is irritating, though his method of telling his story is at times deliberately befuddling, seemingly to lend an atmosphere of great profundity to the proceedings, and although one may quarrel with Mr. O'Neill's religious premises the fact remains that one is still greatly moved by the quiet strength and power of Mr. O'Neill's writing and his expert knowledge of what is good theatre on the stage.

John Loving, brought up as a devout Catholic in the bosom of a devout Catholic family, allows his soul to become possessed by the devil at the age of fifteen when death robs him of the two persons in life whom he loved, his father and mother, despite his faith in the love of God. He finally finds love again (and love is the alpha and omega of religious faith to him) in the girl he marries, but he is still groping his way around to a complete faith in something, never realizing that he is still merely trying to escape from the greatest of all faiths, and denying it in a hundred isms that give no comfort. And the devil that still possesses him drives him into being unfaithful to his wife with his wife's best friend. The knowledge of this adultery almost succeeds in killing the wife, but the miracle occurs when John Loving comes to a complete realization and understanding of himself and again acknowledges the love and mercy of Christ and the wife lives.

The device O'Neill uses this time is that of having the other self of Loving—the devil—walk around in the person of Stanley Ridges, his face a hideous mask of hate and disbelief. All the nasty things that Loving says are spoken by this mask, and while it is sometimes effective it is for the most part a definitely cheap trick particularly in his death writhings at the foot of the Christ when Loving casts Him out forever. The play is further confused for the would-be intellectuals by the fact that half of it is told as a novel that Loving is writing and these two things gave rise to one comment that means approximately as much as the O'Neill method—that the whole thing is "schoolboy Nietzsche." It's a little more than that, however, particularly in the scenes between the wife (Selena Royle) and the other woman (Ilka Chase) and the scenes between husband (Earle Larrimore) and wife and the miracle. It is entirely capably acted and something a little more so by Ilka Chase, whose appearance is too brief.

Can He Take It!

The latest reports on the prize-fighter-actor, Max Baer, is that the youngster woke up the other morning and found another breach of promise suit for $50,000 staring him in the face.

'Left Bank' Slated For Lowell Sherman

"Left Bank," the Elmer Rice stage play, will be Lowell Sherman's second production on his new three picture deal with Universal. Possibility that Rice will be brought out to write the script since "Counsellor at Law," another Rice play, was handled in that manner. Gloria Stuart is tentatively set for the feminine lead. Sherman is now readying "Elizabeth and Mary" and hopes to start shooting on it in about a month.

Falaise To Make Another

Encouraged by the reception given his "Legong" the Marquise de la Falaise is now set to journey to French Indo China for another Technicolor novelty feature. Accompanied by Jimmie Hartnett, and with William H. Greene and Tad Brooks on the cameras, he will be gone for about three months, sailing from Los Angeles on January 22.

'B'way Rainbow' Credits

Owing to erroneous credits received by this publication's reviewer on "Rainbow Over Broadway," Maury Cohen was credited as producer of the picture when George Batcheller is the producer deserving the laurels. Review also went haywire in giving Mae Beatty the bouquets that should have gone to Grace Hays.

Levee-Zanft Can't Agree

M. C. Levee and Major Zanft have been unable to come to an agreement which would have brought the former Fox exec into Levee's agency. Zanft is understood to be discussing other important agency connections, determined to enter that phase of the business.

Mono Assigns Buchanan

Lou Ostrow has assigned Archie Buchanan as production manager on "Manhattan Love Song," which Monogram puts into production by the end of next week. Leonard Fields, who collaborated on the script with David Silverstein, directs.

Leslie Opens Offices

Eli H. Leslie has entered the business management field with offices in the Van Nuys building.

Plan No Salaries For NRA Bodies

New York.—In answering a query of Oklahoma exhibitors regarding the salaries to be paid film people in connection with work on the zoning and clearance boards John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, yesterday replied that it was the NRA policy to perform all duties under the code at a minimum of expense to the three branches of the industry involved, and therefore no provision has been made to pay salaries or fees to any members of these boards with the exception of a paid secretary.

Gordon School Presents 'No Women' Tonight

At the Gordon School Auditorium, 1455 North Laurel, there will be presented tonight the third and closing performance of "No Women," by Granville Forbes Sturgis.

In the cast are Rod Wilson, lead; Linda Martin, ingenue; Henry Williams, character lead, and Isabel Foyer, Ed Orr, Ted Richards, Florence Dekin and Wayne Gordon.

'Golden Gate' Cast Set

Warners have assigned Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay and Bette Davis to the top spots in "The Golden Gate," which Wilhelm Dieterle is tentatively scheduled to direct. Title is the new handle for George Dyer's story, "Fragments," which has been scripted by Eugene Solow and Robert N. Lee.

Malloy-Block Teamed

Doris Malloy and Ralph Block have been teamed by Warners to put the Lajos Zilahy play, "Firebird," into screen play form. Henry Blanke is supervising the work on the play, which was one of the Gilbert Miller productions on Broadway last season.

Walton in 'Trinidad'

Douglas Walton was yesterday handed one of the important supporting roles in "Murder in Trinidad" by Sol Wurtzel, Heather Angel and Nigel Bruce heading the cast. Lewis King directs. Walton was set by J. G. Mayer.

Ready Next 'U' for Stahl

Universal has signed William Hurlbut to write the continuity on Fannie Hurst's "Imitation of Life," which will be John Stahl's next production for the studio. Director will start casting in three weeks, with the subject scheduled to start within a month.

Marlow Signed by Rogers

Charles R. Rogers signed Brian Marlow yesterday to fashion the screen play for "In Conference," a murder mystery by Vera Casperay and Bruce Manning. The Frank and Dunlap office set the deal.

Cline for 'Peck's Bad Boy'

Eddie Cline has been set by Sol Lesser to direct Principal's next feature, "Peck's Bad Boy."

Harry Lachman Named Chairman of Fine Arts

Harry Lachman has been named chairman of the fine arts committee of Beverly Hills. Before entering the motion picture business the present director was a painter. Four examples of his work were purchased by the French government for the Musee de Luxembourg, the national museum of France. For his painting he was decorated with the Legion of Honor.

Rushing Work on Roach 'Babes in Toyland' Tricks

Two crews under the supervision of L. A. French are rushing the stop-motion and miniature material for Hal Roach's "Babes in Toyland" hoping to have the material ready for the start of the dramatic sequences of the production on February 15. Much of the picture is being built as fantasy with metal animals in keeping with the Victor Herbert operetta.

There are ways and ways of making a livelihood. Jack Crosby, former caster for Reliance, has opened a liquor shop opposite the United Artists studio and Robert A'Dair, player portraying butler roles in pictures, has opened the Nose-Dive Inn on Vine Street near Santa Monica.

Next Chase Starts Mon.

Hal Roach puts the next Charley Chase comedy into production Monday with Charles Parrott directing. Betty Mack, Harry Bowen and Gertrude Astor have been signed for the cast. Short is untitled.

Set 'Cosmetic' Songs

Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin have been assigned to write the words and music for "Cosmetic," B. P. Schulberg's next production.

separation of the payroll, and specific information on all drawing over $150 a week. The cash salary per week must be itemized, as well as the filling out of a separate questionnaire telling of all bonuses, commissions, or additional cash compensation in the annual periods, and bonuses paid in the form of bonds, stocks, etc., at the market price on the date deliverable.

It is going to be an auditor's holiday. In addition to the individual salaries and bonuses to be listed, the government wants group salaries recorded by work, so that Uncle Sam and his Congressmen can tell what percentage of the payroll goes to "actors, actresses, directors, executives, supervisors, writers, authors, artists, sculptors, scenic artists and designers, costume designers, sound engineers, cameramen, studio mechanics, laboratory workers, etc."

There's one consolation, that the questionnaire assures everybody that all information supplied will be confidential with the NRA. No time limit is set, but the understanding here is that the NRA expects the questionnaires back within thirty days. While not notaried, the replies must be signed by an executive officer of each company.

Para. Bills Shaved But Still Opposed

New York.—Although Referee Davis shaved the bills of the Paramount receivers from $296,000 to $208,000, Attorneys Rogers and Zirn, for the creditors, will fight the new amounts anyway when they come up to Federal Judge Bondy for approval.

Adolph Zukor gets his $18,545 in full; Charles Hilles gets $25,000 instead of $30,000; and Root, Clark and Buckner get $100,000 instead of $125,000, under the approved set-up.

'Cavalcade' in G. B. Saves Fox Shirt

New York.—Fox Film Corporation will show an operating profit for the year, as separated from theatre activities.

The surprising result is due to the immense British business on "Cavalcade," which has already grossed over a million.

Lowdown on Figure Paid Mary Pickford

New York.—Contrary to reports, Mary Pickford did not get $10,000 for her appearance at the Paramount here, nor is she collecting anything near that figure on her current engagements.

The New York figure was $6,500 weekly.

Elliott of IATSE Due Here

William Elliott, president of the IATSE, arrives in town Wednesday.

With the IBEW taking over the supervision of much of the work claimed by his organization Elliott will have his hands full during his stay in Hollywood.

Pat Garyn to Produce

New York.—E. H. Kleinert and Pat Garyn have joined forces in an independent production venture with plans to produce in the east. Understood here that Eddie Dowling is interested in the finances. They have purchased a Seth Brown yarn for their first.

Lovelace May Join Fox

Hunter Lovelace expects to go into an important Fox story post, possibly in the eastern spot previously planned for Ray Long, if he can work out the final details of a deal by which he winds up his local agency.

To Cover Many Other Lapses Picture Industry To Be Goat As Result Of Questionnaire

By ROBERT E. WELSH

So Uncle Sam is going digging for dirt. He is sending a questionnaire out that is asking anything and everything of everybody connected with the motion picture industry except possibly the legitimacy of their birth.

Why they're overlooking that last one I don't know.

And why is Uncle Sam snooping?

Because a GOAT is needed for the next six months or so. Headlines must be fed; Congressmen must be given baby rattles; fanatics must have something to grind their teeth over; and nice homebody people must be distracted from economic questions they distrust but know nothing about by giving them something that is part of their very lives.

Why?—Oh, why?—Oh, why?

Has the picture business ever asked anything of the Government—a dollar, a nickel, a dime, or even an inflated dollar?

Has the picture business, like the steamship monopolies, ever gone to the government asking for millions in gifts in the shape of subsidies?

Has the picture business, like the airplane hijackers, insinuated dirt and scandal into an Administration through their pleas for millions in charity?

Has the picture business, like the railroads, the banks, ever walked into Washington with a tin cup in its right hand and a knife in the other that threatened dire results if Uncle Sam didn't unloosen?

Has the picture business, like a hundred American cities, politically corrupt, gone to Capitol Hill asking for millions in pap—just to keep the "folks" happy?

NO!

The picture business PAYS its way; pays it in personal and corporation taxes; pays it in admission tax burdens; pays it in harassing censorship fees; pays it in license fees that run the gamut of the alphabet; pays it in UNDERCOVER handouts to politicians in a multiplicity of ways in a thousand communities.

The picture business PAYS—and PAYS—and PAYS.

And has never asked for a cent.

Then why make us the GOAT? Why spend TAXPAYERS' money printing thousands of questionnaires, more money for payroll workers in Washington to check those reports, still more money for headline-hungry Congressmen to start harrying those reports?

Why?—Oh, why?—Oh, why?

Have they sent a questionnaire out to W. R. Hearst, Roy Howard, Paul Bloch, A. J. Kobler, Henry Ford, Walter Chrysler, to ask what they pay each of their employees and why?

And what do you suppose would be the reply of any of these

Headache for MGM on 'Wilderness' Buy

New York.—After paying over $70,000 for "Ah Wilderness," the Eugene O'Neill hit, it looks as though MGM is more or less stuck with it unless they can get George M. Cohan for the lead he is playing on the stage.

And that veteran's demands are merely: first, $250,000 for the part; second, he won't work for any major producer; third, he won't go to Hollywood.

Try and wiggle out of that set-up. After his experience with Paramount, Cohan goes into hysterics when Hollywood is mentioned.

A possible "out" for MGM is in selling the play rights to Krimsky-Cochrane, who would produce a picture version in the east and therefore possibly get Cohan. MGM in turn would guarantee release through its organization of the completed picture.

Phil Rosen Set for Picture With British Government

Cabling the Guaranty Trust Company $6,000 to be held in escrow for Phil Rosen, Joe Rock gets the director to pilot the picture he is making for British Gaumont in London.

Rosen leaves on a ten weeks' trip February 9. William Stephens of the Al Rosen office negotiated the ticket.

Lasky and Son to Rest With Trip to Cuba

Jesse L. Lasky, accompanied by his son, Junior, sailed this morning aboard the Pennsylvania for a two weeks' trip to Havana, returning by train.

The Fox producer is taking a brief vacation before a big production splash. His son is recuperating from an appendix operation.

Cary Grant will be Sylvia Sidney's leading man in "Thirty Day Princess," which B. P. Schulberg produces for Paramount under Marion Gering's direction.

THE LOW DOWN

The Jack Gilberts have separated! Saturday Mrs. Gilbert moved to her mother's home, taking the beautiful baby daughter with her. We hear that she will start suit for divorce some time this week, giving incompatibility as the cause.

The Screen Actors Guild ball was not only tremendous, but a tremendous success—and a great credit to the many who worked hard to put it over. It was a gay and gorgeous party—and when we left at five a.m. things "were just starting," which gives you a rough idea. The brief ceremonies were simple and sincere—and the show was a knockout. Even a lot of producers and stars who "never go places" turned out for the party to give encouragement to this organization which jolly well deserves it. The high-spot of the evening was the impersonation of the Boswell sisters given by Bing Crosby, Charlie Butterworth and Frank McHugh, in their lavender gowns and bonnets. Somebody should really make a reel of that! Hal LeRoy wowed with his footwork—as he always does; he's sanzational! The singing of Jeanette MacDonald, the hoofing of Jack Boyle and his son, the monkeyshines of Pert Kelton, Jimmy Durante and Ted Healy (with stooges) and Dick Powell's m.c.'ing reaped their share of plaudits. If you missed the party, you missed something.

And before the echoes of the Guild Ball die away someone ought to give a great big orchid to Kenneth Thomson, who to our knowledge has worked with the energy of a stevedore for the past month or more on jobs toward which many actors would run their noses up. But it is all part of the down to earth labor that makes these affairs a success.

Georgie Raft and Margie King have busted up again—and it looks final this time. Because the other night Georgie drank the first drink he's ever had in his ife. And Georgie isn't the type to "drown" anything but a beeg sorrow. Just the same—we expect them to be around together any minute—so we're playing safe on predictions.

New York REVIEWS

"IF I WERE FREE"

Radio prod.; director, Elliott Nugent; writers, John Van Druten, Dwight Taylor.

Music Hall

Times: Fairly diverting. Considering the limited possibilities of her role, Miss Dunne does remarkably well. Mr. Brook as Evers has better opportunities and he makes the most of them.

American: The few embarrassing moments of the story are perhaps more than balanced by the good ones, and even more by the fine, finished portrayal of Irene Dunne. The histrionic possibilities, the dramatic depths of this star have not yet been sounded by the plummet of her vehicles.

Herald-Tribune: While the dialogue is bright and the staging handsome, the pattern of the plot construction, and the idea behind it, have by now become somewhat threadbare. The story has a depth and seriousness which make it quite believable. The trouble is, perhaps, it is almost anybody's triangle, and that, added to the screen's pride in its monopoly of such things, makes it hard for the long suffering critic to bear.

Mirror: Neither Miss Dunne nor Brook appear at their best in the conventional vehicle provided them. The scenes are too highly artificial.

News: Little more than mediocre entertainment. The backgrounds are interesting and sometimes lovely. The dialogue brightens up the picture occasionally, but on the whole the conversation is hardly more original than the plot.

Journal: The picture is handsomely mounted. Miss Dunne, who sings snatches of song in her charming voice, gives one of her customarily sincere performances.

Post: Mr. Brook, whatever else you might call him, is hardly a Buddy Rogers. Occasionally the phoniness of the story is relieved by the earnest and appealing performance of Irene Dunne. It is one of the best things she has done on the screen, but even she cannot make a single-handed rescue. The picture has the benefit of able direction and some excellent acting in the secondary roles.

Sun: Unfortunately, the core of the idea is pretty soft, the language is lush and the characterizations are flimsy. The result is that "If I Were Free" is still made up of a lot of old staples. And the present cast, excepting that admirable actor, Henry Stephenson, does little to help matters along, even if it does include Irene Dunne, Clive Brook, Nils Asther and Laura Hope Crews.

Roger Marchetti Acts As Cupid Aid

Roger Marchetti, picture attorney, is understudying Cupid. Two breach of promise suits handled by the lawyer have wound up with the plaintiffs and defendants marrying.

Latest case is that of Donald Cook and Maxine Lewis. Just prior to that, heart-balm action by Betty McMahon, screen player, was dropped when William H. Stevens, Beverly Hills socialite, did the altar-act with her. Marchetti denies he is opening his own marriage license bureau in competition with the one operated by the city.

Ralph Spence Spotted on 'Strictly Dynamite' Yarn

Ralph Spence has temporarily dropped his plans for his trip east to go to work for H. N. Swanson at Radio on the "Strictly Dynamite" screen play. Jimmy Durante stars on loan from MGM. The Small-Landau office set the Spence ticket.

Ed Shubert Renewed

Warners exercised the option on Eddie Shubert's contract for another three months' period. The player has appeared in eight pictures during that time.

Mae Clarke in Demand

Warners have asked MGM for the loan of Mae Clarke for an important spot in the Aline MacMahon starrer, "Fur Coats."

Thalberg Dares Do What Radio Passes

As a result of Irving Thalberg's decision to place Diana Wynyard in the star spot in "Declasse," MGM has inverted its thumbs on loan-out deals for the player.

Strangely enough, Radio at one time recently, before accepting MGM's purchase price for the property, dropped plans for it and canceled its loan-out deal for Miss Wynyard after deciding the story could not be licked. Thalberg is apparently challenging the situation.

FOX 'COMING OUT PARTY' POOR YARN WELL DONE

Dee and Director Top the Picture

"COMING OUT PARTY"
Fox

Direction .....John Blystone
Authors..... Becky Gardiner and Gladys Unger
Adaptors.....Gladys Unger and Jesse Lasky Jr.
Photography .....John Seitz
Cast: Frances Dee, Gene Raymond, Alison Skipworth, Nigel Bruce, Harry Green, Gilbert Emory and Marjorie Gateson.

It is unfortunate that a picture as exquisitely presented in all departments as "Coming Out Party" is, should be burdened with a plot that inspires derisive giggles in the audience.

Splendidly acted by a fine cast, a personal triumph for Frances Dee, directed by John Blystone with a grand flavor and zest, the picture is a beautiful, inspired structure resting upon extremely wobbly underpinnings. The preview audience was always about ten jumps ahead of the story and it was vocally dissatisfied with some of the more hackneyed and threadbare formalae which were dragged in.

Frances Dee is the rich little Park Avenue girl in love with a penniless musician, Gene Raymond. Her father is more interested in his yacht than in his daughter, and her mother is so sold on the family-tradition angle that the poor girl, who discovers just before her coming out party that she is going to have a baby, has no one to confide in but Harry Green, the owner of the orchestra in which Raymond plays. During the party, she desperately elopes with a rich young drinking feller, because Gene has at last gotten his chance to go to Europe on a concert tour, and she won't tell him about the baby because of the fear of ruining his career. However, the faithful old butler drags Gene off the boat just in the nick of time and everything comes out all right.

If something in the way of rewriting could be done with the baby sequence the picture would have a very good chance at being a good bet. It was there that the audience began to snicker, and they kept it up. Everything else, as said before, is O.K. Miss Dee does a bright, shining piece of work in this film, and turns in a performance that will impress everybody, no matter how lightly the picture is taken.

Becky Gardiner and Gladys Unger wrote the story, and Miss Unger and Jesse Lasky, Jr. made the best adaptation they could of it. John Seitz photographed beautifully.

It's Miss Dee's picture, and it's too bad the story isn't worthy of her.

Oliver Morosco Hurt

Oliver Morosco was found in a dazed condition and with a bruised chin Sunday morning at Hollywood boulevard and McCadden place. The producer was rushed to the receiving hospital for treatment. He was resting comfortably last night.

Fortunes of War

Only disappointed persons within range of the Screen Actors' ball the other night were a flock of male and female process servers disguised as autograph hounds hoping to plaster Rudy Vallee on behalf of Fay Webb. Rudy was already high-tailing it to Arizona, much to his regret having to bow out as m.c. for the Guild.

Name New Slate to Guide Radio Houses

New York.—M. H. Aylesworth has announced the list of officers and directors who will in the future control and operate the twin Radio City houses.

Headed by Aylesworth as chairman of the board they are: J. R. McDonough, president; W. G. Vanshmus, vice president and comptroller; L. E. Thompson, vice president and acting general manager; Herman Zohbel, treasurer, and William Maillard, secretary. Directors are the above and Webster B. Todd, Joseph O. Brown and F. T. Christy.

Vanshmus and Todd are Rockefeller representatives.

Juicy Offers for Stars on Personal Appearances

Warner, RKO and Marco have offered Jean Harlow, Clara Bow and Lee Tracy juicy deals for personal appearances through Walter Kane of the Weber office.

Each star is being offered $5,000 per week against fifty percent of the gross, with the theatre organizations ready to show them certified records of the last ten weeks' business in the houses to be played.

Three Pictures Up For Next Chinese Offering

Sid Grauman is still in a quandary as to which picture to book into the Chinese Theatre following "Little Women" and expects to reach a decision today.

He is deliberating between the Al Jolson picture "Wonder Bar," Garbo's "Queen Christina" and Connie Bennett's "Moulin Rouge."

Lowell Reports to WB

Helen Lowell, recently signed on a long term deal by Warners, arrived here yesterday from New York and goes into a supporting role in "Fur Coats" today. Miss Lowell has appeared in a number of Broadway productions, but this is her first try at pictures.

Jason Coming West

New York.—Leigh Jason left for the coast Saturday to take up a six weeks' engagement with Hal Roach, after which he will return to New York to produce again for Meyer Davis-Van Beuren, with a Radio release.

W. C. Fields To Solo As Star in Next Para

Erle Kenton has been chosen by Paramount to direct the picture scheduled under the tentative title "You're Telling Me," which has been definitely decided upon as a solo starring vehicle for W. C. Fields.

Following a series of assignments in which he shared comedy honors with others, Fields branches out on his own with the company concluding that he has reached the budding-out stage. William LeBaron supervises the event and has J. P. McEvoy, Paul Jones and Walter DeLeon chopping out the screen play.

British Pics Serious Threat in Canada

New York.—Increasing prospects for British pictures in Canada raise a serious problem for American producers.

Eighty-eight British pictures were released in the Dominion last year, the majority by Regal and Empire Films, both companies controlled by N. L. Nathanson, who also has most of Canada's theatres tied up.

Leslie Howard's Radio Pic To Start Feb. 10

Radio has set the starting date of Somerset Maugham's story "Of Human Bondage," which will star Leslie Howard, for February 10. John Cromwell will direct.

"Stingaree," another big production at that studio, will also get under way on that date. Irene Dunne will have the starring role and William Wellman will direct.

Kane Richmond Returns To Screen With Columbia

Out of pictures for a year after a siege of fever contracted during a film expedition into the Malay states, Kane Richmond is breaking into the game again. Columbia has signed the player for a featured role in "Storm at Midnight," the next Tim McCoy production which Irving Briskin supervises.

Rambeau Off for Florida

Giving pictures the go-by, Marjorie Rambeau left Saturday by boat for Miami, where she will spend a four months' vacation at her home there. Edward Small has her under contract for two more pictures on a four-picture deal.

Praskins Back at 20th

Leonard Praskins returns to the Zanuck fold at Twentieth Century on a one-picture deal to write the screen play for "Head of the Family," a story in preparation for George Arliss. The Small-Landau office represent Praskins.

Jimmy Dunn Broadcasts

Jimmy Dunn has been engaged to head the program on the Shell Oil hour next Monday night. Walter Kane of the Weber office set the engagement.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Having made a lot of notes, we might just as well comment on them —well, on one of them anyway—on account of our sunny disposition is at a low ebb at the moment and it's no fun commenting when you feel perfectly swell about things. For years now we have been hearing all about the bugaboo of censorship and how the picture industry has tried to evade it. Now in its great efforts to keep censorship as far away from it as possible, instead of getting in there and fighting it out for themselves, and not to soil its dainty fingers, it has long delegated that job to a hired group, and that group is not an attacking army but a shield and a shield that's very evidently made out of very pliable steel because the darned thing bends every which way and doesn't move.

Well, the picture industry, in the fair State of New York anyway, will shortly have a chance to prove whether or not it is sincere in its desire to rid itself of an irksome, expensive pest that more often than not succeeds in inserting nasty implication rather than eliminating some decent outspokenness. There is a Movie Bill pending before the State Assembly that offers to do away with State Censorship. And the price of this almost priceless elimination is the paying of a state tax of so many dollars per foot instead of license fees fully 50 per cent of which go to pay salaries for a supervision that is not only unwanted but unnecessary. This tax is to be slightly higher than the license fees, but it will be a legitimate revenue for the state that will eventually do some good for the citizens of the state. And not only that, it will actually result in the savings of thousands of dollars to picture companies by making it possible for no cuts to be made in a picture and no expensive retakes will be necessary. And of course the classic example of that kind of expense was "Scarface."

And the main reason for all this club of censorship has been that the picture companies themselves were either unwilling or afraid to fight for their own rights. The question of censorship somehow having managed to get itself all bound round by politics and not only that, but the very organization that was formed by and is still being paid for by the picture industry to keep the government clear of its picture-making policies and aims, has allowed itself to go on record with the statement that it doesn't understand how the government has allowed the industry to continue on its own for so long and practically begs for political guidance. As pretty a picture of patriotism as we have heard in a long time. Well, it's still up to the picture industry. Given its support, verbally and actively, the Movie Bill that comes up shortly can be pushed through. It is a fair and equitable bill that will do credit to both the state and the industry—and that's a brand of patriotism that the picture business can afford to subscribe to and buy.

Kelton's Black Eye Breaks Into Print

Radio disclosed Saturday that the black eye sported by Pert Kelton during the making of "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" was the work of a make-up artist who painted it about the Kelton orb for purposes of story.

The ringer, glimpsed one day as Miss Kelton was at lunch at the Radio commissary, has resulted in a raft of publicity through the nation's news columns and fan magazines, all of the speculative sort. Player was personally embarrassed by the incident, but Radio reaped a harvest of pre-release exploitation on the picture as a result.

Large Membership Claimed by Union

New York.—The secretary of the newly formed Theatre and Amusement Employes' Union, Local 113, claims more than 2000 workers already have been enrolled.

Two mass meetings were held last week in furtherance of American Federation of Labor plans thoroughly to organize white collar and other workers in the amusement industry, the campaign starting in the east. Another meeting will be held this week.

One of the chief objects of the organization as held out to prospective members is securing a scale higher than that incorporated in the NRA code for this class of workers.

Dud Nichols Given New Ticket at Fox

His two-year contract expiring, Dudley Nichols has been awarded a new deal with Fox on a group picture arrangement. Writer, regarded as one of the company's aces, foregoes his usual weekly pay check in preference to a lump sum per picture deal with Sol Wurtzel giving him a sizable tilt over his old contract.

First of his picture deals is on a loanout to Jesse Lasky to write the screen play for "Grand Canary."

Kay Francis Returns, With 'The Key' Likely Her Next

Kay Francis returned to town Saturday on the Chief from her month's vacation in New York. Miss Francis will probably have "The Key" as her next Warner vehicle. She is already set for the role of Josephine in "Napoleon," with Edward G. Robinson, but the picture will not get under way until Frank Borzage, slated to direct, has finished "Little Man, What Now?" for Universal.

Raft To Take Vacation After 'Nick the Greek'

George Raft will make one picture, "Nick the Greek," for Charles R. Rogers on completion of "Trumpet Blows" for Paramount and will then hop off for Europe, accompanied by his bodyguard, Mac Grey.

The player has obtained a three months' vacation from the studio at that time.

Jones-McNutt to Do Own

Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt are fninishing up on the script of "Fifty-two Weeks for Fleurette," the Claudette Colbert picture which Louis D. Lighton is supervising, and will now start preparation on the second picture for their own production unit titled "The Son Comes Up." Production will get under way in about five weeks, with Richard Arlen in the top spot.

Angel on Wurtzel's List

Exercising its option on Heather Angel for another year, Fox has notified its bookkeeping department to make out the British import's first salary check on the extended ticket against the Sol Wurtzel picture "Murder in Trinidad."

Jason and Burton Tagged

Radio Saturday signed Will Jason and Val Burton, song writing team, to write the music for the next Wheeler and Woolsey feature comedy, "Frat Heads." Ben Holmes and Eddie Kaufman are scripting, with Louis Brock set to direct.

Hugh Herbert Renewed

Warners cut a coupon off the contract held by Hugh Herbert and the comedian remains with the company for another six months. His deal was set by Bren-Orsatti.

Gloria Shea in 'U' Short

Warren Doane signed Gloria Shea Saturday for the role opposite Sterling Halloway in an untitled short subject he is making for Universal. Walter Kane of the Weber office negotiated.

GOVERNMENT ON A SPREE

gentlemen to the impertinence, the crass insolence of such a questionnaire?

Let's look at it from another angle.

Certainly there are many of us employees in the picture business who would be tickled to hear the exact figures on what THE FELLOW ABOVE US gets.

That's human nature.

Certainly there are a hundred thousand picture stockholders —just as there are a million bank depositors, foreign loan holders, and what not—who will delight in seeing anybody at all pilloried in a headline for having made money.

But when you finish with the delight of taking the cream off the milk—what have you left?

Huh?

Just supposing that the replies to the questionnaires showed that Greta Garbo made a million dollars last year. Is there a stockholder of MGM in this wide, broad country who would take it on his personal shoulders to FIRE Greta Garbo tomorrow?

Suppose the questionnaire showed a figure beyond the dreams of a District of Columbia civil service worker for Irving Thalberg's annual check?

Would you, or I, or anyone with a smattering of business sense, let Irving Thalberg get away from our organization?

Suppose—and keep on "supposing" until you fold up in dreams—and you can't get anything but ridiculous suppositions that can't stand up on reason except with the statement:

The public has to get some pap to keep its eyes the right way. Congressmen need something about which to make speeches. Moving pictures are the heart of American life. Let's use the movies.

May we be pardoned for striking what may seem like a childish note in this ten-point column?

Why hasn't the questionnaire asked what salary Louis B. Mayer pays his valet?—or what allowance Sam Goldwyn gives his wife for clothes and house expenses?

There's just as much logic and just as much reason.

Come out in the open and be frank, gentlemen of the Brain Trust. If this Government only recognized Russia because it was already prepared to go further than Russia in the snooping and prying and sniffing into private business—why not say so?

Why make the picture business the medium of another "Noble Experiment"—after the manner in which the American voter has shown what he thinks of "noble experiments"?

It is our firm conviction that the picture industry can ignore every single one of these questionnaires.

Why?

Because, first of all, the only department of government that is entitled to these figures receives them now with due diligence—the income tax department.

Second, because when the income tax was first inflicted on the American public a great play was made of the solemn promise that all figures presented WOULD BE ABSOLUTELY CONFIDENTIAL.

That was a covenant with the American people which the United States Government has flagrantly violated.

And, lastly, because the Government hasn't—in the case of the motion picture industry which has neither asked, nor hinted, nor hoped for any Government help in its troubles—a SINGLE, SOLITARY SHRED OF LEGAL RIGHT to go before the Supreme Court of the United States and force anyone to answer these questionnaires.

Thank God for the Supreme Court!

Keaton and Weil Take Tiff to Court

Alleging breach of contract, Jesse Weil, publicity man, filed suit Saturday against Buster Keaton for $104,000, according to Gordon Levoy, Weil's attorney.

Weil charges he held a six-picture contract with Keaton when the comedian signed with Educational through Leo Morrison. Agent, when informed of the action, claimed Educational looked over the Weil contract and decided it was not exclusive.

Ates in Court Scrap Over N. O. Gambling Debt

Municipal Court Judge Arthur Crum set aside Saturday the default judgment against Rosco Ates in the suit brought by A. L. Pillsbury for $225. Action was on the motion of Ates' attorney, Roger Marchetti.

When the case comes to trial it will be one of the rare instances of a suit tried under the laws of another state. Ates, who is alleged to have borrowed the money from Pillsbury while shooting crap with the plaintiff in New Orleans, will contend that the debt falls under the head of gambling and is illegal in the southern metropolis.

Two New Pics Start At Paramount Today

Paramount placed two pictures into work today, the Bing Crosby picture, "We're Not Dressing," with Carole Lombard playing the feminine lead opposite him, and Norman Taurog directing, and the next George Raft vehicle, "Trumpet Blows," with Frances Drake playing the feminine lead and Stephen Roberts directing.

Arline Judge and Hubby Back From New York

Wesley Ruggles and wife, Arline Judge, returned to Hollywood last night from a short visit to New York. Ruggles will direct "Yonder Lies Jericho" as his next assignment for Paramount and Miss Judge will go in a featured spot in "The Firebrand" as her next job for Twentieth Century.

Mono. Reopens Wed.

Monogram will awake from its month's siesta Wednesday when W. T. Lackey puts "The Loud Speaker" into production with Ray Walker in the lead and Joseph Santley directing. This will be the first of four productions to be made by the plant in as many weeks.

Bill Frawley Not Tested

While William Frawley has been considered and still is under consideration for the press agent role in "Twentieth Century" at Columbia, he has never been tested for the spot. Frawley is now under contract to Paramount.

Barnett in Hoffman Pic

M. H. Hoffman has signed Vince Barnett for the comedy lead in "Take the Witness," Liberty's next production. Leo Morrison set the ticket.

Universal Creates a New Comedy Team for Your Box Office

For years Mr. Horton and Miss Oliver have 'stolen the show' from the foremost stars of stage and screen. Together they make a starring team without an equal. The funniest situation comedy in years has been wisely chosen to introduce them.

GERMAN FILMS IN CHAINS

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•IF this industry is wondering why it has been exclusively selected for a national prying and snooping siege, the question can be answered very easily.

First of all, we brought it on ourselves in the preliminary code proceedings at Washington.

When the New York executives thought they had a corner on "influence" they shoved through a plank for a curb on excessive players' salaries.

And yipped with glee.

When the whirlwind was at its height someone started pointing a finger at the executives, and asking about excessive desk salaries, duplicated salaries in a multiplicity of corporations, relatives' pension lists, and what-not.

And we are reaping the whirlwind.

Because the backbiting was so delightful no one recalled the whole thing was none of Washington's business.

But there is another reason, equally important. More legislative moves are a result of loose "out of hours" talk by those to be ultimately affected than is generally realized.

And it is a disease of this business to be always ready to shoot a barb at the other fellow's alleged incompetence or his excessive earnings.

The director who pulls every wire to get his girl friend, his brother-in-law, his massager, on the studio payroll is the loudest in the raucous laughter at the owner of the company who, with millions of his own money invested, dares to give a job to a relative.

There are other examples. You don't need our pointing them out—they're all too common. You know yourselves how a picture conversation never needs its second breath before it becomes a knocking session.

It's our indoor sport, and our outdoor vocation.

We are told the boys did quite a bit of this gabbing in the long weary hotel lobby hours in Washington. To very willing ears. To wily Washingtonians who have been playing the game of listening to industrial Babbits for years.

We fed them.

Now we have to take the punishment.

Exhibitors Set Date

New York.—March 10 has been set as the tentative date for convening in Hollywood this year's national convention of the MPTOA.

Zanft Reported Due To Open Agency

Major John Zanft, former head of Fox theatres, who arrived on the West Coast recently for the purpose of associating himself with an established agency, is reported to be making plans to go into the business as a "lone wolf."

Zanft had deals on with M. C. Levee and Phil Berg, but neither of the agencies could see his terms.

Bernard Garber, Young Writer, Auto Fatality

Bernard Garber, nephew of David Garber, Charles Rogers' art director, was instantly killed early yesterday morning just outside of Gallup, New Mexico, when a bursting tire overturned his car.

Garber, a popular figure among the younger writers, was journeying east in response to nibbles by the Theatre Guild on a play which he had written in collaboration with Michael Simmons.

Nazis Now Ready For Action On Long Forecast Rules To Govern All Phases Of Pictures

Berlin.—The Nazis are now ready to swing into action on the picture industry. All the various rules and regulations hinted at in recent months, some of them in operation by unwritten law, have been collated and under a control set up in the Film Chamber will now go into immediate effect.

Reporting to their superiors at Washington yesterday the United States Department of Commerce at Berlin tells of the complete reorganization of the German picture industry which the Government now puts into action.

Cotton Warburton Starts Film Career As Cutter

Irvine "Cotton" Warburton, the University of Southern California's All-American quarterback, yesterday, started working at a part time job on the Warner lot. He was assigned to learn the cutting end of the business.

Show Contracts On Pickford P. A. Deals

Contradicting reports from New York that the lowdown on Mary Pickford's personal appearance salary was $6500 a week, N. A. McKay, executive for Miss Pickford, yesterday allowed a Reporter representative to examine the actual contracts for her appearances to date.

Miss Pickford's Paramount, New York, contract called for $12,500 for the week and fifty-fifty over $60,000; the Chicago deal, $10,000, splitting over $50,000, with this run showing a few thousand to split; and the current Metropolitan deal in Boston, $10,000, with the split figure $50,000.

Under the deals the star has the privilege of okaying the picture that will play with her appearance; while the theatre companies also stand all additional salaries in the playlet cast.

Cummings Price $30,000

Just a gentle idea of what Benn Levy thinks of his wife, Constance Cummings, is apparent in his counseling the player to ask $30,000 per picture on a free-lance basis. Her Twentieth Century deal, a twenty-four week ticket, expires January 20, with no option stipulated.

Para. Adds Color Cartoon

New York.—Paramount is the latest to add a color cartoon series to its list, with Max Fleischer, producer of the organization's cartoons for years, slated to make the subject. The series will be known as "Color Classics."

Shearer Temporarily Out

Norma Shearer has been ill for the past few days and MGM is shooting around her in her picture, "Rip Tide." The star is expected to return in a day or two to resume work.

SEEK FORECLOSURE FOR 4 PARA BROOKLYN HOUSES

New York.—Still another chapter is going to be written in untangling the maze of Paramount's affairs. The Manufacturers' Trust Company, as trustee of $9,250,000 of bonds of the bankrupt Allied Owners Corp., has asked the court for permission to foreclose on four Brooklyn theatres, the Paramount, Pitkin, Kings, Valencia, and one in Alabama.

These houses were built by Allied Owners for Paramount, but the latter

WRITERS WRANGLE BUT ELECTION SAILS THROUGH

Non-Guild Faction Puts Up Argument

At a meeting of which six of some two hundred writers were non-Guild members, leaders of the Screen Writers' Guild put on a battle among themselves which repaid the non-member contingent for their trouble in putting in an appearance.

But when the votes were counted, the non-guild members had been put in their place—the election being carried entirely by the Guild's own slate. John Howard Lawson was elected to the code authority. Ernest Pascal and Wells Root were set in for the Agency Committee; and the nine suggested for Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt's selection of five for the writer-producer board (5-5 committee) were Oliver H. P. Garrett, Rupert Hughes, Ralph Block, John F. Natteford, Seton I. Miller, Gladys Lehman, Samuel K. Ornitz, John Emerson and James Gleason.

The early battle was on the objective of the meeting, called for the purpose of getting every film writer in Hollywood to elect eleven members to three code boards, giving the impression that the Guild was controlling the situation as regards writer affairs. John Emerson precipitated the argument, declaring that the slate of nominees selected by the Guild element did not include a non-Guilder and would, he maintained, give Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt the impression that the writer organization was attempting to force him to accept Guild members to the exclusion of the minority of non-Guilders.

Opposed to his point of view was Oliver H. P. Garrett. He declared the fact that the Guild included ninety per cent of the Hollywood writers would make the contested impression inevitable anyway. Richard Schayer, however, sprang to support Emerson and demanded that Waldemar Young, a non-member and a factor in the rival Academy, be placed on the Guild's own slate. Eddie Eliscu joined in with the motion that in place of the eight previously planned for selection from fourteen writers nominated the number be enlarged to include a ninth writer, leaving it to the meeting to do the electing of Young.

As the bone of contention, Young demanded to have his name withdrawn, but was over-ridden despite his apparent feeling of being used as a helpless pawn.

Another highlight of the meeting came in a vicious slam by Samuel K. Ornitz against agents during the nominations for the agents' committee.

Block carried 132 proxies, fifty of non-members and voted them at his own discretion as a result of the Emerson-Garrett encounter. The proxies evidently carried the election.

Junior Cracks

When Eddie Buzzell protested that parlor plays were out of his line and that he didn't believe he could handle the direction of "Bachelor Wife" as he would wish to, Junior Laemmle remarked, "Okay, we'll send you to Mrs. Ward's finishing school for two weeks."

Helen Westley Returns To N.Y. For Guild Play

Helen Westley, actress member of the New York Theatre Guild, will finish her role in "House of Rothschild" this week and departs next Monday for New York, where she will immediately start rehearsals for the Theatre Guild's next production, "Thou Shalt Not Die." This is John Wexley's play based upon the Scottsboro case.

Miss Westley's first trip to Hollywood has kept her here four months, in which time she has worked in "Moulin Rouge" for Twentieth and "Strange Holiday" for Paramount, and the "Rothschild" picture also for Twentieth Century.

Col. Comes Out of Lull

Two features and one short, the first new subjects since December 20, start at Columbia today, bringing the studio out of its recent lull. David Burton directs "Sisters Under the Skin," which formerly was titled "Sonata," and C. C. Coleman puts "Storm at Midnight" before the cameras. Jules White directs the short, "Playful Husbands."

Lehman Repeats at Para.

Gladys Lehman has been assigned to write the screen play of "Lovers in Quarantine" for Paramount. No cast or director set as yet. Miss Lehman recently completed the script of "Strange Holiday" in collaboration with Maxwell Anderson.

Berkeley's First as Megger

Busby Berkeley's first picture as a full director will be "Dames," an original by Robert Lord. Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell have the top spots in the feature, which will have music created by Warren and Dubin.

Hellman to Schulberg

Sam Hellman, finishing the dialogue job on "Murder in the Vanities," swings over to the B. P. Schulberg unit to handle a similar assignment on "Little Miss Marker," working with William Lippman.

Universal Buys 'Fanny'

Universal yesterday closed a deal with Marcel Pagnol for the purchase of "Fanny," his latest play, produced in France. William Wyler will direct it under the supervision of Henry Henigson.

'Trigger' to 'Spitfire'

Radio has changed the title of the latest Katharine Hepburn starring vehicle from "Trigger" to "Spitfire."

LaRue-Patrick In Leads For Hoffman

Borrowing Jack LaRue and Gail Patrick from Paramount, M. H. Hoffman has rounded out his cast for "Take the Stand," which Phil Rosen places into production for Liberty Friday at Talisman studios.

Wanger Plans Second For Jeanette MacDonald

Walter Wanger has assigned Salka Viertel to script an untitled original story for Jeanette MacDonald at MGM.

Producer already has one MacDonald subject on his schedule, "Duchess of Delmonico's," which starts Jan. 29.

Para. Seeks Jean Parker

Paramount is trying to borrow Jean Parker from MGM for the feminine lead in "Honor Bright," which Louis D. Lighton is supervising. The screen play is being written by Austin Parker and Sylvia Thalberg.

'SORRELL AND SON' WELL MADE BUT STORY HAS AGED

H. B. Warner Liked In New British Pic

"SORRELL AND SON"
British and Dominions-United Artists
Direction .....Jack Raymond
Based on novel by....Warwick Deeping
Screen Play.....Lydia Hayward
Photography .....Cyril Bristow
Cast: H. B. Warner, Peter Penrose, Hugh Williams, Winifred Shotter, Margot Graham, Donald Calthrop, Wally Patch, Evelyn Roberts, Hope Davy, Louis Heywood, Ruby Miller.

New York.—A British talking remake, evidently produced by them in the fond hope that this particular story has now become a classic that cannot fail and that it is about time that the English got busy and paid picture tribute to an English story and author. So be it. It remains to be reported that next to but not quite close to "Henry the Eighth" this is by far the most workmanlike job from a production standpoint that has come to town from England. However, the story has grown a little thin and ragged around the edges and somehow the tale of the meek man who eventually inherited the earth is not quite so sad nor so important as it once seemed.

The picture is good and definitely in line with the better productions program of England. It isn't possible to guarantee, however, that the sobs in it can successfully overcome the familiarity of a trite story twice-told.

With one eye undoubtedly on American distribution, H. B. Warner draws the part of Stephen Sorrell and does a creditable piece of work. As further concession to the American market, the dialogue goes in for American expressions like "swell" as an adjective and "kid" for child. Miss Hayward has been most sparing with her dialogue, thinking perhaps that action and pictures are synonymous but it would have helped considerably to have had a few good dramatic conversational scenes because Mr. Raymond has chosen to direct the picture at rather a slow pace and seeks to build up what little moments of suspense the work has by making you wait for obvious answers. The method is a little less than effective. England does come through, however, with another very attractive young miss by the name of Winifred Shotter, whom you'll undoubtedly want to see in more and bigger parts and the photography and recording are excellent.

Finish Next Cagney Yarn

Gene Markey and Kathryn Scola yesterday turned in the completed original screen play of "Goin' to Town," which will be James Cagney's next picture for Warners. No director or additional cast set as yet.

Harris to New York

Elmer Harris is leaving for New York shortly to supervise the production of his latest play titled "Celebrities," which will go into preparation soon for a Broadway opening.

The First Lady

Washington.—Mrs. Roosevelt caught Doris Kenyon's act at the Earle in Washington last week, went backstage, introduced herself, and the next day gave a tea for Miss Kenyon at the White House.

Chevalier's First For Korda An Original

Chicago.—Maurice Chevalier has passed through here on his return to Hollywood, being due there Wednesday afternoon. He was accompanied by Marcel Valle, French actor, who will play Popoff in the French version of "The Merry Widow."

While here Chevalier disclosed that his first for Alexander Korda in London would not be "Lafayette" but "Mister the Marshal," an original by two French authors.

Hornblow's First at Para.

Arthur Hornblow will produce "Pursuit of Happiness" as his first assignment at Paramount. This play is still running on Broadway and Paramount expects to use some of the players from the original cast. Walter De Leon has been assigned to write the screen adaptation of this play.

Newton Tag Dropped

Warners failed to take up the option on Theodore Newton's contract yesterday. The player was brought out from New York by Warners a year ago under a term contract. He has just finished a featured role in "Upper World."

Ellis in 'Trumpet Blows'

Edward Ellis was signed by Paramount yesterday for a featured role in the George Raft picture, "Trumpet Blows," which Stephen Roberts is directing. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

President Invites 'Joe E.'

Joe E. Brown has accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to attend his birthday party in Washington January 30. He will leave Hollywood this week for the east via San Francisco.

Sistrom Gets Film

New York.—In settlement of William Sistrom's suit against Fox and World Wide, distribution rights on "Crooked Circle" have been reassigned to him.

Powell in 'The Key'

William Powell has been given the top spot in "The Key," scheduled to get under way in about two weeks.

Kay Francis will have the feminine lead if she wants the part.

See Corinne for Play

Edward Belasco, of the Belasco and Curran team, is negotiating with M. C. Levee for the services of Corinne Griffith to take the top spot in the Los Angeles production of "Goodbye Again."

Cooper Has 17 Set For Early Making

Merian C. Cooper, Radio production chief, yesterday announced the immediate production of seventeen new pictures.

These productions will go into work within three months, with seven of them to go into work within seven weeks. Among those to start soon are: "Finishing School," "Crime Doctor," "Family Man," "Dance of Desire," "Strictly Dynamite" and "Alien Corn." Others to follow are: "Of Human Bondage," "Stingaree," "Fugitive From Glory," "Sea Girl," "Green Mansions," "Devil's Disciple," "Murder on the Blackboard," a Wheeler and Woolsey picture titled "Frat Heads," a Lou Brock production, and "Joan of Arc."

Pine Goes East To Take Over John Flinn Duties

Bill Pine will assume the duties with Paramount in the east relinquished by John Flinn to take up his code post. He will continue to supervise the west coast advertising department, which will be handled by William Thomas. Pine will alternate pretty frequently between east and west.

Publicity posts in the east and west will continue to be headed by Al Wilkie and Tom Baily, respectively, rumors of any contemplated changes there being flatly denied by Robert Gillham, director of publicity and advertising.

Cabot to 'Finishing School'

Bruce Cabot was definitely set yesterday for the leading male role in "Finishing School" with Ginger Rogers, Billie Burke and Mitzi Green. Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls Jr. will co-direct and production will get under way within two weeks.

Hathaway Stepping Out

Henry Hathaway puts his saddle and spurs away in mothballs and goes to his first important directorial job with the piloting of "Come On, Marines." Paramount takes him out of the western class, giving him to Al Lewis for supervision.

Leisen East to See Play

Mitchell Leisen and Edgar Anderson leave tomorrow by plane on a trip to New York, where the Paramount director will get some first-hand data on "Murder at the Vanities." Returns here Monday.

Pascal Completes Novel

Ernest Pascal has completed work on "A Woman at Thirty," a novel, and is on his way to New York to consult his publisher. He will return to the west coast February 1 to do a script.

Pathe-Natan Signs Clair

Paris.—The Pathe Natan firm has signed Rene Clair to a one-picture deal, the subject to be "The Last Billionaire."

Yesterday in New York with HELEN GWYNNE

Of course it was a benefit run by Mrs. Hearst to help her precious Milk Fund, but even so, you'd never have guessed that New York could suddenly become so tennis-conscious. The Garden was jammed and then some for the famous Tilden-Vines match which the old master won quite handily. However, besides the ultra high-hat crowd which included the Jock Whitneys, who are fast becoming associated with the picture business, there were Tallulah Bankhead, Sam and Ethel Barrymore Colt, Arthur Lubin, practically the entire MGM staff, Marion Saportas, Tommy Manville, reunited with his bride, and hundreds of others.

Fox gave a very elegant cocktail party for Eric Charral and Charles Boyer in the Club rooms of the roof garden at the Waldorf-Astoria. And if you think that sounds complicated—just try to find it some time when you're in a hurry. Much as we like the Waldorf, we must admit that life could be made considerably happier for a poor New York correspondent if there were some way of making that famous hostelry more compact. We were told to take the East elevators. So we found the North, South and West elevators; the North lounge, at least three bars and after meeting Richard Wallace three times because of walking around in circles, we finally got to the East elevators and found them tucked away behind a sign which read "Park Avenue." Of course, we enjoyed meeting Mr. Wallace three times, it's always a pleasure, but since Mr. Wallace unfortunately is not a permanent feature of the place, this is just a warning to you to take along a scout or just pick a nice comfortable corner and wait for the party to come to you. . . . Anyway, Mr. Charral is really a very nice gent and was responsible for the production of "White Horse Tavern" in London and is on his way to the coast to direct a picture both in French and Engish that will star Charles Boyer, who is quite the French idol.

George Bancroft is play-shopping and may have one any minute which will play the road for some time before coming into New York. . . . Ethel Barrymore sailed for London the other day where she will appear in a Music Hall and possibly a play while there. . . . Moss Hart has gone into hiding for the rest of the winter to do a script and a play. And if he sees his shadow when he emerges, Spring will probably be just six weeks away.

Simplified Script For Radio's 'Mansions'

The final version of Radio's "Green Mansions," adapted by Tom Kilpatrick, will be handed to Director Ernest Schoedsack in a more simplified form than the regular run of shooting scripts. There will be no camera angles or stage directions and it will be limited to master scenes and dialogue.

None of the cast has been chosen for this production, to which Merian Cooper is giving personal supervision.

'COME OF AGE' PLAY IN VERSE TOO SLIGHT FOR MUCH SUCCESS

Judith Anderson Hit in Role, Tho

"COME OF AGE"

Delos Chappell presents Judith Anderson in "Come of Age," a play in words and music by Clemence Dane and Richard Addinsell; staged by Miss Dane; settings by James Reynolds; orchestra conducted by Macklin Marrow. With Stephen Haggard, John W. Austin, Helen Wills, Dorothy Johnson, Ralph Stuart, Muriel Rahn, Frederick Lewis. At the Maxine Elliott Theatre.

New York.—Clemence Dane with her first offering in several seasons gives her mite to the great legend and tradition that was Thomas Chatterton. It is Miss Dane's idea to bring the poet back from death and up to date and no doubt as a special tribute to his genius Miss Dane has written the play entirely in verse. Well, that's all right—in spots—but for the most part it's weak and pallid stuff that too often descends to common doggerel. Since Chatterton was such a great poet and since Miss Dane chose to give him life again in the twentieth century it might have been better to have written it in blank verse, because as it stands it's pretty precious play-writing with a first act that shows promise, a second act that flatly denies that promise and a third act with one good scene.

Thomas Chatterton makes a bargain with Death to let him go back to life until he comes of age. (The boy committed suicide at seventeen.) He does this in order that he may know life and love. They both come along in the person of Judith Anderson, a slightly worn jade who refuses to acknowledge to herself that she really loves the boy until she has destroyed the beauty of his love in a drunken auction scene wherein she knocks him down to the highest bidder. The lady repents and the boy forgives, but he has come of age at last and death claims him again.

Ah, but that Judith Anderson is the one. An actress with a voice and a technique that succeeds in making you believe in the play and in the writing of it even when she speaks such poetry as "Let's not brawl, in the hall," or "Be back to fix, cocktails at six." The gal is magnificent, and while she's on the stage so is the play. And dividing the honors of the evening with Miss Anderson is the music by Richard Addinsell. Unless our ears fail us there are two hit numbers in the play, "Afraid of the Dark" and "River Music," and there's a song called, we think, "Too Many Things" that's good, too. But don't misunderstand, this is not a musical. The play has been conceived as a poetic symphony and the score is an integral part of the performance. And to Mr. Addinsell must go first honors, after Judith Anderson, because her task was the harder. They sent to England for Stephen Haggard to be the poet. Our guess is they could have found someone just as young and more of an actor right here.

Delay Warner Suit

New York.—The Department of Justice anti-trust suit against Warner Brothers scheduled for trial in the United States District Court in New York, has been postponed to March. This suit, which is based on the acquisition of First National, has been pending over two years.

Seven B'way Plays Close in the Week

New York.—Seven New York plays closed last week, and it looks as though the turn of the new year is bringing about a survival of the fittest with a vengeance.

The victims are "Re-Echo," "Jezebel," "The Gods We Make," "A Divine Moment," "Oliver Oliver," "The Dark Tower," and the Cornelia Otis Skinner show.

Dowling To Handle RKO 'European Managership'

New York.—In the new foreign set-up of RKO which brought Phil Reisman to that department in general supervision, the title of Ambrose Dowling will be "European manager," according to announcement yesterday by Ned Depinet.

Dowling will have headquarters in London, and sails Saturday, accompanied by Phil Reisman.

Chester Beecroft Heads Florida Film Company

St. Petersburg.—The Sun Haven Studios in this Florida city has been reorganized and Chester Beecroft has been named chief studio executive. James F. Sammon will be the studio's New York representative. Production is to start around January 22 and a story is now in preparation based on romantic incidents of Florida's early history.

Sales Tax for Missouri

St. Louis.—Missouri has passed the one-half of one per cent sales tax, killing two other tax bills affecting the picture industry. The bills killed were a levy of 1½ cents (ticket tax) up to 25 cents and a straight 10 per cent on all tickets over 25 cents and a one-cent footage tax on all negative and positive.

Remodel Loew's N.Y. Roof

New York.—Confidence in better business to come is shown by Loew's, Inc., decision to remodel the New York Roof and build it to a class atmosphere that will do away with the daily change. Present plan is a Monday, Wednesday and Friday change after the alterations are completed.

Cantor in Personal for Para

New York.—Eddie Cantor will be the star attraction at the Paramount starting Friday, with "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" the screen attraction.

Para Forms Board National Advisers

New York.—Ralph A. Kohn announces the formation of a National Advisory Committee by Paramount. Members will be chosen where there are Paramount theatre associates. The committee will exchange information, policies, maintaining close contact between associates and the home office. They will meet at least once every three months with executives of Paramount's theatre department.

Plans call for six members in Atlanta, the Southwest, Chicago, New England, west of Chicago and Canada.

Knoedler Productions To Film Tale of Indian Life

New York.—Leonie Knoedler Productions, Inc., has been formed by Leonie Knoedler, the daughter of the head of the Knoedler Art Galleries. Features will be produced of Indian life. The first will go into production in March at Santa Fe., N. M., and will be titled "Pueblo." Harry Behn is preparing a script from Philip Stevenson's story of "The American."

Davis Signs Three

New York.—Bert Lahr, Joe Penner and Ethel Waters have been signed by Meyer Davis-Van Beuren Productions on long term contracts for shorts.

Dividend for Loew's

New York.—The Board of Directors of Loew's, Inc., has declared a quarterly dividend of $1.62½ a share on the outstanding $6.50 cumulative preferred stock, payable February 15 to stockholders of record January 31.

Tristate of Omaha Buys Publix Nebraska Assets

Omaha.—The assets of the bankrupt Publix Nebraska, Inc., in this city was sold for $14,000 to Tristate Theatres Company, of which A. H. Blank is president. Assets sold were the fixtures of the Capitol Theatre in Grand Island, Neb., and the World and State Theatres here.

Stephen Haggard, N. Y. Player, Sought by WB

New York.—Stephen Haggard, of the current play "Come of Age," has clicked with the picture scouts and Warners are particularly hot after him.

But Delos Chappell has Haggard under personal contract and so far has refused to release him for picture work.

Neilan Film Out Jan. 29

New York.—"The Social Register," made in the east under the supervision and direction of Marshall Neilan and starring Colleen Moore, will have its national release by Columbia Jan. 29.

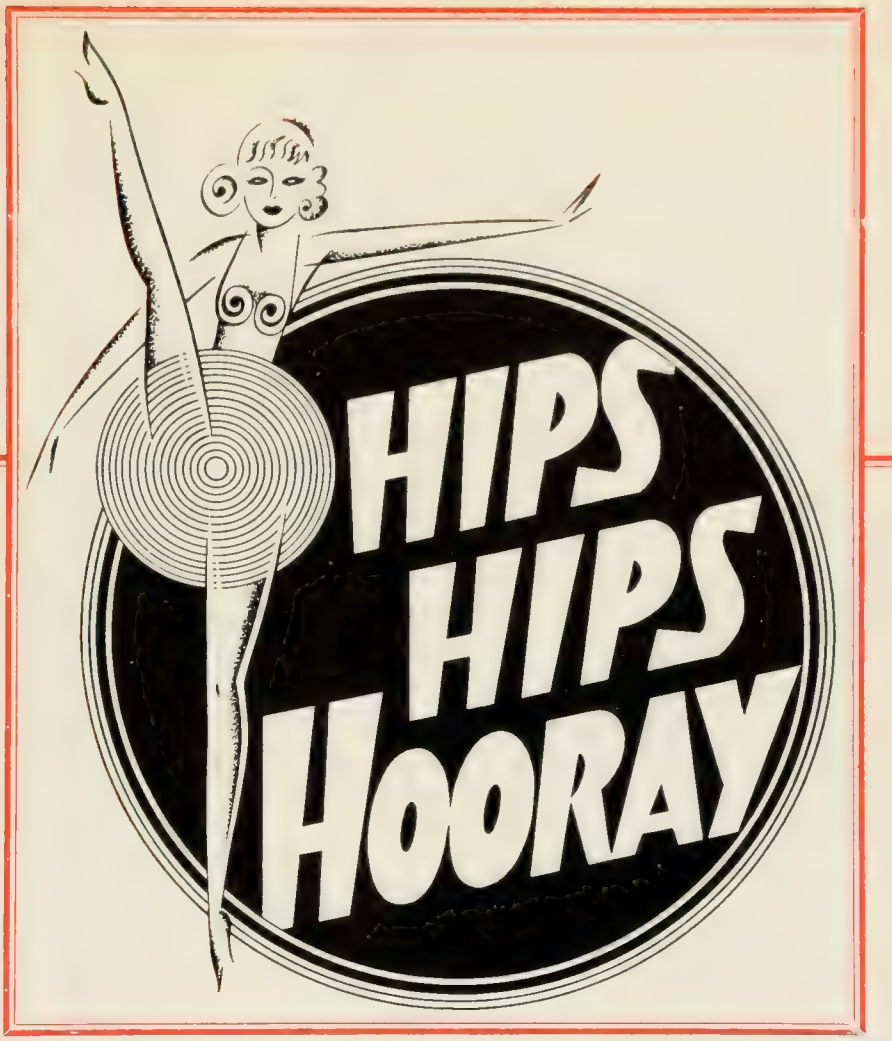
Shorts Week for Para.

New York.—Paramount will stage a "National Short Subjects Week" for seven days beginning February 11.

Do You Realize

that you must provide today for the comforts of tomorrow. To do this you should adopt a policy of placing a definite amount of your income in sound investments.

High grade Municipal bonds for years have been the choice of conservative investors who require safety of principal, together with a dependable income. They have stood the test of the past three years, and those fortunate enough to have placed their funds in such securities find themselves today with their investments unimpaired.



Are you following the same policy?

REELING around LONDON

It's time someone gave Jimmie Barker a few handclaps for his make-up work in "Henry the Eighth"; it was he who made Laughton look so amazingly old in that last sequence; amongst other things. . . . Joe Rock is still in the metropolis and looks like hooking up with a studio here. . . . Joe Schenck was one Hollywood exec who managed to keep his press statement back until he wanted to spill it. . . . Robertson Hare, British comic, just took the British pic "Turkey Time"—tucked it under his arm and walked right away with it. And make no mistake with this and "Aunt Sally." C. M. Woolf's Gaumont boys have a coupla hearty box office winners for England. . . . Incidentally Tim Whelan, who directed it, has scored his second megaphone hit for Gaumont now. . . . We congratulate Metro on the title change of "Chris Bean"; for that matter isn't it time the lot figured out some titles that don't have to be changed on or before or after release? . . . Or is that kinda mean of us?

Charles B. Cochrane, Fox associate producer and famous stage man in his own right, zooming up to his suite of Bond Street offices of a morning. . . . Helen Lewis, who was accidentally engaged by B and D because they thought she was a writer, is currently editing films for Gaumont. . . . Wouldn't it be a positive sensation if someone made a musical AND DID NOT HAVE A SINGLE OVERHEAD SHOT! . . . Movieland contributes quite a lot of fight enthusiasts in this burg, as in Hollywood; a few weeks ago there were Tom Walls, W. J. Gell, Ernest Fredman and Julius Hagen amongst the onlookers and Ralph Bettinson, now giving Hollywood the once over, had a farewell party that included Phil Tannura, Harold M. Young and John Paddy Carstairs. . . . And further along Bob Flaherty had his Men of Aran present who, Bob told us, didn't see much of the fight all on account of the fact that they were signing autographs all the time! . . . Then, to make it even more filmy, as a coupla duff heavyweights leaned on each other's shoulders, a voice in back of the hall shouted, "Why don't you boys come up and see me some time?"

Cary Grant, who had a coupla real beeg offers from British International and British and Dominions, was sitting up in bed over Christmas, in a nursing home, figuring out a crossword puzzle sent him by Charles Buster Laughton; whilst booful Virginia Cherrill pottered in and out with flowers, grapes and the what have you! . . . Some astute movie man will grab Jack (Singing Boxer) Doyle for movies soon; he's a-one with the femmes! . . . And whilst suggesting talent to you-all in Hollywood, we think Desmond (Monocle Boxer) Jeans would be a sure fire hit in Hollywood; he's a great type.

T. Hayes Hunter (with the heaviest American accent in town) walking along Piccadilly with Junior Hunter (who has the heaviest British accent in the metropolis)! . . . London Films are trying hard to get Benn Levy back to script for them, and we've an idea Laughton's behind the plan because we remember him raving to us in Hollywood about Benn's adaptation of "Devil and the Deep." . . . Frank Capra drew the critics' raves this week here, "Lady for a Day" getting a belated release, that's why. . . . Funny how everyone thinks in terms of costume pics now; we say that it doesn't matter a heck what the pic is about so long as it's a HIT and ENTERTAINS. . . . Manchester crowded with film folk over the holidays, June, Lothar Mendes, Jack Buchanan, Alfred Drayton, Heinrix Frankel, Elsie Randolph, Marie Ney and William Kendall amongst the many.

Cyril Gardner Acting

London.—What will Cyril Gardner do next? He has turned actor and is playing a more or less minor role in "What Shall It Profit a Woman" at Sound City.

Directing the picture is Ivar Campbell. Valerie Taylor and Stewart Rome head the cast, which includes Kathleen Kelly, Tyrrell Davis and Phillip Strange.

Gourdeau on MGM Slate

London.—E. R. Gourdeau has secured a quota release through MGM and is making "Brent Pays" at the Worton Hall studio under the newly formed Interworld Pictures banner. Harry Hughes directs.

Julius Hagen, who operates the rental studio, announces he is enlarging the plant to accommodate more independent production.

First 'Peter Pan' Returns

London.—Nina Boucicault, Barrie's first "Peter Pan" in 1904, is appearing in "The Irresistible Marmaduke," which Edward Whiting is producing at the Embley Studio. Frank Richardson is directing the script from Ernest Denny's stage play. MGM releases.

'Cavalcade' Gets 'Em All

Sydney.—Fox's "Cavalcade" did the unexpected in the small town of Eltham. Town has a population of 2,000 and 1,700 clocked admissions were checked.

'Henry VIII' Having Good Rome Season

Rome.—The picture business is in a healthy state here. London Films is having a fine season with "Henry the Eighth," the Italians taking to it with the same enthusiasm as the rest of the world. The preparatory activity of Douglas Fairbanks in London has caused plenty of interest and his next picture is looked forward to with much interest. The Fairbanks name is still one of the top draws in this territory.

You've Got To Be Careful Making Pictures in France

Paris.—French producers of "Morin the Pig," the screen version of Guy deMaupassant's famous story, raised quite a ruckus in the small town of Eu.

The mayor of the town, who is named Morin, had never heard of the story and figured it was a dirty trick on the part of his political opponents. He banned the picture's advertising and now the Paris courts have taken it up.

Internal Strife for Stoll

London.—Reporting a profit of but $400 for the year, the ten million dollar Stoll Theatre Corporation witnessed a dispute among its executives which wound up with much discord and unpleasantness. Sir Oswald Stoll and Alderman Latham were the combatants.

Pittaluga Gets B-G Pics

Rome—A neat deal has been closed between British Gaumont and Pittaluga, the local company getting the London firm's product for Italy. First two pictures to be released here are the Italian versions of "Orders Is Orders" and "I Spy."

Ostrer's New Title

London.—Maurice Ostrer, who is probably as well known to Hollywood as he is to British film producers, has been invested with the important post of assistant managing director of British Gaumont.

Ralph Ince in England

London.—Ralph Ince popped up here playing the leading role in British International's "Love At Second Sight," which is shooting at Elstree studio. Paul Marzbech is directing.

FRENCH FINANCIAL GROUP AWAKEN TO FILM MAKING

Paris.—The French, always ready to follow a good tip when it comes their way, are exhibiting a very lively interest in motion picture production and indications are that Hollywood and London will soon have a powerful opponent in France's production activity. Financiers here have always followed business of an international type such as films and have come to the conclusion, after thorough study, that there are profits in well-managed production and distribution.

Extent of the newly awakened interest is evidenced by La Banque Prive, the most important private banking house here, announcing that it has established a separate branch for the exclusive financing of French film production and the discounting of paper backed with sound credit.

The bank is feeling out several producers, avowedly ready to finance twelve pictures immediately. The deal offered is one hundred percent financing, providing distribution contracts are set. The bank is prepared to incorporate individual producing companies, promote a nation-wide interest in production through the public sale of shares, and give the film makers a producer's profit if they can deliver.

Theatre Building

Sydney.—An anonymous writer in Martin Brennan's Australian trade-paper, Film Weekly, contributes a gem of advice for Hollywood producers. It is "When people start building theatres they dig a lot of holes. Let's hope they can climb out of them."

Australian Producers Boost Picture Budgets

Melbourne.—Australian producers are feeling the keen edge of competition in England and are being forced to step up their activities to maintain their place on the map.

Centenary Films here claims that it is going to spend $100,000 on its next two pictures, "Secret of the Skies" and "Something Different."

Soviet Films French Visit

Moscow.—The Stalin government is taking an official hand in the making of a picture from the newsreels covering the trip through Russia of France's Premier Herriot. It will be sync'd in Russian, English and French.

Laemmle Out; Peres In

Paris.—With Max Laemmle out as chief of the French division for Universal, Andre Peres has been elevated into the spot. Peres goes from the sales managership to the head of the branch in this country.

'Maternelle' a Berlin Hit

Berlin.—Universal's "La Maternelle" is breaking records here. Clicked off its 150th performance and still going strong. In these times and under present conditions that's something.

German Films

ness let them look at these rules to see some of the things that may still happen:

Double feature bills are absolutely abolished;

Minimum admission prices will be set by Government authority for various zones;

A control will be set up in the Government Film Chamber to positively regulate salaries of players and directors "to bring them down to levels commensurate with prevailing national ideals."

All players in the cast are to receive equal billing, and no effort is to be made to exploit any player or players as the star or stars of a picture;

Because of the double feature ban exhibitors may turn back any contracts already signed that they desire to.

American distributors here realize that they are facing lean days. First because of the flood of contracts that will be turned back for their English version pictures, exhibitors naturally retaining their German subjects when forced to pick; second, because they will now have to definitely plan to dub all subjects into German, increasing negative costs in a shrunken territory.

Seek Foreclosures

pulled a fast one, turning over operation of the houses to Loew's in return for a good deal on Paramount product in the Loew New York houses.

Argument on the foreclosure will come up January 19. Attorneys for Allied are opposing the move on the ground that it would nullify a contract between Allied and Loew's by which the latter has agreed to purchase the Valencia, Kings and Pitkins theatres for $11,000,000 with payments over a period of ten years.

New York REVIEWS

"BOMBAY MAIL"

Universal prod.; director, Edwin L. Marin; writers, L. G. Blochman, Tom Reed.

Palace Theatre

News: In spite of the colorful background, the various excitements of the action and the mysteriousness of the murders the picture hasn't the glamour that made "Shanghai Express" so thrilling and interesting a movie. It has no beautiful and mysterious Dietrich as passenger, and although the direction is smooth enough it hasn't been made with the same deftness that characterized the Von Sternberg film.
American: "Bombay Mail" provides entertainment as colorful, confusing and exciting as any railway station scene recently camera-captured. The confusion, perhaps, militates against the picture's full perfection. The action lacks precision and the script itself cohesion, but atmosphere is well established and suspense nicely sustained.
Times: Despite its definitely make-believe appearance, "Bombay Mail" is an active entertainment, and Mr. Lowe is properly suave and omniscient as the inspector.
World-Telegram: "Bombay Mail" is far from expert in its construction, direction and acting, but it has the virtue of being able to overcome most of its faults, and if taken for what it is intended to be—a good old-fashioned melodrama—it provides a fairly entertaining hour of film fare.
Post: Though the plot of "Bombay Mail" has been obviously patterned on its predecessors, and though there are portions of the story that are jumbled and confused, it cannot be denied that the mystery element is sustained throughout. Edmund Lowe is brisk and entertaining.
Sun: "Rome Express" and "Silk Express" are far superior to this rather jumbled but fairly well photographed and acted bit of hackish scrivening transpiring on a train from Calcutta to Bombay.
Journal: There's plenty of action in the film, the backgrounds are colorful and the melodramatics are amusing. The cast is large and capable, and Edmund Lowe acquits himself creditably in the role of the suave Inspector Dyke.

"BY CANDLELIGHT"

Universal prod.; director, James Whale; writers, Siegfried Geyer, Hans Kraly, F. Hugh Herbert and Ruth Cummings.

Roxy Theatre

Times: "By Candlelight" affords a pleasantly amusing diversion. It is shallow and somewhat obvious in spots, but its little intrigue is set forth with admirable cunning by James Whale and others.
American: A smartly amusing Continental comedy has been wrought into first rate film fun to usher in a bright and sparkling New Year season at the Roxy Theatre. It is romance through and through, romance taken with a grain of salt, light and laughing, always charming.
Herald-Tribune: "By Candlelight" should be set down as somewhat of a triumph for screen technique. Derived from a stage play that left much to be desired, the work has been molded into a suavely executed and delightfully amusing entertainment.
World-Telegram: "By Candlelight" is not the mightiest of so-called sophisticated comedy masterpieces, but I had the privilege of liking it—and that privilege has been rather rare in cinemaland recently.
Mirror: This charming, sly continental comedy represents the first boudoir picture of Director James Whale, who has specialized with brilliant success in Universal's fine series of thrillers. It is a triumph for him. A clever play, a captivating cast, smart dialogue, enchanting setting, attractive costumes are manipulated, with this director's skill, into a compact, finished light comedy.
News: Under the capable direction of James Whale, combined with the clever portrayals of Paul Lukas, Nils Asther and Elissa Landi, the screen version has lost none of the spicy flavor of the original.
Post: This familiar theme is not helped either by the dialogue, the direction or the acting. There seems to have been a disposition on the part of every one concerned in the picture to outdo himself in hilarity, with the result that the comedy is about as light and graceful as an overcrowded ferryboat.
Sun: The film, I feel, will fail to interest American audiences to any great extent. However, it is nicely if not cleverly done. James Whale has directed it with a certain amount of taste and charm.

Roach Tests Unknowns

Hal Roach yesterday tested William Felix Knight, Atwater Kent audition winner in 1931 and now appearing in Grauman's prologue, and Doris Paxton of the Pasadena Community Playhouse for featured spots in "Babes in Toyland." Studio hopes to find unknowns for the featured roles.

Kober Aids on 'Duchess'

Arthur Kober has been assigned to script "Duchess of Delmonico's" at MGM, collaborating with Edgar Allan Woolf and Harvey Thew. Picture is scheduled to get under way January 29 with Harry Beaumont directing and Jeanette MacDonald and Clark Gable in the leads.

"Don't miss this picture at the Roxy. Under the capable direction of James Whale, combining clever portrayals of Paul Lukas, Nils Asther and Elissa Landi, the screen version has lost none of the spicy flavor of the original." (THREE STARS)

—WANDA HALE,
New York Daily News.

"A smartly amusing Continental comedy has been wrought into a first rate fun film ushering in New Year season. . . . Elissa Landi at her best . . . Paul Lukas and Nils Asther polished and convincing Lotharios."

—REGINA CAREWE,
New York American.

"Gay comedy. It is touching, as well as spicy and witty, as diverting an hour's gaiety as the screen has offered this season. Treatment and acting lend it freshness and sparkle."

—BLAND JOHANESON,
New York Mirror.

" 'By Candlelight' should be set down as somewhat of a triumph for screen technique. The work has been molded into a suavely executed and delightfully amusing entertainment. The film has bettered its original."

—HOWARD BARNES,
New York Herald-Tribune.

" 'By Candlelight' . . . affords a pleasantly amusing diversion. Its little intrigue is set forth with admirable cunning by James Whale and others."

—MORDAUNT HALL,

" 'Nicely and cleverly done. The players . . . are ingratiating. James Whale has directed with taste and charm. . . . Those who see 'By Candlelight' will like it."

—JOHN S. COHEN, JR.
New York Sun.

"Continental romance, laughable and attractive always, makes splendid entertainment. . . . Film bears the belief that Elissa Landi might well forsake the drama for the lighter realm of farce and comedy."

—W. B.,
New York Journal.

"An excellent comedy. I had the privilege of liking it. The film ripples along delightfully. The authors have filled it with some amusing scenes. 'By Candlelight' owes a great deal to its actors and its director."

—WILLIAM BOEHNEL,
New York Telegram.

"You will find the picture highly enjoyable."

NEW SET-UP AT RADIO

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WHAT a spot for leadership!

A majority of the leading companies resent the snooping of the Government in internal affairs involved in the questionnaires now being sent out.

They fear the precedent for official meddling that will be established for once and for all by answering the questionnaires.

They are righteously indignant at the selection of the motion picture industry for this one form of insult.

They sincerely believe they cannot be compelled to comply.

But where is the leadership to band them together and to serve notice that the motion picture industry is not a group of infantile youngsters to be spanked at the whim or whimsy of politicians running wild with unaccustomed power?

Where is Will Hays these days?

There's a mystery.

Just because the country went Democratic have his bosses told Will Hays to sit in a corner, out of sight? And only emerge for "safe" platitudinous speeches?

Because if they only hired Will Hays because he was a Republican, they underrated his ability in the first place; and have overpaid him at all times.

Republicans didn't come that high back in Harding's time.

We are told with great solemnity that the questionnaires are to be kept "confidential"—between the Administrator, his Deputy and the latter's investigator.

Why the confessional seal if the questionnaires are to serve any purpose?

Of course they are to serve a purpose—the basis for rules and pseudo-legislation regulating salaries and compensation in the picture business.

If not, why get them?

So when you send in your filled-out questionnaire you are in effect saying—"When you three kind men, Administrator, Deputy and Investigator, look the questionnaires over and decide on rules to run my business, I will of course accept without a squawk. Because by answering your questionnaire I am tacitly consenting."

Face it, gentlemen. That's where it ends.

Happy Birthday!

Universal will throw a party this noon on the lot in honor of Carl Laemmle's sixty-seventh birthday. The feature of the occasion will be a sixty-seven pound chocolate cake.

Monogram-Erpi Tie Rumored in N. Y.

New York.—Reports that Monogram will switch to Western Electric sound from Balsey-Philips on March 1 have given new strength to rumors here that the Erpi organization will soon play an important part in Monogram financing.

Monogram financing for the past season has been by arrangement with Consolidated, the lab being at present involved in a tie-in with RCA for the operation of the Biograph studio here.

It looks as though Monogram's improvement in product and distribution has put it in a spot to be a bone of contention between the giant electrics.

Iron Out N. O. Trouble

Washington.—The National Labor Board hearing on the case of Loew's State New Orleans has been indefinitely postponed due to advices from that city that it is in process of amicable settlement, and a mutually agreeable decision would soon be reached. The case of the Dubinsky Circuit, Kansas City, has been referred to the St. Louis Labor Board.

New York.—Warners have purchased screen rights to a series of Cosmopolitan Magazine stories, "Lady Dick," by Arthur Somers Roche.

Merian Cooper's Plan Will Put Producers On Spot—Retains Reins But Avoids Drudgery

The set-up under which Merian C. Cooper has consented to remain at the helm on the Radio lot will bring radically new methods to the production of that organization's pictures. It will take the form of adding broad new responsibilities on the shoulders of the individual associate producer, putting it up to him to make good or step out, without enabling him to shuffle off a great percentage of his problems on the executive producer.

Cooper is understood to be placing the new plan into effect immediately. It will mean that from the time of the selection of a story the associate

Phil Goldstone left yesterday for the Sansom Sanitarium at Santa Barbara, where he will take a much needed rest for several weeks before returning to Hollywood.

ACADEMY BIG SHOTS MEET AND PLAN RENEWED LIFE

At a joint meeting of the board and executive committee of the Academy last night the keynote was one of definite optimism concerning the future of the organization.

Between thirty and forty attended, of which number more than half were some of the biggest names in the industry. Irving Thalberg, B. B. Kahane, Harry Cohn, Jack Warner, Henry Herzbrun and others backed the plea of Howard Green, vice president and chairman of the meeting, that new life be blown into the Academy. To this end a committee on the future program was named with King Vidor chairman, and consisting of Irving Thalberg, C. B. DeMille, Lewis Stone, DeWitt Jennings, Frank Capra, Waldemar Young, J. M. Nickolaus, John Cromwell and J. L. Warner.

A committee of three to take care of the Academy's outstanding obligations was chosen, consisting of William Sistrom, George Irving and Van Nest Polglase.

Goldwyn Sued By Writers For $25,000

New York.—The Nathan Burkan office, which represents Samuel Goldwyn, discloses a suit has been brought against the producer by G. S. Kaufman and Robert Sherwood for $25,000, the price they claim was promised for their work on "Roman Scandals."

Goldwyn claims the authors provided only a rough draft of a story and refused to work it into shape when requested to do so.

The suit may grow into historic proportions through the expectation of Burkan that the writers will file a second action when the profits of the picture start coming in.

'His Ferocious Pal' Hit by Ferocious Attachment

THE LOW DOWN

A well known writer, lunching in the Radio studio restaurant the other day, ordered himself some roast beef. The waitress brought him chicken. He was very annoyed. He said, "You take this back to the chef and tell him to stuff it!"

The reason that a certain publicity guy at Warners is heavily "on the spot" is because a member of the eastern end of the firm's press staff had the bright idea of having one of their newly-signed starlets announce the fact that she was going to have a baby—just for the experience, without benefit of clergy or such. The eastern giant-brain figured this would get her a million dollars worth of publicity. But, of course, the head man knew what a boomerang such a story would be not only for Warners but for the whole industry, and raised you-knowhat about it. The buck was passed until it fell right into the lap of a local employee—who was afraid to squeal because he loves his job!

And there's a pleasant "lowdown" in the reason that the Guild affair was so well conducted, and so free of-er, "aftermaths." Did you notice Jimmy Cagney, Ken Thomson and a number of officers mingling quietly here and there all night? Many an incipient blaze was drenched before it started. You know, those things that sometimes cause the morning after talk? But the committee saw that they never got started. Those Guilders are going places.

New York REVIEWS

"BEFORE MIDNIGHT"

Columbia prod.; director, Lambert Hillyer; writer, Robert Quigley.

Mayfair Theatre

World-Telegram: A considerable amount of concentration is required if one is to avoid confusion in following the mystery melodrama "Before Midnight" at the Mayfair.

Sun: The authors were evidently so intent on making a really intricate puzzle that they themselves got lost in their own mystic mazes. I fully believe that the perpetrators practically wrote this one as they went along. As it is, about the only pleasant item in connection with it is Miss Collyer's prettiness, which is quite tangible and real.

Post: Of the ten most mystifying mystery pictures of the year the new entry at the Mayfair, called "Before Midnight," should be ranked as unequivocal first because it is at least twice as unintelligible at the end as it is during any other point in the proceedings. The best that can be said of this picture is that the author started out with a crime idea and lost it somewhere in the second reel. Neither the cast nor the director does anything to help him find it.

News: It is a routine murder mystery production with the usual technique employed in solving the crime and finding the murderer.

Herald-Tribune: In outline the story is not much more foolish than is to be found in the average mystery tale, but I fear that the plot is a trifle too complicated for complete comfort. Ralph Bellamy is a pleasant detective hero, Miss Collyer is a handsome heroine.

American: The cast is good, with Mr. Bellamy best and Claude Gillingwater and June Collyer helping most. Director Hillyer has established good atmosphere for weird happenings, but hasn't helped much in telling his story in a straightforward directness that would have made it more presentable. As a tip to audience sleuths, pay attention to Hollywood type casting when watching for the killer, and don't let the complications tout you off.

Times: It is never exciting. It is just a puerile puzzle in which a zealous attempt is made to deceive the audience.

Mirror: Addicts to detective stories will find this picture a tricky and satisfactorily mystifying hour's entertainment.

Gov't Credit Given New German Firm

Berlin.—The bankrupt Deutches Lichtspiel Syndicat has been reorganized through Government aid and will produce 25 pictures this season. A credit of two million rentenmarks has been arranged through a Government created film credit bureau.

Tobis, as main creditor of the former Lichtspiel, will supply sound licenses and the new syndicate will then place production orders with individual producers. Artists employed will share in the profits.

Distribution will be through a merger of the facilities of the new syndicate and Terra Film.

Watt A.S.C. Manager

Allen Watt has been appointed executive business manager of the American Societv of Cinematographers. He will also act as contact man for the organization's members with the studio production executives.

Mono. Buys Santley Yarn

Monogram has purchased an original story by Joseph Santley titled "Million Dollar Baby" and plans to produce it shortly. The Nat Goldstone office made the deal.

Weems Joins Roach

Walter Weems has been made a permanent addition to the Hal Roach writing staff, the deal being handled by Hallam Cooley, with Harry Weber.

'Mystery of Dead Police' Back to Stage for Retakes

MGM will place "Mystery of the Dead Police," the Robert Montgomery starring vehicle, back into work next week for added scenes and retakes. Howard Emmett Rogers has been assigned to write the new scenes.

A new director will be assigned to the retakes, as Edgar Selwyn, who directed the picture, is scheduled to leave for New York tonight with Eddie Mannix, to be gone about three weeks on business.

'Terrible Turk' Feb. 20

February 20 has been set by Seymour Robinson as the opening date at the Pasadena Community Playhouse for "The Terrible Turk," the play that is supposed to give slants on actual experiences of Jed Harris. Robinson owns the state rights to product of the play.

Del Ruth Ends WB Stay

Quite a lot of human interest to the scenes yesterday as Roy Del Ruth said good-bye to the boys on the Warner lot, ending a ten year stay with one organization. The boys made a number of presentations to the director.

Barrymore in Personal

Lionel Barrymore will leave for New York shortly and is scheduled to open at the Capitol Theatre there on February 2. The skit was written for Barrymore by Edgar Allan Woolf.

Chilean President at 'U'

Carlos Davila, former president of Chile, inspected the Universal studios yesterday and was the luncheon guest of Carl Laemmle and his son Junior.

'Gallant Lady' Tops New Pics On B'way

New York.—"Gallant Lady," opening at the Rivoli on Saturday, is about the hottest of the new pictures scheduled for Broadway the coming week.

The other newcomers include: Wednesday, "Massacre," at Strand; Thursday, "I Am Suzanne," Music Hall; "Fashions of 1934," Hollywood; Friday, "Cross Country Cruise," Roxy; "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," Paramount; "Let's Fall in Love," Rialto; "Eskimo," Capitol; Monday, "Sixteen Fathoms Deep," Mayfair.

Still Fight Over Rights to 'Alice'

New York.—The suit of Samuel Kantrowitz against Paramount on the ground that he owns the rights to the title "Alice in Wonderland" for picture purposes has been transferred to the Federal Courts at Paramount's request.

Kantrowitz claims he bought the rights to "Alice" for film purposes in 1916 and wants an injunction against distribution of Paramount's pictures.

Col.'s 'Sisters' Starts

Columbia put "Sisters Under the Skin" into production yesterday with Elissa Landi and Joseph Schildkraut in leading roles. Other members of the cast are Frank Morgan, Arthur Stuart Hull, Montague Shaw, Robert Graves, Selmer Jackson and Henry Kolker. David Burton is directing.

Rose M.C.'s at Paramount

Harry Rose, known as the Broadway jester, has been signed by Marco for an indefinite stay at the Paramount Theatre as master of ceremonies. Harry Santley of the William Morris office negotiated the deal.

Ampas Alter Constitution

New York.—The Ampa is holding a closed meeting Thursday to consider changes in the constitution of the organization.

Schary Scripts 'Hell Cat'

Columbia yesterday signed Dore Schary to script an original screen play for "The Hell Cat."

'A BIG DAY' NOT GREAT BUT RATES ABOVE AVERAGE

Skilled Direction And Cast Lift It

"A BIG DAY"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Directed by.....William K. Howard Novel by—
Marjorie Bartholomew Paradis
Screen Play by....Edgar Allan Woolf and Florence Ryerson
Adapted by.....Zelda Sears and Eve Greene
Photography by.....Hal Rosson
Cast: Lionel Barrymore, Fay Bainter, Mae Clarke, Tom Brown, Una Merkel, Mary Carlisle, Onslow Stevens, Henry Wadsworth, Eddie Nugent, C. Henry Gordon and Dickie Moore.

Reduce "A Big Day" to essentials, and you have a slight trite story of how youth opened the eyes of experience. But add to that a well chosen cast, good dialogue and William K. Howard's ability to juggle a dozen situations without losing a central theme, and you have a film which holds steady interest, even though it may not keep a record breaking line at the box office.

Much interest naturally is attached to Fay Bainter's first screen appearance. She plays the devoted mother of four children. Without seeming silly or unsophisticated or anything but charming, she hesitates to leave her family alone for dinner while she signs a screen contract on her first novel.

The camera jumps rapidly from one member of her family to another. Coherency and comedy are achieved by the fact that all are calling the maid at home to cancel dinners. Each has his own all-important problem to be met immediately.

The husband is harried with worry. He is innocently, but none the less desperately, involved in the embezzlement of $40,000. The older daughter is making up her mind to marry the wrong fellow. The younger daughter is playing with fire, kittenishly adventuresome. The son feels that his whole life depends upon making a fraternity.

Stimulated by excitement of her writing contract in Hollywood, the mother gathers her family around the fireside. She feels safe in leaving for six weeks. To her, all of their lives are ordered and serene.

By the next afternoon, the husband has attempted suicide, the son is in the hospital, one daughter has decided not to marry, the other has another fiance, but everyone is happy and home for dinner.

The film is a patchwork of short scenes, and is episodic enough to drive any director out into the night. Nevertheless, Howard has made of it a film that seems spontaneous rather than spotty, with the exception of several long scenes in which Lionel Barrymore presents a mask of tragedy which would make any wife suspect more than normal depression. Otherwise Barrymore turns in his usual competent, deliberate performance.

Fay Bainter has a steady charm, convincing and adept, as the mother.

Competition

Asked if Universal, which was skunked by Columbia's ringing in professionals during a basketball match between the studios, was going out after professionals of its own, Frank Mastroly said, "I don't know, but we've hired a few new cops at the studio."

'Woman Unafraid' Pretty Dull Stuff

"WOMAN UNAFRAID"

(Goldsmith Production)

Directed by.....William J. Cowen
Story by.....Mary E. McCarthy
Photography by.....Gilbert Warrenton
Cast: Lucile Gleason, Skeets Gallagher, Lona Andre, Warren Hymer, Barbara Weeks, Laura Treadwell, Eddie Phillips, Jason Robards, Ruth Clifford, Richard Elliot, Erin LaBissoniere, Julie Kingdon, Joyce Coad and Baby Waring.

With a hopeless story to begin with, a cast that is particularly inadequate, and direction that gives the effect of scraping your fingernails on a blackboard, "Woman Unafraid" is one of those pictures that repose more gracefully in the waste basket than on a screen.

The story, featuring the heroism of Officer Winthrop, a female cop, and her capture of a flock of gangsters, single-handed, is such sentimental blood and thunder nonsense that even if it were well presented it would still strain the credulity.

The picture would be helped considerably if some cutting were done to eliminate the occasional dull blank silences, and if the many episodes could be arranged in some sort of smooth order so that the audience is not yanked back and forth from one unrelated scene to another. But taking the story itself into consideration, it doesn't seem worth while to do anything about it.

It's pretty dull stuff.

Tom Brown turns in an exceptional piece of work in a most difficult scene. Banged up in an accident, he has to read long speeches about carrying on while his father, groggy with an overdose of sleeping powders, sees that it is the coward who takes the easy way out. Hard to do and very well done. The audience sniffed loudly and sympathetically.

Mary Carlisle is a bit too self-conscious as the self-conscious school girl in spots but she make up for it in a very funny scene where she longs for love in theatric phrases.

Competent performances are turned in by Onslow Stevens, Henry Wadsworth, Eddie Nugent, C. Henry Gordon and Dickie Moore. And then there is Una Merkel who never fails to make a part count in handsome fashion.

"A Big Day" won't mean a record breaking week, but it is human and convincing enough to be well above the average domestic drama in appeal.

Cutting Due In MGM Story Staff

The question that pops up at the executive meetings at MGM very frequently, regarding the cutting down of the writing staff, again was brought before the same group and again a decision was reached to decrease the number of writers, which now totals 75.

There will be no wholesale cutting down on the staff but writers not under contract to the studio will be let out as soon as they finish the assignment they are working on and new work will be distributed among the writers under contract.

A number of writers are expected to be let out this week.

20th Shutdown Not Coming Until May

Twentieth Century will have a three month shutdown on or about May 1, at which time Darry Zanuck and Joseph Schenck will wind up the first year's work of the new company with the completion of twelve pictures.

Darryl Zanuck and William Goetz will leave for Europe at that time with their families and Darryl Zanuck will continue on to Africa on a big game hunt while Goetz will remain in Paris.

Fox Sale May Clear 'Lola Montez' Tangle

Fox hopes to save something from "Lola Montez," a play bought several years ago and never produced, by selling the title to MGM for its forthcoming picture based on Lola's life. At the present this is the title Hunt Stromberg, the producer, favors.

Green on Para Ticket

Dropping the producer's mantle, Howard J. Green moves over to Paramount today to write the screen play of "The Great Magoo," the play by Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler, which Al Lewis produces. Green produced "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" for Radio, which is now in the hands of the cutters.

Radio Gets Mills Bros.

The Four Mills brothers were signed yesterday by Radio to appear in the Jimmy Durante starring picture, "Strictly Dynamite," which Elliott Nugent will direct. The cast includes Gene Pallette and Nydia Westman. H. N. Swanson is supervising.

David Manners Returning

David Manners arrives in New York January 25 from his visit to London and hops off immediately for the coast. He played the leading role in British International's "Contraband" while in London.

Warren Duff Renewed

Warners yesterday punched Warren Duff's ticket, handing him a tilt and extending his stay with the company's writing staff another six months. His deal was negotiated through Frank and Dunlap.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Would it ever occur to you that there might be a fashion tie-up for the picture "Roman Scandals"? Well, we never would have thought of it ourself, but little things like that don't seem to bother Lynn Farnol. That bright boy of the Goldwyn outfit sold the Herald-Tribune fashion editor the idea and in return got himself a whole full page spread adapting the Roman idea to modern dress and of course giving "Roman Scandals" full credit for the costumes. And the amazing part of it is that they make very attractive evening costumes or peignoirs or something, and anyway we think it's a swell stunt, because they must have laughed when he first broached the subject and then they sat down and gave it a complete Sunday page and article.

There's a play in town which had just about the most terrific advance sale of anything that's come to Broadway since—. However, the reviews and general comment were sort of a letdown to say the least, but the house was sold out for approximately seven or eight weeks. Sooo, someone was asking one of the members of the company how the play was doing. And she said that for the first act they were playing to capacity houses every performance.

A friend of a friend of ours has had one of those strange experiences with the picture business. We withhold his name because his chances are still good. However, this lad, who is very attractive and very tall, got very tight one night, and while in his cups accepted a dare and made a bet that he could walk into a picture company, demand a screen test and get it. The next day he was cold sober but still game and so he marched himself up to Fox—and got a screen test. Not only that, but a contract for six weeks at a hundred and twenty-five a week. So he went to Hollywood, where he reported for work and was promptly forgotten by everyone on the lot except the treasurer, who dutifully sent him his pay each week. At the end of the six weeks, finding that he liked Hollywood, he decided to try the same stunt again with another company. And this other major company also gave him a test, but before he could find out what they were going to do about it he had to come east because of illness in his family. However, he has received word that if, as and when he returns to the coast he is to come on over and they'll talk over terms. Wonder who will be the person to "discover" the boy? . . . What in the world has happened to Katie Hepburn that made her refuse to autograph one picture of herself for a crippled child who adores her? And the request came through perfectly legitimate channels.

Hermann Bahr Dies

Munich.—Hermann Bahr, world known Austrian dramatist, and sometimes referred to as "The Shaw of Germany," passed away here yesterday at the age of seventy.

A.S.C. Hears Details Of New Pact Mon.

The American Society of Cinematographers has called its first general meeting of the year for Monday night. In announcing the meeting President John Arnold said:

"The meeting is of the utmost importance to every cameraman in the business and will be recognized as such when we advise them officially of the details of the long term agreement entered into between the society and the producers."

Talbot in 'Golden Gate'

Lyle Talbot has been given the male lead in Warners' "Golden Gate." Bette Davis, Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay are also set for this one, which Wilhelm Dieterle will direct.

Academy Starts Anew

and Lewis Stone were named a committee to confer with producers as to how the work of the Actor-Producer Relations office might best be carried on.

Carl Dreher and J. M. Nickolaus will deal with the producers on questions concerning the Technical Bureau.

According to Howard Green the Academy has lost only 10 per cent of its membership through resignations and he branded as false the rumor that the Academy would fold now or at any future date.

Mammy-Oh-Mammy

Al Jolson complained yesterday that in the twenty or so years he has been wearing black-face on the stage and screen he's never been forced to use it as he does in "Wonder Bar." He wears "black-face" all over his body.

Dix-Dunne Team Again in 'Stingaree'

Richard Dix will be co-starred with Irene Dunne in "Stingaree" as his next assignment, instead of either "Crime Doctor" or "Family Man." William Wellman will direct.

This is the first time that these two stars are scheduled to appear together since "Cimarron." David Lewis will supervise this picture.

Todd Added by Hoffman

M. H. Hoffman, apparently determined to load his guns with a name-value cast, yesterday closed for the services of Thelma Todd, who shares top billing with Jack LaRue in "Take the Stand."

Ruben Megs 'Family Man'

J. Walter Ruben has been assigned to direct the Clive Brook starring vehicle, "Family Man," as his next assignment for Radio. Myles Connolly is supervising.

Spewacks on 'Soviet'

Bella and Sam Spewack are doing the dialogue and continuity on "Soviet" for MGM, using the treatment written by Leo Birinski.

Chester Morris East For Erskine Picture

Chester Erskine yesterday closed a deal by wire with the Rebecca and Silton office for Chester Morris to journey East in two weeks to share top billing with Helen Morgan and Lilyan Tashman in "Frankie and Johnny," which United Artists will distribute. Moss Hart is turning out the script and Helen Broderick and Clifton Webb are also set for the cast.

Morris returns here by the end of next month in order to take the title spot in Universal's "Practical Joker," which Stanley Bergerman is producing.

Cormack's Para. Year Ends

Bartlett Cormack winds up a year's contract with Paramount on the completion of his work on the screen play of "The Trumpet Blows." Except for a year at Radio as a writer-producer, Cormack has worked exclusively for Paramount during the five years he has been in Hollywood.

Tom Terriss in N. Y.

New York.—Tom Terriss is back in this country after writing and directing an all-French picture, "La Vie Splendide," in Paris. The picture was well received at the Carnegie here.

'Alice in Hollywood'

Thomas Bell, formerly associated with Ralph Spence, has sold a play to the Shuberts entitled "Alice in Hollywood." It is scheduled for Fall production.

Presnell Starts Warners' 'The Key' Wednesday

Robert Presnell puts his next picture, "The Key," into work next Wednesday, and is now building the cast around William Powell and Kay Francis in the leads. Dr. Thomas McLoughlin, a noted psychiatrist, has been engaged as technical advisor.

Agent Wins Damages

Leon Lance, agent, was yesterday awarded $5725 in damages in Judge Marshall McComb's court for auto injuries sustained in 1932.

producer will be on his own in all the details of story preparation, tentative casting, selection of direction, clear through to budget making.

Only when the picture is laid out in every detail will it be brought before Cooper for final executive decisions.

The intention is to avoid the daily dilly-dallying and time-wasting conferences the result of which is to keep the executive producer on a twenty-four hour treadmill schedule, and incidentally mean that it takes the associate producer twice as long to get a given job done because he has to await his turn to get into the front office.

Present group of associate producers on the Radio lot includes Pandro Berman, Kenneth Macgowan, Myles Connolly, Howard Green, Cliff Reid, David Lewis, Lou Brock, Shirley Burden and William Sistrom.

GOLDWYN BOWS TO INDIES

•FOUR or five days in New York right at this time gives a viewpoint, an entirely different viewpoint from any other part of this country. New York is on a jamboree, is spending money as it has never spent before, is buying entertainment in every form, is having fun. Theatres, legitimate and (some) movies, hotels, restaurants, etc., etc., are packed to the doors. The old town has a gayety that has never been approached since 1919.

The picture business in New York is better than in any other part of the country right at this time. The neighborhood houses, particularly, are doing excellent business. The big houses downtown are doing great when they have great pictures and better than average on program attractions.

The legitimate theatres are booming, ordinary attractions are selling out, really good shows are sold out for weeks in advance. Most of the hits seem dull in comparison to good pictures. Take for instance the $70,000 purchase of MGM's "Ah Wilderness." We had to force ourselves to sit through two acts. And it's one of the big hits of the town. There's too much talk, and a masterful job on the screen adaptation is the only hope of turning it into a good picture.

There is little doubt but that the theatre has sagged greatly in entertainment principally for the reason that there are not a dozen writers devoting their attention to that form of writing. But still, our picture producers go in and bid their heads off for the shows, ordinary, very ordinary shows. Look at Paramount with their purchase of "Sailor Beware." It's not as good as their own script of "The Fleet's In" that Clara Bow did for them some time ago. And anyhow, the main and only attraction to "Sailor Beware" is material that should not be placed on the screen and probably will not even be photographed.

But some day, somehow or other, producers here will realize the value of spending big sums for good originals, scripts that will be handed them in completed form ready for shooting. And when this is done, the cost of story material will be greatly reduced and better pictures will result.

Fireworks Explode At Para. Hearing

New York.—With Federal Judge Bondy finally stepping down because he felt the honor of the court had been assailed, a stormy session today over the approval of the Paramount equity receivers and attorneys fees came to a temporary truce. Judge Knox will now decide the case.

Fireworks were wild at the hearing, Attorneys Zirn, House and Rogers claiming that as the receivership itself was "illegal and procured with collusion and fraud" any approval of the fees was likewise.

Rogers had a particularly bitter personal spat with Judge Bondy.

MGM Dickers for Lloyd To Direct Shearer Pic

MGM is negotiating with Frank Lloyd to direct "Vanessa," which will have Norma Shearer and Diana Wynyard in the top spots. Lloyd is now on a lay-off period from his Fox contract. Arthur Richman is writing the script. Walter Wanger produces

Blumey Loses Philly Suit

Philadelphia.—The suit in Philadelphia by A. C. Blumenthal against Albert M. Greenfield for $151,575 for commissions on account of the sale of William Fox's stock holdings several years ago has been dismissed by United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Senators Attack Code

Washington.—Senators Nye and Borah are scheduled to take the Senate floor today to attack the monopolistic tendencies of the NRA codes. It is of interest to picture people because of the non-conformist attitude still maintained by Allied Exhibitors.

Listens To N.Y. Theatre Group And Agrees To Come Off His Big Percentage High-Horse

New York.—Samuel Goldwyn met with the independent exhibitors here yesterday and was conquered, but not before a long and harassing argument had ensued and one that will live long in the exhibitors' breasts, and one that will net Goldwyn more money for his bit, even though he agreed to take less than the 50 per cent he had been asking from that group.

The meeting was arranged by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York. Both Goldwyn and Al Lichtman put in their appearance and the fireworks were set off by Brandt asking Goldwyn why he was demanding such a high percentage for "Roman Scandals." Goldwyn replied with a few thousand choice

Only $15,000 Parts Cummings and 'U'

Everything points to Constance Cummings for the star spot in "Glamour," which Ben F. Zeidman is producing for Universal. Negotiations revolve around the sum to be paid the player, Selznick and Joyce asking $30,000 for the assignment, with Universal offering $15,000.

William Wyler will direct, Victor Schertzinger, who was previously set, being tied up at Columbia.

Gaumont Chief to Visit

London.—Michael Balcon, chief of production at the Gaumont and Gainsborough studios, plans to shortly make a trip to Hollywood to study production methods there.

'Catherine' Another Triumph For Korda

London.—It looks like another triumph for Alexander Korda. "Catherine the Great" trade shown last night is compared unanimously to "Henry the Eighth," and will even be better liked by most Britishers, being more dignified in treatment of its subject.

Elizabeth Bergner is pronounced "magnetic," Fairbanks, Jr., excellent, and praise is given the lavishness of the settings and photography.

The picture clicks in all departments, though it will stand some trimming, being 8500 feet at the trade show.

Columbia International Convention in London

New York.—J. H. Seidelman, foreign manager of Columbia Pictures, sails Friday for England to attend the first international convention of Columbia's youthful foreign organization. It will be held in London January 28.

Rumor Zanft-Berg Join

Latest reports on the John Zanft front last night were that the former Fox major executive had reached an agreement with Phil Berg and the two would combine forces in the special representative field.

'Nana' in Music Hall Feb. 1

New York.—February 1 is the date set for the opening of "Nana" at the Radio City Music Hall, Sam Goldwyn booking his big picture where he wanted to regardless of United Artists being the distributor.

Connolly Loses Mother

Cincinnati.—The mother of Walter Connolly died here yesterday. The actor was en route from Hollywood to see her when the end came.

FOX PAYROLL JAM STARTS FIREWORKS AT WESTWOOD

Fox failed to have salary checks on hand for a number of the higher-salaried writers and players on both the Westwood Hills and Western Avenue lots Tuesday afternoon, and met the workers with varying excuses. When the players and writers started comparing notes yesterday and realized that each was not an individual case the buzzing grew to excited proportions.

IATSE FIRES FIRST GUN IN FIGHT FOR RECOGNITION

The IATSE yesterday fired the first gun following the soundmen's election in its battle with the IBEW when Harold Smith, their business manager, filed formal charges with the Regional Labor Board against each member of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, individually and collectively. Producers are charged with disregarding the 40-hour maximum clause in the code covering all sound men except mixers and recorders. Smith also claims in his complaint that the studios are guilty of salary violations in the case of all sound men, under the overriding provision, Article IV, Section 5, of the Motion Picture Code. The studios still refuse to recognize the IATSE's right to speak for the sound men, having a contract with the IBEW.

Smith claims his union's victory at the polls last week gives him the power to deal with the producers under Section 7a of the NRA and Article III of the Motion Picture Code. He wants a showdown in this jurisdictional dispute and has chosen this method to find out where he stands.

Harry Brigaerts, vice president of the IBEW, was not in his office yesterday and up to a late hour last night could not be reached for a statement.

Look for $10 a Day Men for NRA Bodies

Washington.—General Johnson is looking for outside public spirited citizens to serve as Government observers at hearings in all industries. Ten dollars a day for the hearings plus traveling expenses will be the fee.

In the future no code hearings will be held in any industry without this impartial observer present. The practice of using deputy administrators for the purpose is abandoned because it results in the NRA reviewing its own acts.

Radio Borrows Kruger For 'Crime Doctor' Role

Otto Kruger was borrowed by Radio from MGM yesterday for the lead in "Crime Doctor," with Nils Asther, Wynne Gibson and Ada Cavell in featured roles. John Robertson will direct and production is scheduled to get under way on Monday.

Kruger will play the role that Richard Dix was slated to have.

H. B. Warner Signs Agents

H. B. Warner has been signed to a managerial contract by the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency.

Fox Payroll Jam

The result was a hectic day for Fox executives when individuals and agents on behalf of their clients descended on the Fox lot for their overdue pay checks yesterday.

On Tuesday the applicants were told, "Everything will be straightened out tomorrow. Your check will be ready then."

But at the close of the business day yesterday a number of the workers were still awaiting their checks.

Illness of "the party who signs the checks" was given as the excuse to most. The common alibi handed the contract players whose checks must bear the signature of Winnie Sheehan was "Mr. Sheehan is in story conference and cannot be disturbed."

This excuse was still being given yesterday, twenty-four hours after the payments were due.

Executive, clerical, labor and extra payrolls were met on time. The trouble seems only to have arisen in the higher bracketed salaries, the bulk of the studio's overhead.

Clive Brook and DeMille Cannot Agree on Terms

Cecil B. DeMille is again on the lookout for an actor to play the role of Caesar in "Cleopatra," which he is making for Paramount.

DeMille had set on Clive Brook for the role, but when it came to settling the money end Paramount did not want to meet the figure asked by Brook. There is still a possibility that negotiations will be renewed.

Foreign Actors Load Down Ocean Liners

New York.—It's open season for foreign actors flocking to America. Arriving on the Champlain yesterday were Peggy Morrison, dancer of the Folies Bergere; Thomas C. Gibbs, English actor; Lucien Coedel and Victor Henkine, French actors.

Other passengers on the liner were Ernest Stern, art director, and Dudley Wilkinson, American actor.

Fashion Adviser Assigned To 'Latest From Paris'

MGM yesterday assigned Kathleen Howard, associate editor of Harper's Bazaar, to serve as technical adviser and to act in Joan Crawford's next vehicle, "Latest from Paris," which Robert Z. Leonard directs. Miss Howard was brought out here several months ago by Jesse L. Lasky to serve in the same capacity on "Coming Out Party."

'U' Tags Mrs. Leslie Carter For 'Elizabeth and Mary'

Mrs. Leslie Carter has been set by Universal for a featured role in "Elizabeth and Mary" with Margaret Sullavan and Lowell Sherman, the latter to direct.

Arthur Caesar has finished the script and the cast will start rehearsals next week. Shooting will begin the week following.

Ellington for 'Vanities'

New York.—Duke Ellington and his band have been signed by Paramount for "Murder in the Vanities." The organization leaves for the coast next week.

Harry Green Entertains

Inviting over 300 guests, Harry Green will be host at a cocktail party today at the Clover Club between four and eight.

words, telling the exhibitors that they were continually crying for good pictures and when a producer brings them one they refuse to pay for it. Goldwyn said, "I will never make a bad picture if I can help it and by helping, I mean the expenditure of all the money required to make it good in the buying of the proper writing brains, the assembling of the best casts and giving the picture all the production that it requires. I am not asking you to take from 30 to 60 pictures, I sell you one picture at a time and ask you to sit in judgment on that picture before you buy it. If I am successful in making a picture that will draw audiences, I am entitled to my just return for that picture; so why do you say I am asking too much?"

In reply to this Harry Brandt stated: "We agree with everything you have said, Mr. Goldwyn. You are making the best pictures in the business, pictures that are getting big money, BUT we do not get a crack at that big money. You are asking us to pay the same percentage as the first run houses and the big circuits. Don't you realize that after you play your first run, then turn your picture over to the Loew circuit, Fox, RKO and other chains, that most of our customers are deflected from our box office to go to those theatres to see any big picture? When those pictures reach our houses most of our audiences have seen them some place else. Give us the picture at the same time as the big circuits and we will pay you the same percentage, but if you insist on us running it after them, after they have milked our neighborhoods, then we tell you that you must give us a break and get away from those 50 percent demands if you want us to play your productions."

Other exhibitors showered Goldwyn with praise for his manner of production, his effort to make good pictures, and when it was all over Goldwyn finally agreed to percentage reductions and will deal individually with each exhibitor and his problem as it concerns the run of "Roman Scandals."

The feeling around here is that although Goldwyn will take a percentage cut he will get more money in the long run because he met with this group, stated his case clearly and honestly and the exhibitors will go out and hustle business for him, not only on "Roman Scandals" but on his other coming pictures, and not only that, but more "Scandals" contracts will be signed than would have been if this meeting had not been arranged.

And they still call him "Lucky Sam."

PARA'S 'SIX OF A KIND' LAUGHFEST, SHOULD CLICK

Good Production; Big Name Cast

"SIX OF A KIND"
(Paramount)

Directed by.....Leo McCarey
Story by.....Keene Thompson and Douglas MacLean
Adaptation by.....Walter DeLeon and Harry Ruskin
Photography by.....Henry Sharp
Cast: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth, George Burns and Gracie Allen.

Throw your hat up in the air and grab yourself off a swell comedy—Paramount's "Six of a Kind." Silly, ridiculous, absolutely hilarious in spots, this cheerful insanity is swarming with everything that makes people laugh.

Directed with expert calculation, acted to the hilt, and featuring a story that is universally funny in the first place, the picture should be good news to any box office.

Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland start out for a vacation—their first in twenty years. Their second honeymoon, they call it, until George Burns and Gracie Allen answer the advertisement Miss Boland put in the newspaper for a couple "to drive to California and share expenses."

As if these two didn't provide complications enough, a teller in the bank where Ruggles works uses the Ruggles baggage as a hiding place for $50,000 he has stolen.

The trip to California, enlivened by Gracie Allen's inanities and several minor catastrophes, hits an amusing peak when the party reaches Alison Skipworth's hotel and is arrested by W. C. Fields, the sheriff.

The six principals in this comedy work perfectly together. In addition to the fine work of those already mentioned, W. C. Fields, in particular, has an opportunity to show what he really can do, although every other member of the cast is as funny as anybody has a right to be.

Leo McCarey's direction is expert; Walter DeLeon and Harry Ruskin did right by the story by Keene Thompson and Douglas MacLean, and Henry Sharp photographed it well.

"Six of a Kind" is above-average comedy. It has names, story, direction plus swell acting.

Howard Slated to Meg 'Streets of New York'

With William Wellman off the picture, MGM is figuring on William K. Howard to direct "Streets of New York," the Arthur Caesar story which David Selznick is producing.

Howard is now in New York and will return to Hollywood in about a week.

'Bottoms Up' Now Scoring

Fox yesterday signed Constantine Bakaleinikoff to supervise the scoring of the B. G. DeSylva production, "Bottoms Up." Harry Jackson's radio orchestra will be used for the recording. Director David Butler hopes to wind up the musical by the end of next week.

A Stroheim Idea

Hearing that Warners are having script trouble with his novel "Anthony Adverse," Harvey Allen suggested that the studio make his wordy tome into a trilogy. Studio figures one headache is enough and turned down the three-picture idea.

Geo. Cohan Signs To Do Pic in East

New York.—Krimsky and Cochran have signed George M. Cohan to a picture contract for one subject to be made in New York, but at present writing it looks as though they can't get together on a deal with MGM to make the picture "Ah Wilderness."

If the deal falls through, one of Cohan's old plays will be selected, probably "Gambling." Cohan is dead set to show Hollywood what he can do on the screen.

Big Air Tie-Up Set For Warners' 'Wonder Bar'

Requests from 262 stations have come to Warner Brothers in response to a questionnaire sent out by George Bilson asking if they would use a 15-minute electrical transcription of a program with all the stars of "Wonder Bar." The program will be heard simultaneously at these stations a week before the release of the picture.

Levy Scripts Own Play

Benn W. Levy has joined the Fox writing staff to write the screen play of "Springtime for Henry," his own play which Jesse L. Lasky is producing. Script job on the part of the writer was part of the original deal for the play's purchase.

Chevalier Arrives

Maurice Chevalier, Charles Boyer and Marcal Vallee arrived in Hollywood yesterday afternoon on the Chief. Vallee will have a role in "The Merry Widow" with Chevalier for MGM and Boyer reports to Fox.

'Trinidad' Finally Moves

After two postponements Fox yesterday decided to definitely place "Murder in Trinidad" into production Monday. Louis King directs under Sol Wurtzel's supervision.

Long Termer for Foran

Fox was so pleased with the work of Nicholas Foran in the "Fox Follies" that the company has signed him to a long term contract. Picture was Foran's first screen appearance.

Assign Reid's Next

Cliff Reid will supervise "Fugitive From Glory" as his next picture for Radio. John Barrymore was mentioned for the starring role some time ago.

Final 'Hannibal' Title

"You Can't Buy Everything" is announced by MGM as the final title formerly known as "Old Hannibal."

Capra Again Slated To Direct 'Soviet'

It has been definitely settled for Frank Capra to go over to MGM on a one-picture loanout deal from Columbia to direct "Soviet," the Clark Gable-Wallace Beery co-starring vehicle, after the director makes one more picture on his home lot. Irving Thalberg will produce "Soviet."

The deal was swung because MGM had loaned Clark Gable to Columbia for "Night Bus." Capra was at MGM a year ago to direct this picture, but was recalled by Columbia when the loanout period had expired without the picture starting.

Troubles Pile Up For 'His Ferocious Pal'

While Sol Lesser and Spencer Bennett are engaged in scrapping with each other as to who is to meet the obligations accruing on "His Ferocious Pal," three more attachments were nailed on the negative of the picture yesterday, making five in all.

Picture is the second that Bennett made for Principal Pictures' release and has a $2,500 list of claims to meet.

New Movie Mirror Set-Up

A tea given at the Russian Eagle yesterday formally inaugurated a new policy of Movie Mirror by which that MacFadden publication will concentrate its editorial direction in the Hollywood office. Ruth Waterbury, as editor, will have Ernest Heyn, formerly editor Modern Screen, as her eastern editor, and Jerry Asher, former western editor, as associate editor.

Publicists Dine Reeve

The Studio Publicity Executives' committee is giving a dinner at the Beverly Hills hotel next Monday night in honor of Arch Reeve, dean of studio publicity men, who leaves shortly for his new job as advertising manager of Fox in New York.

Play Careful With Robson

MGM yesterday withdrew May Robson from the top spot in "Louisiana Lou," deciding that the assignment was not important enough for her. Another player will be announced for the role.

Sale's Next 'Old Shep'

With "Cowman's Loss," Chic Sale's first short on his two-picture deal with MGM, finished, Jack Cummings is preparing the comic's second to be titled "Old Shep." Picture will start shortly.

Elsa Maxwell Tells All

New York—Elsa Maxwell has signed a contract with Alfred A. Knopf for her memoirs, which will be published within a year under the title of "But It's True."

Will Hays En Route Here

New York.—Will Hays is on his way to the coast, having boarded the Century Tuesday.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Well, the Heifetzes had their musical soiree for the benefit of Destitute German Professionals that netted that worthy cause exactly fifteen thousand dollars. Four hundred people came to hear Heifetz, Iturbi and Tibbett and an extra five thousand dollars was contributed by Mrs. George Backer. Lucrezia Bori sat herself up in the very first row and conversed volubly with the performers. Chico Marx bought four tickets and brought along Mrs. Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny. Frances Marion, the Richard Wallaces, the Bernie Finemans (Margaret actually sold twelve tickets), the Felix Warburgs, Irene Lewisohn and Governor Lehman's brother were among those present. . . . There was a funny incident connected with the concert. Somehow everyone thought that the other fellow had invited Professor Einstein to attend. The day before the concert, Florence Vidor called him up just to remind him and it was discovered that no one had asked him to come, and though he had heard about it he hadn't had the slightest idea of where or when it was to be held and so couldn't come because of a previous engagement. The professor, by the way, is going to play the violin in a string quartet that's going to give a concert for the same cause and at the same price per ticket in a couple of weeks.

Arch Selwyn has persuaded Elizabeth Bergner to come to America in the spring and do her play, "Escape Me Never," which is such a tremendous success in London. You'll see Miss Bergner in "Queen Catherine," and it really is by way of being an accomplishment to have gotten her consent to come over here. Lots of others have tried, but Miss Bergner is an independent actress with the means to choose her spots and it's the first time she's chosen New York. . . . Really, we've been to a number of openings this season, heaven knows, but we've never seen such a collection of "lavender" and old lace as came out for the "Come of Age" premiere. Practically the only regular first-nighter in the place was Marion Saportas and, oyes, Eddie Wasserman.

We asked Humphrey whether he had any plans for the season and he said he expected to be on Broadway for the rest of the year in "Up the River"—which is playing at the Globe at the moment along with "Dishonored." . . . Harry Wilcoxon, the English actor Paramount is bringing over, must have been slightly startled by a cable from that company asking for his measurements. But they only wanted them so's they could make up and have ready the armor he has to wear in "Antony and Cleopatra."

Indies Chuckle As Majors Go On Pan

New York.—Here's the typical slant on the Government questionnaire business—it's going to be great to show the other fellow up.

Inquiry among independents here as to whether they would respond to the Government's request brought the reply generally, "We have nothing to lose—and it's going to be a great way to put the big fellows on the pan."

New Tag For Freund

One of Carl Laemmle, Jr.'s last acts before departing for Europe is to renew the contract on Karl Freund as a director for an additional year at a sizable tilt, and hand him a plum in "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head." This will be made after the completion of "The Countess of Monte Cristo."

Ruth Roland a Publicist

Ruth Roland, actress and business woman, embarks on a new field with the formation of International Publicists, Inc., in association with David Arlen. Offices for the publicity representation of picture people have been opened in the Pantages building.

Cancellation Retroactive

Washington.—Under an NRA ruling today the ten percent cancellation privilege of exhibitors is retroactive to December 7 if exhibitors have otherwise lived up to the provisions of the clause.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Robert Frazer into "Men in White" at MGM, placed by Lichtig and Englander.

Edward Earle signed by Fox for "Three on a Honeymoon," through Hallam Cooley of the Weber office.

Toby Wing for "Come on Marines," Paramount. Set by Ivan Kahn.

Mayo Methot and Dorothy Peterson for "Fur Coats," Warners. Joy and Polimer set the tickets.

Leo Chalzell spotted in Paramount's "Come on Marines" by the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency.

Otis Harlan has been signed by Warners to play the part of St. Peter in the Busby Berkeley sequences of "Wonder Bar."

Barlowe Borland added to the cast of "Rip Tide," MGM. Sackin agency negotiated.

Marjorie Gateson and Henry O'Neill added to the Warner picture "Fur Coats."

Ruth Gillette for a role in "David Harum" at Fox. Lichtig and Englander made the deal.

Robert Graves goes into Columbia's "Sisters Under the Skin," placed by Hal Cooley of the Weber office.

George Irving set for "David Harum," Fox. Deal handled by Menifee I. Johnstone.

Anita Garvin through Kay-Stuart for a featured role in "Playful Husbands," Columbia short.

Radio Ties Up a Song

Radio yesterday purchased "Just Two Alone," a song by Cliff Friend, and will use it for exploitation on the Tom Brown-Jean Parker picture, "Two Alone." Picture was completed six weeks ago, with Elliott Nugent directing and David Lewis producing.

Jolson East Jan. 25

Al Jolson will leave for New York January 25 to confer with radio officials on his forthcoming series of air appearances for Kraft cheese beginning February 8.

Blue in Marine Yarn

Paramount yesterday closed a deal with Monte Blue for a top spot in "Come On, Marines," which Henry Hathaway directs under Al Lewis's supervision. Bob George of the Weber office set the ticket, which results from the way Blue clicked in "The Last Round-up."

Set Younger Faversham

Phil Faversham, son of the famous William, gets his first real part in Warners' "Fur Coats." He is set for the juvenile lead.

Lawyers Squawk on Screen Treatment

New York.—Now the lawyers are complaining that the screen holds their profession up to ridicule. The New York Law Journal today took up their kicks editorially.

One lawyer complains particularly about "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby," in which Zasu Pitts exclaims, "They cannot put lawyers in jail because if they did there wouldn't be any of them left."

Hornblow Sets Fort to Script First Paramount

Garrett Fort was signed yesterday by Paramount to write the screen play of the Broadway stage play "Pursuit of Happiness," which Arthur Hornblow is supervising. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Fort, who is now in New York, will see the play today and leave immediately for Hollywood to begin work.

'Wonder Bar' End Near

Busby Berkeley hopes to wind up "Wonder Bar" Friday after having the picture on the stages for almost two months. Studio will rush the cutting on the Berkeley dance numbers aiming at the possibility of its going into the Chinese as the theatre's next attraction.

Berk of Cineglow Coming

New York.—Ben Berk, general manager of Blue Seal Cineglow, leaves for the coast today.

ROSY DAZES INDUSTRY

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•SO John Zanft is going to be an agent.

We have known Zanft for twenty years. Worked for and with him for almost five years and the toughest five years we ever had in our life. He's a tough bird, that Zanft, and we learned a lot about the picture business from him, and thousands of others have him to thank for a great part of their picture knowledge.

Zanft knows this picture business. He is a showman, he is an excellent executive. He has all the qualifications for the making of a really great agent. And he will be that. And we hope that he will. This business owes him a lot.

On our way back from New York, we stopped off a few hours in Chicago. We talked to several big exhibitors of that center and heard the same tale that is being told by every IMPORTANT exhibitor in every part of the country: "GIVE US A GOOD PICTURE AND WE WILL HAVE A GREAT BUSINESS. Hand us a program attraction and we will play to less money than is required to pay off our ushers."

Whether it's Chicago, New York, Boston, Atlanta or Frisco, the demand for good pictures is greater at this time than ever in the history of the business because those good pictures will attract more ticket buyers than ever before.

The public is wise to this business. They have learned to pick and choose. They know what to spend their money on in picture entertainment. And the wonder of it all is that producers are still trying to make quickies when quickies will not sell; they are trying to palm off duds backed by glowing exploitation campaigns, but they can't be sold; they WILL NOT realize that good pictures will make more money today than ever in the history of this business.

What's to be done? How is it possible to fire producers with the idea of making better pictures? Who can convince them that the average picture will not get to first base?

What's to be done?

No Ifs or Buts

New York.—Because of their determination to keep the RKO chain in the black, flat and absolute instructions have been given L. E. Thompson, operating head of the chain, to get rid of any operation that continues to stay in the red.

Radio Sees Bennett In 'Actress' Role

Radio is negotiating with Constance Bennett to return to her one time home lot for the starring role in "I Love An Actress" with Gregory Ratoff, whose original story it is, playing the male lead.

When Miss Bennett left Radio she verbally agreed to return to that studio for one picture with Twentieth Century stamping their okey on the agreement.

B. S. Moss' Brother N.Y. License Head

New York.—Paul Moss, brother of the veteran picture and theatre man, B. S. Moss, was yesterday named to the important post of license commissioner of New York by Mayor La Guardia.

Moss was formerly active in the picture and legit fields.

Lanfield To Meg Arliss

Sidney Lanfield has been set by Twentieth Century to direct the next George Arliss picture titled "Head of the Family." Leonard Praskins is writing the screen adaptation.

Mannix-Selwyn Leave

Eddie Mannix, accompanied by Edgar Selwyn, left last night for a visit to New York and a round of the current plays.

Execs Alarmed As NRA Deputy Boasts of Broad Powers in Interviews to Eastern Press

On the heels of the many-paged questionnaires being received by studio executives, Deputy Administrator Sol Rosenblatt issued an interview in Washington just before leaving for the Coast that left local executives gasping yesterday. Full realization is now coming that they have a brand new boss whose activities are going to extend far beyond the purposes of the NRA even to the possibility of picture and personal censorship.

At least Administrator Rosenblatt feels that they will. In the interview

Lilian Harvey-Fox At Parting of Ways

Lilian Harvey and Fox were reported yesterday coming to the parting of the ways, with the player to do one more picture for Jesse L. Lasky and then hop off on the return trip to Europe.

Lasky has launched a story hunt for the production.

Dwan on 'Holly Party'

Allan Dwan, recently returned from directorial activity in England, has been signed to direct the added scenes on Harry Rapf's MGM production of "Hollywood Party," which started as just a picture and grew to special calibre.

Pan Berman Back Sat.

Pandro Berman, RKO producer, who has been vacationing in Europe, returns to town Saturday after a six weeks absence.

Talk of RFC Money Brings Zukor Smile

New York got a wild rumor yesterday that the Paramount company had secured a loan of five to six millions with which to carry out long cherished plans for a skyscraper on the Broadway block front which houses the Criterion and Loew's New York, and thus straighten out present foreclosure entanglements.

Adolph Zukor, contacted by a Reporter representative, smilingly said he would be very glad to say the story was true, but unfortunately nothing like it had even been thought of, much less put in motion.

Roach Signs Eddie Foy Jr.

Henry Ginsburg, Roach general manager, yesterday signed Eddie Foy Jr. to a one picture deal with an option for a long term contract. Foy will probably go into the next all-star comedy. Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney handle the player.

Illness Starts Loew Home

New York.—Arthur M. Loew, vice president of Loew's, is expected back in New York in about a month, canceling his round the world trip because of illness.

20th Releases Cromwell

Twentieth Century yesterday relinquished its one-picture deal with John Cromwell, allowing Radio to take it over. Director is on a long-termer to Radio.

'Christina' Into Chinese

The deal was set yesterday for "Queen Christina," Garbo's latest, to go into the Chinese at the conclusion of the run of "Little Women."

O'Heron Loses a Day

Frank O'Heron, general manager for Radio, dropped out yesterday to nurse an injured leg. Expected at his desk today.

WARNERS PLAN TO AVOID ANY SHUTDOWN THIS YEAR

Tapering off to three subjects in work from a high of nine three months ago, Warners will attempt to keep a smaller number of pictures steadily in work so as to eliminate the usual studio shutdown the end of spring.

Studio has 18 features unreleased and in the cutting rooms. To date about two-thirds of the current year's program have been completed in the

THE LOW DOWN

It's a shame—what a certain male star in this town has to "go through" although very few would suspect it. The fellow is very attractive, gracious and probably a bit flirtatious. He's very gay and amusing too—when his wife isn't around. But she cramps his style something awful because he knows that even though she sits quietly by at parties and things, while people make a fuss over him, that he will have to pace the floor until dawn when they get home, listening to her demands for explanations of his actions, which for the most part require no explanation at all. She never makes a scene in public—but this actor (and still another that we can think of right now) has to pay for every jolly time—when he gets home!

A star who has a positive genius for giving dull parties, gave another one recently. Most of the guests left early. She fidgeted around a while and finally said to the remaining two or three, "Do you suppose they had a good time? . . . They MUST have had a good time—we had such NICE food!"

When Jean Hersholt was in Europe, he shot about eight hundred feet of Knut Rasmussen, famous explorer, now dead. Hersholt has just had a request from the Danish government for his camera work on Rasmussen, because all the country has as a pictorial record of him is a newsreel shot or two. If Jean sends over his footage, he'll probably get an embroidered gold medal or something.

And did ya hear about the important supervisor on a major lot who called all the company and staff on one of his pictures into the front office yesterday, with a very portentous summons? And then, just as they were shivering in their collective boots over the expected call-down for something or other, the supervisor reached in his desk, brought forth a package and said: "Now here's a fur piece that is worth every cent of five hundred dollars. How much am I bid?"

New York REVIEWS

"FUGITIVE LOVERS"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer prod.; director, Richard Boleslavsky; writers, Ferdinand Reyher, Frank Wead, Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich and George B. Seitz.

Capitol Theatre

Mirror: The film is splendidly produced, with realistic settings and convincing costumes. The intricate plot is developed with extraordinary skill. Wildly active and spectacularly thrilling, "Fugitive Lovers" is an unusually exciting action film.

American: It's entertainment all the way from coast to coast with a capable cast of troupers endowing it with both dramatic and comic factions in well-balanced quantities.

News: The screen entertainment that the Capitol Theatre is offering this week should satisfy all grown-up moviegoers. It is good modern melodrama filled with suspense, humor and romance and is set against a unique background. Toward the close of the film some of the scenes go overly sentimental, but regardless of its defects "Fugitive Lovers" remains acceptable entertainment.

Herald-Tribune: "Fugitive Lovers" is a lively and melodramatic adventure that suffers considerably from the fact that it never manages to make much sense. "Fugitive Lovers" is not my idea of impressive drama.

Times: Richard Boleslavsky, the director, keeps this melange of fun and ruddy drama moving swiftly, with many an ingenious turn and convenient coincidence. Mr. Montgomery does well by the part of Porter, and Miss Evans is spontaneous and captivating as Letty.

Sun: While it is really finely produced and atmospherically interesting it is, for some reason, a bit dull. Maybe what all movie buses, as well as all movie trains, need is—Marlene Dietrich of "Shanghai Express."

Journal: Smartly directed by Richard Boleslavsky, the picture sets and sustains a brisk tempo. And besides Miss Evans and Montgomery, who are excellent in their roles, the supporting cast includes C. Henry Gordon, Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton. It's good fun.

Post: Despite the fact that the story has some highly implausible touches and that the humor is not up to a very high level, these lapses are compensated for in the brisk pace which Director Boleslavsky and his actors have managed to inject into it.

World-Telegram: Several ideas get started, but in the end the whole thing seems a bit pointless in spite of the spirited attempt by the authors and director to squeeze every ounce of excitement and humor out of a transcontinental bus load of totally dissimilar and unrelated characters.

"MAN OF TWO WORLDS"

RKO-Radio prod.; director, J. Walter Ruben; writers, Ainsworth Morgan, Howard J. Green.

Music Hall

Journal: The film was well produced, and in the early sequences native dialogue is translated by means of subtitles. While the story doesn't give Mr. Lederer much opportunity to display the charming personality that was so widely acclaimed in "Autumn Crocus," it will be interesting to see what he does with his next picture.

News: It is too bad that Francis Lederer chose to represent himself as an Eskimo in his first American-made moving picture. Elissa Landi plays the role of the English girl mechanically, but the other members of the cast perform creditably. I hope Lederer makes a more felicitous selection for his next screen role.

Post: Mr. Lederer, who makes his screen debut in this picture, should have no trouble hereafter in establishing himself as one of the major box office attractions in Hollywood.

Sun: Unfortunately, it isn't half as effective as the recent "Eskimo," which it resembles in its early reels. In short, it deserves some sort of attention only on the grounds that another potential movie star makes his bow—without slipping and falling more than once or twice.

American: Despite the strange selection of a vehicle, Mr. Lederer is disclosed upon the Music Hall screen as the possessor of both talent and personality, which may be projected in film. Thus, while the occasion is something short of a triumph, there is much promise for the future.

World-Telegram: That Mr. Lederer is a good actor no one will deny. Nor will any one deny the power of his charming smile and personality and the illusive, captivating way he has with him on the stage and screen. These qualities are, obviously, the things that go to make a successful screen idol, which I have no doubt he will be. But not, I imagine, until he exercises a little more discretion in the choice of his screen material.

Herald-Tribune: So skillful is the young actor in his playing and so disarming is his straightforward mannerism that a part which might easily have become too whimsical for comfort ends up by being curiously real and surprisingly touching.

Times: There are many well-developed bits of comedy, and if some of it is not precisely new it is so well acted by Mr. Lederer that it tickled the risibles of the audience yesterday afternoon. In fact, the spectators applauded the film after its final fadeout.

Mirror: Broadway's most exciting matinee idol, Francis Lederer, attempts to hurdle the obstacle of a daffy story in making his debut as a hero of the screen. Engaging and picturesque though he is, he fails at the attempt.

Russell Mack Gets Next Dressler Pic

Russell Mack has been assigned to direct "Tish," the Marie Dressler starring vehicle, for the Irving Thalberg unit at MGM.

James K. McGuinness is writing the screen play of the yarn.

Lionel Barrymore Leaves Sunday For Personals

Lionel Barrymore leaves Sunday for the east to begin a personal appearance tour. He will open in Baltimore on February 2 for one week and the Capitol in New York on February 9. Other engagements are now being arranged. His sketch will consist of a scene from "The Copperhead," his favorite play. Edgar Allan Woolf wrote the material.

Seiter's Next 'Blarney'

William Seiter has been assigned to direct "Blarney Smith," the Ginger Rogers-William Gargan co-starring vehicle, which Lou Brock will produce for Radio.

Tommy Shugrue Dies

Tommy Shugrue died late Wednesday night after a prolonged illness. He had been an electrician in the publicity still department at MGM for several years.

Kath. DeMille at Para.

Katherine DeMille has been signed by Paramount for a featured role in "Trumpet Blows," which is being directed by Stephen Roberts.

'GOOD DAME' GOOD PIC; SIDNEY-MARCH ARE FINE

Script and Dialogue Rate Special Bows

"GOOD DAME"
(Schulberg-Paramount)

Directed by.....Marion Gering
Original by.....William R. Lipman
Screen Play by: William R. Lipman, Vincent Lawrence, Frank Partos, Sam Hellman.
Photographed by.....Leon Shamroy
Cast: Sylvia Sidney, Fredric March, Jack LaRue, Noel Frances, Russell Hopton, Bradley Page, Guy Usher, Kathleen Burke, Joseph J. Franz, Miami Alvarez, Walter Brennan, John Marston, James Crane, William Farnum, Patricia Farley, Florence Dudley, Jil Dennett, Erin LaBissoniere, Ernest S. Adams, Dewey Robinson.

"Good Dame" will take its place alongside some of the best contributions B. P. Schulberg has made to the business in his long career.

It does Sylvia Sidney proud, a bobbed-hair Sylvia on this occasion in a role calculated to enrich her standing as one of the first ladies of the screen. Sharing equally with her in a particularly difficult assignment, Fredric March comes off neatly as the ignorantly super-wise three-card monte guy of the traveling carnival.

The picture is genuine, and with a wealth of exciting color. Briefly, the story describes Sylvia Sidney as a stranded chorus girl who falls in with a carnival and is helped out of scrape after scrape by Fredric March. Sylvia is a girl of principle, clean and decent. The girls March has known were not. Circumstances, of their own unwitting making, throw them together, and as they are carried through a hectic series of misfortunes they eventually find each other.

Instead of his giving up the sordid carnival life, Sylvia comes around to his way of living and both are destined for that existence as the picture ends. This is but one of many story touches that light the unfolding of the yarn.

In one spot, however, it is tarnished. And that spot is in the unbelievable court room scenes where both confess their love for each other. It is the one synthetic moment in an otherwise perfectly sterling story. It is unnecessary and will, likely, be remedied.

William R. Lipman wrote the story and next to him comes Sam Hellman, whose dialogue is flavored distinctly with originality. Vincent Lawrence and Frank Partos also get credit for story work.

Marion Gering's direction is obviously affected and "arty" at moments, but he may be forgiven for the excellence of his work in general. Leon Shamroy's photography is a lesson in that art.

Subordinate cast bouquets go up and down the line. It is a hopeless task to single out individual performances when all contribute so effectively.

The exhibitor has a natural exploitation bet in carnival background of "Good Dame" and plenty to back it up. Sell them on coming in and the picture will sell itself.

Taxpayers' Money

One animating company in town received eight copies of Uncle Sam's famous questionnaire yesterday. If they had received a few more they'd have one for every employee.

Gaumont-British In L.A. Exchange

New York.—The Gaumont-British Company of America will open distribution offices in the Los Angeles territory in charge of George Weeks. The latter was years ago sales manager for Paramount, more recently with Mayfair Pictures.

Among the subjects to be handled from the exchange are "Waltz Time," "The Ghost Train," "Love in Morocco," "There Goes the Bride," "Night and Day" and "The Ghoul." Latter picture stars Boris Karloff.

MGM Snags Wadsworth For Long Term Contract

Negotiations that have been hanging fire for more than a month were climaxed yesterday when MGM placed Henry Wadsworth under a long-term ticket, five years with yearly options.

Al Kingston handled the trick, polishing it off after the studio execs got a glance of the player in "A Big Day," the former "It Happened One Day."

Bassler Promoted to Julian Johnson Aid

Completing his work as film editor on "Carolina," Robert Bassler becomes assistant to Julian Johnson, Fox story editor, filling the spot formerly held by John Mock. Nan Blair, who was announced for the position a short time ago, is in the Fox story department on a special assignment.

Rogers Toasts Harry Carr

Will Rogers will be toastmaster at a dinner tendered Harry Carr of the Los Angeles Times at the Writers' Club Thursday, January 25. John Goodrich is in charge of the arrangements.

Montgomery Returning

New York.—Douglass Montgomery leaves for the coast Saturday and the expectation is his first role will be in Universal's production of "Little Man, What Now?" with Frank Borzage directing.

Bancroft On Way Here

New York.—George Bancroft left for the coast Wednesday night without reporting any success in his search for a play with which to hit the New York stage next season.

'Eskimo' at 4-Star Theatre

MGM's Hunt Stromberg production "Eskimo" is booked in for an indefinite stay at the Four Star Theatre, opening January 26.

Leslie Howard Turns Producer

After seeing the Marquis de la Falaise's "Legong" and other similar pictures, Leslie Howard has decided to produce a travelogue in America to be titled "America Through an Englishman's Eye." The actor has written the story and plans to photograph such picturesque places as the national parks, and the desert through Arizona. Howard plans to appear in the series himself.

The travelogue is being made mainly for distribution in England and foreign countries, but will also be released in America. Howard at present is shooting scenes in Palm Springs and LaQuinta.

Radio Plans Sequel To 'Lost Patrol'

Radio execs are so sure of the success of "Lost Patrol" that a follow up on the picture is now in preparation in the story "Fugitive From Glory." The studio is figuring on Victor McLaglen to head the cast again with John Ford handling the direction.

The studio has several thousand feet of film which was shot by Ernest Schoedsack in Arabia, which they plan to utilize in this picture.

Maude Eburne Steps into May Robson MGM Part

Maude Eburne and Warner Oland were signed by MGM for featured spots in "In Old Louisiana." Miss Eburne will have the role originally assigned to May Robson. Production will start Monday under the direction of George Seitz, with Jean Parker, Robert Young, Lupe Velez and Ted Healy in the top spots.

Start Next Garbo Feb. 15

Dates were set yesterday at MGM for starting two of the most important pictures on the company's schedule. "The Painted Veil," next Garbo, gets under way February 15. "Operator 13," with Raoul Walsh directing and Marion Davies starred, on Jan. 25.

Here Seeking Players

New York.—H. R. Ullman, of the legit producing firm of Harmon and Ullman, reaches Los Angeles today to look around for stars to play in the forthcoming stage production of "Waltz in Fire," and to confer with its author, David Hertz.

Radio Borrows Foster

Norman Foster was borrowed from Fox on a one-picture deal to play the juvenile lead in the Jimmy Durante starring vehicle "Strictly Dynamite" for Radio. Eliott Nugent will direct. H. N. Swanson is the associate producer.

Al Alt to New York

New York.—Al Alt arrives in New York Friday to arrange distribution for twelve independent features.

YESTERDAY IN New York

As an item in the changing order, there is the picture of New York's new mayor, Fiorella LaGuardia, looking tired as he sat in his street clothes, slouching in a side balcony seat at the distinguished concert that welcomed beloved Toscanini back to the Carnegie Music Hall. . . . But it does nothing to efface the memory of Mayor Jimmy Walker, only a few years back, impatiently practicing a little soft shoe dancing with Irene Delroy, Betty Compton, Billy Seaman and a few of the boys in a Greenwich Village studio while one of the town's fire engines, bells clanging and sirens shrieking, roared down Sixth Avenue to relieve their pressing attack of thirst by a rush delivery of a coupla cases of champagne.

More change: the internationally-minded hotels like the Waldorf-Astoria, the Ritz and the Pierre, that once practically paid Ina Claire to linger a while and charged Salvation Army prices to you Hollywood riff-raff, are getting top prices and are filled to the ears with those rich French, those rich Germans and those rich English, over here to take advantage of you poor Americans and your depreciated currency. . . . The Butlers' Ball turned out to be a vague kind of success. It made a lot of money for charity. No one was there who looked even remotely like Halliwell Hobbes, which makes a liar out of the movies, again. It left the Admirable Crichton exactly where it found him, since with the exception of a few names and a few fronts, most of the 3000 who attended were either second floor maids or outer fringe society. They could be told apart, at least within a range of six feet.

The motion picture tradition is treated with irreverence—yes, again—in the suggestion made by Henry Mencken to Sinclair Lewis and Lloyd Lewis for their Civil War play. Instead of the Northern spy in love with the Southern girl, the Baltimore sage proposes a Southern spy in love with a Northern girl. It can't fail, Mr. Mencken promises. . . . Dashiell Hammett letting Thyra Sampter Winslow's new puppy use his nose for a teething ring. . . . You might be lucky, playing ping pong at the table in the center of the Algonquin's dining room. Your ball might bounce into Fannie Hurst's clam chowder and then look at you. . . The retired 10c a dance boys have taken up positions as partners in the corner ping pong parlors. . . . It is not true that Reliance is using a Photomaton for stills.

Mary Nash Coming Out For Try at Pictures

Mary Nash, one of Broadway's marquee names, is to leave for Hollywood, arriving early next week. The Small-Landau office is bringing her to town for pictures. Agency has several irons in the fire for her and is also cooking up a deal for Norma Terris, whom they have placed under their wing.

There's not a kid in the country who won't go for this picture, and their parents will probably trot right along with them. It is built by and for the American youth, especially those who are crazy about athletics. It is young, innocent, full of high ideals and sugar-coated advice that, inasmuch as it is humorously and dramatically presented, is not hard to take.

OPEN FORUM

Hollywood, California.

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

Your editorials on the movie studio situations are a daily treat to us at the studio, whether or not we may be in a position to agree with you and I have a great respect for your opinion and knowledge of the inner conditions and problems of the film industry and am writing to ask your opinion on a matter very close to my heart, aside from the financial interest.

While I am no longer a "script girl," I am only a few steps higher in the wage scale and needless to say that is pitifully small compared to the work required and the knowledge necessary to enable it to be done correctly.

Script girls are selected because of their college education or its equivalent and most of the girls hired are college graduates. We must be well dressed, passably good-looking, efficient in training and tactful in manner; be able to work for eccentric, temperamental writers of all sorts and kinds, be able to discuss their work intelligently with them, give helpful suggestions when asked and reserve our opinions when not asked, be a helpful critic when necessary, repair their grammatical errors and faulty construction without interrupting their "train of thought," be an efficient secretary in all business offices on the lot, know all the "important" people by name and sight and be able to give all the right answers, which is a diplomat's job at times; in other words, be able to hold down a dozen different jobs at once, all for the princely salary of $20 per week.

If a script girl is "good" and can stand up under the strain of long hours, (8 to 14 hrs. per day), hard work, rush and nerve-wracking conditions, she may get a two dollar raise, then again after working a few years out of the department, she may work up to $28 a week, always in the hopes of something better coming up.

The inconsistency of good stenographers and secretaries being paid such small sums of money over such a long period of time, working with writers, actors and actresses, all making fabulous amounts—that a small part of it could not be added to the weekly pay check of the employes who work so hard to make possible the scripts that bring the finished product before the public and fill the box offices with the money that is in turn paid in such fabulous salaries to the artists and executives, whose cooks, maids and butlers get more than the employees working with them shoulder to shoulder in the studio, making possible their very living!

Of course there is a depression—we are quite well aware of it, but with the exception of the lowly paid employees around the lot and the extras, have seen no evidence of it in the film industry. I think a more even spread among the employees would be amply rewarded by renewed hope, loyalty and effort. Most of the employees are supporting, not only themselves, but in some cases, large families who otherwise would be on charity. It is a back-breaking job as well as a heart-breaking one, and seemingly a thankless one in so far as remuneration is concerned.

I am not a habitual fault-finder. I love the work and only desire fair play for others as well as for myself. We work very hard to make the pictures a success from the ground-work up and our opinions, if used, would be of material benefit to those higher up—but it would be a breach of something-or-other for them to ask it.

I also happen to be one of the unfortunates who is compelled to support others besides myself and $28 does not go far and I must have a job. I have no "pull" inside the studio and what little I have gained has been on my own merits and I feel that your opinion of the financial reward accorded us in this department of the industry, if made public, would go far toward influencing the "powers that be," for they are afraid of your criticisms—the truth hurts—and their "Napoleonic" characteristics are only assumed.

Thank you.

Still Another Georgia Suit Over 'Chain Gang'

Atlanta.—Vivian Stanley, of the Georgia Prison Commission, has brought another action against the producers and exhibitors of "I Am A Fugitive From a Chain Gang." This action is for $100,000 damages, claiming the picture defamed his character and reputation. Similar action has already been brought by various chain gang wardens who had custody of Robert Elliott Burns while he was a convict.

Waggner on Mono. Script

Monogram yesterday signed George Waggner to script "City Limits," a novel by Jack Woodard which the studio purchased recently. Picture will be the next Ray Walker vehicle scheduled to start early in February and shoving "The Loud Speaker" back to later in the month.

'Convention City' Hits

"Convention City," finishing today at Warners' local first run spots, has topped all grosses to date since "Footlight Parade" at the houses. Last attraction there also proved a winner, but "Convention City" is showing a greater box office sale.

McCloud To Take Bride

Fraser McCloud of the Warner publicity staff will marry Ann Robinson of Tennessee by the end of the week. Studio is trying to figure out a way to perform the marriage so as to get the maximum of publicity.

'U' Seeks Lugosi

Bela Lugosi is being sought by Universal for a role in "The Black Cat," to be directed by Edgar Ullmer, with Boris Karloff starred.

'Sister Carrie' in Demand

Interest in Theodore Dreiser's "Sister Carrie" has been revived and both MGM and Radio are in the field for the property.

May Use Color For 'Chu Chin Chow'

New York. — "Chu Chin Chow" will be done in color if a suitable process can be secured in England, states Arthur E. Lee, vice-president of Gaumont British Picture Corporation of America. This picture will be made at the Shepherd's Bush Studios of Gaumont British, produced by Walter Forde, and starring Anna May Wong.

'House of Doom' Starts At Mono. Next Week

Revising the schedule for the third time in as many days, Monogram yesterday announced that it will start "The House of Doom," a play by Adam Hull Shirk, next week, shoving "Numbers of Monte Carlo" back on the schedule. William Nigh directs from the Albert DeMonde script and Paul Malvern supervises. Studio was to have started "The Loud Speaker" today, but has now scheduled that for the end of February.

'U' in Deal for 'Night Cap'

Depending on negotiations with Guy Bolton for the dialogue rights to "Night Cap," Universal is working out a deal with Max Marcin, play's co-author, to join the company to write and direct it. Eph Asher is slated to supervise the murder mystery.

Col. Has Gargan in Mind

Columbia is planning to shape "Hell Cat," which Al Rogell is producing, into a William Gargan vehicle and will register a bid with Radio for the loan of the player within the next few days.

'Comicolors' Sold Abroad

Eleven more countries have been closed for Ub Iwerks' series of "Comicolor" cartoons by Charles Giegerich, general sales manager for Celebrity Pictures, distributor of the series.

Para. Sets Marsh's Two

"You're Telling Me" and "Murder at the Vanities" are lined up as the two first pictures for Joan Marsh on her new long term pact with Paramount.

Just a Pal

After the newspapers said that Eddie Rubin would get a break in a picture with his brother Bennie, he received a letter from an acquaintance who had been kind of snooty in the old days. It ended: "Just read about your good luck. If this is true let's hear from you."

UndercoverWorkers Lift Agents' Clients

A new wrinkle among the agents has them engaging special people to handle the raiding of other agents' lists.

Two offices have already engaged the "raiding experts" and claim the results are excellent. The specialty men (one is a woman) shoulder all responsibility for snatching clients away from rival managers, the payoff having their employers denying they are raiding other agents by disclaiming responsibility for the undercover employees.

as published in the Washington Times Rosenblatt said that the code gave him power "to inquire into Hollywood's morals as well as its ethics." He was quoted further as follows:

"I hope to devise a feasible plan whereby all responsible organizations interested in the welfare of the motion picture industry will have a voice and be an advisory factor in production. That includes, of course, such organizations as the Federal Council of Churches and Christian America and the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae."

Picture executives were ready to talk, but not willing to be quoted. No one individual wants to be the goat to drawn down Rosenblatt's ire. But they were unanimous in declaring that unless something is done to present a united front in opposition, the industry will soon be functioning completely under Governmental regulation, not only in its financial set-up but in the type of pictures it will be allowed to make.

One executive was outspoken in his statement that the situation showed the need for the old vigorous united Academy to present a solid front and bring the industry out of the peril.

Pending the arrival of Will Hays from the East no one at the local Producers' office would comment on the inclusion of the Federal Churches and the Catholic Alumnae under Rosenblatt's wing, after these organizations have been working in close cooperation with Hays for several years.

Indication that President Roosevelt is personally backing Rosenblatt in his broad claims and expectations is seen in the news from Washington yesterday that "Morris Legendre has been appointed assistant and technical advisor to Rosenblatt on his Hollywood trip."

The Washington dispatch said, "He is a newcomer here but is said to know his movies."

Inquiry in Hollywood failed to disclose anyone, even among veterans, who knew of a Morris Legendre ever connected with the picture industry. But the investigation did turn up a "Maurice Legendre" who was here some months ago for a visit as a guest of Gary Cooper.

Maurice Legendre is a wealthy New Orleans sportsman and political figure, and a close personal friend of the President. For some time past he has been serving President Roosevelt in Washington as a sort of "dollar a year" man in confidential capacities. If it is the same Legendre it means that the President's hand is personally guiding Rosenblatt's statements and actions.

Sirovich Carries Fight to Johnson

Washington. — Congressman Sirovich is still gunning for the movies. He had a long telepone conference with General Johnson in New York last night pointing out how the copyright legislation enables the perpetuation of block booking and asking the General's aid in moves to amend copyright laws.

The General said that he would have Rosenblatt confer with Sirovich, and if conditions were as stated the copyright laws should be amended. That is, Sirovich says he said that.

Dick Rosson Gets Break On 'West Point of Air'

Richard Rosson, former silent picture director and more recently assistant director at MGM, was signed by MGM yesterday on a one-picture deal to direct "West Point of the Air." This is Rosson's first real break in the talkies. The William Hawks office made the deal.

MGM will co-star Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery in this picture.

Lowell in 'Doll House'

Helen Lowell's second picture on her two-picture deal with Warners will be "The Old Doll House," a story by Damon Runyon, which Ralph Block and Doris Malloy are scripting. Miss Lowell was brought out here from the New York stage and is now working in "Fur Coats" at the studio.

Trade Show 'Hi Nellie'

Warners will trade show "Hi, Nellie!" for Southern California exhibitors at the Boulevard Theatre next Tuesday, January 23. Picture is the Paul Muni vehicle which Al Green directed.

MGM Can't Have Holmes

The second attempt of MGM to secure Ben Holmes from Radio on a directing loanout was unsuccessful. The turndown was due to assignment of Holmes to direct the Wheeler and Woolsey picture.

Touchy

"They can't take it any more," sighed the waiter at Universal who has done impersonations of studio execs at the Laemmle birthday party for the past five years, after spending Tuesday night waiting for this year's invitation which never arrived.

Hoffman Gets Cash To Release Wilson

To secure the release of Charles Wilson from M. H. Hoffman, with whom the player was signed for "Take the Stand," cost the player's agent $75 yesterday, indie producer settling for that sum after demanding $175, claiming that it would cost him that much to replace Wilson.

Player asked for his release to comply with a deal set by Warners for "Golden Gate," Kingston signing him for spot when Warners claimed prior rights. Hoffman, however, insisted on the $175 settlement, finally coming down to $75 and settling the issue.

'Golden Gate' Starts Today

With Wilhelm Dieterle back from San Francisco, Warners put "Golden Gate" into production today with Pat O'Brien, Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay and Lyle Talbot in the top spots. Company will shoot at the Burbank plant today and tomorrow, then leave for a week's location in San Francisco.

Tidden Set in New Spot

Fritz Tidden, story associate with Al Kingston for a number of months, has become affiliated with Hoffman, Schlager, Inc., in a like capacity. Tidden retains his personal clients, including the Hollywood representation of Jean Wick, New York literary agent.

'Night Flight' Honored

The French Air Ministry has asked MGM for a print of "Night Flight," which was directed by Clarence Brown, for its historical records, as it is a true phase of French aviation.

'Villa' Closed Last Night

"Viva Villa," the David Selznick-MGM picture, reported finished a few days ago, really folded up completely and finally last night.

Opera May Move to Radio's Music Hall

New York.—Prospects of the Metropolitan Opera House moving to the Radio City Music Hall next season are read into the news today that David Sarnoff, Radio chieftain, had been elected a director of the Metropolitan Opera Association.

Under this set-up the RKO Center theatre would be the sole home of pictures in the Rockefeller buildings.

'U' Basketball Winner

Universal's basketball five triumphed over the Bank of America team easily last night by a 63-46 score. The studio Execs Team, with Junior Laemmle and Eddie Grainger, one-time Fordham star, showing the way, beat the Editorial Team, 46 to 24.

MGM Closes for 'Kim'

New York.—MGM has finally closed the deals for "Kim" and "Captains Courageous." Clare Kummer is also preparing to take up her assignment on the Elmer Harris play, "Unhappily Married."

Warners To Keep Going

six months since the studio reopened last July. About half of the pictures remaining to be shot will be special productions requiring more time than the 15-day schedule now in use at the plant.

Pictures now at work are "Hot Air," "Hit Me Again" and "Fur Coats." The specials getting into production in the next month or so are "Dames," a Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell musical; "British Agent," with Leslie Howard; "The Key," Kay Francis and William Powell, and probably "Madame DuBarry," another Kay Francis vehicle.

STUDIOS YAWN FOR CASH

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THIS questionnaire that NRA has caused to be sent to executives and other big salaried people in the motion picture business is one of the funniest things we have ever read and we can't understand how any Government could feel that it has the right to pry into the privacy of the business life of any individual to the extent being attempted. It's a scream. If you have not read it, grab yourself a copy.

Why must almost every person and organization, clothed with some little authority, meddle in the affairs of this business? Why don't they do the same meddling in other industries? Why continually, day in and day out, pick on motion pictures?

We acknowledge that there are a lot of questions we would like to see answered, which answered correctly and honestly, would do a lot to help this business. But who is there to believe that those questions will be given the right answers? It's a cinch they won't.

The whole thing, this prying into our affairs, will only serve to slow up everything, to stop the progress of making pictures (good or bad), and no good will come out of it. The banks back in New York tried it, they sent their efficiency men out here to ask those questions and look into the inner chambers, but they did not get the right answer and their work had plenty to do with wrecking the business. Also, there was a greater penalty held out then than the Government could wield now or at any other time.

So why the meddling?

It would be a great thing for Rosenblatt and General Johnson, if they would REALLY TRY to do something to help this business—it needs help. All these Government restrictions are not going to do any good, will not help. So what?

We can tell Mr. Rosenblatt that he will not get the right answers and a lot of them he should not get; it's no business of his or the good cause that the NRA is supposed to represent.

Warners in Black

New York.—Warners report a net profit of $105,852 for the 13 weeks ended November 25, the first quarter to show profit since 1930. This net excludes a profit of $655,262 on redemption of bonds.

MGM Tells Harlow She Can Sit It Out

MGM has no intention of going any further on their offers to Jean Harlow and have told her to sit it out as long as she wishes and the longer she sits the less valuable she becomes for a renewal of negotiations.

Harlow has a contract that still has almost four years to run at a salary of $1,500 a week. When she made her demands for more dough the studio met it with an offer of $1,000 a week increase, giving the platinum star $2,500 each Wednesday. She refused saying that she would not come back until her ticket read $5,000 weekly.

Harry Warner Arrives

Harry Warner arrives in Wilmington this morning on the California for a routine visit to the Warner studio. The head of the motion picture family is accompanied by a party which includes Joseph Bernhard of the Warner theatre department.

New Writer Body Forming

A group of screen writers dissatisfied with the proceedings at the Screen Writers' Guild are forming a minority group. Idea originated from the meeting held last Monday night.

Darryl Zanuck has allowed Twentieth Century's option on Sally Blane's termer to slip by and the player reenters the free lance field.

Anticipated Production Boom Dies As Exchanges and Exhibs Fail To Return Needed Cash

The slump in picture theatre business that hit the industry in October, continued through to the end of the year, and hasn't lifted yet, is showing its effects on the major studios, which are practically all now on a basis of "cash and carry," that is, when the money comes in from the theatres the pictures can be made.

Last month Hollywood studios collectively announced fifty pictures to start in January. Even discounting the usual over-expectations, it is startling to find that two-thirds of the month is past with only fourteen new features started at major plants.

The situation accentuates the problem that picture producers face today. The day is past when it was

New Gayor-Farrell To Be Norris Novel

The Kathleen Norris novel, "Manhattan Love Song," is scheduled to be the first co-starring vehicle for the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell reunion at Fox.

The studio plans to bring the team back to the public in this yarn as strong as it introduced them to the public years ago with "Seventh Heaven."

Roxy's Daughter Here

Beta Bijou, daughter of S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, has arrived in Hollywood and is planning on a swing at pictures as an actress.

Lou Diamond Coming

New York.—Lou Diamond is ready to leave for the coast next week to arrive there February 1.

Harold Smith, business representative of the IATSE sound local, is filing similar charges against the motion picture producers association, individually and collectively, with Charles H. Cunningham, new NRA District Compliance Director, as he lodged with the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board earlier in the week.

Producers are charged with disregarding the 40-hour maximum week for soundmen, excepting mixers and recorders, and with violating salary agreements.

Conrad Sues Wald

New York—Con Conrad announces he will sue Jerry Wald for $250,000, claiming the yarn "Radio Romeo," sold to Warners, was written by him. Wald made a bee-line for the offices of Nathan Burkan and placed all his worries in that spot.

Halper Back on Job

Louis J. Halper, West Coast chief for Warner Theatres, has resumed his duties at his desk here after a month's trip to New York, where he attended the Leroy-Warner wedding and polished off details on theatre business at the same time.

'Little Women' Extended

Since the words "last days" appeared in the Chinese advertising, business jumped so that Grauman has extended the run another week, January 28 being the closing date now.

Penner Signs For Three

New York.—Joe Penner, latest comedian to click on the radio, has been signed by Meyer Davis-Van Beuren to a contract for three shorts.

Meighan Goes Abroad

New York.—Thomas Meighan sailed for Europe last night on the Bremen.

NEW YORK BUSINESS SHOT MUSIC HALL LOW AT $61,000

New York.—Business in all the first run houses here took a bit of a licking this week. The Music Hall did a beautiful nose dive with Radio's "Man of Two Worlds" that had nothing better than Francis Lederer to interest the customers. The house did a top of $61,000, which is quite a bit dif-

New York REVIEWS

"SONS OF THE DESERT"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer prod.; director, William Seiter; writers, Frank Craven and Byron Morgan.

Rialto Theatre

Sun: The film is done well, but this theme must be brilliantly handled, or freshly handled, to make any impression on this department. Last night's audience at the Rialto chuckled at various places without laughing especially loudly—the way that they should have laughed at a Laurel and Hardy comedy. Laurel and Hardy are quite excellent in "Sons of the Desert." They are handicapped, principally, by the staleness of the material.

World-Telegram: It's funny enough for two reels. After that, the Messrs. Laurel and Hardy cease to be sheiks or shrieks.

Times: It is funny all the way through. The mournful and witless Mr. Laurel and the frustrated Mr. Hardy are just as unfitted for the grim realities as they have ever been. There is enough tragedy in the lives of the unhappy husbands to hold any student of the higher manifestations of the American slapstick.

Journal: The farcical story is neatly built up and there are plenty of laughs in the slapstick gags and the Laurel and Hardy antics.

Herald-Tribune: It is only fair for me to say that apparently a congress of those who disagree with me in the matter was being held at the Rialto Theatre yesterday, for the house was crowded with ecstatic delegates who showed every sign of regarding themselves as being in an ideal world where there were two Chaplins working in one film.

Cinecolor Process Gets Major Shorts Contract

Contracts for the Cinecolor process have been closed for the Willie Whopper cartoons for MGM release and Educational's "Romantic Journeys" series for release through Fox. P. A. Powers also has closed for his Comicolor series. The new business is ascribed to a development which has enabled Cinecolor to secure the effect of three colors.

Irving Thalberg Assigns Rasch to 'Merry Widow'

Irving Thalberg has signed Albertina Rasch to work out the dances, arrange for the girls and be a general help on the making of "The Merry Widow" that will star Chevalier under the direction of Lubitsch.

'Death Plays Bridge' Dead

An unsatisfactory story line has made Irving Briskin shelve "Death Plays Bridge," a K. S. Daiger story which the Columbia producer is to revive at a later date on the production schedule.

Phillips Holmes in N.Y.

New York.—Phillips Holmes arrived here yesterday with plans to depart immediately for the coast, where he has some picture propositions beckoning.

O'Brien in Frisco

San Francisco.—George O'Brien, screen star, arrived here yesterday for a brief visit with his relatives.

Gibson and Radio In Billing Dispute

Question over billing yesterday caused a dispute between Wynne Gibson and Radio.

Player, set for "Crime Doctor," demanded first billing according to her contract unless stars are cast for the picture in which event their names precede hers. Company is anxious to give Otto Kruger, loaned from MGM, top billing along with Mary Astor, who was signed for the part opposite him. Incident promises to make Radio lift Miss Astor to star rating in order to solve the wrangle.

Elliott Nugent directs with David Lewis at the helm.

Nat'l Break on 'Palooka'

New York.—The theme song of "Palooka" will get a record breaking simultaneous play over networks on January 30, having been selected by the National Committee for the Birthday Ball for President Roosevelt. Maxson Judell conceived the song, which combines a verse by Edgar Guest with music by Ferdie Grofe.

Ryan Tagged by Small

Ben Ryan has been signed by Edward Small to write the dialogue on "Count of Monte Cristo." Picture will probably be directed by Walter Lang when it goes into production some time next month.

Otherwise It's All Right

In addition to changing the title from "The Golden Gate," to "The Gentleman From San Francisco," Warners yesterday postponed the start of the feature until Monday. Wilhelm Dieterle directs.

'Sawdust' for 'Joe E.'

Warners yesterday assigned Tom Buckingham to script the next Joe E. Brown vehicle, "Sawdust." Story with a circus background is an original by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby.

First Acad. Meet Plans For Future

The new committee recently appointed by the Academy, of which King Vidor is chairman, met for the first time yesterday at noon to discuss future plans.

It was decided that the Academy would perform in the future as it had in the past and plans are now on foot to appoint an Awards Committee.

The annual Academy awards will be presented about the middle of March.

The Academy also reports that a number of its members that had wandered away from the organization during its recent debacle are returning to its fold.

Rowland and Brice Col. Deal Is Shaky

The Rowland and Brice releasing deal with Columbia for two pictures is up in the air and is expected to be called off at any moment, according to reports trickling here from New York. At the same time it is reported that the production team is discussing a deal wih Radio's New York office.

New 'Our Gang' Forms

Hal Roach yesterday signed Jerry Tucker and Wally Albright to the reorganized "Our Gang" and will put one of the shorts into production today. Gus Meins directs. Lichtig and Englander agency handled.

ferent from the $90,000 and $100,000 that have been pretty common recently.

The Capitol with "Fugitive Lovers" ran to $41,600 and the Paramount with "Eight Girls in a Boat" did less than $40,000. Goldwyn's "Roman Scandals" sank to $17,500 in its fourth week of the run, and the Strand showing "Easy To Love" could not count $10,000 for their ticket sales.

The Seventh Avenue Roxy with the British production of "I Was A Spy" did okay with $28,300. The Rialto with a nine day run on "Sons of the Desert" grabbed $16,000. "Myrt and Marge" could only last two days at the Mayfair and was replaced by "Sixty Fathoms Deep" and the two did less than $7,000.

Next week should see a jump in receipts since thousands of school kids will be home most of the week because of Regent's tests.

'IT HAPPENED' SWELL PIC; WB'S 'YOUR NUMBER' GOOD

Direction, Cast and All Concerned Okay

"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT"
(Columbia)

Directed by.....Frank Capra
Story by.....Samuel Hopkins Adams
Adaptation by.....Robert Riskin
Photography by.....Joseph Walker
Cast: Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Alan Hale.

Well, another swell, bang-up grand picture has dropped in our midst. It is Columbia's "It Happened One Night," a charming, human, believable story, with charming, human, believable characters.

The thing gallops right along, kicking up its heels in cheerful, frisky joie de vivre, and the audience gallops right along with it. There's not a dull moment, in spite of the fact that it runs a good two hours. Undoubtedly some of it near the end will be cut, but it is so fine throughout that it's a shame it can't all be kept in.

It is comedy with a kick, drama with a punch, and the picture is served with acting and direction that hit a new high all their own.

Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert have the parts of their lives. He is a newspaper man who helps her to escape from her father who is bent upon preventing her marriage to a young bounder. On their hitch hike from Miami to New York, they fall in love with each other. Neither Gable nor Colbert seem to do any acting. They just amble joyfully through the picture, being utterly natural and devastatingly human. And they and the picture are blessed with lines that do nothing but sparkle. There isn't a dull line of dialogue in the whole thing, and there isn't a dead character.

Walter Connolly is splendid as usual as Miss Colbert's father, and Roscoe Karns is amusing as a traveling salesman. Alan Hale is good in a smaller role. Frank Capra's direction is like million dollar icing on a perfect cake, and Robert Riskin made a brilliant adaptation of Samuel Hopkins Adams' story. Joseph Walker's photography is worthy of the film, and that's saying a lot.

Do a favor to your audiences, and grab this one off for them. It's got everything—names, superb acting, riotous comedy and perfect direction.

Lance Still Victor

The motion of J. G. Mayer, Ltd., for a new trial in the case of Leo Lance and J. G. Mayer, Ltd., for a new trial was denied yesterday by Judge Pope in Municipal Court, the Judge holding there was no basis for the motion. Lance was awarded a judgment against the agency for commissions due about a month ago. Attorney James Houlahan represented Lance.

Goulding on Next Holtz

Alf Goulding will direct the next Lou Holtz short, "Showmanship," for Columbia.

Now It's a Secret

Washington.—At least three of Rosenblatt's friends wired him the wise thing when arriving west was to get off at Pasadena and avoid the delegations. Rosenblatt accepted the advice. And immediately announced to the press associations that he would elude all pleaders—by getting off at Pasadena.

Roxy Seems Cinch For Old Roxy Post

New York.—The know-it-alls around here are of the opinion that RKO committed its greatest blunder when they let Sam Rothafel out and argue that it would have been much better had they paid him his salary every week just to sit around and look. For Roxy, running the Seventh Avenue Roxy would not only crimp the giant Music Hall, but would put the crimper into every house on the street, because Roxy has a big following.

And it now looks as if the know-it-alls, know it all, for indications are that Roxy will go back to his old house on Seventh Avenue, the first of February and then the fur will fly. Not only will Roxy go back, but every man in the Music Hall that is considered of any value, will go with Roxy.

'U' Wants Elissa Landi For Lead in 'Glamour'

Universal is trying to borrow Elissa Landi from Columbia for the lead in "Glamour" with Paul Lukas and Russ Columbo in the male leads. William Wyler will direct and Benny Zeidman will produce the picture.

If the studio is successful in securing the player, production will not start until Miss Landi finishes her present picture at Columbia.

Beany Walker at Para.

William LeBaron signed H. M. Walker yesterday to write the screen play of "Hearts and Flowers," Paramount's next starring vehicle for W. C. Fields. The DeShon-Naylor office set the writer.

Col. Likes Warner Gal

Gloria Warner gets her third consecutive assignment at Columbia in "Love Detective," Zion Myers' short. Walter Kane of the Weber office handles the player's deals.

Shelve 'Lottery Lover'

Fox was unauthoritatively declared to have shelved production plans on "Lottery Lover," which was to have served as a Lilian Harvey picture.

Del Rio Coming Here

New York.—Dolores Del Rio leaves for the Coast today, ending reports that she might go to England immediately for "Sons of Guns" as a British picture.

Katherine Brush Sails

New York.—Katherine Brush, author, sails for the Coast today by way of the Canal.

Snappy Dialogue And Cast Hi-Lites

"I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER"
(Warners-First National)

Directed by .....Ray Enright
Screen Play by..... Warren Duff and Sidney Sutherland
Photography .....Arthur Todd
Cast: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Eugene Pallette, Henry O'Neill, Hobart Cavanaugh, Louise Beavers, Gordon Westcott, Renee Whitney, Selmer Jackson, Robert Ellis.

You needn't worry about the phone lines on "I've Got Your Number" (new listing for "Hell's Bells"). It's an action melodrama in good working order. Built along routine lines of romance combined with a chase, it is given especial interest by wise-cracking characters and a new background.

Pat O'Brien plays Terry, a repair man for the New York telephone system. Combining pleasure with business has become a habit. He fixes telephones and dates with equal skill. Allen Jenkins trails along, assistant, stooge and chaperon combined. His apprehensive plea, "Let's get outa here!" is a running gag which never fails on laughs.

Joan Blondell as a switchboard girl misdirects a call at the request of a friend. She thinks it is for a laugh, but it tips off a betting deal, and she has to leave her job. Terry gets her another, and the same racketeers pull another job by the simple expedient of keeping her busy answering fake calls while they get away with the bonds.

The only place where the action falls down is when Terry goes alone to a house where a mob is hiding. There is plenty of suspense, but even the engaging dumbell built by O'Brien wouldn't be so dumb as all that.

The whole cast mugs happily and heartily, and the audience liked it well enough to break out in applause when the trouble shooters pile into a car to dash to Terry's rescue.

Shouts of laughter greeted Pat O'Brien's lines and business. Joan Blondell is excellently cast for the hard-boiled phone girl. Glenda Farrell scores from the moment she appears as a medium who gets voices from the spirit world over the telephone until she staggers out of a night club to give another "reading."

Eugene Pallette does handsomely by the comedy as a permanently infuriated superintendent. Gordon Westcott does nicely by his part of the smoothie racketeer, and Louise Beavers, Hobart Cavanaugh and Renee Jackson turn in parts that add to the general hilarity.

Good old action is the keynote of this film, but comedy pervades even those scenes when Terry is jumping off a burning building.

Crisp, wise-cracking dialogue, Ray Enright's sure direction, well chosen cast and the interesting inside slant on the workings of a telephone system ring the bell for this one as a good programmer.

YESTERDAY IN New York

A great publisher came to town last week. He is a distinguished publicist, high in the councils of the nation, through whom civilization and the outside world must filter to reach the half million souls in his city.

The plays and the theatres with their wit and polish reached out their arms to him, the fine restaurants of the city tempted him with inspired food and the night clubs glittered their brightest invitation.

He had only two nights in New York. On the first, he dined at the Longchamps, where the vegetables are so green. Then he went to the Music Hall to see "Flying Down to Rio." The next night he didn't know what to do. So he had dinner at the Longchamps again, and, believe it or not, he went to the Music Hall again.

Some people may think he is wrong; his idea is that to edit a paper you must be in tune or in step with your people.

Two advertising agencies were in competition for a big contract. The account meant a lot of money and a lot of distinction. The first agency decided that they would turn out a swell campaign. They worked on copy and they spent a fortune on art. The other agency knew a guy, the right guy, and let it go at that.

Earl Carroll Beauts Here Next Week

New York.—Set Hollywood's palpitating heart at rest and get those parades ready. Earl Carroll leaves New York Tuesday for the Coast accompanied by his bevy of girls for "Murder in the Vanities."

Broadway's sharps are watching with interest the contest in showmanship that will be staged by George White, at Fox for his "Scandals," and Earl Carroll.

Judith Wood Quits

Judith Wood, Twentieth Century term contract player, has filed a petition in bankruptcy through Attorney M. L. Rabbit. Action was recorded under the player's real name, Helen Johnson.

Humberstone Hits Bell

Lucky Humberstone brought "Merry Wives of Reno" in yesterday on schedule for Warners, and is off the studio payroll following his one-picture contract.

Hays Here Ready for Producers' Huddles

Will Hays arrived in town yesterday ready to go into a huddle with the production executives on matters to come up during the visit of Sol Rosenblatt next week. Despite the wild reports to the contrary, no producer meetings have been held yet and they will not be held until next week.

Hays was happy. "The recent pictures to make big successes," he said, "prove all that picture men have been saying for years—the public taste can be trusted. It is safer to overrate rather than to underrate public intelligence."

Radio Re-Unites Gleason-Oliver

Radio has signed Edna May Oliver and James Gleason as the comedy team in "Murder on the Blackboard," which will be directed by George Archainbaud. Radio used the same comedy team in their previous murder thriller, "Penguin Pool Murder," by Stuart Palmer, who authored the other one also.

Weber Can't Drive

The Los Angeles traffic court yesterday came to the decision that Herbert G. Weber, local agent, is altogether too fast and revoked his driving license. He claims he was only nailed for speeding ten times and complains that he has to hire a chauffeur as an alternative.

Picture Bizness

Big problem of the executives at Universal yesterday was how to get an All-American basketball player now at Columbia studios, for the Universal team. Latter studio couldn't hire the boy, Columbia put him under contract after the first game.

Guild Extras Meet To Elect Wednesday

Extras who are affiliating themselves with the Screen Actors' Guild will have a chance to lay out their organization set up and future plans at a meeting called for Wednesday, January 28, at the Woman's Club, Hollywood.

Ann Harding and Morgan Wallace of the Guild will be present to start the meeting off, but will retire as soon as the extras have selected their own officers. Only paid up members of the Junior Screen Actors' Guild will be admitted.

Freed-Brown Re-Tagged Before Contract Expired

Although the song-writing team of Arthur Fried and Nacio Herb Brown have until March to go until their present contract expires, MGM signed the team for another year yesterday. At present they are writing the song numbers for the Joan Crawford picture, "Sadie McKee," and the Jeanette MacDonald pictures, "Duchess of Delmonico's."

Ruth Donnelly and Warners Settle Tiff

A compromise agreement on salary yesterday cleared up the situation between Ruth Donnelly and Warners, both parties shaking hands on a new deal which will be signed today.

Player's old deal expired owing to her refusal to take a cut on the increase then due. The new deal, negotiated through William S. Gill, has both parties meeting each other halfway, Warners offering $900 per week, Miss Donnelly asking $1250.

The player also gets a clause stating she will work in only one picture at a time, the second such deal since that of Aline MacMahon's. Upon signing her new ticket today, Miss Donnelly hops off for New York on a three week vacation.

Radio Signs Frawley

William Frawley has been signed by Radio on a one-picture deal for a featured role in "Crime Doctor," which John Robertson will direct. Otto Kruger has the top spot.

Thompson on 'Springtime'

Keene Thompson is now at work with Frank Tuttle on the adaptation of "Springtime for Henry," the Benn Levy play.

Frank Campbell Dies

New York.—Frank E. Campbell, noted mortician, in whose parlors so many screen and stage stars reposed, died yesterday in Larchmont, N. Y.

merely necessary to pick a figure and a group of ciphers to wire to New York each week for the studio payroll. Nowadays New York TELLS the studio—and tells it in plain language a few weeks in advance the very top that can be expected from theatre and exchange collections.

Which gives the studio exec a two-way headache. First, only the biggest of attractions bring back the gravy in amounts that cheer a studio man, but big pictures in the making drain the treasury like a broken dam.

On the other hand, small time pictures which can be made for the money available show up in the returns sixty or ninety days later like rain drops in the Grand Canyon.

The result is the present situation with stories being postponed, rewritten, recast, and everything rather than admit the money isn't available.

But for once the producers are in a fairly healthy position on contract commitments, most of the studio heads having started to draw in their horns on contracts, even for desired people, many months ago when they were given the definite New York order—"from now on you live out of income."

The bulk of the suffering is being done by the agents, who rely on the overturn of free-lance players, and the excess on selling from studio to studio on their contract people for their gravy. The agents will never want to see this January again.

My profound thanks and sincere appreciation to the Warner Brothers and their organization.

STILL TOO MANY SEATS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THIS idea of playing the production year safe is not doing this business any good. By playing safe, we mean the making of a whole gob of pictures and believing that the success of a few will make up for the losses of the others. That's the wrong idea, because it is being proven every day that the program attraction is a dud, will not earn its cost; accordingly why burden the budget with that type picture when it is known that hit pictures will make more money today than ever in the history of this industry?

And we are not so stupid as to suggest that every picture can be a hit picture; but we will say that there will be ten times as many if producers set out to make hits and discontinue the practice of putting a picture into production because they need a picture.

There is a demand for a lot of pictures because most of them will not stand up for anything resembling an engagement. If better pictures are made, those pictures will play three and four times the number of days, and at less cost to the exhibitor, the distributor and producer and a greater profit for all.

It's astonishing what a good picture will gross today. We mean throughout the whole world. And there is equal astonishment at how little a program flop will take in. Is it not better to make, say, 12 pictures at a cost of $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 with the possibility of grossing from $500,000 to over $1,000,000 each, than to shoot from $15,000,000 to $20,00,000 in the making of 50 to 60 pictures that will not bring back better than the negative cost, IF THAT?

And it's tougher to make programers than it is hit pictures. It's all in the desire to make good pictures and take the time and not the expense of producing them. Three hit pictures will grab more dough than 60 programers and the effort in the making of those programers keeps the producers away from making hits, because they have not got the time or the money.

No studio should make over 12 pictures a year. They can't make more and make them good. There are not enough stories to make more or artists to write, direct and play in them.

Wall St. Watches Heavy Loew Buying

New York.—Wall Street is getting very bullish on Loew's, Inc., and expects that organization to follow the recent Warner statement with exceptionally good earnings.

There is very heavy buying in Loew's stock, indicating that someone is not afraid of that big block of overhanging stock recently purchased by A.T. &T. and Chase Bank interests. In fact, if some of this is reaching the market, a few more days of the present volume of trading will soon absorb the 660,900 shares split among Film Securities noteholders.

First Court Action on NRA By Newark Theatre

Newark.—The Congress Theatre here makes the first court test case of the NRA, having gone to the Federal courts Saturday for an injunction against the rule that if a theatre does not express compliance with all rules of the NRA it cannot avail itself of the machinery for zoning and clearance disputes. Decision on the injunction will be given today.

New York Zone Alone Has Over Million and Quarter — Latest Theater Figures Interesting

Despite depression and all its woes, and with close to two thousand sound equipped theatres closed definitely, the nation is still vastly over-seated according to a recapitulation just made by Charles C. Pettijohn, through the facilities of the Film Board of Trade, as of January 1.

The New York exchange zone alone, for example, shows 1,290,644 theatre seats yawning for occupants every night of the week. Philadelphia is another shining example of over-seating, having 663,169 chairs to fill, practically as much as Chicago with 663,845, despite the vast difference in their exchange ratings.

The total of the country's theatres still hovers about the 18,000 mark,

'Gallant Lady' Is Tops at N.Y. Rivoli

New York.—The opening day on the Twentieth Century production of "Gallant Lady" did a land office business at the Rivoli here, topping all other opening days for quite a period with a take of $7,613.

Sam Goldwyn's "Roman Scandals" held the top spot with $7364 for opening; "The Bowery" followed in receipts with $7122, offering a conclusion that in "Gallant Lady" United Artists has another big hit attraction.

Wilcoxon in N.Y. Tuesday

New York.—Harry Wilcoxon, slated to be DeMille's Antony, arrives here tomorrow on the Majestic.

'Pompeii' In Color Big Radio Special

Radio will shoot the works on "The Last Days of Pompeii," one of the biggest productions ever to come out of that studio, which will personally be supervised by Merian C. Cooper. The story will be adapted to the screen from Bulwer Lytton's book. The production will be made in Technicolor. No director, writer or cast has yet been decided, but Cooper promises an all star cast.

This story was produced as a silent picture about fifteen years ago by an Italian film company.

GUILDS RIDE ACADEMY AS 'ROSY' NEARS HERE

The Guilds are not waiting on the arrival of Administrator Rosenblatt to swing into action. In a joint statement issued last night the Writers' and Actors' Guilds branded recent publicity concerning the revival of the Academy as proving the latter body "producer-conceived and producer-controlled," and that while it might represent directors and producers it would in no way speak for the writers and actors. The statement reads into recent Academy news an attempt to block the two employee groups in dealing with the NRA authorities.

'U' Lifts on Pryor

Universal will lift Roger Pryor's option when it comes up February 6. Player is scheduled to go into "If I Was Rich" as his next for the plant. He has been seen in "Moonlight and Pretzels" and "I Like It That Way."

'Rosy's' Frau Accompanies

Chicago.—Administrator Sol Rosenblatt was joined here by his wife and she will accompany him on his ten days coast stay. Rosenblatt arrives on the Chief today, alighting at Pasadena, and going to the Beverly-Wilshire.

THE LOW DOWN

This should slay you—and make you as mad as it did us about the deal that Lee Tracy seems to be getting, undeservedly! Harold Grieve, just returned from several weeks in Mexico City, reports that pictures starring or featuring Lee Tracy are running there just as though nothing had happened! So you can't help wondering just what did happen—if anything! What is more, Lee's pictures in some spots are ballyhooed to the skies—and taxi-drivers, bell-hops, etc., who always know all about everything, say there isn't any feeling against the actor there at all—in fact, they "don't know what it's all about"! How d'ya like THAT?

The menus were printed like hospital bulletins on ailing patients, the food was served on an operating table, and the eating implements included everything from surgical knives to forceps! It was a perfect setting for the way everybody felt—but some of the gags made it a howling success!

New York REVIEWS

"I WAS A SPY"

British-Gaumont prod.; director, Victor Saville; writer, Martha McKenna.

Roxy Theatre

Journal: "I Was a Spy," at the Roxy Theatre this week, is a remarkably interesting film. It was made by British-Gaumont, and the English studios have here another production that stands well above the average.

Herald-Tribune: A spy picture, exciting enough to stir the audience yesterday afternoon to cheers and hisses. It is convincing, colorful, fast and has suspense. Mr. Victor Saville deserves high praise for his artistic and workmanlike direction.

Mirror: A stunning war melodrama; an impressive and exhilarating film, staged with a taste and conviction unusual in spy films.

Times: The espionage activities are set forth with a praiseworthy degree of plausibility and the necessary dramatic impact. The picture can well boast of its cast, for among the players are Madeleine Carroll, Herbert Marshall and Conrad Veidt.

News: The picture is slightly confusing at the beginning, as one isn't quite sure whether the soldiers in the hospital are meant to be English or German, and a little too much film is used up before the design of the picture is apparent. As the story begins to take form one becomes enthralled by it as the plot is masterfully worked out by director and actors on the screen.

Sun: "I Was a Spy" offers such genuineness in various episodes, in its general look and feeling that I don't mind the lack of climactic story telling. But audiences in this country will, I fear. There is so much that is so fine in "I Was a Spy" that you and you and you ought to help it.

Post: Here, for once, is a war spy film that is simple, direct and wholly believable; free from the theatricalism and shoddy dramatics which have previously characterized the screen attempts to portray the work of spies in wartime. It is Conrad Veidt who dominates the picture. His is the apogee of distinguished acting. If you want to see the cinema at its best, don't fail to visit the Roxy this week.

World-Telegram: The British studios have given us another fine film—one of the finest that has come this way in months. It is skillfully adapted for the screen by W. P. Lipscomb, directed magnificently by Victor Saville and played flawlessly by a cast that includes Madeleine Carroll, Herbert Marshall and Conrad Veidt. The British films have suddenly become definitely alive and vital.

Angel and Baxter Team For Lasky

Heather Angel is set for a co-starring assignment with Warner Baxter in Jesse L. Lasky's "Grand Canary," according to the Fox producer's present plans. It will be the first time that this team has been placed together.

Irving Cummings is discussing the directorial assignment and is expected to be spotted into the production on Lasky's return from his trip to Havana. Dudley Nichols is shaping the A. J. Cronin story into a screen play.

Roosevelt Order Opens Door For Film Indies

Washington.—Decision of the President to allow the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice to handle complaints by small business men opens the way for Allied Exhibitors and other opponents of the code as drawn to get recognition without having their appeals entirely in the hands of Rosenblatt and Johnson.

'Nana' Shows Tomorrow

New York.—Trade shows on "Nana" will be held throughout the country on January 23, with the exception of New York, where the picture is scheduled for an early opening at the Music Hall.

Jewell and Pendleton Added to 'Louisiana'

Isabel Jewell and Nat Pendleton are the latest additions to the cast of "In Old Louisiana," which gets under way today at MGM. The cast includes Jean Parker, Robert Young, Lupe Velez, Ted Healy, Maude Eburne and Warner Oland.

George B. Seitz is directing from the original script by Lucien Hubbard, who is supervising.

A.S.C. Meets Tonight

The general meeting of the A.S.C. called for tonight meets at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce building. The members will hear the terms of the new agreement between the Society and the producers, this being the agreemnt attacked by the IATSE on the ground it constitutes a closed shop for a company union.

British Author Coming

New York.—On his way to visit Leslie Howard in Hollywood, R. H. Bruce Lockhart, author of "British Agent," arrives in New York January 30. Howard will star in the Warner version of the book. A lecture tour is also planned.

Empire Films Change Pres.

Toronto.—Arthur W. Perry, former Ontario branch manager of Empire Films, Ltd., has succeeded Emanuel Brown as president of that organization, the latter having resigned. Ernie Geyer, publicity director, has also resigned.

Pickford in Person A Smash in Boston

Boston.—The personal appearance of Mary Pickford at the Metropolitan Theatre here broke the all time house record for an opening day. Never in the history of the town has there been such a demand for admissions.

Miss Pickford is using the same sketch, "The Church Mouse," that was used in New York and Chicago for her personal and the audience since opening Friday has voiced a most enthusiastic approval.

Mary now has offers to play in almost every important picture house in the country and is considering calling off the Broadway play that has been planned for her after the present engagement.

'U' Tries Innovation In Making NY Tests

New York.—Universal is trying an innovation in the making of tests on New York stage people for submission to the studio.

The company has bought the rights to "Boom," a one-act playlet by David Freedman, which will be used as a standard screen test for all prospective Universal players. Freedman is now putting it into script form.

MGM Wants Bainter Back For More Pics

MGM is negotiating for Fay Bainter to return to the coast for more pictures. Immediately after the actress finished her role in "It Happened One Day," she hopped a train for New York to go in "Dodsworth" with Walter Huston. She will return to Hollywood after the run of the play, it is understood.

'LOOKING FOR TROUBLE' HIT; TRACY-OAKIE SMASH TEAM

Excellent Writing And Fine Direction

"LOOKING FOR TROUBLE"
(20th Century-United Artists)

Directed by.....William Wellman
From Story by.....J. R. Bren
Screen Play by.....Leonard Praskins and Elmer Harris
Photography by....James Van Trees, Jr.
Cast: Spencer Tracy, Constance Cummings, Jack Oakie, Morgan Conway, Arline Judge, Judith Wood, Paul Harvey, Joseph Sauers, Franklyn Ardell.

In the full swing of the Zanuck stride of pictures with action, humor and plenty of the well-known audience appeal comes "Looking for Trouble," that is not only foursquare, forthright melodrama but gives forth the team of Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie (and that's a team that should incorporate immediately), plus plenty of mirth-quaking dialogue. All of which makes it a production that can't miss being a hit picture.

Still on the lookout for the human interest story and the punch in every day drama, Zanuck has put on the screen the story of the "trouble-shooters" of the telephone company. Those boys who go out in wind, sleet, rain and storm so that your voice may come tripping over the wires with bell-like clarity at any time of day and night. And these seemingly simple repair duties manage to involve everything from tracing the source of wire-tapping to solving murders, with an earthquake thrown in for good measure. Actually it's just the story of one of these trouble-shooters and the bumpy course his true love takes for an information girl. But the trimmings—boyoboy, they've thought of everything and then some which would look kinda silly in print but actually presents a well-knit dramatic story.

As was said before, Tracy and Oakie are a team. Not only that, they're the whole picture and they are swell. They never crab each other's scenes nor cramp each other's styles and both the boys have the gift of playing comedy and drama and knowing where to use them. Arline Judge is a grand foil for Jack Oakie, as the girl who just can't wait to learn all about Azuza as Oakie knows and practices it. That gal is going places with those fresh looks and plenty of personality and she can be slightly hard-boiled without any trace of toughness. Constance Cummings is Spencer Tracy's gal—with no great effect. William Wellman has given the picture the pace it needs and he sticks to good old fashioned moving pictures throughout and it is a distinct relief from the drawing-room technique. And the photography does wonders especially for the leading lady.

J. R. Bren has written a swell yarn made a hundred percent better by some of the snappiest dialogue written by Leonard Praskins and Elmer Harris we have heard for many a day.

There's no need to worry about exploitation angles with this production. The picture is just full of them and teems with suggestions for all kinds of effective tie-ups with which the telephone companies in the various cities will be more than glad to cooperate. Besides what more can an audience ask for than love, laughter and drama and Tracy and Oakie giving their all?

Preview Cards

MGM received the prize preview card on its production of "A Big Day." It remarked: "Your card, as well as your film, needs rewriting." And the critic underlined on the printed cards the words expressed in capitals:

"What is your opinion of the picture previewed this evening? The Producers are anxious to know AS they realize that the public ARE the final JUDGES. Kindly fill out the card and mail. Thank you. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer."

'U' Turning Down Offers For Stuart

Universal is turning down all comers on loan-out deals for Gloria Stuart, shielding the player for their own purposes. Studio turned down Radio's request for the player who was wanted for a featured role in "Crime Doctor," declaring she was set for a role in "Where's Brown."

At the same time Universal is working with Radio on a deal to borrow William Gargan for "If I Was Rich," which Henry Henigson is producing under Edward Ludwig's direction.

'Catherine' Clicks At Paris Premiere

Paris.—"Catherine the Great" was given its premiere here Friday night and seems to bear out the predictions of London, who saw it at the trade show last week. The critics assert it ranks well with "Henry the Eighth" and surpasses it in dramatic climax.

The audience was one of the most distinguished ever assembled for a film premiere here.

Indie Unit Shelves Plan To Make 'Harbor Patrol'

The MacGowan-Ludington unit has shelved its plans to produce "Harbor Patrol," the Robert MacGowan story which Clarence Badger had been announced to direct.

John Curtis, associated with Nicholas Ludington in the making of "Mating Time," is east on a releasing deal for the first picture before going ahead with future production activities.

W. DeMille Plans Operas

New York.—Satisfied with recent tests, William DeMille is planning a series of screen versions of the operas. Scenes from "Paglaicci" were made for the tests.

'Rothschild' Finishes

Alfred Werker winds up "The House of Rothschild" at Twentieth Century today. The George Arliss picture with 75 talking parts was in production about six weeks.

'Easy to Love' Not So Easy to Take

"EASY TO LOVE"
(Warners)

Directed by.....William Keighley
Story by.....Carl Erickson, David Boehm and Manny Seff
Photography by.....Ernest Haller
Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor, Genevieve Tobin, Edward Everett Horton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Paul Kaye and Robert Greig.

"Easy to Love" is a swell example of what happens when a good cast is drowned in a bad story. Swimming heroically in waste basket material, with no life lines in the way of direction or dialogue thrown out to help the poor actors, they (and the audience) finally gave up and sank hopelessly three times.

The blame should not fall on the director, however. William Keighley did the best he could with the dull, unwieldy vehicle, and the cast backed him up to the limit. The fault lies entirely with the story and the dialogue, by Carl Erickson, David Boehm and Manny Seff.

"Easy to Love" is a bedroom farce with two or three real comedy sequences. One is where the lovely Mary Astor is forced by circumstances to smoke a cigar. But these few good moments are more than offset by the excruciatingly bad taste and general unfunniness of the thing as a whole.

Adolphe Menjou, married to Genevieve Tobin, is having an affair with her best friend, Mary Astor. So Miss Tobin plans to even up the score by taking on Edward Everett Horton, her husband's best friend and fiance of Miss Astor.

These four principals, burdened with dialogue that means nothing and gets nowhere (with the exception of certain lines whose innuendoes must have set their teeth on edge), deserve nothing but praise for their gallant—but ineffectual—efforts. Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Paul Kaye and Robert Greig have smaller roles and they handle them well. Ernest Haller's photography is exceptionally good.

You exhibitors have plenty of names on this one, but nothing to back them up. The picture would be a little more acceptable if some of Miss Tobin's lines in the beginning were cut, and if the scene where Patricia Ellis informs her parents that she is in bed without any clothes on with Paul Kaye were taken out entirely.

Thayer Scripts 'Whipping'

Tiffany Thayer was signed by Paramount yesterday to write the screen play for "The Whipping," which Al Lewis is supervising. Vivian Gaye of the Joy and Polimer office set the deal.

Lugosi Buys a Play

New York.—Bela Lugosi has acquired a play with Spring production planned for Chicago. It is "Pagan Fury," by S. J. Warshawsky, and Lugosi will star.

YESTERDAY IN New York

Not the Four Marx Brothers—but five of them—gathered around the Algonquin show table listening to professorial Octavus Roy Cohen discoursing on something that may eventually become a great picture. . . . And while we are on the subject of what may eventually become a great picture, Prince Michael Romanoff lent his imperial person to the purposes of commerce last night when he made his first broadcast. . . . Soglow, Steig, Dr. Suiss and Peter Arno met each other today for the first time in the office of Hal Horne, whose reputation as a dead pun comedian still stands.

Thirty or forty actors and actresses waited for hours in George Goldsmith's anteroom in a confusion of appointments. The office boy finally had some sympathy for a fade-looking, yellow-haired lady of indeterminate age who had been waiting since early morning. He gave her a break. With a glad set smile she marched proudly in. "Hello, how are you? I just stopped in to say 'hello.'"

Sidney Howard, who now shakes his head reminiscently over his youthful days in Hollywood, has finished "Yellowjack" after many months of labor pains. The final version had what seems a happy collaboration with Dr. Paul DeKruif. The playwright and scientist began their dramatization of the Walter Reed adventure in Cuba, made great progress, fell apart, and then by some unexplained accident hit upon a solution of all their problems, dramatic and personal, and finally brought their joint literary effort to a promising completion.

Mary Pickford is happy now that she didn't buy "Christopher Bean" and play the role that eventually fell to Marie Dressler. . . . Mollie Merrick led the cotillion in her honor in the bar of the Madison last night. . . . Richard Watts was both on the receiving and the dissenting end, whatever that is, as George Oppenheimer would say. . . . Helen, please come back. All is forgiven.

Calhern Starts Again; 'Firebrand' His First

Under the wing of the Edington-Vincent office, Louis Calhern essays another swing at pictures in "Firebrand," at Twentieth Century, and is slated to arrive in Hollywood January 29 for the Fredric March-Gregory La Cava production.

Also being brought back at the same time by Edington-Vincent is Jean Dixon, who goes into a featured role in MGM's "Sadie McKee," the Joan Crawford vehicle.

Allied Plans Code Policy

New York.—National leaders of the Allied States organization meet in New York Wednesday to decide on their future course of action with regard to the motion picture NRA code.

Lou Ostrow, executive producer for Monogram, completed the company's latest, "Beggars in Ermine," Saturday.

'FALSE DREAMS' A HIT; 'WEDNESDAY'S CHILD' POOR

'Grand Hotel' Idea Good For Screen

"FALSE DREAMS, FAREWELL"

Three-act play by Hugh Strange; presented and staged by Frank Merlin at the Little Theatre; settings by Arne Lundborg. Cast: Glenn Anders, Lora Baxter, Clarence Derwent, Frieda Inescort, Clyde Fillmore, Claudia Morgan, John Daly Murphy, Helen Raymond, Blaine Cordner, Millard Mitchell and thirty others. Thirty-three scenes.

New York.—Many attempts have been made since the success of "Grand Hotel" on stage and screen, to find a worthy successor to that perfect piece of screen fare. "Transatlantic" was one, "Luxury Liner" was another. But this play is the nearest approach to "Grand Hotel," in point of moving cinematic black-out melodrama. The action is confined aboard the new S.S. Atlantia, a gargantuan ocean liner about to make its maiden voyage.

The play deals with illuminating flashes of life aboard the ship attendant to the departure of a transatlantic queen of the sea—with cross-sections of the affairs of some of its prominent passengers incisively delineated. There is first of all the owner of the ship line who is intent on setting a new speed record of three days and ten hours for the crossing, despite the warning of the ship's captain that the ship is untrustworthy for such speed and her plates are bound to cave in with sure death for 3,000 souls aboard. Because the Captain's wife is a chronic invalid and he needs money to provide medical care and because he is threatened with permanent blacklisting if he does not carry out his master's orders—the ship's engines are tuned up to 38 knots per hour when the boat is only capable of doing 30.

Then there is the strange couple consisting of two cronies, one an old and ailing millionaire and the other a church dignitary who is proceeding to Rome to receive the Cardinal's Hat. The millionaire is an atheist, who although dying, insists on going to Rome to see his friend crowned by the Pope.

For love interest there is a triangle composed of a scientist and his wife who has devoted her life to his advancement, even having suffered facial disfigurement in a chemical explosion to save her husband's life. His other love is a movie star who has given up her career at its height, to be near the scientist who is on the eve of a cancer cure. In a jealous quarrel the eminent biologist strangles his wife.

Then there are the columnist and his wife who are vacation-bound abroad only to receive news their young daughter has died In an auto crash. . . A novelist on his way to Sweden to receive the Nobel prize, but who is fed up with his nagging, silly, ambitious wife and is determined to enjoy life to the full. . . And a philosophic steward who can quote from the Greek with the best.

The boat finally begins to founder in mid-ocean and stark horrific scenes of panic, despair and supplication ensue. Some of the passengers get away in lifeboats but most of them perish as the boat goes down to the strains of "Nearer My God To Thee" and a fervent prayer from the passengers remaining on deck.

The play is well directed and staged.

Deck scenes and interiors were believably executed by Arne Lundborg. With the broader scope which the screen can give to this theme, the play will soon enough find its way into the movies. The cast does beautiful work. Any film company with enough star material under contract will find this vehicle second to none as a medium for all of them at one time. Directed properly, with a steadfast piece of continuity developed from the play, it cannot miss.

From One to Another

A certain director-actor, noted for his ego, criticized the performance of a fellow actor, equally egotistical, by saying, "He reminds me of Victor Hugo, only the food tastes different."

Here's the Set-up on Chase Bk. Affiliates

New York.—In the latest report of the Chase National Bank, which, according to the new banking act, has to show any affiliates, the bank lists as affiliates the following: British Movietonews, Ltd., England, engaged in producing newsreels; Fox Film Company, Ltd., London, motion picture distributor; Fox Film Corporation G.M.B.H., Czechoslovakia; D. D. Zagreb, Jugoslavia, motion picture distributor, and Hispano Fox Film S.A.E., Barcelona, Spain, motion picture distributor.

Fox Film Corporation, which is the parent company for these five companies, is also listed as a Chase Bank affiliate.

Phillips Holmes Up For 'Double Door' Part

Paramount is negotiating for the loan of Phillips Holmes from MGM for one of the leading roles in "Double Door," with Richard Arlen in the other leading spot. The studio is planning to bring Mary Moore, who is now appearing in this play on Broadway, out from New York, for the top spot. Charles Vidor has been set to direct.

Lawyer Addresses AMPA

New York.—Roger Baldwin, counsel for the Civic Liberties Union, will be the guest of the AMPA next Thursday and speak on motion picture censorship. AMPA headquarters are being moved from Sardi's to the Paramount Grill.

British International Pictures has cabled Darryl Zanuck an offer for a three-picture loan-out deal for Paul Kelly.

Divorce Theme Has Little For Pictures

"WEDNESDAY'S CHILD"

Potter and Haight present "Wednesday's Child," by Leopold Atlas; staged by H. C. Potter; settings by Tom Adrian Cracraft; costumes by Mary Merrill; at the Longacre Theatre. With Walter N. Greaza, Katharine Warren, Frank M. Thomas, Jr., Robert Mayors, Stanton Bier, Joie Brown Jr., Harry Clancy, Lester Lonergan, 3d, Walter Gilbert, George Pembroke, Harry Hanlon, Alfred Dalrymple, Leonard M. Barker, Sally Hodges, Cele McLaughlin, Mona Bruns, Wyrley Birch, Richard Jack.

New York.—"Wednesday's Child" was, in terms of the old nursery rhyme, a child of woe. And it didn't lead them.

Patterned to create obviously theatrical situations in an arbitrary fashion, a simple little play of the breaking up of marriage ties occasionally took on a warm and even heart-breaking feeling by the sheer force of its subject, the divorce child. To do so, it had to surmount serious obstacles of plot and even greater ones of production. Frank M. Thomas, Jr., as the boy, deserves credit for the credibility he brought to an almost hopeless job.

He plays Bobby Phillips, whose mother and father become estranged due to the continuous absences and the wife's infatuation with another man. The child is forced by law into the unhappy position of a "divorced kid," loaned for a part of the year to his mother and for the remainder to his father, neither of whom knows quite what to do with him. Finally both are remarried and Bobby is bundled off to a military school where he finds neither sympathy nor solace for his loneliness.

This about sums up an effort that must have been as tedious and uninspiring for its performers as it undoubtedly was for its audience.

It has, obviously, little if any possibilities as a picture.

Lory Closes at Fox

Jacques Lory finished his term contract with Fox, having during that period, adapted for the French market the songs of "My Lips Betray" and "My Weakness," besides collaboration with Henry de la Falaise on the French adaptation of the story and songs of "I Am Suzanne."

Taylor Dialogs 'Stingaree'

Dwight Taylor has been signed by Radio to write the dialogue for "Stingaree," the Irene Dunne-Richard Dix co-starring vehicle which will be directed by William Wellman. Edington-Vincent spotted the writer.

Wray-Terrett Collab.

John Wray and Courtenay Terrett are collaborating on an untitled play, aiming at Broadway's play season in the Fall. It is a comedy with a novelty locale and will likely have Wray in a top spot.

MGM Producers Race for Joan's Pic

Even though her current picture is not yet in production, three MGM producers are speeding preparations on scripts hoping to get the okay to handle the next Joan Crawford vehicle at the studio.

David Selznick has Polan Banks working on an original artist model idea for the player. Selznick produced "Dancing Lady," which Miss Crawford finished several months ago.

Charles Grayson is writing another original for the player. Bernard Hyman is producing.

Walter Wanger has "Latest From Paris" in preparation with Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson on the script. This is a fashion story.

It's a race, with the first producer through with the right yarn being declared the winner, and the first to produce the next Crawford picture after "Sadie McKee" is out of the way.

Richard Bennett Returns To N.Y. Stage in March

Richard Bennett will return to the stage for the first time in two years when he goes East the latter part of March to play the starring role in "The Great Romancer," a play by Jules Eckert Goodman, based on the life of the elder Dumas. It will be directed by Arthur Lubin.

The play is scheduled to have its opening Easter week in New York. Prior to leaving, Bennett will fulfill an engagement at Paramount in "Shoe the Wild Mare," soon to go into production.

Mrs. Walthall Supes Plays

The bill of three one-act plays which opens next Thursday at the Beverly Hills Community Playhouse, has been supervised by Mrs. Henry Walthall.

Cleaning Up on 'Bolero'

Paramount put "Bolero," the George Raft-Carole Lombard picture, back into work for retakes for a second time yesterday. Wesley Ruggles, who just returned from New York, is handling the direction.

Holloway With Durante

Sterling Holloway was signed yesterday by Radio for a comedy role in the Jimmy Durante starring vehicle, "Strictly Dynamite," which Elliott Nugent will direct. Ralph Farnum set the player.

Denny Tested at 'U'

Universal has Reginald Denny and Corinne Griffith up for top spots in "Bachelor Wife." Edward Buzzell stages a test of the team Tuesday, after which final decision will be made.

Kahal-Fain to Weber

The Warner song-writing team of Irving Kahal and Sammy Fain, who wrote "By A Waterfall," have been signed to a managerial deal by the Weber office. Walter Kane swung the team in.

Thayer Back at Paramount

Tiffany Thayer has returned to Paramount on a one picture deal. He will script a story titled "Ready For Love," which Albert Lewis is supervising.

'MAHOGANY HALL' FAILS TO REACH FULL POSSIBILITIES

Yarn Alone Would Bar It From Screen

"MAHOGANY HALL"

Play by Charles Knox Robinson; produced by John R. Sheppard, Jr., at the Bijou Theatre. Directed by Eduardo Ciannelli; settings designed by Thomas Farrar. Featuring Olga Baclanova, Eduardo Ciannelli, William Foran, Daisy Bellmore, John Lucas, Florence McGee, Charlotte Andrews, Paula Bauersmith, Charles La Torre, Beatrice Pons, Isis Brinn, Frances Sage, Cliff Hicks, and twelve others.

New York.—A play that had possibilities but remains undeveloped in point of narrative interest served to acquaint the audience with one of the nation's famous brothels located in Washington, D. C.—a dignified plush interior old mansion presumably frequented by big figures in public life. Presided over by an inexorably hard-hearted Madam, who has been mistress of this sort of sordidness through four continents and has yet to be vanquished by either man, woman or the law. She suddenly goes mushy and reveals the fact that she too is after all, still a woman, lying constantly in wait for love to cross her unholy threshold and ease an aching heart. Had the author written his piece in a manner to give us a tingling, surging peek at life in the raw and fashioned some bold, unabashed character writing built around the unfortunate girls of the establishment and their paying guests, his play might have survived.

Olga Baclanova as the Madam, is the unfortunate deus ex machina of the play, ruling her girls with a firm hand and battling constantly to keep them from roaming out of the life of the establishment. One girl wants to go away to be married to a youth who will take her out of that sort of life. The Madam soon bursts that idle dream. Another girl, the mother of a boy of four who is placed in an institution, hopes to accumulate enough money to leave the Madam and be with her boy. Madam spikes that too and causes the boy to be permanently removed from contact with his mother. Then there is the impoverished musician who plays the piano in Madam's establishment for his bread and butter. Madam discovers she is in love with this suffering artist and determines she will have him, even if she has to give up the life in which she has made her fortune. But the Professor hates her for destroying the souls of her girls and the most he can do is to overcome his hate in the end. He cannot, however, bring himself to love her and accept the gifts she would bring. In despair she gives up "Mahogany Hall" and packs up for parts unknown.

The magnificent mahogany staircase which winds from the floor up to the top of the proscenium brought salvos of applause. The only sympathetic character in the play is the bartender who has a philosophy of life all his own and who does all he can to assist those who would seek freedom. He was played by William Foran. There is about as much hope for this vehicle being considered for the movies as "Queer People" has of getting in.

Criticus

After reading the two pages of typewritten objections submitted by Arthur Kober regarding the "Delmonico" yarn handed him by Walter Wanger, the MGM producer piped "This Kober is not a writer; he's a critic."

Col. Puts on Drive For Big Specials

New York.—The first of a series of regional sales meetings of Columbia starts today in New York. Purpose is to plan campaigns on the company's coming specials, "It Happened One Night," "No Greater Glory," "Twentieth Century" and "Red Square."

The second meeting is scheduled for Chicago January 29.

Wellesley Gets Termer With Basil Dean Pics

Gordon Wong Wellesley, English author, who collaborated with Austin Parker on the adaptation of "Shanghai Madness" for Fox, has been signed as scenario editor for the Basil Dean Productions, London, on a one year contract.

Wellesley's forthcoming marriage to Katherine Strueby, secretary to a producer for Universal, has been announced, and Miss Strueby leaves for the nuptials in London, February 10.

Mowbray in 'Elizabeth'

Alan Mowbray was signed by Universal for a featured role in "Elizabeth and Mary" with Margaret Sullavan, Mrs. Leslie Carter, and Lowell Sherman in the top spots. The latter will also direct. The William Morris office set the player.

Saterfield to Para.

Tom Saterfield, one-time arranger for Paul Whiteman and recently of Warner's song-writing staff, has been engaged by Paramount as a member of the company's music department under Nat Finston. The Kay-Stuart office set the ticket.

'Black Moon' Next Holt

Columbia Saturday assigned Ethel Hill to script "Black Moon," scheduled to follow "Whirlpool" as the next Jack Holt vehicle. Story is "Haiti Moon" by Clements Ripley, which ran in the Cosmopolitan magazine.

Brock Tags Sidney Fox

Sidney Fox has been signed for the lead in the next Lou Brock musical production, "Down to Their Last Yacht" for Radio. Herbert Fields is writing the screen play. The player was set by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

'Design For Living' Awaited in London

London.—"Design for Living" heads the list of new pictures coming to London this week, and it is expected to do well as Coward and Lubitsch are favorites here. Also, London has never seen the play.

Other newscomers are "Constant Nymph," a Gaumont picture at the New Gallery; "Going Hollywood," at the Empire; holdovers are "I'm No Angel," at the Carlton; "Henry the Eighth," Leicester Square; "Thunder Over Mexico," Marble Arch; "Voltaire" at the Regal; "Broadway Through a Keyhole," Tivoli.

Al Rockett Assigned to Handle 'Odd Thursday'

Al Rockett has been handed the Fox production reins on "Odd Thursday" and has decided upon Warner Baxter for the starring assignment, with Rosemary Ames and Rochelle Hudson in the next two important roles.

James Flood, directing, places it into work January 29. The screen play has been prepared by Jane Storm, Oscar Sheridan and Lenore Coffee.

Freuler Announces Plans For Four at $100,000

New York.—John R. Freuler is here setting finances for a series of specials he intends to make in addition to his present Monarch line-up of ten. Plans a new company, National Players, Ltd., to produce four of the specials, with possible $100,000 budgets.

'MOULIN ROUGE' TOUR WILL HIT 21 SPOTS; STARTS FEB. 2

The coast-to-coast "Moulin Rouge" tour in the interests of that Twentieth Century picture has all the appearances of being the greatest ballyhoo for a single picture and all pictures in general that the business has ever had.

The tour officially starts in Washington February 2 and will be given a send-off by President Roosevelt. The auto-train then moves to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, New Haven, Hartford, Boston, Providence, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, South Bend, Milwaukee, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City and ends at San Francisco on February 28.

There will be about twenty stars and featured players making the trip in, possibly, the most deluxe travel that has ever been arranged.

So far the star list includes George Bancroft, Mary Brian, Rosco Ates, Ben Turpin, Dorothy Sebastian, Hoot Gibson, Arline Judge, Jack Mulhall, Dorothy Dunbar, Eddie Quillan, Anna Q. Nilsson, William Boyd and Ben Turpin.

"Easier on the Eyes"

says

Hollywood Reporter:

"Done entirely in color, 'Sweden' captures the charm of far places as no mere recording in black and white could possibly do. And the color work in this picture is far superior and easier on the eyes than anything that has yet come along in that medium."

First week of engagement of John W. Boyle's "Sweden" (a nine-reel travelogue all in Cinecolor) broke a two-year admission record at 55th St. Playhouse, N. Y. C.

NUCHROMATIC MAKE-UP

FOR SCREEN and STAGE

THE PROPER DIET FOR YOUR SKIN

Here are a few reasons why DeLong Nuchromatic Make-Up is so superior to old-style grease paints:

1. Does not contain grease, tallow, lard or other penetrating animal fats.
2. Is not affected by incandescent or sun-light and therefore does not necessitate frequent touching up.
3. Improves photographic results and cannot fade nor cake.
4. Is not absorbed or penetrated into skin and therefore will not cause any irritations or unpleasant skin conditions.
5. Has a very smooth and fine consistency which covers three times the area and is easier and quicker applied and removed.
6. Does not have chemical reaction with sebaceous gland secretions on skin.

It is to your advantage in every respect to fully acquaint yourself with the

NO STRINGS ON 'ROSY'

•WE'LL place the name of Spencer Tracy at the top of any list crediting really fine performances, rating artistic ability, or as an instance of one of the greatest prospective draws in this business if given good material.

We have never seen Tracy giving anything resembling a bad performance and we have seen him in some pictures that were so bad that standout ability on the part of the cast or any of its individual members was almost impossible. But not for Tracy; that boy makes even impossible characters interesting.

Tracy never acts; he rather underplays his parts; you never have a feeling that he is trying to perform and that's what makes him so good. And it's a damned shame that he has to be tied to a studio whose production intelligence does not approach his fine talents. This business is missing one of the best money draws it ever had because of this. Give Tracy two or three GOOD pictures, one after the other, and there is not a male star (or female) who would top him in selling tickets, for he has everything that any audience wants in a screen performer.

When a studio decides that a player is no use to them, their option clause gives them an opportunity to get rid of the player. But when a player finds out that a studio can do nothing for him, that instead of his advancing, he has to fight, get outside pictures, and work miracles in acting to keep his head above water—he can do nothing but stay at that studio. There's no relief.

Something ought to be done in this business that would give relief to such a sterling artist as Spencer Tracy when it is shown that his contracting studio cannot take advantage of his ability. The business needs that star in real starring pictures, is missing a lot of money because he does not get those pictures. But the "ought-to-be-done" will never be done as long as artists have to work under their present contracts.

There may be a change some day—those options may be worded to work two ways—and then what?

'David Copperfield' On Slate at MGM

Following the trend created by "Little Women" and the hectic search of the classics under way at all studios, David Selznick is preparing a screen adaptation of the Charles Dickens novel, "David Copperfield," which he will produce for MGM.

George Cukor, who directed "Little Women" for Radio, has set aside his other assignments and will direct the Dickens novel.

Warner Clan Meeting Starts Gossip Buzz

New York.—The news hounds here are wondering about the meaning behind the gathering of the Warner clan on the Coast. With Jack permanently at the studio, Harry is now there on a visit, and on Saturday Major Albert Warner sailed for California on the Virginia.

Late last week Harold S. Bareford, attorney for the brothers, was summoned for a quick trip to Los Angeles. With the three brothers and their lawyer in one spot anything might happen.

Leonard on 'Rip Tide'

With Edmund Goulding in New York, Robert Z. Leonard is directing scenes for "Rip Tide," the Norma Shearer picture at MGM. Director will handle the balance of the picture which has two and a half weeks of work remaining.

Zanft Singles Agency

Major John Zanft has given up all idea of combining his efforts with that of all established artists' representatives here and will go it alone.

A Zanft office will be opened here, in New York and in London in the near future.

NRA Chief Arrives 'Ready to Listen to Everybody'—Denies Any Idea of Radical Actions

Sol Rosenblatt, Administrator of the motion picture industry's NRA code, arrived in Hollywood last night, was met by no delegations because each faction figured they would be different than "the other fellow" and started no shooting.

Rosenblatt, an affable, self-possessed combination of the coolest traits of the lawyer and the politician, refused to be drawn into the industry's internal wrangles and discounted advance publicity by dodging the post of czar or dictator.

"I am here to make an investigation, and then render a report, that's all," he said to a Reporter representative. "I have arrived without any prior commitments to any group or groups and I will listen to all. But I am not here to make decisions like a

Big Names on IOU List of Withers

Grant Withers went into the bankruptcy courts yesterday on a petition filed by his attorney, Abram Robert Simon. Player owes $34,082, with assets of $300.

Among his creditors are William Wellman, the director, for $3,000; Darryl Zanuck, for $1,000; J. G. Mayer, agent, for $3,500, and a Bank of America note indorsed by Jack Warner for $3,052.

Hoffman Stays at Pathe

RKO-Pathe has made out a new production ticket with M. H. Hoffman of Liberty. Producer, with headquarters on the lot, signed to make six pictures on the property on a rental basis.

Corinne Griffith Returns at Radio

Absent from the screen since 1930, Corinne Griffith comes back in a co-starring role opposite Otto Kruger in "Crime Doctor" at Radio. She replaces Mary Astor, an attack of flu forcing the latter out.

Company at the same time settled its dispute with Wynne Gibson, allowing her to withdraw and borrowing Judith Wood from Twentieth Century for her role. John Robertson directs, the picture going into work yesterday.

Universal and Cummings Finally Get Together

After haggling over the terms of the contract for two weeks, Universal yesterday signed Constance Cummings for the top spot in "Glamour," the B. F. Zeidman production which William Wyler directs. Miss Cummings asked $30,000 for her services while the studio offered only $15,000. A compromise between the two figures was reached yesterday. Paul Lukas and Roger Pryor have the male leads.

Laemmle, Sr., Goes East

Carl Laemmle will leave for New York next Saturday with Carl Laemmle, Jr., who wlil sail from there February 3. Harry H. Zehner, Joe Weil and Jack Ross will accompany their bosses to New York. Laemmle, Sr. will return to the local plant in three weeks.

Jack LaRue Foot Loose

Paramount has decided to let its option on Jack LaRue go by. His last trick on his termer with the company is his loan-out deal to Liberty for "Take the Stand."

Tonight's 'Chief' Arrivals

Dolores Del Rio, Mitzi Green and Dr. Francis Griffin, husband of Irene Dunne, arrive tonight on the Chief.

ALLIED REPORTED BEHIND NEW JERSEY CODE FIGHT

New York.—The understanding here is that Allied Exhibitors' Association, the rebel group, is behind the Congress Theatres, of Newark, in their attack on the NRA code by asking Federal courts to grant an injunction against the Blue Eagle's operation.

In addition to the already published complaint by Congress Theatres that they should have the right to sign the code agreement with qualifications, an examination of the legal document discloses that the exhibitors term the code "not devised by a representative group, designed to promote monopolies, and eliminate small enterprises against which it discriminates," and "coerces all independent exhibitors to waive all rights under existing anti-trust laws."

New York REVIEWS

"EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT"
Paramount prod.; director, Richard Wallace; writers, Casey Robinson and Helmuth Brandis.

Paramount Theatre

Herald-Tribune: "Eight Girls in a Boat" misses the wistful beauty and lonely depths of "Maedchen in Uniform," which it resembles. The picture bears the stamp of Mr. Wallace's work at its best. Photographed with an unerring eye for grace and artistry in its lovely settings, most of them taken out of doors, it flows along evenly.

Times: Although "Eight Girls in a Boat" lacks the imaginative direction and the superb acting of "Maedchen in Uniform," it has a limited but definite effectiveness of its own.

News: Some attempt has been made to build this story of Helmuth Brandis into another "Maedchen in Uniform," but the former is not presented with the same powerful sense of reality that characterized the latter production.

American: A delicately wrought , yet powerful drama of youth and love graces the screens of both Paramounts in the somewhat tear-drenched beauty which bears the quality hall-mark of Richard Wallace's exquisite direction. The production is artistic to the nth degree, but its artistry in no way interferes with the tense dramatic stamina of the story. Director Wallace has directed the piece with great finesse, deep feeling and sensitive understanding. To Mr. Wallace, too, must go much of the credit for the superb portrayal of Miss Dorothy Wilson, who emerges full-winged from the cocoon of three earlier films. Douglass Montgomery, too, gives a performance utterly in keeping with the spiritual atmosphere of the piece.

World-Telegram: A childish affair and an utterly unabashed one. Its actors, some of whom are much better actors than it rates, go through their roles with a gravity and ardor which turn the film into a very nightmare of exclamations and giggles over what, I presume, are the film's most serious moments.

Journal: There's some lovely scenery in the picture known as "Eight Girls in a Boat." The cameraman takes full advantage of the beautiful California backgrounds to present extremely effective outdoor shots. The story unfolds very slowly and with self-conscious deliberation.

"EASY TO LOVE"
Warner Brothers' prod.; director, William Keighley; writers, Carl Erickson, Manny Seff and Thompson Buchanan.

Strand Theatre

Journal: "Easy to Love," which opened last evening at the Strand Theatre, is a bedroom farce that has for its leading players the Misses Genevieve Tobin and Mary Astor and the Messrs. Adolphe Menjou and Edward Everett Horton. It is handsomely furnished and photographed, but needed a director like Ernst Lubitsch.

Post: "Easy to Love," the current attraction at the Strand, evolves as a rowdy adaptation of the all-too-familiar French farce school of comedy. Despite the undeniable talents of its four stars, and the laughs they succeed occasionally in providing, the film offers little in the way of novelty or real entertainment.

Mirror: It is slightly disappointing. Played with spirit by a clever company of attractive people, the play nevertheless lacks the savory flavor required of spicy farce.

Times: "Easy to Love" is bright, strenuous and thinnish in about equal proportions. It possesses a definite ambition to be intimate, but seventy minutes of it is a shade too much, and the suspicion increases toward the end that manufacturing a full-length film out of it represented something of a triumph of attenuation.

World-Telegram: "Easy to Love" is a clumsy, noisy farce that is entirely lacking in genuine humor and attempts frantically to be shocking and daring with its references to mistresses and lovers but which succeeds only in being remorselessly tedious.

Herald-Tribune: In the new film at the Strand Theatre there is the presence of some far from sparkling dialogue to remind you dismally that the day of those great pantomimic excursions into genuinely witty amorous comedy has glumly disappeared.

News: Starts out to be one of those handsomely set, well-dressed, boring domestic triangles, but as soon as the triangle becomes a quadrangle interest picks up and an old plot takes a new turn. The story is plausible and consistent enough, but the film is allowed to drag in the early sequences.

American: An engaging list of players is employed at the Strand Theatre in a comedy Parisian rendered American-suburban by heavy-handed telling of its tale.

Baldwin Back on Job

Earl Baldwin returned to his typewriter at Warners yesterday after an illness which kept him away for two weeks. Writer is now preparing the script of "Dames," the Robert Lord original, which will be the next Ruby Keeler-Dick Powell vehicle.

Zirn Still After Para.

New York.—The Appellate Division of the State of New York will hear on February 10 the action of Attorney Samuel Zirn seeking to enjoin the transfer of twenty-three Paramount negatives to Film Productions Corporation as bank preferences.

'Gallant Lady' Beats Records in Philly

Philadelphia.—If the week-end at the Aldine is any criterion "Gallant Lady" is on its way to prove the biggest cleanup United Artists has had in many a day. The Darryl Zanuck-Twentieth Century picture broke all house records for a week-end opening at the Aldine.

The figures take on added importance when it is realized that "The Bowery" and "Henry the Eighth" had preceded "Gallant Lady" with great business.

Ginsberg Signs Song Team

Henry Ginsberg signed Val Burton and Will Jason, the song writing team, to write the musical numbers for the next musical comedy short to be produced at Hal Roach studio.

A. S. C. RATIFIES WAGE SCALE DRAWN UP WITH PRODUCERS

Provision Made For Arbitration Board

At an open meeting of the American Society of Cinematographers last night at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce the contract between that body and the producers was accepted by acclamation. No one in the meeting questioned any clause in the agreement negotiated by the society or any of the acts or motives of its special committee.

The contract is similar to that previously existing, according to a statement of the society, "excepting that much of the objectionable and controversial matter has been eliminated." It runs for five years, and the producer signers comprise the major studios, in addition to Educational and Roach.

Provision is made for an arbitration board of three producers and three cameramen and in the event of the failure of these six to agree the issue is to be passed on to the existing labor bureau for determination.

One of the clauses of the agreement permits reopening of any section for improving and clarifying if conditions demand.

"Printed contracts will be given each member of the society," it is announced officially, "with each clause interpreted in plain English so there can be no controversy as to the meaning of individual clauses."

The producers agree to give screen credit to cameramen and that the initials of "ASC" be placed after the photographer's name.

'Firebird' Set by Warners For Pabst's Next Picture

G. W. Pabst will direct "The Firebird" as his second picture on his Warner contract. Pabst's initial picture for Warners was Louis Bromfield's novel, "Modern Hero," starring Richard Barthelmess.

Long Termer for Teasdale

Warners yesterday signed Veree Teasdale to a long term contract. Deal provides for a vacation to be taken by Miss Teasdale in August so that she may go to Spain with Adolphe Menjou, where they plan to be married.

Brandt Rests in Florida

New York.—Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, is in Florida for a vacation, planning to return before the organization's first annual ball at the Waldorf February 21.

Rubin, N. Y. Agent, Here

Herbert Rubin, New York agent, has arrived in town to look after the interests of his two clients, Marjorie Lytell and Ada Cavell. He will remain here for two weeks.

Rankin's Credit

Warners neglected to credit William Rankin with the original on "I Got Your Number" when the picture was previewed but have sent out notice to that effect now.

'Tarzan' Is Ageing

Neil Hamilton hangs up a new record for the longest individual assignment for a free lance player in Hollywood. He has been drawing a weekly pay check against "Tarzan" at MGM for six months, with another month in prospect.

Colbert Sought For 'Honor Bright' Role

Louis D. Lighton, producer, and Tay Garnett, director, want Claudette Colbert to play the top spot in "Honor Bright," which goes into production soon at Paramount.

Miss Colbert's next assignment is "Cleopatra," the Cecil B. DeMille picture, which has no definite starting date. The studio is trying to arrange for her to go into "Honor Bright" before she does "Cleopatra."

Tri-Ergon Scaring Exhibs On Patent

New York.—The American Tri-Ergon Corporation, controlled by William Fox, is taking full advantage of the recent Pennsylvania decision upholding its flywheels patents on sound projectors and is sending out notices of infringement to 16,000 exhibitors.

Little concern is felt yet as the decision is being appealed.

Stage Players in 'Corn'

Two New York stage players have been engaged by Radio for important supporting roles to Ann Harding in "Alien Corn." They are Arnold Korff and Margaret Hamilton.

Picture goes into work February 10 under E. H. Griffith's direction.

'Pretzels' in the Black

"Moonlight and Pretzels," the Rowland-Brice production supervised by Stanley Bergerman in the East, has returned its negative cost officially, in three months after release. Picture was Roger Pryor's first and was directed by Karl Freund.

Joan's Mother on the Job

New York.—Adrianne Morrison, of Pinker and Morrison, agents, leaves for the Coast next Monday to be with her daughter, Joan Bennett, for an expected blessed event next month.

SMPE Sets Date

New York.—Atlantic City and April 23, 24, 25 and 26 is the place and the time that the SMPE has set as the tentative date for its spring meeting.

Reed on Warner Script

Tom Reed has been signed by Warners to write the screen play of "Dark Tower," which the studio purchased recently. Robert Lord is supervising.

Alice White at Radio

Alice White was borrowed from Universal by Radio yesterday for the role opposite Jimmy Durante in "Strictly Dynamite."

Bob Wyler Forms Own Pic Company

New York.—Robert Wyler, who bowed out of "By Candlelight" at Universal because of ill health, has formed his own company for picture production. He is associated with Murray Garsson, John Wexley, author of "The Last Mile," Dick Krakeur, and C. R. Caley. Wyler, who once produced in France for Universal, sails for Europe this week to seek play material.

Garsson, recently in the Immigration Department under Hoover, was active as an independent producer for a brief period some ten years ago, making the picture "Success."

'Laughing Boy' Back to the MGM Stages Today

MGM will resume production today on "Laughing Boy" and W. S. Van Dyke will continue the direction. The last few days of production on this picture was held up to give Ramon Novarro a chance to make retakes and added scenes on "Cat and the Fiddle," which he finished last night.

Educational Wakes Up

Coming out of a month's lull, Educational puts the fourth of the six "Frolics of Youth" series into production today with Charles LaMont directing. Cast is headed by Junior Coghlan and Shirley Temple with Henry Meyers, Virginia True Boardman, Sidney Miller and Huntley Gordon making the balance of the group.

'U' Strong for Cage Game

With eighteen teams on the lot, every other person you talk to at Universal is a basketball player. Studio has 16 departmental teams, one quintet in the studio division locally, and the Universal Pictures five which will meet a Denver aggregation here next week, and one from Minneapolis the week following.

Fox Goes All-Foreign

New York.—That first Erik Charrell picture for Fox is going to be foreign all the way. Professor Ernest Stern, European scenic designer, left for the Coast yesterday to report to Fox on this picture.

Frank MacDonald Wed

Frank MacDonald, Warner dialogue director, married Goodee Montgomery here last night. Mrs. MacDonald is daughter of Dave Montgomery of the vaudeville team of Montgomery and Stone.

Franklin in 'Louisiana'

Irene Franklin has been set for a featured role in "In Old Louisiana," which started yesterday at MGM under the direction of George B. Seitz. The Leo Morrison office made the deal.

Tucker Files the Papers

Richard Tucker filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, listing $3,016 in debts and $600 in assets.

YESTERDAY IN New York

TALES OF HOFFMAN

By IRVING HOFFMAN

One of the disappointing entries to mount a local stage last week was "Mahogany Hall." Taking its title from a notorious Washington bagnio of other days, and authored by Charles Robinson, who aided Kenyon Nicholson in the scribbling of the bawdy "Sailor Beware," it promised a robust evening but proved dull. However, the opening was not entirely disappointing. For the Mesdames Everleigh, lured by alert press agent Charles Washburn, occupied aisle seats. These superintendents of the noted Chicago house of ill-fame, which bore their name, have long been in retirement; but consented to attend the opening after they had exacted a promise from Washburn that their appearance would not be publicized, and they would be seated near a noted critic of a morning rag, who was their best customer in the old days in Chicago. They recalled that when a young lady left their notorious bordello to seek further fame by entering the newer profession of the theatre, their favorite critic, in reviewing the production in which she first trod the boards, wrote: "It seems rather strange to see Miss X in a $3 house."

Ask him to let you see it. . . . Marion Burns, who's being divorced from Bruce MacFarlane of "Sailor Beware," does a swim in the nude in "Devil Tiger," which is a pleasure. . . . "By Your Leave," with Kenneth MacKenna and Dorothy Gish, got great notices in Philly, but then you never can tell. "The Lake" got raves in Washington. Which reminds us that we don't believe our crack has reached your ears. . . . They were discussing the treatment of the Wonder Boy's production at the hands of the New York critics. "I can't understand it," some one said. "It got great notices when it opened in Washington." "So did Hoover," we put in. . . . Incidentally, Porter Hall, who played Baltimore stock with Katharine Hepburn for weeks, met her in the lobby of a Radio City building the other day, and is he burning! He tried to speak, got the freeze, and his only way out was to say, "I beg your pardon; I thought you were Katharine Hepburn." She didn't say anything.

"—AND BE MY LOVE" THIN PLAY THAT GETS NOWHERE

Polite Story Has Little For Screen

". . . AND BE MY LOVE"

Maurice Colbourne and Barry Jones present ". . . And Be My Love," a comedy by Lewis Galantiere and John Houseman, staged by Mr. Colbourne; settings by David Homan, at the Ritz Theatre. With Barry Jones, Lily Cahill, Ronald Simpson, Renee Gadd.

New York—Scintillant acting, brilliant settings, and glittering dialogue fail to give this comedy an authentic lustre. Impeccably as it is cut, perfectly as it is polished, and lavishly as it is mounted, "And Be My Love" is unfortunately unable to conceal the grievous flaw of its being pretty threadbare fare. As an exercise in sophisticated playwriting, it is gladly here admitted to have more than its quota of smart and clever lines; that its epigrams come thick and fast, and that it is replete with the nuances of polite dalliance. But, alas and alack, where does it all lead?

Lawrence Brooks, bachelor and wealthy, makes a career of married women, which, George Barlow, his best friend, thinks is a pretty poor way of frittering one's time. George, dull soul, is pretty smug in his married life, and believes his wife, Jane, to be quite above reproach. When Jane, a gushing and slightly lunatic creature, breezes into our bachelor's apartment, just late enough to miss friend husband, we discover that she is, after all, just another misunderstood wife, hungrily eager to snatch at extra marital romance. Which, of course, Brooks is only too ready to provide. Act II continues the impending seduction in the drawing room of Jane's home, where nothing really alarming happens, nor is meant to. It is only the appearance of Elsa, the virginal and wholly sensible young niece of Jane by marriage, that now provides the necessary excuse for a third act. For Elsa, despite herself, also succumbs to the allure of aunty's great passion. Act III, later that evening, finds Elsa clandestinely supping at Brooks' apartment. Brooks has just about decided to fall in love with Elsa, when Jane is announced, causing a hasty consignment of Elsa to the adjoining bedroom. Jane, of course, has come to see Brooks concerning Elsa, but she easily beguiles herself into believing that Elsa is not there, and that her great moment is imminent. Brooks, however, having other plans for the lady, undertakes to demonstrate with Machiavellian ingenuity the futility of continuing along the primrose path she has willy nilly chosen for herself. But before Jane can leave, sobered and saddened as much as she can ever be, friend husband bursts in, ready to believe the worst. But Elsa steps conveniently from the bedroom to reburnish aunty's halo of conjugal fidelity. As the curtain descends there is forgiveness on Elsa's part and a yearning "be my love" from Brooks—and that's all there is, there isn't any more. In the part of Lawrence Brooks, Barry Jones, though not the great lover, gives a finished performance. Lily Cahill is capital as Jane. Ronald Simpson, as her husband, is satisfactory. And Renee Gadd, as Elsa, excellent.

English Pictures During Past Year

London.—The London Board of Trade is authority for the statement that there were 189 features and 644 short reels produced by British producers during 1933. This amount accounts for 24.2 of all the film to be registered in Great Britain last year, showing a jump of 2.2 for preceding year.

Butler Tries School Idea at Roach's

Frank Butler, scenario chief of the Hal Roach studio, is making a search for from eight to ten young men just out of college to form a junior writing staff on that lot.

The plan to be used in this school is to keep the staff intact for three month periods, bringing in a new staff to replace those whose options are not renewed at the end of that period.

Butler hopes to find, during a year's time, two or three writers in the group that are capable of delivering the goods.

'Queer People' For Stage With Hal Skelly in Lead

New York.—Melville Burke has been engaged by Galen Bogue to stage "Queen People" here with an opening scheduled for Lincoln's Birthday.

Hal Skelly is listed for the lead. John Floyd's dramatization of the novel by Carroll and Garret Graham will be used.

Sayre Moves to Fox

Joel Sayre finished the screen treatment of "Come On Marines" for Paramount Saturday and starts at Fox Western Avenue today to collaborate with William Conselman on a story for the Sol Wurtzel unit tentatively titled "On The High Seas." The deal was made by the William Morris office.

'Pat' Ellis Up at Roach

Hal Roach is negotiating with Warners for the loan of Patricia Ellis for the lead in the Laurel and Hardy film, "Babes in Toyland." Earl Oxford, an MGM stock player, is seriously being considered for the male lead.

Fejos Pic Set Here

New York.—The latest foreign production of Paul Fejos, former Universal director, has been acquired by Du World Pictures, of New York, for American distribution. It is called "Fantomas."

Atwill With 'Nana'

New York.—Lionel Atwill, here for a visit, will probably make a personal appearance with the opening of "Nana" at the Music Hall.

Selwyn Tells N. Y. About Film Code

New York.—Edgar Selwyn, in New York for a four weeks visit, is telling the visiting reporters that the code has its disadvantages for the director. "Just when a director gets all set," he says, "a whole new crew of technicians have to be moved in because of the limitations set by the code on hours of work."

Selwyn made a hit here when he said the real reason for his trip was "to get out of the Hollywood rut and see some real shows."

Zion Myers Starts Two Shorts For Columbia

Completing preparations on two shorts, Zion Myers places both into work this week at Columbia. First to go is "Showmanship," which Alf Goulding directs, starting Wednesday. Lou Holtz stars.

Archie Gottler directing, "Love Detective" goes in Thursday. Frankie Albertson, Betty Grable and Tommy Dugan head the line-up.

Schary Bows Out of Columbia Assignment

Columbia yesterday gave Dore Schary permission to cancel his one-picture deal to write the screen play for "Hell Cat" under Sid Rogell's supervision. Schary requested his release after both parties discovered that their ideas for the assignment did not match. Studio is looking for another writer.

Thew Back to '13'

Completing his work on "The Duchess of Delmonico's," Harvey Thew has returned to the script of "Operator 13," the Marian Davies picture which Raoul Walsh directs and Walter Wanger produces. Subject is scheduled to get under way in the next two weeks.

Fields Clicks on Air

Benny Fields has clicked on the Shell Oil Monday night radio broadcasts. Finishing his fourth weekly program this week, the songster and master of ceremonies has had his option renewed for eight more weeks on this popular Columbia broadcast.

Garnett Gets New Aid

Due to his engagement at Warners Assistant Director Bob Fellows will not be with Tay Garnett when the latter starts work on Paramount's "Honor Bright." It will be Garnett's first without Fellows as chief aid. Clem Beauchamp gets the spot.

Mich. Exhibs Boost Prices

Detroit.—Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan have started a campaign to raise admission prices claiming that this is a necessity because of increased costs under code operation.

Date 'As Husbands Go'

New York.—"As Husbands Go," Fox-Lasky picture, gets its premiere at the Music Hall next Thursday.

AMERICAN DISTRIBS BATTLE AUSTRALIAN BUYING POOLS

MGM in Fight on 'Chain Store' Idea

Sydney.—Threat of a film war between distributors and exhibitors flaring up again as it did last year at this time has the entire field here on edge.

The buying season is on the verge of getting under way and the crux of the impending fight centers about distributors, such as MGM, Paramount and Warners, trying to break up buying pools among exhibitors, latter joining each other in these pools in an effort to lick the block booking situation.

The exchanges refuse to sell to the pools and have already sent out warnings to exhibitors that those who want to buy will have to show that they have no pool affiliations.

Taking the initiative, MGM issued a statement saying it "does not propose to deal with exhibitors except directly. MGM believes that the industry must, for the benefit of all concerned, get back to the fundamental position in which the individual exhibitor has every opportunity to exploit his capacity as showman and that the growth of 'chain store' methods of buying is prejudicial to sound exhibition methods."

Biggest opponent of the exchange men is General Theatres, controlling more than 200 theatres in this territory. Stuart F. Doyle, of this company, answered the MGM ultimatum by stating that his company had all the product it needed for several months and was unconcerned with MGM's edict on the new buying season.

'State Fair' Voted Best For England

London.—The Era here took a poll of all the London film critics asking their opinion of the most entertaining picture of the year, and Fox's "State Fair" received the top votes, with "Henry the Eighth" second; "any Walt Disney" third, and "La Maternelle" fourth.

Marion Marsh Goes In Second British Picture

London.—Marion Marsh has accepted an offer to do another British picture before returning to Hollywood. The new one is a musical, "Over The Garden Wall," British International will produce and Bobby Howes will be the male interest.

There is a chance that she may accept a Universal offer to make a picture in Switzerland under the direction of Louis Trenker.

B-G's 'Chu Chin Chow' About Ready to Start

London.—The elaborate screen production of the famous stage play, "Chu Chin Chow," is about set to go at the British Gaumont studios. Walter Forde will direct.

British Quota Spreads

Washington.—American Vice Consul Demorest, of Trinidad, British Guiana, reports that the Colonial government has drafted a bill for presentation to the legislature demanding that exhibitors be compelled to show programs including at least 25 per cent British pictures.

Publicist Turns Manager

Sydney. — United Artists lost Vaughan Marshall, publicity head in this sector, when he resigned to accept the post of general manager for the Waddington theatre circuit. Marshall is well liked here and was given a swell send-off by the U. A. group.

Harker in 'Road House'

London.—Gordon Harker, who created a world wide sensation in "Rome Express," has been cast for the male lead in the BIP production of "Road House." Violet Loraine will play opposite with Alfred Hitchcock the director.

Saville on 'Evergreen'

London.—Victor Saville, after a brief illness, is about half through with the British Gaumont production of "Evergreen," that stars Jesse Mathews and marks the screen return of Betty Balfour.

'Gang' Out in Australia

Sydney.—An insight into how the censors' minds operate against any suggestion of underworld melodrama is evident in the local board insisting "The Kelly Gang" be changed to "The Kellys Ride."

London Developing Many New Pic Stars

London.—The London producer is out to develop stars and for this purpose is signing up possibilities on long term contracts to keep them away from the Hollywood-clutch.

Those listed for certain stardom here during 1934 are Merle Oberon, Binnie Barnes, Diana Napier, Wendy Barrie, Tamara Desni, Pamela Ostrer, Victoria Hopper, Judy Kelly, Joan Gardner and Joyce Kirby.

Big Sets for 'Jew Suss'

London.—The British Gaumont production of "Jew Suss" will show some of the largest and most elaborate sets yet seen in a British picture. Market Street in Stuttgart is an exact replica of that famous thoroughfare; as is the set showing the Ghetto in Frankfurt. The boudoir of the Duchess is something to talk about also.

Lothar Mendes is the director, Bernard Knowles the photographer and Conrad Veidt the star.

Warners Shift in S. A.

Buenos Aires.—William Fait is no longer in charge of sales for Warner Brothers in Argentine, as he has now taken over the duties of Henrique Blunt, now deceased, as head of Brazilian distribution. Guido Buscaglia of Buenos Aires and former branch manager has supplanted Mr. Fait as executive of the sales department.

British Studio Rentals

London.—British and Dominions receives a rental of twenty-seven thousand pounds per annum for the large stage at the British and Dominions plant. A smaller one is to be let for seventeen thousand pounds in the near future, and a third large one retained for the company's own production.

Fox Men Take Cuts

Sydney.—Operations are fashionable among the Fox men here. Stanley Crick, exchange chief, had his tonsils yanked and T. J. Cleary, staff member, went for an appendix operation.

Marsh Tours for Health

London.—Hubert Marsh, British and Dominions chief, left here on a boat trip to Algeciras. Although ill for some time, Marsh has persistently kept at the company's business notwithstanding.

Raves for Victoria Hopper

London.—Basil Dean has uncovered a star in Victoria Hopper, who appears in "Constant Nymph," British Gaumont. The Press is doing nip-ups and it is anticipated that Hollywood will soon be grabbing her.

Bryson In and Out

London.—James V. Bryson, who recently announced ambitious production plans with a new company, is out of Consolidated Film Studios, the company stated.

Caldwell East on Play

Anne Caldwell will leave for New York within ten days to make arrangements for the production of her new play, "The River Man."

Two swell stories, and S. R. Mook's observations of activities all over Hollywood, bring Silver Screen to the fore for February.

"The Girl Who Was the First Movie Star" (Mary Pickford), by Adela Rogers St. Johns, is the conclusion of her "The Six Famous Women of Hollywood" series, and it winds up the series beautifully.

"The Loveliest Star" (Marlene Dietrich), by Elizabeth Wilson, is an all around, grand, perfect production story on "Catherine the Great."

S. R. Mook, always goods, does himself proud in "Stars on the Job."

Other stories are "The Four Big Shots of Hollywood" (Janet Gaynor, Mae West, Katharine Hepburn and Marie Dressler), by Patricia Keats; "Gloria Stuart," by Jack Jamison; "'N. G.' in the Garage Business," by Muriel Babcock; "Star? Director? Author?" by Myrtle Gebhart; and "They Danced Through the Studio Gates," by James M. Fidler.

Sidney Skolsky contributes the best story in the February issue of Screen Play. It's a fine, clever, character study of Max Baer, "He's a Terrific Fellow."

Patrick Cross lets Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March and Gary Cooper talk on "Harems for Hollywood"; Wilbur Morse Jr. tells about Katharine Hepburn in "Portrait of a Fascinating Lady"; Gladys McVeigh gives some inane quotes by Toby Wing in "The Girl Chevalier Left Behind"; Donald P. Sheldon has two stories, "Hollywood Shocks the Censors Again" and "Sylvia Sidney's Secrets"; Eric L. Ergenbright gets a little mean in "Garbo's Privacy Invaded"; Jewel Smith has "She Learned to Say 'No'" (Minna Gombell), and George Rigas offers what he says is "The Truth About Lee Tracy."

Maude Cheatham tells about James Cagney's courtship of his wife in "Romantic Roughneck"; Wilbur Morse Jr. outlines the method by which some jewel bandits were captured in "Mae West Got Her Men"; Ann York has "My Neighbor, Joan Blondell"; Esther Hopkins Mead interviews Heather Angel, and Warner Baxter says to Alyce Curtis, "I Am Not Ashamed of My Past."

The magazine as a whole is not so hot. Sidney Skolsky's story is the only one to read.

New Movie is very much worth your dime this month because of "I Loved Garbo," by Hubert Voight as told to Gurdi Haworth—a very swell Garbo yarn; "She Can't Make Up Her Mind," by Terry Ramsaye, which is the best Margaret Sullavan story yet, and "Mae West's Perfect Day," by Dorothy Manners.

Others are "Forecast for 1934," by Ramon Romero; "Meet Max Baer," by Eleanor Packer; "Out of the Magic Mirror" (Charlotte Henry), by Virginia T. Lane; and "Hollywood's Cocktails," by Nanette Kutner.

The anonymous serial, "Hollywood Slave," is living up to prediction by getting worse each month.

Three knockout stories head a good issue of Picture Play for February. They are a knockout interview with Max Baer, "He Knows He's Hot," by Drummond Tell; "Exit the Speakeasy," an amusing prediction by James Roy Fuller, and "Second Blooming," a swell yarn on Alice Brady by Samuel Richard Mook.

Other stories are "Hollywood's Forbidden Sins," by Helen Louise Walker; "Gary's Woman Trouble," by Helen Pade; "Little Girl, What Now?" (Margaret Sullavan), by Helen Klumph; "Bound to Rise," by Mabel Duke"; "Dead-pan Wow" (Allen Jenkins), by Whitney Williams; "The Chessboard of Fate," by William H. McKegg, and "Grand Guy" (Cary Grant), by Leroy Keleher.

'Maedchen' in English

New York.—John Krimsky and Gifford Cochran will present "Girls in Uniform," the recently completed English version of "Maedchen in Uniform," at the Criterion Theatre here tomorrow night.

SOUND PATENTS MAY GET NEW AIRING IN PARA. SUIT

New York.—The sound patent situation which has been in and out of the courts various ways may get its final answer through the medium of the Paramount receivership wrangles. This is because the judgments secured by General Talking Pictures and other sound groups against Paramount are a problem for the receiver to answer, or refer to the Federal courts.

When Referee Davis yesterday considered and okayed various bills against the bankrupt Paramount organization he was met with a statement from the trustees asking him to disallow the claims filed against the company by American Tri-Ergon Corporation, DeForest Phonofilm Corporation, and General Talking Pictures, the trustees taking the position that "the question is whether a claim based on an infringement may be proved against a bankrupt estate when the claim has not been reduced to judgment prior to the bankruptcy."

Further, the trustees add, "the allegations are not sufficient to constitute a basis for a provable claim in that they are based on an infringement of a patent which is not provable in bankruptcy."

The situation is one that will be watched with interest by picture lawyers, since it seems to lay readers that Tri-Ergon, DeForest and General Talking are admitted to have a right for their claims, but are opposed on the ground that a bankrupt is beyond the pale. General Talking Pictures and the others have won court decisions, but the question now is, "Do they mean anything against a bankrupt company?"

Aside from listening to the arguments on this question, Referee Davis spent the day okaying the bill of Irving Trust Company, trustee in bankruptcy for Publix Enterprises, for $76,171, and an additional $15,000 plus the original $7,950 already paid to Dan Michalove for services rendered the theatre organization.

No Strings on 'Rosy'

Solomon. I am here to investigate and REPORT."

Asked a pointed question about the Administration's attitude in the event major producers refuse to fill out the questionnaires recently received, Rosenblatt still failed to get ruffled.

"I cannot understand the concern or agitation concerning the questionnaire. It isn't a question as to what anybody wants to do. The questionnaires are issued under an executive order from the resident—they are to be answered. After the answers are in, they will be studied. And after that a report will be made. That's all there is to it. You don't need weather reports from every single street in Los Angeles to deliver an intelligent report on the weather in the city yesterday, do you?"

To this Rosenblatt added that the questionnaires had nothing to do with his visit, the trip and the "investigation" being in direct compliance with the orders from the President when the "talent raiding" clauses of the code were stricken out and the present survey substituted.

Reading between the lines on what Rosenblatt would say, and would not say, it seems very possible that he will spend his ten days or two weeks in Hollywood, and return to Washington without taking any of the definite actions forecast before his arrival. He is strong for allowing the machinery to function as it is set up, and will favor letting local NRA labor boards handle the problems of jurisdiction, etc., which have the unions embroiled.

The Administrator parried all questions regarding the Writer-Academy issues with a repetition of the statement, "I am here to study and report." He announced that daily press conferences would be held to keep the industry in touch with the progress of his investigation.

Called together by Will Hays, the major producers held a meeting yesterday, at which representatives of each company heard Hays' explanation of code proceedings to date, and discussed a course of procedure in connection with Rosenblatt's visit.

The Administrator will make his headquarters at the Beverly Wilshire.

Thompson Burtis Given Radio Tag on 'Speed King'

Thompson Burtis joins the Radio writing staff today to shape up the screen play for "Speed King," under the supervision of David Lewis.

Studio has closed a deal with Agnes Christine Johnson for the purchase of the story and Lewis is planning on making it into a vehicle for Joel McCrea and Bruce Cabot. Vivian Gaye of the Joy and Polimer office swung both deals.

Two Roche Yarns for 1 Pic

Warners have purchased another story by Arthur Somers Roche, "Roadhouse," and will use it in combination with "Lady Dick," announced earlier in the week, for a single feature. Both stories, about Roche's famous woman detective character, appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Henry Blanke supervises.

Double Shift for Shumate

Irving Briskin has handed Harold Shumate a twin writing assignment. He is writing the screen play for "Highway Patrol" during the day and "Murder in the Studio" at night. Former is for Tim McCoy, while the latter is one of the Action unit's specials for Columbia.

Jane Murfin at Radio

Radio has set Jane Murfin in to write the screen play of "Green Mansions," in which Joel McCrea and Dolores Del Rio take the top spots. Kenneth Macgowan is producing it.

LeRoy Back to Stage

Hal LeRoy leaves for New York the early part of this week to fill stage engagements there. Player was brought out here by Warners for "Harold Teen."

Gordon Gets Spewack Play

Max Gordon has accepted Bella Spewack's new play and will give it a New York production next July.

BELLOWS & COMPANY, Inc.

Importers and Dealers in Fine Wines Brandies, Whiskies and other Spirits

BUSINESS ESTABLISHED 1830

FOR 100 YEARS THE HOUSE OF BELLOWS has been noted for the high quality of its stocks in catering to the fine clubs and private trade of America. Anticipating repeal of the XVIIIth Amendment, we began months ago to search out abroad the choicest vintage wines and spirits, always limited in quantity.

In accordance with the traditions of fine wine merchants, we have personally combed the cellars of the vineyard proprietors in BURGUNDY and have purchased a magnificent assortment of authentic proprietor bottled wines in addition to a comprehensive offering of the more modest wines of the Cote d'Or. Our list includes such superb growths and vintages as:

ROMANEE CONTI.....1926, '29

MAJORS IN LINE ON CODE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•MR. ROSENBLATT — Hollywood greets you and throws open its gates for your inspection. We assure you that every man and woman connected with the making of pictures here will be most happy to be of any benefit they can to you in your mission. Ask your questions and, for the most part, they will be answered honestly.

Hollywood, Mr. Rosenblatt, has very little to hide. Certainly the business is not being run as it should be, but it is being conducted in the best way that those at the head of it can function. There are many mistakes, there are many things that can and should be rectified, but those mistakes, for the most part, are errors in judgment.

There's nothing wrong with this business, Mr. Rosenblatt, that the Government should get upset about; it is being run with as high a degree of perfection as most any other giant industry. Certainly there is room for improvement, and if you can help in that improvement you will find a great appreciation awaiting each and every suggestion.

We would suggest that in listening and investigating that you do not limit yourself to the major producers or to the Producers' Association, for they are only one branch to this big business. We would like to see you talk to the artists, the writers, the directors, the technicians and certainly the little producers. All of them will have stories to tell you.

And we feel certain, Mr. Rosenblatt, when you have given the whole industry here your eye and your ear that you will return to Washington with a feeling of astonishment, that a business as big as production really is, could be run with as little friction as is the case.

If you are looking for trouble you will find it; if you are looking with an eye toward trying to help an industry that is, and can continue to be, of the greatest help to our great nation, you will find plenty of places that can be benefited by the assistance of the Government.

We welcome you, Mr. Rosenblatt, and hope your stay is a most enjoyable one.

Loew's Soars

New York.—Loew's Inc. stock hit a new high yesterday of eighty-one and a quarter. Still heavy buying from some mysterious source.

RCA To Back Up Exhibs on Patents

New York.—RCA has countered letters of warning on sound patents sent exhibitors by American Tri-Ergon Corporation with the flat statement that they will stand back of any exhibitors on RCA licenses, and assume all obligations under their contracts.

Receipt of the letters by exhibitors is understood to have slowed up the new installation business. RCA attorneys are meanwhile carrying the case to the higher courts.

Madeline Carroll, B-G Star On Her Way to Fox Here

London.—The first interchange move between Gaumont and Fox is the loaning of Madeline Carroll by the former to the latter with Miss Carroll on her way to the Fox studios now.

During the year it is expected that Fox will send to London and Gaumont will send to Hollywood many of their top artists, writers and directors in this exchange.

Chester Morris Recovers

Chester Morris, who has been ill for the past two weeks, is again up and about. He is leaving next Tuesday for New York, where he is scheduled to start a picture for Rowland and Brice.

Another Fox Foreigner

New York.—And still they come. Another foreigner is on his way to Fox. Werner Richard Heymann, European composer, leaves New York today to report to Westwood Hills.

United Artists Only Producer Still On Fence — Indies Also Give Assent To NRA Authority

New York.—The meeting of the Code Authority yesterday disclosed signatures of assent to the code have been received from sixty distributors and twenty-nine producers, which takes in all the major companies and practically every active independent. United Artists, which has signed the distribution code assent, still remains alone on the fence on the production document. It is understood here that the matter will have to be worked out individually with Sam Goldwyn for his own unit, and with Joe Schenck on his arrival from Europe for Twentieth Century Pictures.

Judge Refuses Okay On Radio City Deal

New York.—Now the RKO-Radio City tie-up is in a real muddle. Federal Judge Bondy yesterday refused to approve the terms of the lease which the circuit wished to make for the Music Hall and the twin house.

The terms of the lease aggregate nearly a million dollars and this Judge Bondy characterized as "excessive."

'U' Plane Crashes

The airplane in which Manny Naphan, producer of "Strange As It Seems," and his cameraman, Johnny Webster, were flying, enroute to Arizona, crashed yesterday at Murietta Springs. Although the ship was demolished both escaped unscathed.

Estabrook on 'Copperfield'

David Selznick has assigned the adaptation of the Charles Dickens story, "David Copperfield," to Howard Estabrook.

Selznick Building For New 'Paradise'

Attempting to get the same elements that made "Bird of Paradise" such a success for him at Radio, David Selznick is negotiating with King Vidor to handle the South Sea story by Salka Viertel and Leo Birinski, which will have Johnny Weissmuller in the top spot. John Farrow has written the script.

Selznick plans to send the expedition to Tahiti as soon as "Viva Villa" is previewed and out of the way. Vidor directed Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea in "Bird of Paradise," which was photographed in the Hawaiian Islands.

Now It's Warren William Named For Caesar Part

Paramount has placed a bid with Warners for the loan of Warren William for the role of Caesar in the Cecil B. DeMille picture, "Cleopatra," which will star Claudette Colbert.

There is a possibility that the loan can be made as Warners have no immediate assignment for the player.

20th Bids $10,000 for Play

New York.—Twentieth Century is offering $10,000 for an unproduced play by Myron Fagan, "Memory." Fagan plans to stage it here next Fall with Helen Morgan in the lead.

New York.—J. W. Hicks, head of the Paramount International Corporation, sails for Europe January 31 on a seven weeks business trip.

Flu Hits Roth

Murray Roth is sick at home with an attack of influenza. The director recently finished "Harold Teen" for Warners.

May Robson Going East

New York.—May Robson is scheduled for a personal appearance at the Capitol here starting February 2.

ROSENBLATT SPENDS BUSY DAY VISITING AT STUDIOS

Sol Rosenblatt got going so early yesterday morning, and worked so late that he didn't go through with his promise of daily press conferences, but after a hectic first day expects to get down to regular procedure today.

Rosenblatt visited practically every studio during the day, talking with the executive heads, asking questions, and listening. Today, he intimated,

WARNER BROS. 'HI NELLIE' ENTERTAINING PROGRAMMER

Dialogue and Muni Highlight Picture

"HI, NELLIE"
(Warner Brothers)

Director .....Mervyn LeRoy
Story by.....Roy Chansler
Screen Play:.....Aben Frankel and Sidney Sutherland
Photography .....Sol Polito
Cast: Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks, Robert Barrat, Kathryn Sergava, Hobart Cavanaugh, Berton Churchill, Douglas Dumbrille, Edward Ellis, Paul Kaye, Donald Meek, Dorothy LeBaire, Marjorie Gateson, George Meeker, Harold Huber, Allen Vincent, Pat Wing, Frank Reicher, George Chandler, George Humbert.

"Hi, Nellie" brings us a new Paul Muni, and one that we venture to say is going to be very popular, probably far more popular than he has been in parts making greater demands on his acting skill.

Here he is a typically breezy, hard-boiled managing editor, as real and human as the smell of printer's ink. It shouldn't be any surprise to discover that he has qualities of personality and humanness, but we imagine that to many of his followers who think only of Muni "the actor" it will be. And they'll like it.

The picture is a skillful piece of screen craftsmanship, probably rating as a darn good programer, no matter who had played in it, and landing a shade above that notch because of the presence of Muni.

The story is the second variation of the "Lovelorn" theme to come to the screen. This time, Muni, managing editor, is assigned to the "Heartthrob" department as a punishment for disagreeing with the big boss. As the department is supposed to be conducted by one "Nellie Nelson," we get the title for the picture in the continuous ribbing Muni gets from his fellow workers—"Hi, Nellie!"

Plenty of authentic newspaper atmosphere, a dash or two of gangsters, and a consistent line of comedy round out the picture. Topped by a climax cleverly tricked for suspense.

Muni, of course, is tops. Glenda Farrell hasn't the opportunities that usually fall to her lot, but she delivers with what she is given. Ned Sparks stands out in a typical Ned Sparks part. Berton Churchill eats up a "grouchy boss" type of part in the manner you would expect him to. Dorothy LeBaire has a one scene part that called for a real trouper, and she comes through nicely. Douglas Dumbrille does a good near-heavy. The structure of the story is such that other parts are minor, but in the Warner manner such well-liked faces as those of Hobart Cavanaugh, Robert Barrat, Edward Ellis, George Chandler, George Meeker, Donald Meek, Kathryn Sergava, wander in and out of the action to good effect.

Our own personal bow would go to Mervyn LeRoy for his direction, and with special attention to Aben Frankel and Sidney Sutherland for a screen play that has the marks of craftsmanship, sparkling dialogue, and a sense of reality that is a large part of the picture's appeal. Sol Polito turned in an A1 job on the cameras.

The exhibitor has Muni to sell, plus good entertainment after they come in. But don't oversell it and make them think they're getting a special.

THE LOW DOWN

Mack Gordon, of the songwriting team of Gordon and Ravel, and Al Dubin, of the team of Warren and Dubin, have been staging a fake feud that is grabbing all of them plenty of news copy in a local trade sheet and one of the L. A. dailies; neither sheet realizing that it is being ribbed for that copy, as Gordon and Dubin rate top spot in the "mutual admiration" society.

Paris.—Maybe it's a gag, but the European Branch of the American Artists Professional League sent a cablegram to the Secretary of the Interior last week reading, "Congratulations artists recovery plan. American artists in Europe request $100,000 reservation."

Col. Max Steiner

Max Steiner is the latest addition to Governor Ruby Lafoon's staff of Colonels. Not only was he presented with his commission yesterday, but he was given a large ovation on the RKO lot and a speech by B. B. Kahane.

RKO Cameo To N.Y. Indie Exhibs

New York.—Following the policy of unloading any operation that can't stay in the black, RKO has leased the Cameo to two independent theatre operators here, Harry Shiffman and Jack Shapiro.

The house will go to first run policy for independent pictures, opening with First Division's "King of Virtue."

Weber Brings Back the Bacon From Broadway

Returning from a trip to New York, Harry Weber yesterday announced his office has signed managerial contracts with Maria Jeritza, noted opera singer; Jack Benny, George Jessel, Phil Baker, Frances Williams, Jimmy Savo, William Thiele, German director; Pola Negri and Fred MacMurray.

Paramount is testing MacMurray, who is currently appearing in "Roberta" on Broadway.

Hawks Readies 'Century'

Howard Hawks gets in by train tomorrow from New York and will go ahead with the preparation of "Twentieth Century," which he puts into production at Columbia February 19. John Barrymore, who has the top spot opposite Carole Lombard, gets back from his yacht trip February 1.

Jules Furthman Robbed

Jules Furthman, screen writer, was held up and robbed of $200 worth of jewelry and cash Monday night while at work on his own grounds. The thieves added to the indignity by taking away the writer's pistol and leaving him bound and gagged. A passing workman released the victim.

Henigson Adds to Cast

Henry Henigson yesterday closed three deals for supporting players in Universal's "If I Was Rich," in which Lew Ayres stars. Players are Berton Churchill, Addison Richards and Booth Howard. They were set by Al Kingston.

Safron East for Talks

Jerry Safron, local Columbia exchange head, leaves tonight by train for conferences with Abraham Montague, head of the studio's distribution in New York. Safron will return in two weeks.

Nothing Exciting in New B'way Pictures

New York.—Nothing to rave about in the new picture attractions scheduled for this week on Broadway.

The English version of "Girls in Uniform" opens today. Other listings are: Thursday, Music Hall, "As Husbands Go"; Friday, Rialto, "The Ghoul"; Capitol, "Women in His Life"; Roxy, "Beloved"; Paramount, "Four Frightened People"; Mayfair, "Frontier Marshal."

Guild Extras Meet Tonite

Planning to put together the organization for a Junior Actors' Guild, the Screen Actors' Guild tonight holds a meeting at the Women's Club in Hollywood.

Ann Harding opens the meeting, with Morgan Wallace as chairman. Only paid-up members will be permitted to attend and they will elect five officers and a directorate of sixteen.

RADIO'S 'THE LOST PATROL' BURDENED WITH POOR STORY

Cast, Photography And Music Good

"THE LOST PATROL"
(Radio)

Director .....John Ford
Story by.....Philip McDonald
Screen Play by.....Garrett Fort and Dudley Nichols
Photography by.....Harold Wenstrom
Music .....Max Steiner
Cast: Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Reginald Denny, Alan Hale, Billy Bevan, Howard Wilson, Sammy Stein.

Everything in Radio's "The Lost Patrol" is good with the exception of the story and there is less story than could be told in a single reel of telling; as a consequence the dragging out of the yarn to six or more reels causes the picture to become quite boresome before half the length is reached.

But there are some unusually fine things in the picture. First Max Steiner's musical score that saves the picture in more than one spot, then Harold Wenstrom's photography, set up with the desert as a background, is something of great photographic excellence. Added to this the acting by the entire cast, all male, topped by the work of Victor McLaglen, Reginald Denny, Wallace Ford and Billy Bevan.

The story concerns a British desert patrol during the late world war that finds itself lost and the target for Arab snipers. One by one the patrol is reduced until finally only the sergeant remains. He is saved by another patrol which, roaming the same section, is attracted to the spot by the blaze of a burning airplane.

The story is shot full of holes and has too many inconsistencies to carry audience attention. John Ford has done the best possible with the direction of this slender yarn.

The fact that there is not a woman in the cast may give you a selling point, but aside from the dubious name draws there is little to sell.

'Student Tour' for Bell

MGM has accepted an original story, "Student Tour," by George Seaton and Arthur Bloch, staff writers, and has turned it over to Monta Bell for production.

Story will probably team Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth as a comedy team.

Birinski Finishes 'Soviet'

Leo Birinski yesterday turned in his treatment on "Soviet," which Irving Thalberg is producing for MGM. Writer will be given a new assignment soon.

Barondess East to Stage

Barbara Barondess leaves for New York Saturday. Player intends to line up a stage engagement when she gets there.

Brown Tests Don Wood

Clarence Brown yesterday tested Donald Wood for the role of the crooner in "Sadie McKee."

Catching Up to Gary

This morning's Examiner gives Adolph Zukor a break in a picture with Gary Cooper, Sandra Shaw and Manny Cohen, but they made Mr. Zukor stand on a chair in order to get in the picture.

Para-Radio Fail to Jell on 'Dover Rd.'

Radio was unable to get together with Paramount on the purchase of "Dover Road," which the latter studio owns. Radio wanted this yarn as the next Clive Brook starring vehicle, but with Paramount's refusal to part with the property they will make "Family Man" as Brook's next, as was originally planned.

Col. Seeks Woman Lead

Columbia is now in its third week on the hunt for a leading woman for "Most Precious Thing in Life," determined to hold the production up indefinitely until a satisfactory player is obtained. Remainder of the cast depends upon the choice of the leading player. Lambert Hillyer directs under Robert North's supervision.

Carewe Finishes Indie

Edwin Carewe has finished his first independent production, "Are We Civilized," and reports about town are that William Farnum, veteran star, has staged the first step in a comeback with his work in the picture.

Barsha Returns to Col.

Leon Barsha and Columbia has ironed out a deal which brings Barsha back into the organization as head of the insert department, from which he resigned recently after four years with the company.

Radio Seeks Madge Evans

Radio is negotiating with MGM for the loan of Madge Evans for one of the top spots in "Strictly Dynamite," for which Jimmy Durante and Alice White are already set.

Ceder on Garnett Staff

Ralph Ceder has been assigned to gag work on "Honor Bright," which Tay Garnett puts into work January 29 for Paramount. Clem Beauchamp is assisting Garnett.

H. 'Mank' Back to MGM

Herman Mankiewicz has returned to MGM to script the Gene Fowler novel "Timber Line." Louis Weitzenkorn and Fowler are working on the story in the east.

Miriam Hopkins Personals

New York.—Miriam Hopkins goes the personal appearance route, appearing in a sketch, "The Affairs of Anatole," at the Paramount next Friday.

Levine Arrives Friday

Nat Levine, president of Mascot, returns to town from a month in New York Friday. Producer made stops in Boston and Buffalo on his way back.

Talk of Fox-Hearst Split Dies Quickly

New York rumors that Fox Movietone and Hearst had split up caused the long distance phones to Culver City to buzz yesterday. Ed Hatrick, Cosmopolitan chief, dismissed the rumors and said they probably arose through a general cutting down of staffs that had just been made by both Fox and Hearst in newsreel departments.

The Fox-Hearst deal still has six months to go, and is certain of renewal with only slight modifications.

Lloyd Adds Dialogue Director to His Staff

Harold Lloyd yesterday signed Edward Curtis to assist on dialogue for "Catspaw," which the star is shaping up for immediate production on his Fox release. Curtis is stage director for Henry Duffy at the El Capitan. Sam Taylor directs the picture.

The first free-lance player to be engaged is Alan Dinehart, who gets a featured role in the picture. Both the Curtis and Dinehart contracts were negotiated by Small-Landau.

20th Brings Beecher Back

Janet Beecher was signed yesterday for one of the featured parts in George Arliss' next picture for Twentieth Century titled "Head of the Family." Actress scored in "Gallant Lady," her first picture, and is being brought out from New York again for the Arliss picture. Lew Cantor represented the player.

Sam Wood to Europe

Sam Wood, accompanied by his wife, plans to leave for Europe in June, at the expiration of his MGM contract. The director is making good on a long-standing promise to Mrs. Wood with a three months' vacation tour.

Thalberg Novel Hits

Sylvia Thalberg's new novel "Too Beautiful" has sold out its first edition and is going into a second printing. She is now scripting "Honor Bright" in collaboration with Austin Parker at Paramount.

Dvorak Slated For Next

Ann Dvorak is slated for the lead opposite Richard Barthelmess in "One Woman's Man," the Gene Towne and Graham Baker original story, which will be directed by Alan Crosland for Warners.

Freund's Next Set

Karl Freund is slated to direct "Man Who Reclaimed His Head," starring Claude Rains, as his next picture for Universal. He will finish "Countess of Monte Cristo" this Saturday.

Griffith Up at 'U' Too

Universal is testing Corinne Griffith today for the feminine lead opposite Russ Colombo in "Bachelor Life," which Eddie Buzzell will direct.

YESTERDAY IN New York

'What's Wrong With the Movies?'

By GUY ENDERS
Author of "The Werewolf of Paris" and "Rhumba"

The greatest of all arts, because it is the most immediate in appeal and the most extensive and inclusive, deserves constant criticism.

Stories first: There seem to be several of them and they are dead from exhaustion, having been worked so often and so hard. Now how about some new ones? Or shall we have still another demi-monde mother secretly sacrificing herself for her child? Or yet another rise story: whoopee! up we go to the top not only in dancing, crooning, meat-packing, racketeering, silver-mining, but even in blessed-eventing, only to discover that success is ashes and so back to true love, mother, or the good old soil. For a change, then, what about a story that isn't overalls to tuxedo? How about those who don't rise? With all the world stirred to its depths by the permanent topic of the butcher's bill can it be that material for a story is lacking there? Cabin in the Cotton and Men For Sale were vague stabs in this direction. We need more and better.

We've had some good ethnological pictures, but on the whole there was always too much faking and the stories have tended to run into the rut of true love never runs smooth so that the love episodes can be filmed once and for all and for the different releases all we need to do is substitute desert backdrops for igloos, or jungle sets for mountain peaks and clouds. . . . Now what about some genuine ethnological muckraking? Some good old muck! Since President Roosevelt has declared that we shan't land any more marines how about handing the marines a sock? Or if American imperialism is too hot how about a bang-up picture of French imperialism, something on the order of Maran's Batouala. Heaven knows, there's no lack of books on the subject.

Of course if controversial subjects are definitely out, then any serious consideration of religion, economics, or any social topic is taboo and the 13 million Negroes in the U. S. had best make up their minds that their lives contain no stories as far as the movies are concerned, just comedy relief and spirituals. We've done better with our Indians, though both in numbers and historical interest the Negroes far exceed the Indians. . . . Now as to animal pictures don't you think that we've had enough snakes fighting tigers? Aren't the lives of bees and ants and spiders far more exciting? Read Wheeler and Fabre, etc., and make up your mind. But such pictures might be too hard to fake. . . . Then there's sports. If we haven't had enough football and prizefighting pictures how about mumblety-peg? Certainly there are other sports. What are we afraid of here?

In my opinion the greatest of all possibilities in the cinema lies in the

The British Troubles

London.—Sam Harris, editor and publisher of The Cinema, British daily trade paper, "gives out" the British troubles. He mentions:

Our Troubles.
- Over-building and over-seating.
- Sunday-closing—war fanatics continue fights.
- Disc threats: P.R.S. fees.
- Municipal competition continues.
- Price-cutting continues.
- Public house competition increases.
- Press, radio and church continue attacks.
- Entertainment tax stifling industry.
- Deadheads and long programmes.
- Labor council threatens Manchester exhibitors.
- Duped film outcry.
- Electricity charges ramp.
- More licenses—more fees!

Harris may have been writing for an American trade publication, for the troubles of England are the same troubles here in America.

Architect Collects for Use of Chateau Setting

Paris.—Here's a brand new one for your American picture lawyers. A French architect has just received a judgment against a picture company because the producers used a chateau near Antibes as a background for a picture. The architect claims such use makes a "studio setting" and he is entitled to recompense. Secured an injunction stopping the picture in a Paris theatre and a judgment for ten thousand francs.

Plan 12 Pics in Canada

Toronto.—In the near future a studio will be built in Ottawa by an organization being formed by J. R. Booth, part owner of the Film Laboratories of Canada, Ltd. This new producing company will make twelve features for British film quota. Mr. Booth is being represented in the United States by Arthur Gottlieb of the DuArt Laboratories.

'Holy Year' Is Filmed

Rome.—American state righters will probably be interested in a picture that was made here giving the highlights of the "Holy Year" and the pilgrimages from all over the world to the Vatican. The film, which is a talkie, is now being edited for submission to the Pope.

American Pics Still Hold Paris Screens

Paris.—An interesting slant on the French market is given by the pictures at local houses for the current week. Out of thirty-four leading theatres, eighteen are screening American made pictures; with the remaining sixteen divided as follows: French, seven; English, three; Russian, two; German two; French-German, one; Austrian, one.

French Financing for Paramount Subsidiary

Paris.—Indications that the French Paramount company may secure independence from the American organization are seen in the fact that the new production program at the plant will probably be financed by a ten million franc loan from French sources. Shooting on the new pictures will start in February.

Reinhardt Successor Quits

Berlin.—The man selected by the Nazis to succeed Max Reinhardt is now also out of a job, Hanns Johst having decided he could do little with the job of director of the Prussian State Playhouse. Financially and artistically the Berlin stage is sinking to new lows.

Levy Rides a Hobby

Paris.—Jean Benoit-Levy, director of the most sensational European success this year, "La Maternelle," has gone the other extreme and presented a picture at the Sorbonne showing all the details of an appendix operation.

Swiss to Produce Pics

Zurich.—A company with a capital of two and a half million Swiss francs is planning domestic production here. A studio will be built and French and German technicians imported until Swiss labor can be developed.

'Il Duce' Offers Cups

Rome.—The International Film Exposition is scheduled for Venice to take the entire month of August. Mussolini is offering two precious cups for the best Italian and foreign film shown.

Korda Aims High on Next

London.—Alexander Korda plans to shoot the works, $250,000 on his production of the H. G. Wells futuristic story, "Whither Mankind." He will have the personal cooperation of the famous writer.

Austrians Peeved at Nazis

Vienna.—Austrian film makers are planning reprisals against German picture imports as a result of an anti-Austrian attitude being taken by the Nazi folk.

'Wandering Jew' Banned

Budapest.—The British Gaumont production "The Wandering Jew," has been banned from Hungary by the censors.

Spain Cuts Cantor

Madrid.—"The Kid From Spain" took it on the chin here from the censors and is pretty well emasculated for the public.

REVIEW OF LATEST FOREIGN FILMS

"THE SURPRISES OF THE SLEEPING"
(S.A.P.E.C.-European Fox)

Screen Play and Dialogue..Alex Madis
Direction .....Charles Anton
Artistical Supervision.....Fred Bacos
Musical Score.....Joseph Szulo and Andre Hornez
Cast: Florelle, Claude Dauphin, Louvigny, LeGallo, Oleo, Jeanne Cheirel.

Paris.—Here is the first picture to be made in Europe under its new arrangement with a subsidiary, S.A.P.E.C. Frankly, though it rates as giving average satisfaction, it is disappointing when one considers what was expected from a French film made with American supervision.

The theme is the old operetta stand-by—the girl who receives nightly visits in her compartment from a man whom she thinks her fiance, but who is really a prince in disguise. It needed a lighter touch, and more originality in the telling.

The cast turns in a fine job, particularly Florelle and Jeanne Cheirel, and good music helps.

"MIQUETTE AND HER MOTHER"
(Diamant-Berger Production)

Direction .....D. B. Maurice Supervision of....Henri Diamant-Berger
From Play by—
R. de Flers and G. de Gaillavet
Music by.....Jean Lenoir
Cast: Michel Simon, Roland Toutain, Blanche Montel, Jeanne Cheirel, Alerme.

Paris.—"Miquette and Her Mother" will have little interest for America, and not much more for Europe. It is only worth reviewing because an outstanding cast of names is present and struggles hard to do their best with poor direction.

The stage show from which it is taken was a big hit here in the pre-war days, and is remembered for pep in action and dialogue. But the screen version is long drawn out, and below par in sound and photographic quality.

Rotterdam.—It looks as though Czechoslovakian films may take the market in Holland and Belgium previously the property of the Germans A group of important Dutch importers are now working out a deal with Czecho producers.

'U' Handles 'Henry VIII'

Berlin.—Universal has taken over the distribution of the Korda British picture, "Henry the Eighth," for Germany. Advance interest indicates the subject will probably click as well here as in the rest of Europe.

French Active in Italy

Paris.—French producers are showing increased activity in picture making in Italy. Among others Abel Gance will produce in Rome a French and Italian version of "The Eleventh Symphony" for Caesar Films.

Nazis Protect Extras

Berlin.—The Nazi Government is protecting professional extras with strict rule against the hiring of non-professionals without special permits, the latter being very hard to get.

Hollywood Reporter:

I wish to object to an erroneous news item in your issue of January 16, 1934. I refer to "New York" despatch on page four, to the effect that Mr. Harry Behn "is preparing a script from Philip Stevenson's story of 'The American' " to be filmed by Leonie Knoedler Productions, Inc.

Whoever sent you this report sent you entirely false imformation, as you could have noted had you referred to your issue of December 30, 1933, page four. The facts are that I have been contracted both to write the script and to direct the shooting of a film dealing with the Pueblo Indians, based on an original story by Philip Stevenson. The title of the story is not, and never has been, "The American." It is called "Pueblo" and it was written by Mr. Stevenson without collaboration. Mr. Behn submitted some story ideas and suggestions, which may or may not appear in the finished film, but he was never at any time engaged to write the screen treatment or the shooting script. I am writing the screen treatment myself, and when it is finished I shall write the shooting script together with Henwar Rodakiewicz, my assistant.

I request that you print this letter in order to rectify any false impressions that your readers may have gained from your news item of January 16.

Respectfully yours,
SEYMOUR STERN.

germ revealed by the Three Little Pigs. The possibilities in the field of the colored cartoon have not been either remotely tapped or even realized. We have now the means of bringing all the world of unphotographical fact and fancy to life, to vivid, audible life. I predict that in this field vast gushers will be found some day. . . . Then there are historical pictures. What would you say to one that was not merely a costumed love affair? No, I've nothing against love, but these United States contain some sixty million people who are not adolescents any longer, who can't get terribly excited any more about love whether free or for sale.

Then there are settings. Must they always be realistic? Except in certain musical comedies we've had no motion picture scenic designing, and yet here are great and powerful possibilities. To the movies the whole world, real and unreal, and all the ideas and all the arts and all the peoples and lands of the universe from the dawn of time until the end of time, are legitimate subjects. Why not move in and take possession? . . . We need more experimental films. They flop, yes, but they give us an occasional masterpiece; moreover, without such groping there can be no advance. . . . Yes, great films, marvelous actors, wonderful settings, epics and what not else. Sure, we're full of superlatives, but going a hundred miles a minute on a treadmill is standing still whether it makes you dizzy or not.

GUILD READY TO TAKE OVER CREDITS PROBLEM

More war clouds are gathering over the Screen Writer's Guild-Academy battlegrounds.

Ignoring the Academy, which has heretofore claimed the responsibility for keeping a close check on screen credits, the Screen Writers' Guild yesterday announced that it would investigate the screen credit situation as it affects writers and hold hearings with all writers, including non-members, with a view to compiling a list of writer demands on that score.

The announcement, following a meeting of the Guild's board Monday night, is regarded as another challenge to the Academy.

Through its investigation, it is claimed, the writer organization is seeking to grab official supervision over the relations between the scenarists and the producers. Samuel Ornitz, Guild firebrand, has been appointed chairman of the credit committee, which includes Alice D. G. Miller, Lester Cohen, Winifred Dunn, Arthur Kober and John Goodrich.

Up to Date Figures on New York Circuits

New York.—Sixty-eight houses comprise the largest circuit now operating in the New York metropolitan territory and they all belong to Loew's. Next in line come Stanley-Fabian with 55 houses; RKO follows with 53; Skouras, 52; Randforce, 45; Prudential and Playhouse, 31; Springer and Cocalis, 23; Walter Reade and Century, 21 each; Consolidated and Manhattan, 19 each; Brandt Theatres, 16; Isle Theatrical, 14; Paramount, 12; and Warner, 4.

Competish on Make-Up

Competition in the make-up field is seen with the entry of the DeLong Studios into active bidding for pictures coming up. The DeLong outfit has been in the make-up business for twelve years, but only recently with such pictures as "Queen Christina" made a real play for pictures.

Berlin Song for '20th' Pic

New York.—"Gallant Lady," one of the latest of Irving Berlin, Inc., will supply the major portion of the musical background for the opening of "Gallant Lady" at the Rivoli Theatre. Fred Ahlert and Edgar Leslie composed both the lyrics and the music.

he would find time to talk directly to representatives of the various creative groups.

It is understood that appointments have been made for the latter part of the week for representatives of the IATSE, the ASC and various craftsmen groups that are anxious for a few minutes of the Administrator's ear.

Late last night Rosenblatt and his assistant, Morris Legendre, were closeted in their Beverly Wilshire rooms studying the results of the day's questioning, and with orders to allow neither phone calls nor visitors.

New York's Assistant Directors Elect Officers

New York.—The Association of Assistant Directors operating in the metropolitan territory has a new slate of officers. It follows: Fred Scheld, president; George Cline, vice-president; Dan Nadel, recording secretary; Saul Harrison, financial secretary; Joe Nadel, chairman of the board; and the following also on the board of directors: Ben Schwab, Jack Delaney, Joe Bannon, Walter Sheridan.

Orchestras Pile Up Crosses On Tours

Indicative of the growing interest in that branch of the entertainment business, five leading orchestras limiting their activities to the West Coast during 1933 rolled up a gross of $800,000, according to the figures of the Music Corporation of America, which manages orchestras throughout the country.

The five bands are Guy Lombardo's, Ted Fiorito's, Gus Arnheim's, Jay Whidden's and Anson Weeks'.

'Sequoia' Back Again

MGM placed "Sequoia" back into work yesterday under the direction of Chester Franklin. Franklin was originally on the picture with Nick Grinde, but is now on it alone, as Grinde is tied up on one of the units of "Tarzan and His Mate."

Salvage 'Sea Girl'

Radio has signed Gouverneur Morris to write the script on "Sea Girl," the salvage of the Drumgold-Shackleford South Seas expedition which Shirley Burton is producing. Otto Brower directs and Joel McCrea has the top spot.

Leisen Returns to Job

Mitchell Leisen returned from New York yesterday, having made a fast hop to get production data on "Murder at the Vanities." Picture which he directs goes into work February 5 at Paramount.

Invincible Signs Grey

Maury Cohen signed Shirley Grey yesterday for the top spot in his next Invincible picture, "Birds of a Feather." Frank Strayer directs.

In addition to the distributors and producers now on the dotted line, assents have been received from 4502 exhibitors.

Among the independent producers who forwarded their assent to the code were Grantland Rice, Elmer Clifton, Warren Doane, Movietone News, Pathe News, Mascot Pictures, Bray, Screenart, Sol Lesser, Harold Auten, Fleischer Studios, Walt Disney, Larry Darmour, Louis Lewyn and Monogram. Individuals signing included Charles Chaplin and Harold Lloyd.

W. P. Farnsworth, who represented Rosenblatt at the meeting, had the doubtful pleasure of accepting service in the test case against the NRA brought by the Congress Theatre, Newark.

The appointment of five additional members for the Committee on Agents was laid over until Sol Rosenblatt's return from the Coast.

A committee composed of Ray Johnston, Felix Feist and George Schaeffer will draw up fire regulations for exchanges.

Close to a thousand suggestions have been received for nominations to the local zoning and grievance boards. A committee composed of Ed Kuykendall, Charles O'Reilly, Sidney Kent, George Schaeffer, Ray Johnston and Nathan Yamins will start picking selections this Friday.

'ROSY' CLEARS THE AIR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THIS business will never be able to get on its feet right until something is done about the segregation of programs in such manner that audiences will have an idea of the quality of pictures they are going to see.

It's a pretty bad condition when an exhibitor shows a picture one day that cost from $250,000 to $1,000,000 to produce and the very next day shows one that cost less than $20,000. Certainly the expensively made picture will have some entertainment, will be given a good production, will have interesting people and as bad as it may be, the audience gets some run for its money. But with the cheap quickie, that's another story altogether.

Don't take from the above that we are for the elimination of the cheap picture, the quickie, the product of the independent producer. Certainly not, there is a market for that product, always has been and always will be. But Mr. Exhibitor should not charge the same admission, if he must play both types of pictures, for the cheapie as he does for the big, expensively made, production. And many of them should not be run in the same theatre.

What would you think if you went into the Metropolitan Opera House, expecting to see a Metropolitan production only to be greeted with a Billy Minsky burlesque show? How long do you think the Met would last with such showmanship? And suppose you dropped into Radio's big Music Hall and saw a serial, a bunch of cheap shorts and one of those $15,000 quickies?

There is a market and a theatre for pictures of any type and cost; but an exhibitor playing one type of a program should not be permitted to play the other, IF he charges the same admission for both. Such exhibition takes advantage of ticket buyers and such advantages do nothing for the advancement of this business.

Exhibitors have to be forced into such action, so it then becomes the work of the distributors to insist on a type of showmanship that will not only bring people into the theatres but give them a run for their money.

Consol. Lab. Backs New N.Y. Producer

New York.—Consolidated Lab's plans to back picture production are taking shape. They have just closed a deal with "Ivan Art Productions" and will underwrite the production of four to six pictures at the Biograph studios. Budgets will be between $60,000 and $75,000.

Release is not announced, but it is understood here that as part of his out-of-court settlement with the major producers on an anti-trust suit Abramson was guaranteed a definite amount of circuit bookings on any pictures he makes in the next year.

"Comedy of Life," written by Abramson, is announced as the first production.

Para. and Cooper Get Together Again

A deal that will return Gary Cooper to the Paramount fold for another series of pictures is ready for signing due to confabs between Adolph Zukor and Jack Moss, representing Cooper.

Cooper still has one picture to go on his last deal and this new contract will dove-tail with that production.

Arch Reeve Departs

Arch Reeve left last night for New York to assume his position in charge of the Fox Eastern publicity department. Gabe York, who replaced Reeve here in charge of the Fox West Coast publicity, arrived two days ago.

Fox Tags Harry Green

Fox yesterday closed a two-picture deal with Harry Green, dividing him between its two plants. He goes into "Gold Rush of 1934" for Sol Wurtzel and "Redheads" for Jesse L. Lasky. Al Rosen negotiated.

"Not Concerned With Salary Limitations" He Says—Regrets Stories Making Zanuck Target

Sol Rosenblatt, caught up on his sightseeing, used last night's press conference to clear the air on a number of false impressions that have been created by recent headlines. Two things worried him. First, the idea that his visit had anything to do with plans for salary limitations in the business. Second, the feeling that the papers in playing up his visit with Darryl Zanuck had made that producer a target for all the salary raiding talk.

Regarding the salary limitation stories, the Administrator made the position of the NRA authorities clear. "The Code Administration," he said,

Thirteen Weeks at $5000 for Marx Bros.

New York.—Those reports about the Marx Brothers getting $4000 a week for radio work were just about one grand shy of the final figure. The deal is practically set now through Danny Winkler and the Joseph Katz agency for the brothers to do thirteen weeks at $5000 per appearance.

The American Oil Company will be the sponsor and there's an additional option for thirteen more weeks tagged on to the contract.

Keene Thompson Bereaved

Roberta Keene Thompson, six-year-old daughter of Keene Thompson, died yesterday after a siege of pneumonia.

Wallace Leaves N. Y. Sat.

New York.—Richard Wallace leaves for the coast Saturday after a round of the shows here.

Para. Makes Annual Of Ether Picture

New York.—After checking the figures on "The Big Broadcast" Paramount has decided to make the production of an all-radio personality picture an annual affair. The sequel to the Bing Crosby opus will be called "The Big Broadcast of 1934"—which puts Paramount in line with Fox on their "Follies" on having annual editions.

Jules Epstein, New York writer, has been assigned to start drafting a script.

Mae West's Court Duties Delay 'It Ain't No Sin'

Production on the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin," will not get under way at Paramount next week, as was planned. Miss West, who is writing the script herself, has been kept busy at court for the past week and has been unable to finish the script. The date set for production now is February 12. George Raft is slated for the male lead and Leo McCarey will direct.

Laemmle and Foreign Chief Will Talk in N.Y.

Carl Laemmle will meet Max Friedland, Universal's European head, when he gets to New York and discuss the German situation of the company. Friedland has already left Europe en route to New York. Laemmle stops off at President Roosevelt's birthday party in Washington before arriving at his Eastern offices.

Readers Meet Thursday

The Screen Writers' Guild is sponsoring a meeting for the story readers tonight at the offices of the Guild, Hollywood Center Building.

Jack Cohn Comes West

New York.—Something doing on the Columbia front—Jack Cohn left for Hollywood yesterday on a sudden call.

MAJOR CIRCUITS IN BAND ON INDIE SEX PICTURES

With Sidney Kent's fine Italian hand behind the move, the major circuits of the country are putting in an unofficial censorship that is at least going to bar the market to the indie with ideas that he can make a fortune out of a super-sexy picture.

The fact became known through efforts of the Bryan Foy organization to get circuit action on "Elysia," the nudist picture, and their discovery that the New York controlled chains weren't even interested in the box office figures for the picture.

Distributors figure that 40 percent of the possible real business on a picture is from circuit buys, as the circuits expect that they can kill off the sensational sexer by their closed doors. Back of the action is the desire to impress the Code Administration with the industry's ability to censor itself.

New York REVIEWS

"MYRT AND MARGE"

Bryan Foy-Universal prod.; director, Al Boasberg; writer, Beatrice Banyard.

Mayfair Theatre

Sun: It seems to be a particular misfortune of radio personalities to make their screen debuts in productions so old-fashioned that they seem quaint. Myrt and Marge just didn't have much of a break.

Journal: It's a backstage musical that, at the end, turns out to have been a radio broadcast after all.

Times: After studying their respective talents for more than an hour, one is apt to conclude that they are peculiarly suited to radio entertaining. This comment also applies to several others who take part in this offering, except Ted Healy, and even he evidently found that he must keep his portrayal pretty much on a level with the narrative, which rather makes previous backstage effusions seem highbrow by comparison.

Mirror: They may be highly entertaining to their radio fans. But as movie performers they are not magnificent. It is certain that movies starring radio favorites make no attempt to stand on their own feet simply as movies. Many similar films have been no better than "Myrt and Marge." They are designed to give the eager public a quick look at their ether pets. They succeed in doing that, and nothing more.

News: Despite the fact that the Bryan Foy-Universal production "Myrt and Marge" is a parade of radio talent, vaudeville headliners and stage personalities, it is just another backstage musical comedy. It is nothing but a farce, choppy and lacking pep. Most of the gags are old. Eddie Foy Jr.'s performance is outstanding.

American: That their movie debut is something of a success if not exactly a palpable hit may be written down as due as much to the supporting cast as to their own efforts. As a matter of fact the whole entertainment is lively enough, providing you throw away the story or regard it merely as an excuse for the display of cast talent. There is ground for suspicion that some of the gags may be laid squarely on the doorstep of Al Boasberg, who in the gay old days used to sign himself "Frivolous Al." Nevertheless and notwithstanding, Mr. Boasberg pours the oil of song, dance and witty saying on the hinges of his creaking vehicle in skilled and craftsmanlike direction.

Post: It would be hard to attempt any rating of backstage musical shows on the screen, but to a punch-drunk cinema critic it would seem that "Myrt and Marge" belongs somewhere along with the Boston Red Sox. Possibly the radio devotees would feel different about it. At any rate, the picture doesn't do the movies proud. It is a tortuous rehash of the musical cycle, shabbily staged and shoddy in direction and acting.

World-Telegram: A stereotyped story, done in an incredibly unimaginative manner, the film is frequently enlivened by the antics of Ted Healy and his stooges. Except for their madcap antics I can find nothing in it to recommend.

Invincible Moves From 'U' to Sennett

Maury Cohen, of Invincible Pictures, is leaving the Universal lot and will produce his pictures hereafter on the Mack Sennett lot, having concluded arrangements yesterday with Walter C. Durst, new general manager of Sennett studios under the receivership set-up.

Cohen's first picture on the Sennett lot will be "Birds of a Feather," with John Miljan, Shirley Grey, Monroe Owsley, Hale Hamilton, Robert Elliott, Maurice Black and Wilson Benge. Frank Strayer will direct and production starts immediately.

Cedric Hart leaves Sunday on a month's tour through the south on some personal business for Phil L. Ryan. Hart has been handling publicity for the Ryan unit in connection with its comedies for Paramount.

Masquers Aim High For 'New Year Revel'

Only a month late, The Masquers are set to present their "New Year Revel" at their club, Sunday night. Purnell Pratt takes charge for the evening, with the Mills Brothers, Gene Austin and his band, and Hal LeRoy slated to appear.

Sketches include "Justice of the Damned," by Gouverneur Morris, "God Save the King," by Bruce Bal, "Trial by Jury," by Raymond Peck, "Castles in the Air," by Walter Weems, and "The Thrill of Sinning," by Eddie Mack.

Goulding Back in Town

Edmund Goulding returned to Hollywood yesterday by plane, after a hurried trip east to see his wife, who is ill. He will report to MGM today to resume direction of "Rip Tide" for the Irving Thalberg unit. Robert Z. Leonard substituted for Goulding during his absence.

Lasky Tests Cummings

Jesse L. Lasky has arranged for Constance Cummings to go through a special screen test with a view to talking a deal for her appearance in "Springtime For Henry," which her husband, Benn W. Levy, is writing.

'Show-Off' Back to MGM's Active List

MGM has placed "The Show-Off" back on its schedule and Lucien Hubbard has been handed the job of supervising this production. Charles Reisner will handle the direction.

The picture was temporarily put on the shelf a few weeks ago, because the studio was unable to secure a suitable lead at that time. MGM now has a lead in mind, but is keeping it quiet for the time being.

RADIO'S 'KEEP 'EM ROLLING' NEW IDEA ON HORSE OPERAS

Futile Attempt With Bad Story

"KEEP 'EM ROLLING"
(Radio)

Directed by.....George Archainbaud
Story by.....Leonard Nason
Screen Play by..Albert Shelby Levino and F. McGrew Willis
Photography .....Harold Wenstrom
Cast: Walter Huston, Frances Dee, Minna Gombell, Robert Shayne, Frank Conroy, G. Pat Collins.

"Keep 'Em Rolling" proves that the old ways are the best, at least where the way of an audience with a horse opera is concerned. Radio tried something different in this one, and so did part of the audience before the preview was over.

Walter Huston is a sergeant in the regular army when the tale opens. His spare time is devoted to drinking, fighting and Minna Gombell until Rodney enters his life. Rodney is a horse.

From then on his old haunts see him no more. He goes on the wagon. He buys liniment instead of liquor. When he has to choose between his sweetheart and his mount Rodney wins without a struggle.

Comes the war. Rodney covers himself with glory by dragging a gun through shell fire, and Huston commits various respectful acts of insubordination to get him medical attention.

In 1933 Huston is making quite long speeches in Rodney's greying ear. Rather than allow Rodney to be sold at public auction he tears off AWOL and the whole thing ends with an especial order from the War Department pensioning the noble nag.

Huston is distinctly uncomfortable through much of the film, though he does do handsomely by a difficult scene in which he tries to shoot the horse rather than let him go to a strange owner. It is sincere and affecting, but it did not stop them leaving the theatre. Minna Gombell gives a rousing performance as his girl, and makes all of her short time on the screen count. Frances Dee gives real fire to a speech of indignant protest. Production costs must have been low on this one—a good part of the cast seems to have been levied from Fort Myer. Well, who said that they aren't fine soldiers? George Archainbaud's direction was helpless in the battle with this tale.

Even making allowances for the cutting still to be done, "Keep 'Em Rolling" is one to tell to the marines to get a horse laugh. Hopeless for major bookings. They should have changed the film, and not the title.

'Seven Seas' Will Also Make Studio Pictures

Seven Seas Productions, which recently completed "Cane Fire," a South Seas picture, is today moving into quarters at the General Service Studios preparatory to plans which will find the company making at least two studio pictures next year in addition to one of the location-adventure type.

Beg Pardon

The reviewer of "Hi, Nellie" glanced hurriedly at the screen credits and gave a gentleman named Aben Frankle credit for collaborating on the screen play. The name is Abem Finkel.

Let's All Forget 'Forgotten Past'

"HER FORGOTTEN PAST"
(Mayfair Pictures)

Director .....Wesley Ford
Screen Play.....George Morgan
Photography.....James Brown, Jr.
Cast: Monte Blue, Barbara Kent, H. B. Walthall, Eddie Phillips, William V. Mong, Dewey Robinson.

Take every element that goes to make a poor picture, mix it with a short—very short, apparently—budget, and you have "Her Forgotten Past."

An heiress marries the family chauffeur, is disowned. She then learns her husband is a crook, leaves him. A year later, believing him dead because of a newspaper story, she falls in love with and marries the district attorney. The expected thing happens. Election time draws near and a trap involving the supposedly dead husband is set for the district attorney. In the anticipated procedure the trap boomerangs—but why go on.

The director must take most of the blame for holding a good set of troupers down to where they look like six hams walking through six sets. Which is just about what the picture is.

Add to 'Finishing School'

Mary Jordan, sister of Dorothy, and Rose Coghlan are the latest additions to the cast of "Finishing School" at Radio. Rehearsals on this picture start today and shooting begins tomorrow.

The cast includes Ginger Rogers, Billie Burke, Mitzi Green, Frances Dee, Bruce Cabot, Beula Bondi and Marjorie Lytell. Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls will co-direct.

Fetchet in MGM's '13'

MGM has arranged a deal to borrow Stepin Fetchet from Fox for a featured spot in the Marion Davies picture, "Operator 13." Fetchit winds up his first role for the Westwood plant in "David Harum" in the near future.

Warners Lift on Two

Warners yesterday lifted the options on Hobart Cavanaugh and Allen Jenkins. Jenkins has been on the contract list for about two years and Cavanaugh is going into the end of his first year.

June Knight Clicks

June Knight is being held over at the Miami Beach and Tennis Club in Miami for a third week. Universal yesterday gave permission to her agent, Leo Morrison, for her to remain there for another week

Allied Lawyers Find Snag for NRA Code

New York.—Allied States, the independent exhibitor organization, stated today that they had legal authority for declaring that contrary to NRA declarations, individual assent to the code is not required as a condition to enable theatres to appear before clearance and zoning boards.

The Code Authority had stated that unless an exhibitor signed an unqualified assent to the code he was out in the cold as far as help on settlement of local disputes. Allied's attorneys say this requirement is necessary for appearance before the grievance boards, but not in clearance and zoning matters.

'Widow' Fem Lead MGM Headache

MGM is having difficulty settling on the feminine lead for the Maurice Chevalier picture "Merry Widow," which Ernst Lubitsch will direct.

The script was written with Jeanette MacDonald in mind, but the difference between terms offered by the studio and those wanted by Miss MacDonald is holding up the deal.

There has been some talk around the studio of bringing Evelyn Laye over from England for the spot if a deal is not made with Miss MacDonald.

Gordon in Oland's Shoes

Since Warner Oland is in Mexico on a vacation and preferred to remain there rather than return for a picture, MGM yesterday assigned C. Henry Gordon to fill the role planned for Oland in "In Old Louisiana." George Seitz directs and Lucien Hubbard produces.

Radio Changes a Title

Radio has changed the title of "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" to "Sing and Like It." The picture has just been completed by Director William A. Seiter, who now swings over to preparations on "Blarney Smith."

Para. Tags Barbara Shields

New York—"Double Doors," which closed last week, has contributed at least one player to Hollywood. Barbara Shields of the cast leaves in the near future for Hollywood under a Paramount contract to appear in the screen version of the play.

Sally Imports Exploiteer

Dave Lipton, formerly with Balaban and Katz, arrived by plane yesterday from New York to handle the exploitation for Sally Rand's appearance at the Paramount Theatre. He will also take charge of her road tour.

Moss on Way to Mexico

New York—Irving Moss, of the Fox home office foreign department, is off on a four weeks tour to Mexico and Central America for personal observation.

Pickford Now Up For Radio Deal

New York.—Mary Pickford is out for the money these days. On top of her successful personal appearances she is dickering with radio sponsors. As a semi-tryout of her radio value it is understood she will go on the air soon with Waring's Pennsylvanians program.

The industry's "Mary" is not after the money so much as she is anxious to reestablish herself with the American public, and she figures radio a valuable addition to the personal appearances. All of it is in preparation for a big picture next year.

'Christina' Opening At Chinese on Feb. 2

Sid Grauman has set Friday, February 2, for the premiere of the Greta Garbo picture "Queen Christina" at the Chinese Theatre. Radio's "Little Women" will wind up its run this Sunday, January 28, unless the last minute rush at the box office requires another extension of the picture. In that case the Garbo picture will be set back another week.

Grauman Named to Head President's Ball Group

Sid Grauman yesterday was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee for President Roosevelt's birthday dinner to be given both at the Biltmore Hotel and the Shrine Auditorium on Tuesday, January 30. Grauman in turn appointed a committee to contact all the stars in pictures for this occasion.

The committee appointed consists of Perry Lieber, chairman; Paul Snell, Carlyle Jones, Ham Beall, Harry Brand, Cliff Lewis, John LeRoy Johnston and Joseph Reddy.

Bonus Handed Caesar

With Universal accepting his script without making any changes, Arthur Caesar was rewarded with a bonus by the company for the speed with which he turned out "Elizabeth and Mary" for Lowell Sherman. Writer also has been handed a run-of-the-production deal to write dialogue on the set with the actor-director.

Hoblitzelle on Para Board

New York.—Three names have now been placed on the Paramount Advisory Theatre Board, with the addition yesterday of Karl Hoblitzelle to handle the Southwest. N. L. Nathanson and E. V. Richards were the first two to be named.

Purcell on 'U' Script

Gertrude Purcell was signed yesterday by Universal to write the screen play of "Human Side," which will be directed by Eddie Buzzell under the supervision of Eph Asher. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Setting Morris Straight

Chester Morris goes east for Chester Erskine's "Frankie and Johnny," which United Artists releases, and not a Rowland and Brice picture as reported yesterday.

Warners In a Jam Over 'Key' Lead

With negotiations between Warners and Colin Clive in a jam owing to a run-of-the-play contract which the British player has in the Katharine Hepburn play, "The Lake," in New York, the studio was reported yesterday as having signed Clive Brook for a top spot in "The Key," sharing billing honors with Kay Francis and William Powell.

The company has been holding off putting the picture into work hoping upon Colin Clive's securing his release, but decided it could not wait any longer.

'U' Tests Three for Role

Universal yesterday tested Frank McHugh, Bill Demarest, vaudeville comedian, and Ted Blair, New York stage actor, for the comedy lead in the William Anthony McGuire play, "If I Were Rich." Edward Ludwig will direct, with Lew Ayres in the top spot.

Snell and Sauber Finish

Earl Snell and Harry Sauber turned in their script on "If I Were Rich" yesterday and checked off the Universal payroll list. Edward Ludwig puts it into work Monday.

Claire Dodd Extended

Warners punched Claire Dodd's ticket yesterday, extending the player's stay on the company's payroll another six months. She is in "Hit Me Again." Bren-Orsatti handle her.

Donaldson on Radio Pic

Radio yesterday signed Walter Donaldson to write the song "Feeling High," which is to be incorporated in "Strictly Dynamite."

Gottler Short Starts

Archie Gottler is getting "Love Detective" under way today. The cast includes Frank Albertson, Betty Grable and Tommy Dugan.

'Elysia' in Hollywood

The Bryan Foy production "Elysia" opens at the Marcal Theatre on Hollywood boulevard Sunday.

NRA ISSUES MANUAL FOR COMPLAINT ADJUSTMENTS

Washington.—President Roosevelt, following his usual rule of getting in the first punch when a fuss is started, is cutting the ground from under the critics of NRA, congressional and others. He has caused to be issued by NRA the "manual for the adjustment of complaints" in connection with the establishment of the National Emergency Council under Frank Walker, former treasurer of the Comerford theatre circuit as well as of the National Democratic Committee. The manual will apply to the motion picture business.

The new council boards enter the picture as a buffer between NRA and industry. All labor boards remain, however.

The manual sets forth that emergency council state directors are required to refer complaints to the proper code authority "unless the complainant indicates he purposely filed a complaint with the state director or that it appears from the substance of the complaint the Code Authority is alleged to be dominated by hostile or monopolistic interests."

It further points out that NRA is an adjustment and not an enforcement agency.

'Jim' McQuade, Pioneer Trade Paper Man, Passes

James S. McQuade, for many years prominently connected with motion picture trade papers, is dead in Culver City. When the Film Index, General Film house organ, was purchased in 1912 by the Moving Picture World McQuade became Chicago correspondent for the latter journal. He remained with the paper ten years.

McQuade was a graduate of an Irish university and for years followed the teaching profession. A man of brilliant attainments, he was a close friend of George Kleine, William Selig and George K. Spoor of Chicago, and was well known in exhibiting circles throughout the Middle West. He was about 75 years old.

Iwerks Adds to Staff

Emil Offeman, general manager for Ub Iwerks animated cartoons, has signed Earl Hurd, William Wheeler and Bob Stokes, newspaper cartoonists, as members of the company's staff.

Carrillo to Denver

Leo Carrillo left by plane last night for Denver, where he makes a week's personal appearance at the Orpheum Theatre. Leo Morrison booked the player.

French Gaumont Revived

Paris.—The old French company of "Gaumont"—no connection with British Gaumont—seems to be getting out of its financial troubles and may stage a come-back. The company is in negotiations with the Ministry of Finance on plans to liquidate a bank debt of two hundred million francs.

Johnson Stays at '20th'

Twentieth Century has exercised the option on Nunnally Johnson's contract for another period. The writer has just completed the script of the Ronald Colman picture, "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which will be directed by Roy Del Ruth.

3 Codes For Music Boys

Washington.—It takes three codes to handle the music business. One is being drafted this week for the popular music publishers, another for the standard publishers, and the sheet music publishers are included under the general retail code.

Hugunin Off to Mesa

H. Lee Hugunin left for Mesa, Arizona, last night by plane for a conference with Mack Sennett, for whom he was formerly production executive. Sennett is still in bed there recovering from his recent automobile accident.

Fanchon Royer in N. Y.

New York.—Fanchon Royer is here arranging finances for her current productions. She intends to return to Hollywood in about three weeks.

Gateson Back to WB

Marjorie Gateson returns from New York Saturday for a featured role in Warners' "Fur Coats." The Frank and Dunlap office handle the player.

O'Brien-Moore Tested

Erin O'Brien-Moore is being tested by Warners as a possible picture bet. She has just finished playing the lead in "Yoshe Kalb" on Broadway.

"is only concerned with minimum salaries—which means that the lowest ranks get a living wage—and with possible unfair competitive methods in business.

"So that our only worry with salaries in the picture business is in situations that constitute unfair competition—that is where one studio by offers of an excessive salary lures a player from another studio which has invested great sums in developing and building the player as a commercial property. That's the only angle on which the Code Administration has any thought or power to mention salaries and that is only for the protection of the business as a whole."

Rosenblatt, ordinarly urbane and handling his trip here as though it were a social visit, in his talks to newspapermen spoke sharply when it came to the Darryl Zanuck matter. He criticized the newspapermen for overplaying his chat with Zanuck to the point where it appeared that the Twentieth Century producer had been hauled up on the carpet.

Aside from these matters, the Rosenblatt day consisted, as already stated, of a sightseeing trip. He visited four plants, and while Mrs. Rosenblatt watched pictures in the making talked generalities with the executives of the plants, or sat in projection rooms. At Educational Mrs. Rosenblatt basked in the California sunshine on the office porch, because there was no stage activity.

Warners, Universal, Monogram and Educational constituted the day's visits, which, added to Tuesday's total, about wind up the spots for the Administrator to see. So starting today he will begin meeting representatives of such organizations as the Screen Writers' Guild, the extras' representatives, etc. The Guild is on the slate for two o'clock, the extras for four.

Meanwhile the agents met yesterday, and in the absence of any signs of life on the part of the Artists Managers Association formed an impromptu group that will talk to Rosenblatt any time he wants to discuss agency problems. Ralph Blum was named as spokesman.

Some of the producers visited by Rosenblatt yesterday later quoted him as saying he had "discovered some startling things in Hollywood—and the result would be drastic action from the Government." Asked point blank about this last night by a Reporter representative, Rosenblatt denied it absolutely.

The interview got going pretty well on generalizations about the problems of the independent producer and distributor until a direct question was asked about the Code Administration's position on double bills, and then Rosenblatt changed the subject. The same thing happened when he was asked his opinion of the Academy's report on the arbitration board as published in the Hollywood Reporter. It was a good topic of conversation until a direct question was asked and then Rosenblatt said: "There are no facts in the report. There are only figures."

That ended the day.

Bachmann Pic Plans Delayed By Illness

New York.—An attack of the flu has balled up Jack Bachmann's plans to get set on his next year production schedule while here, and the producer has finally decided to return to the coast and rest for six weeks before proceeding further.

He leaves for Hollywood today and will return to the east after the recuperating period to take up negotiations where he left off.

Buell Returns to Sennett

Jed Buell was reinstated yesterday by Walter C. Durst, general manager of Sennett studios, as executive manager of the studio rental department.

Lloyd Borrows Barbier

George Barbier has been borrowed by Harold Lloyd from Paramount to play the role of Mayo, one of the featured parts in "The Catspaw."

Oh, Margaret!

Margaret Sullavan brought Universal's anxiety over her whereabouts to an end yesterday when she unexpectedly popped into the studio, had lunch and popped right out again before anyone could have a lengthy talk with her. She was unconventionally dressed, trousers, moccasins and jacket, as usual, but sported an interesting welt under the left eye and a bruised cheek which she says she got while "fishing in Arizona."

EXTRAS MUTTER 'STRIKE' AS OFFICERS ARE PICKED

Extras meeting last night to elect officers for the Junior Actors' Guild were in a belligerent mood toward Administrator Sol Rosenblatt and the NRA code. The extras, too timid to be quoted individually, are going to put a problem right in the lap of the senior Screen Actors' Guild because they are already talking "strike" and other drastic action against studios they assert are not living up to code rules.

Ann Harding headed the list of Guild members present. Others included Lucile Gleason, Chester Morris, Boris Karloff and Frank Morgan.

Officers elected were Lee Phelps, president; Tom O'Grady and Margaret Morgan, vice presidents; Joe Novak, secretary, and Eddie Baker, treasurer.

New Names for Code Body

Additional nominations made for the Los Angeles district membership of the Zoning and Clearance Boards include Milton B. Arthur, Hobart Swan, Ray Peterson, Robert Gumbiner, H. J. Siler. New names suggested for the New York boards are Harry Friedman and Joseph Vergesslich.

Nance O'Neil Due Here

Signed for the leading role in "Double Door," which Belasco and Curran present in Los Angeles, Nance O'Neil is en route from New York and arrives Monday.

Hedda Hopper at 'U'

Hedda Hopper was signed by Universal yesterday through Rebecca and Silton for a featured role in "If I Was Rich."

'Paris Fashions' Finished

Virginia Kellogg, MGM writer, turned in the finished treatment of her original, "Fashions from Paris."

Break for WB 'Fashions'

Using it as an example of 1934 styles, 1200 members of the Associated Apparel Manufacturers in convention here attended a showing of Warners' "Fashions of 1934" Wednesday morning. Picture was shown at Warners Downtown Theatre.

Albertson for Col. Short

Frank Albertson has been signed by Columbia for the lead in "The Love Detective," a musical short which Archie Gottler will direct. Betty Grable has the feminine lead.

Kelly With Schenck

New York.—Arthur Kelly, United Artists vice president in charge of distribution, is accompanying Joe Schenck on his return to the States. The pair is due today.

DeMond on 'Quitter'

Albert DeMond has been set for another M. H. Hoffman script, "The Quitter."

Tracy and Trevor To Team For Fox

Spencer Tracy and Claire Trevor were selected by Sol Wurtzel yesterday for the top brackets in the cast line-up of "Gold Rush of 1934," which the producer will make as one of the six big pictures he is set to do for Fox.

No director has been selected for the picture as yet. Lester Cole and Henry Johnson are writing the screen play from the story by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti.

2 Shows for 'John Brown'

New York.—The play "John Brown" is going where the body's mouldering. It lasted two performances on Broadway.

March Returns Saturday

New York.—Fredric March plans to get off for the coast on Saturday.

Says Code Unfair

New York.—Arthur Butler Graham, attorney for J. P. Quittner, the Poughkeepsie exhibitor who is fighting the majors in an anti-trust suit, has written Dr. Alexander Lowell complimenting him on his refusal to sit on the Code Authority. Butler agrees with the doctor that the code has done nothing to eliminate block booking and blind buying evils.

RUMOR PRES. SLAMS NRA

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•THIS whole NRA machinery has come on the American public and industry so suddenly and with so many new and indigestible elements that it is no wonder that very few of us understand what it is all about.

So it may not be amiss to clear the air a bit and see just where we are standing.

First of all, Sol Rosenblatt is neither the Mussolini, the Hitler, nor the Dolfuss of the motion picture industry at this moment.

Rosenblatt has tried to make this clear himself. But we are all so politically minded that we refuse to listen to a man's words and always "wisely" read into them the meaning we want to get.

In point of actual fact, putting it bluntly, Sol Rosenblatt is here only as an INVESTIGATOR.

His importance arises from the fact that he is an "investigator" for an individual known as Franklin D. Roosevelt.

And what does that mean to us?

It means just this, that if we are all going to run to Investigator Rosenblatt during his visit here with each of our personal trials and tribulations, he is going to carry back to that Franklin D. Roosevelt the same impression that the code hearings left in Washington.

He is going to say:

"Aw, they're a bunch of nuts out there. All they do is sit around calling each other names."

And from that kind of a report almost anything might happen.

With no one but ourselves to blame.

Whether we want to admit it or not, gentlemen, the general Washington impression of the picture industry right now is a picture of a bunch of spoiled kids running around making faces at each other, and all in line for a good spanking.

Harry Warner, burned by his own star-raiding, pouts and says "I'll tell teacher." Adolph Zukor gets a private peeve. The Writers are "ag'in" everything. And so on.

If we don't get the spanking it will not be because we have not earned it.

Chase Out of Loew's

New York.—It now comes out that the recent selling in Loew's, Inc. stock was by the Chase bank, which has sold out its entire 165,000 shares at an average price of $28. This brings $4,600,000 for stock which originally cost them about $20,000,000. Erpi is still holding on to its 130,000 share block.

Chaplin Set on All Silent For Next

Latest from the Charlie Chaplin front is that the comedian has decided to make his new picture entirely silent, with synchronized music and effects.

Chaplin has abandoned the idea of making a talkie in which he would himself play the role of a deaf mute. Principal reason for the change of plans is the impressive foreign figures totaled by Chaplin in silent pictures, without the handicaps of dubbing.

Warners' 'Key' Builds To All Star Proportions

Building an all-star cast for the picture, Warners yesterday assigned Warren William to a top spot in the Robert Gore Brown and J. L. Hardy London stage play, "The Key," which Archie Mayo directs when it goes into production next week. Kay Francis and William Powell have been set in the cast already.

Berman-Depinet Here

Ned Depinet and Pandro Berman arrived in Hollywood yesterday. Depinet goes into conference with the Radio execs here on plans for the schedule of pictures on the new program, while Berman resumes his spot as associate producer with the company.

Washington Yarns Say Federal Trade Commission Restored to Old Powers Over All Industries

Washington.—With no official announcements made, Washington correspondents were buzzing today with a rumor which everybody seemed to have heard "some place," and no one could track down. It was to the effect that President Roosevelt and General Johnson yesterday had their first big battle with the result an executive order due in a few days that will not sit well with the NRA chief.

The story is that Roosevelt is tired of the flood of complaints that the NRA codes in all industries have been drawn up with the interests of the big fellow at heart and no concern for the Sol Wurtzel's unit at Fox is planning to make a modern version of "Dante's Inferno." Studio did the story as a silent in 1924.

Florida Wants Maritza

Sari Maritza yesterday received an offer, through her agent, Vivian Gaye, from the Sunhaven Studios in Florida for a two picture deal.

Push Bill to Kill N. Y. Censorship

New York.—A bill to abolish motion picture censorship in New York State will be introduced at Albany next week by Senator Esquirol and Assemblyman Brownell. Announcement to this effect was made at the AMPA luncheon yesterday by Roger Baldwin, attorney for the Civil Liberties League.

Baldwin vigorously advised the industry to stand on its own feet and stop truckling to organizations fostering Government censorship. He also called for more realistic pictures, instead of the "Pollyanna" themes.

Harmon-Ising Closing Deal with MGM in N.Y.

New York.—Hugh Harmon and Gordon Wilson arrived here yesterday by plane to conclude a deal for the release of the Harmon-Ising "Bosco" and other cartoons through MGM. The deal has been pending for several months.

Robert Woods Dies

Robert Woods, Richard Barthelmess' secretary for the past 15 years, died yesterday at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital from peritonitis which set in after an appendicitis operation, January 1. Funeral services have not been announced as yet.

Joe Schenck in N. Y.

New York.—Joe Schenck arrived in town yesterday on the Mauretania, accompanied by Arthur Kelly, foreign chief for United Artists. Gene Raymond was also a passenger on the Cunarder.

Retakes for WB's 'Hero'

Warners put "Modern Hero," G. B. Pabst's first American production, back to the stages for a day of retakes using Richard Barthelmess and Jean Muir. Picture was completed about a month ago.

THREE CORNERED FIGHT IN N. Y. FOR INDIE FINANCING

New York.—There is quite a fight back here for the right to loan independent producers money to make their pictures. The battle is between Consolidated Film Industries, Jack Cosmon and his Gevaert unit and Pathe Exchange Inc., who have just jumped into the field.

The Pathe financing is no surprise in view of the fact that the board of directors of that organization, finding

THE LOW DOWN

Hollywood seems to be just getting the backwash of the Mervyn LeRoy-Doris Warner wedding. The lavish and splendiferous affair was not without its angles, it seems. F'rinstance, there was the big stag party supposedly given for Mervyn before the big night by Louis Shurr. Everybody in New York of any importance was sent a wire of invitation, and the last line in the telegram read, "Ten dollars a plate!"

It was down at Palm Springs. Monroe Owsley was playing tennis and Owsley plays very DRAMATIC tennis. After watching the play and side-play for a while, a well known writer on the side-lines cracked, "That guy hits every ball as though it were a second-act curtain!"

You-all know Bill Newberry out at MGM? He's the publicity man who never can keep that date for lunch because he always has to take some visiting King, Prince, financier or celebrity around or something. He kinda likes it, too—so yesterday the "boys" framed him—but he doesn't know it yet. They told him his momentous duty was to take two of the biggest Chinese exhibitors around the lot and show 'em the works. Whereupon the casting-director hired two elegant Chinese, who arrived all spruced up, and even though they both speak English fluently they gave Bill the "no savvy" with great effect. He took them to lunch, around the sets and gave them all his charm for more than three hours—he even EXPLAINED everything to the two, who have drawn many a pay-check on the lot!

And the latest about La Sullavan at Universal is that under written orders from Carl Laemmle, Jr., she is not to be allowed to see interviewers or talk to them. No matter what the pressure. The story goes that Junior considers the girl too flighty to handle herself in interviews as a "moving pitcher" star should. So from now on you get the interview via Johnny Johnston.

'ROSY' AND WRITERS' GUILD GET DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

No Words Minced In Hectic 3-Hr. Talk

In a fiery session with Sol Rosenblatt yesterday, the Screen Writers' Guild put in a strong demand to represent the Hollywood picture writers, basing their claim on the overwhelming membership of their orgnaization which includes the majority of the film scenarists. Session carried through three hours and wound up with the writers quitting the Deputy Administrator's suite at the Beverly Wilshire in disgruntled fashion and declaring that they expected a severe licking at the hands of the NRA representative investigating the Hollywood production front.

Rosenblatt's final answer to their demands was "This is so important it requires searching and impartial study and observation. I am going to analyze your report very carefully and in a more leisurely manner."

The committee, consisting of Ralph Block, O. H. P. Garrett, Anita Loos, Rupert Hughes, Courtenay Terrett and Attorney L. W. Bielenson, submitted a written document detailing an account of the Guild's recent election of candidates to the Code Authority.

Laying aside strategy, the committee came out bluntly with the assertion that collective bargaining and a basic standard contract in keeping with the NRA code could be obtained only through the Guild. Rosenblatt is reported to have questioned this, bringing up the name of the Academy as an alternative medium of defending the writers. Committee is said to have biterly opposed the Academy, but making no headway in view of the Deputy Administrator's determination to maintain a neutral position between the two groups. Writers subsequently left in a huff, labeling Rosenblatt as "hostile" to their aims.

Throughout the conference, Rosenblatt is understood to have sought to keep his mind open to all angles in the situation, always aware that his purpose was to make an impersonal report on his findings. Exhibiting a hard-shelled front and refusing to be moved by the grievances of the writers or show any sign of emotion is accounted for the assertedly hostile reception he gave Guild representatives.

Writers also carried away the impression that he would refuse to select all-Guild candidates to the producer-writer arbitration committee and other code appointments, and was ready to appoint non-Guilders to the committee along with that organization's own selections. The Guild spokesman see in this the defeat of long months of hard work.

"By no means," said one committeeman, "does our interview with Rosenblatt, unsatisfactory as it was, mean that we are going to give up our determination to get the writer the essential protection he needs against the unfair methods of his employer."

The session with the Guild was the longest period Rosenblatt has granted any one individual or group since coming to Hollywood.

ASC Acts Tonight On New Stampede

Action on applications of 75 cameramen for membership in the American Society of Cinematographers will be taken tonight at a meeting of the board of governors of that organization.

Latest group of applications came in a rush after the recent meeting of the society, at which the agreement with the major studios was outlined. Expected most of applications will be given the official okay. Meeting will be at ASC headquarters in the Guaranty Building.

'Nana' Trade Shows Hit With a Bang

New York.—Samuel Goldwyn and Al Lichtman are displaying a big batch of raves on Anna Sten, which were wired in to them from the United Artists exchanges following the national trade showing of "Nana" January 23.

Branch managers report that exhibitors predict top rating for Goldwyn's new Soviet star with her first picture. World premiere of "Nana" will be held at the RKO Music Hall February 1.

Boleslavsky Handles New Scenes for 'Dead Police'

Richard Boleslavsky has been assigned by MGM to handle added scenes on "The Mystery of the Dead Police." Edgar Selwyn, who directed the picture, is now in New York. Howard Emmett Rogers has written the added material which will have Robert Montgomery in the cast.

Agents and Actors For 'Rosy' Today

Confined to his hotel suite on a series of conferences that lasted from early morning to nightfall, Deputy Administrator Sol Rosenblatt yesterday knuckled down to the task of wading through the numerous interviews awaiting him on his survey of the production branch of the business.

The two most important sessions were devoted to the non-partisan group of extra representatives who made their report to him. When they admitted having failed to cover their field entirely, Rosenblatt advised them to tell off sub-committees to carry on their work, thus quickly dispatching his business with them.

He went into a huddle with the Screen Writers' Guild representatives at four o'clock and came out of it near seven, holding his press conference while preparing to dress for dinner at Ralph Blum's home. He meets today with the Agents' committee and the Screen Actors' Guild, visiting the latter at the home of Ann Harding.

'EARTH TURNS' MISSES MARK; 'LOVE BIRDS' NOT SO HOT

Cast and Direction Fine in Heavy Yarn

"AS THE EARTH TURNS"
(Warners-First National)

Directed by.....Alfred E. Green
Novel by.....Gladys Hasty Carroll
Screen Play by.....Ernest Pascal
Photography by.....Byron Haskins
Associate Producer.....Robert Lord
Cast: Jean Muir, Donald Woods, David Landau, William Janney, Dorothy Appleby, Dorothy Peterson, Emily Lowry, Sarah Padden, Clara Blandick, Egon Brecher, David Durand, Wally Albright, George Billings, Marilyn Knowlden, Gloria Fisher, Dorothy Gray, Cora Sue Collins, Joyce Kay, Arthur Hohl, Russell Hardie, Javir Gibson.

Last year thousands of people, sitting around comfortable firesides, read Gladys Hasty Carroll's book, "As the Earth Turns," and thought fondly, romantically of going back to the land. This year hundreds of thousands of people will see the screen play, and thank their lucky stars that they are not down on the farm.

While the tale is not materially changed in Ernest Pascal's screen play the joy in the good earth which permeated every page is gone. This is due, partially, to the lack of weight in the performance of Jean Muir, who carries the central role. Make no mistake about this girl, however, and watch for her next pictures. She is certain star material. She has warmth, beauty, intelligence. There is no doubt that she has everything it takes to be a box office sensation within a short time.

She plays Jen, oldest daughter of the large brood of a Maine farmer. Though she is not out of her teens she is the real head of the farmhouse. It is Jen who stays up through freezing nights when the children have croup. It is Jen who stands over the stove in the blistering summer when fruit must be preserved. She loves it. A farm is her career, just as it is her father's.

She also loves Stan, son of a Polish tailor. He has persuaded his parents to sell the shop and go back to the land.

Allied against these three simple souls is the stubbornness of the seasons, grilling round of work and a rabble of relatives who are temperamentally unsuited to farm life, but who are trapped by poverty to their acres.

The cast is large and fine. A magnificent piece of work is done by Dorothy Peterson as the worn, hysterically rebellious wife of a shiftless idler, played beyond reproach by Arthur Hohl. David Landau is exactly right as the matter-of-fact farmer. Clara Blandick as the resentful stepmother of his children engages plenty of sympathy for her unpleasant character. Dorothy Appleby as the girl who is wild to get to the city draws laughs and praise for the elementary allures she uses to cajol her way off the farm. Donald Woods is another to watch. He plays Stan with a fine restraint. Sarah Padden is satisfyingly emotional as the Polish mamma who regards the farm as an enemy. Egon Brecher is funny and tragic as the tailor. Russell Hardie, William Janney and Emily Lowry make smaller parts count.

And the swarm of children is marvelous. Dorothy Gray, especially, David Durand, Wally Albright, Marilyn Knowlden, Cora Sue Collins, George Billings, Javir Gibson, Gloria Fisher and Joyce Kay all deserve enthusiastic praise. Photography is mediocre except for one good scene of a windy night which has a real out-of-doors feel, and that is one reason the film leaves a feeling of defeat.

Never is the peace, which Jen, her father and Stan feel in growing acres, made a reality. That, and lack of star names, makes this one a bit difficult to sell to city dwellers. And the farmers have enough grief already. So that's your problem, Mr. Exhibitor

No Longer Nudists

Members of the vice squad of the Los Angeles police department visited the Marcal Theatre in Hollywod yesterday, where Bryan Foy's nudist picture "Elysia" shows Sunday, and applied strips of adhesive tape to the principal points of interest in the lobby photos.

'Sleepers East' Is Sleepy and Dreary

"SLEEPERS EAST"
(Fox)

Director .....Kenneth MacKenna
Story .....Frederick Nobel
Screen Play.....Lester Cole
Photography.....Ernest Palmer
Producer.....Sol M. Wurtzel
Cast: Wynne Gibson, Harvey Stephens, Roger Imhof, Preston Foster, Mona Barrie, Howard Lally, Suzanne Kaaren.

Something should be done about dreary pictures like this one. It is a jumbled up mixture so far as the hoary old story is concerned. Wynne Gibson reluctantly becomes a call girl in order to help out her girl friend who has a hungry child crying for food.

There is a stag party which proves too rough for the little girl Wynne, who starts to walk home, only to be picked up by the disorderly son of the Mayor. There is a visit to a gambling house, some losses by the son, a squawk of a crooked game and of the rapid removal of the loser.

A shooting brings the police into the situation, but the innocent Wynne manages to elude capture. Preston Foster espies his one time girl Wynne on a train, hops aboard and finds the young woman more or less cock-eyed, but the ardent lover minds it not.

Right about this point a train wreck enters the story.

No one escapes. There is a trial at which the heroine is about to tell all when the Mayor's son in open court shoots himself to the entire satisfaction of all within gunshot including the audence and brings the tale to an end. No fault is laid at the door of the cast.

Overplayed Gags Hurt Good Work

"LOVE BIRDS"
(Universal)

Directed by.....William Seiter
Story by: Dale Van Every, H. M. Walker, Henry Myers and Clarence Marks.
Adaptation by.....Doris Anderson
Photography by.....Norbert Brodine
Cast: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville, Mickey Rooney, Dorothy Christy and Clarence Hummel Wilson.

The new Slim Summerville-Zasu Pitts comedy, "Love Birds," is swarming with swell gags and grand farcical moments. But the trouble is that the gags are overdone and the moments dragged out to where the laughter becomes pretty thin.

With a good deal of cutting this picture could be one of the best of the Summerville-Pitts comedies. The material is there, but it needs concentrating. Every episode that starts to put the audience in the aisles peters out like a piece of taffy that is pulled out too long.

Through a crooked real estate man Pitts and Summerville find themselves the owners of a few adobe ruins in the middle of the desert—El Mirage Rancho. Their argument over which one of them really owns the place is interrupted by the appearance of an old prospector, who, in a fight with Summerville, knocks out his gold inlay. The next day the country's newspapers herald the new gold strike at El Mirage, and in a very few hours the place resembles a booming mining town.

All this is essentially fine, funny farce, and when the picture is cut audiences will be entertained plenty.

Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville never did better work, and little Mickey Rooney is a grand trouper. His recitation of the poem in the schoolroom scene is a masterpiece. Dorothy Christy and Clarence Hummel Wilson do well in smaller roles.

Four authors wrote the very amusing screen play, Dale Van Every, H. M. Walker, Henry Myers and Clarence Marks, and Doris Anderson made a swell adaptation. William Seiter, except for the occasional lengthiness of scenes, directed with full comedy flavor. Norbert Brodine's photography is of the best.

When this picture is cut and pulled together don't miss it. The Pitts-Summerville fans will eat it up, and a lot of those who aren't fans will be won over.

John Zanft Inc. Formed

John Zanft Inc. has been formed to conduct a general agency business. Offices will be located in Beverly Hills with formal opening slated for middle of next week.

Claire Myers has been added to the cast of "Finishing School" at Radio. Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls are co-directing. Production starts today.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

Rudy Vallee is looking high and low for another girl vocalist, which would indicate that Alice Faye is certainly staying on the coast until all the shooting (not the movie shooting) is over. . . . Howard Lindsay, who adapted the present stage smash hit "She Loves Me Not," earns some $750 weekly as his end, but he's cuh-razy to be an actor, so he's gone and accepted a part in the new Dorothy Gish play which will shortly hit the boards. . . . This duo strikes our fancy. Imagine Heywood Broun, who writes columns, too, and Russell Crouse, the Theatre Guild's Ambassador to the Press, are toiling together on a musical satire with a backstage setting that will rip the hides off too many Broadway biggies, according to the talk. . . . The laugh of the week goes to a certain actress-producer who insisted that the house-manager rip out the last four rows of theatre seats the opening night, 'cause they remained unsold. . . . Regina Crewe, who pilots the flicker column for the American, is going Coast-ing around May 1 to look over the movie situation.

Leah Ray, who sings sweet songs with Phil Harris' music making crew at the St. Regis, and Marty Lewis, who edits Radio Guide, might do a June Jaunt to the Justice if Mr. Lewis can have his way. . . . "The Storm Blows Over," which Lowell Bretanno penned (he's the author of "I'm No Angel"), will give the censors plenty of headaches. . . . Fred Waring is "no-going" all picture offers, preferring to stick to showing his stuff via the stage and radio. . . . The march of the songwriters to the Coast has by no means halted. Harold Spinna and Johnny Burke, who scribbled the hit tune "Annie Doesn't Live Here Anymore," are keeping their ears wide open while RKO talks business to them. . . . Shemp Howard, who formerly was Ted Healy's ace stooge, is now doing a single and doing plenty all right. . . . While his son is taking care of the acting end of the family, Art Jarrett Sr. is having his hands full scribbling shorts for a trio of producing firms here. . . . And despite all that chatter about motion picture production going full blast here, everybody's trying to find out where it is.

Chester Erskine has converted the entire upper stage of the new Biograph studio into a street set of the early '90's for his "Frankie and Johnnie" opus. . . . One of the most sought after radio artists for pictures these days is Kate Smith, who still means plenty to the box office, and is still a sure fire bet for musicals. . . . The Meyer Davis-Van Beuren unit of RKO is readying its first feature, which will be a musical. . . . Star and story are still in the air, as the saying goes. . . . With the majority of major producers on the lookout for another Crosby or Lanny Ross among the microphoners, the microphone men have suddenly become picture conscious and refuse to make shorts unless they get the right lighting, direction and make up. . . . Extras Guild Names Board of Directors

Completing the check up of the ballot yesterday morning the Junior Actors' Guild announced the following selections for the Board of Directors:

Jay Eaton, Dick Gordon, Mary Gordon, Ed. Mortimer, Major Harris, Eleanor VanDervere, Russell Heustis, Mike Lally, Ed. Thomas, Mildred Mernie, Leon Beaumont, Robert McKee, Robert Ellsworth, George Nardelli, Lillian West and W. S. McDonough.

Kathleen Norris Yarn Slated for May Robson

MGM yesterday purchased an unpublished short story by Kathleen Norris titled "Gram," which is a story of an Irish grandmother who goes from poverty to riches.

The story is slated to be a May Robson starring vehicle.

Root on Guild Committee

Wells Root was yesterday announced as the new chairman of the membership committee for the Screen Writers' Guild, succeeding Courtenay Terrett, who has moved to the Board of Directors.

Otis Skinner Coming Here

New York.—Otis Skinner, veteran of the stage, sailed from New York yesterday on the President Monroe. It is a world cruise that will make one of its stops at Los Angeles.

STUDIOS LAY OUT SCHEDULE FOR BASKETBALL TEAMS

At a meeting at Universal yesterday, six studios worked out a round-robin basketball schedule for the studio league. All games will be played at the Fairfax high school, Melrose and Fairfax, and all teams will see action every Wednesday night for the next five weeks. The schedule for the first round follows:

Wednesday, January 31—7 P. M., Paramount vs. Warner Bros.; 8 P. M., Columbia vs. RKO; 9 P. M., Technicolor vs. Universal.

Wednesday, February 7—7 P. M., RKO vs. Universal; 8 P. M., Warner Bros. vs. Columbia; 9 P. M., Paramount vs. Technicolor.

Wednesday, February 14—7 P. M., Columbia vs. Technicolor; 8 P. M., Universal vs. Paramount; 9 P. M., RKO vs. Warner Bros.

Wednesday, February 21—7 P. M., Technicolor vs. RKO; 8 P. M., Paramount vs. Columbia; 9 P. M., Warner Bros. vs. Universal.

Wednesday, February 28—7 P. M., Technicolor vs. Warner Bros.; 8 P. M., Universal vs. Columbia; 9 P. M., RKO vs. Paramount.

Walker Uses Short Wave To Save Studio Costs

Vernon Walker, cameraman, returned yesterday from New York, where he has spent four weeks shooting backgrounds for RKO.

Studio feels happy over Walker's trip, for he used the old head, and instead of spending money telegraphing and telephoning he dug up short-wave boy in New York and held daily conferences with studio officials and laboratory men in Hollywood over Cameraman Roy Hunt's short-wave set here. Studio figures he saved company around $1100 in phone bills.

Holmes on Vallee Hour

Phillips Holmes appeared as guest star on the Rudy Vallee hour last night over the Columbia network.

Gable East to Pres.

Clark Gable leaves from Kanab, Utah, where he has been hunting lions, for Washington, D. C., tomorrow to attend President Roosevelt's birthday party as MGM's representative, according to an unconfirmed report. When he returns to the studio he will go into "Soviet" with Wallace Beery.

Hatton in 'Louisiana'

Raymond Hatton was yesterday added to the cast of "Louisiana Lou" at MGM, getting a featured role in the Lucien Hubbard production.

Miriam Jordan Free Lance

Miriam Jordan is going to try free lancing when her contract with Fox expires on February 3.

Reade, Para. Call Off Mutual Claims

New York.—Walter Reade and Paramount found a way to settle their argument yesterday by both agreeing to withdraw their claims against each other before Referee Davis.

Read had claimed Paramount owed him $150,000 as part of the deal by which they took over and modernized his New Jersey houses and Paramount claimed Reade owed $75,000 for sound equipment on the houses.

'Widow' Cameraman Waits on Fem Lead

MGM can't set on cameraman to do the "Merry Widow" until final decision is made on feminine lead. If Joan Crawford gets it the studio will put Oliver Marsh on the camera, as she wants him. If anyone else gets the part MGM will have to borrow Victor Milner from Paramount in order to satisfy Ernst Lubitsch.

Californians Join MPTOA

New York.—Report here is that the visit of Ben Berenstein, of Los Angeles, has resulted in the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California joining forces with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The Californians have previously been unaffiliated with any national group.

Now 'Blondes and Bonds'

Warners have set "Blondes and Bonds" as the release title on James Cagney's latest vehicle, "The Heir Chaser." Michael Curtiz directs and Bette Davis has the feminine lead.

GEO. ABBOTT'S 'JOHN BROWN' PROVES TO BE PREACHY DUD

Playing Own Lead Abbott No Help

"JOHN BROWN"

Play by Ronald Gow; presented by George Abbott at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre; staged by Mr. Abbott; settings by Cirker & Robbins. Starring George Abbott as John Brown and Whitney Bourne, Alma Kruger, Edna Hagan, Harry M. Cooke, Buford Armitage, Harold Gould, Robert Foulk, Elizabeth Kendall, Oliver Barbour, Iris Whitney, Walter Price, Charles McClelland, John Emery, Alfred Webster, J. Ascher Smith, Herbert Yost, Ernest R. Whitman, Thomas Morgan, William Shea, Edward Acuff, James Lane and William Corbett.

New York.—Heralded prior to its opening as a realistic and stirring biographical drama of a historical character in American history before the Civil War, John Brown, the play version of Brown's life and religious mania for freeing the slaves in the South came in as a dud last night; a noble failure, one might say. Two reasons can be given for the lukewarm reception accorded the play. One was the fragmentary and sketchily etched surface glints in John Brown's career climax, via the Harpers Ferry Arsenal seizure and the bloody drive planned by Brown and a small select company of high-minded men to arm and free all the slaves, which failed to impart the inspiring lift promised by the author. The other reason was George Abbott.

What Mr. Abbott's principal reason was for assuming the chief role in the play is not made clear but whatever it was, he was ill-advised. His voice is squeakily pitched, his convictions and leadership hardly convincing. What this role needed was a Walter Huston to thunder forth the divine mission laid upon him, to arouse the fervor of his followers and of the audience. Abbott's direction of the play, however, is satisfactory and up to his usual standard.

The play deals with scenes of his mountain home and pioneer-like life in an Adirondack village; the underground railway method employed by Brown and his sons in smuggling slaves up to Canada and freedom; the subsequent unfolding of a brilliant and daring plot—an armed insurrection against the Government's laws and the cruelty of the South; scenes of the fight to capture the arsenal; death of Brown's sons in the pitched battle; surrender of the handful of men left and of the leader's death sentence and finale of Brown's spirit marching onward and forward in the Adirondack hills, after his death, to the tune of "John Brown's Body Lies A-Mouldering in the Grave."

Several pictures have been produced in the past which have overcome the prejudice in Southern States against allowing any film to be shown which dealt with the Negro problem and its many controversial angles. This play, however, goes a step farther, in that, serving as it does to immortalize Brown's beautiful ideal and his unselfish sacrifice of himself and his sons, it would remind the people of the South that it was due to such a sacrifice and the lesson John Brown taught the people of the North and South, that the struggle for freedom of the slaves had to be finally and bloodily settled. It took the American Civil War which followed after Brown's death to do it. Whether such a film could get by in the South is a problematical gamble.

Several people in the cast acquit themselves creditably. There was Whitney Bourne as Brown's daughter, Annie; Alma Kruger, as Mrs. Brown; Harold Gould, as Uncle Jeremiah; Walter Price, as Shields Green; Herbert Yost, as Mr. Higginson; Ernest R. Whitman, as Frederick Douglass; Thomas Morgan, as Col. Lewis Washington, and William Corbett, as Col. Robert E. Lee. The settings were fine examples of life in that period.

Break for Miljan

After being a heavy for ten years with never a chance at a sympathetic role, John Miljan had to go to Invincible to get a break in a romantic lead. The picture is "Birds of a Feather."

Para. Holds Menjou For Schulberg Pic

Paramount picked up the option on Adolphe Menjou's deal and signed the player for one of the leading roles in the B. P. Schulberg picture, "Little Miss Marker," which will star Sylvia Sidney.

Menjou is now playing a featured role in the "Trumpet Blows," with George Raft and Frances Drake.

Roosevelt Dance Tribute Next Tuesday Night

A dinner dance, at $5 per, honoring President Roosevelt's birthday, will be given next Tuesday night at the Biltmore Hotel. Fred Beetson, vice president of the Hays association, is going to have a representative group of players present.

In conjunction with the dance a gala show, guided by Sid Grauman, will take place at the Shrine Auditorium at $1 a ticket. The total proceeds will go to the building of a hospital in Warm Springs, Ga.

Snub Pollard Returns

Snub Pollard, who was a big name in comedies a few years ago, and Andy Devine were signed by Radio for roles in the Irene Dunne-Richard Dix picture, "Stingaree," which William Wellman will direct.

Gus Shy Here Again

Returning to Hollywood after a year and a half, Gus Shy arrived yesterday aiming at another picture try. Comedian's irons are being heated up by his manager, Leo Morrison.

Mary Boland Set for Radio's 'Stingaree'

Mary Boland was signed by Radio yesterday for a featured role in "Stingaree" with Irene Dunne and Richard Dix in the top spots. William Wellman will direct.

This deal is not a loanout from Paramount but is a separate matter. Her contract with Paramount permits her to make an outside picture when the studio has no assignment ready for her.

'Rothschild' Hits N.Y. Astor in Feb.

The Twentieth Century production of "The Great Rothschild" is in the can and with a little cutting and patching, the addition of the musical score, the picture will be rushed to New York, where it will open at the Astor for a two-a-day run.

"Rothschild" follows "Christina" at the Chinese.

Cameramen's Union Ask For a 'Spread of Work'

The IATSE, No. 659, cameramen's branch, is riding Sol Rosenblatt hard for an explanation as to why his promise that a "spread of work" plan would be evolved for cameramen has not been carried out. This week's four page bulletin of the union minces no words in asking Rosenblatt questions. Announcement is also made in the bulletin of a "Re-employment Committee" which will endeavor to create work for the union members.

Eddie Quillan Yanked From 20th Century Tour

The group of stars that left for Washington to meet the Twentieth Century Caravan departed Wednesday night minus their master of ceremonies. Just before the train pulled out MGM discovered they needed Eddie Quillan for the remainder of "Hollywood Party" and yanked the player off the train.

Ether Censor Rodgers-Hart

Radio censorship struck at Rodgers and Hart because of their song "That's Love." After it was heard on the radio the other night the ban was slapped on until Larry Hart writes a new set of lyrics. NBC's puritans didn't like the words "press my body tightly," etc.

Paul Sloane to Radio

Paul Sloane was signed yesterday by Radio to direct the Lou Brock short, "Down to Their Last Yacht," in which Sidney Fox will have the feminine lead. The story is being written by Herbert Fields.

Al Steen Visiting

Al Steen, vice president of Associated Publications, regional trade papers, arrived in Hollywood yesterday on a four weeks' visit.

Cagney, Blondell Team Once More

Joan Blondell and James Cagney were yesterday assigned to the leads in "Without Honor," a Robert Lord original, which Warners will put into production as soon as Blondell finishes her role in "Hit Me Again."

Lloyd Bacon has been assigned to direct from a script by Tom Buckingham and Niven Busch. This is the first time Blondell and Cagney have been teamed since "The Crowd Roars."

Old Buddies Dine Para. Lab. Head on His Return

Gare Schwartz, general manager of Paramount's Paris laboratory, was tendered a welcome home dinner at the Hotel Roosevelt Wednesday night by veterans of the photographic division of the United States Signal Corps.

Chuck Reisner, Editor

Charles Reisner has added the publishing business to his list of endeavors. The first issue of his magazine, titled "Good Sportsmanship," will hit the streets today. Reisner, in addition to being a director has a sports shop on Wilshire Boulevard.

Gibson Snubs 'Crime Dr.'

Wynne Gibson has definitely stepped out of the "Crime Doctor" cast. Trouble was not over billing as has been reported but because Miss Gibson could not see herself in the part. She is still under contract to do three more for Radio.

Ames With W. C. Fields

Adrienne Ames has been assigned the feminine lead in the W. C. Fields starring picture, "You're Telling Me," at Paramount. The picture has been shooting for two days under the direction of Erle Kenton.

themselves with money on their hands and a desire to get back into the picture business, have sought this means as their stepping stone. The first Pathe financing is said to be the entire program of Majestic Pictures and also the unit for J. G. Bachmann and Harry Takiff.

Consolidated, with their laboratory interests plus their Biograph studio, hopes to corner this indie market financing, selling the producers the negative and positive stock, doing their laboratory work and renting space in their studio. Accordingly pictures made with this financing must be produced in New York.

Jack Cosman wants to plant his Gevaert negative rather firmly with the independent producers and feels his best "in" will be through the loaning of money for the making of the pictures plus a laboratory hookup with one of the independent lab men here, or in Hollywood.

OPEN FORUM

Hollywood Reporter:

Please let me add my thanks to that of my unknown "sister" and script girl who wrote that thoroughly intelligent letter which appeared in your columns a few days ago. Your paper is to be commended on the fair manner in which you allow one and all to have a voice in matters pertaining to the industry which gives us bread in return for our sweat.

Take it from one who is in the same boat with this girl (and there are plenty of us), she didn't exaggerate a thing. On the contrary she UNDERTOLD it if anything. If you don't mind I should like to add a few remarks to hers. In this cycle of adjustments (?) they might prove interesting. At least they are true.

I belong to the horde of studio girls who have years of training and experience behind them which fits them for the peculiarly exacting and diversified business of being a script girl and writer's secretary. Step by step, I have fought my way up WITHOUT political pull to what might be called maximum efficiency but WITHOUT the compensation that is supposed to go with seniority which the merest of businesses the country over from street cleaning to banking observe and duly reward in some manner. In any other business except the motion picture industry, a loyal employee who serves efficiently and steadily improves until capable of more and more valuable work through the years is promoted, recognized and remunerated in proportion. Why this should not apply to the nation's fourth largest industry is beyond me and many others. Is it any wonder that loyalty—and I mean the REAL McCOY—is one of the missing items in this neck of the woods?

Not too long ago a certain major producer was approached regarding a small raise for the stenographers on his lot, many of whom have been serving him superbly for years. I happened to know several of them. The girls were getting little better than the twenty mark mentioned in the letter of my "sister." It was suggested diplomatically (indeed, MOST diplomatically) that a raise to the tune of even a couple of dollars a week would mean a lot to these girls and that such a gesture from him would transform him into the benevolent, philanthropic soul that he claimed to be and result in a flurry of renewed effort and zeal that would more than repay him for the few additional dollars invested. Did this producer go for the idea? Not enough that you could tell it. Instead, he sniffed and reached for another imported cigar and snapped, "A stenographer's a stenographer. They're overpaid as it is and they'll take what they're getting or get out!" Incidentally this same producer is somewhat famous for the diamond bracelets he showered on a certain star in not too recent years.

Tell me honestly, can a man like that at the head of a large organization expect loyalty from the underlings who work without glory to the end that his pictures will sell and his own pockets bulge?

To get back to the subject of the script girl. Everyone in the industry with an ounce of intelligence will agree that the effort and ability to fill her job properly borders on the superhuman. On her slim shoulders rests one of the three major responsibilities of production when the cameras start to grind—director, cameraman and script clerk. Without these three there would be no picture. One is just as indispensable as the other. But consider what goes into the so-called equipment which is necessary for a script girl to function properly. Without exaggeration it can be said that there are four steps which lead to that position—typist, the green girl new to pictures who does routine typing in the studio stenographic department but takes no dictation; writer's secretary, the more seasoned girl who takes dictation and knows enough about continuity to be of real help to her writer; producer's secretary, the girl who has graduated from the steno ranks and is acquainted with studio routine, industry names and personalities, production details and serves this executive as private secretary; and finally the script clerk who works on the set shoulder to shoulder with the director and the cameraman and faithfully records the picture scene for scene, detail for detail.

ANOTHER SCRIPT GIRL.

Rogers Seeks Gary For 'Green Gold'

Charles R. Rogers is trying to persuade Paramount to let him have Gary Cooper for the starring role in his banana story, "Green Gold," which Harry Joe Brown will direct.

Cooper will return to Paramount after he finishes "Operator 13," in which he is co-starred with Marion Davies, to fulfill his last picture on his old contract. Rogers wants him at that time.

'ROSY' DRAWS INTO SHELL

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•LET'S get down to cases and actual facts. Sol Rosenblatt is really out here in order to give Mrs. Rosenblatt the treat of seeing motion picture studios at first hand. No other conclusion can be reached after a week of first-hand impressions.

At least eleven Los Angeles newspaper men have been sitting in Mr. Rosenblatt's lap three or four days of this week and some of the things you have read have been due only to the fact that Mr. Rosenblatt has left them to use their own imagination.

Mr. Rosenblatt last night insulted every Los Angeles newspaper man by not having time to talk to them. This probably means not a single thing to Mr. Rosenblatt because he can still go back to Washington and the big league. (Of course, some of the boys had been warned in advance by the big league not to take Mr. Rosenblatt too seriously.) But we have been trying to take him at his face value.

And we have found there is nothing to take.

After the agents and Mr. Rosenblatt have spent an hour and a half in arguing pro and con Mr. Rosenblatt's spokesman blandly informs the press representatives that "Nothing happened." Next eleven press representatives ask Mr. Rosenblatt's spokesman where he is going to spend his week-end. The spokesman replies "We don't know."

At least three of these press representatives knew the spot.

Of course, all of this means nothing to the picture business, which is not concerned with the day-to-day worries of newspaper men. But reporters have a rule which in the history of American government has very seldom failed to run true to form:

When a man is unwilling to talk straightly and honestly to the representatives of the press he is not the type of man that lasts very long in the administration of American affairs.

Don't think we have become too heated over the problem of Mr. Rosenblatt.

It is your industry, gentlemen, and not ours; but if you are ready to hand it over to any one who asks for it and who offers nothing in return then give it—and kid yourselves.

Wise Girl

A high priced writer arrived on a major lot to begin work and was assigned an office that did not have a phone. The writer immediately got in touch with the operator and asked to have a phone installed and the operator snapped back, "By the time the phone is installed you won't be here, so why bother?"

Warners Go Limit On 'Hot Air' Pic

Warners are adding a further build-up to their radio story "Hot Air," in addition to the radio names that have been put in the picture. Busby Berkeley has been assigned to direct a dance number which will be placed in the picture.

The studio started out with plans for an inexpensive production, but has built it into an elaborate musical.

Edna May Oliver Set In Next George Arliss

Edna May Oliver was signed yesterday by Twentieth Century for a featured role in the next George Arliss picture, "Head of the Family," which will be directed by Sidney Lanfield. The Edington and Vincent office made the deal.

McGuire and 'U' Part

William Anthony McGuire and Universal did not get together on a new deal for the writer to remain there. McGuire will leave for New York soon.

Manners Coming Home

New York.—David Manners arrived from Europe Thursday and leaves for the coast today.

Manifests 'Kidding' Attitude Toward Picture Newspaper Men—Hides Week-End Locale

Sol Rosenblatt put himself in the doghouse yesterday so far as Los Angeles is concerned when he reported to an official press conference: "Nothing has happened all day."

The administrator had just finished an hour and a half with the agents. Diplomatically he had admitted the agents called each other plenty of names, but officially he kept insisting "Nothing has happened."

The net result of the day for the newspapermen present was the revela-

'Doug' Sr. Returns Here Early in June

London.—Douglas Fairbanks Sr. will return to Hollywood immediately on the completion of "Don Juan," which is expected to be finished the latter part of May. He will then make a single picture on the United Artists lot, returning to London for a picture after that.

New York.—Dale Van Every left here yesterday telling the newspapermen he was returning for a conference of all the Universal producers on his arrival. Carl Laemmle Sr. and Jr. will both be in the east when he arrives for the conference.

Laemmles Start Trek

Jean Harlow and MGM Settle Feud

While MGM was still denying last night that anything had happened in the stalemate between Jean Harlow and the company the report was strong the two had settled their differences.

Hatchet-burying act is described as having occurred a week after MGM laid down its ultimatum. Where company had offered an increase of $500 over the prevailing thousand and the player had asked for a jump of $2000 a conference between Louis B. Mayer and the player resulted in a compromise.

Several stories are awaiting Miss Harlow's return and a quick selection will be made.

Estelle Taylor Up For Para. 'Cleopatra' Role

Paramount is negotiating with Estelle Taylor for a spot in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "Cleopatra." Miss Taylor, who is now making personal appearances in Detroit, moves to the Capitol in New York next week.

Renaud the French Star

Paris.—Madeleine Renaud, star of "La Maternelle," is at present the reigning favorite with French audiences. There is much interest in what happens to the picture when it is released in America next fall by Universal.

'Rosy' a Wampas Guest

Sol Rosenblatt has accepted the invitation to be the guest of honor at the Wampas Club meeting next Tuesday night at the Writers Club. The meeting will start at 6:30.

Cohn Boys in a Huddle

Jack Cohn gets into San Bernardino today, going from there to Palm Springs for conferences with Harry Cohn. He arrives at the local studio Monday.

'SUZANNE' IS TOPS IN N. Y. BUSINESS A LITTLE BETTER

New York.—The best business of the week was at the Music Hall. The picture attraction was "I Am Suzanne" from Lasky-Fox. The receipts topped $73,000, not big for the house, but paying business.

The rest of the houses did a bit better than last week, with Paramount's "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" grabbing $51,000 and getting second money on the street; "Gallant Lady" is the third spot at the Rivoli with about $38,500. "Eskimo" was disappointing at the Capitol with under $32,000.

"Cross Country Cruise" at the Roxy counted $21,500. Warners' "Massacre" at the Strand beat the attraction of the week before with a total of about $20,000. "Fashions of 1934" from the same studio took $18,000 at the Hollywood. Columbia's "Let's Fall in Love" grabbed $11,000 at the Rialto and "Sixteen Fathoms Deep" drew $8,200 to the Mayfair.

RAMBLING REPORTER

The latest example of Von Sternberg's "charm" occurred in the Paramount lunchroom Wednesday—and even though it's rumored that he and Marlene Dietrich have been tiffing on the set nobody thought even he would publicly insult the lady! When Marlene approached her table, which has been reserved for her ever since she worked there, she found Von seated at it with Gail Patrick, and we are told he didn't even have the common politeness to rise or offer her a chair. Marlene took it all in with a glance, and quickly found another spot to lunch.

New York REVIEWS

"MASSACRE"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, Alan Crosland; writers, Robert Gessner, Ralph Block and Sheridan Gibney.

Strand Theatre

Mirror: Here's a lulu! "Massacre" proves that there still is material in the West and that large-scale injustice is still the most inflammatory and exciting story material. A splendid cast plays vivid character roles. It is elemental melodrama, and a first-rate thriller.

Herald-Tribune: Based upon a book by Robert Gessner, which made similar charges against the officials of the Indian office, the picture called "Massacre" is the most vigorous assault upon American injustice that the films have produced since "I Am a Fugitive," which was, incidentally, manufactured by the same ardent film producers. As entertainment the work can perhaps be recommended only with reservations, but as a good, hearty social document it has fine and striking merit.

American: It misses being a great picture, but it remains a good one, and the first half, at least, contains memorable elements. Mr. Barthelmess plays his role with sincerity and conviction.

World-Telegram: Except for a rather conventional cinematic ending, is one of the few really worthwhile films that have come along in weeks.

News: "Massacre" has life and vitality. The picture is packed with exciting events and moves with speed and force from beginning to end. It has been ably directed by Alan Crosland, who projected his story against authentic looking backgrounds and managed his large cast with skill.

Times: Without considering the expediency of such a story, one may aver that parts of it are reasonably interesting and that it might have been infinitely better had the producers not seen fit to indulge their fancy for fiery melodramatics.

Sun: A grand old muckraking melodrama and well enough for those who can believe half of its charges. Richard Barthelmess gives a pleasantly energetic performance in a role that calls more for vigor than histrionics.

Journal: Easily the best picture Barthelmess has had in several seasons. Here he's equipped with an attention-holding plot, a fast-moving narrative packed with action and human interest. The picture was smoothly directed by Alan Crosland and the supporting cast is capable.

Post: Richard Barthelmess plays the Americanized Indian with a sturdiness and sincerity which are wholly admirable. It is by far the most impressive of his latter day screen impersonations. Clarence Muse is splendid as the comedy relief.

Para. Receiver Ball Still Kickin' Roun'

New York.—You just can't beat those lawyers and judges. In the matter of the Paramount equity receivers and lawyers' fees after Judge Bondy passed the ball to Judge Knox and he in turn slipped it to Judge John M. Woolsey, the latter sent it down the field on a lateral pass.

The judge reserved decision. Both sides are permitted to submit written arguments to be in by February 14. After that the judge says he will make his decision.

Gable May Shift To 'Streets of New York'

Because "Soviet" is not yet ready, MGM may put Clark Gable in the lead of "Streets of New York," which is scheduled to get under way Monday under David Selznick's producing wing. It is from an Arthur Caesar original. Jerry Sackheim supervises.

Geller Coming West

New York.—James Geller, of the William Morris office, leaves here for the coast Monday.

Riding Laird

Nursing a sore saddle-seat owing to his polo-playing activity in behalf of the Warners' team, Laird Doyle, the writer, is being ribbed by his friends (?) for having been engaged by the company on a riding assignment.

'U' and Sherman in Row Over Lead Role

Universal and Lowell Sherman are at odds as to who shall play the role of Elizabeth in "Elizabeth and Mary," which Sherman will direct in addition to playing one of the leading roles.

Sherman wants Mrs. Leslie Carter for that spot, and is standing pat on the casting, while Universal wants to bring Helen Mencken out from New York for that role.

Col. Renews Ethel Hill

Columbia has taken up its option on Ethel Hill, the only woman contract writer at the studio. Miss Hill has completed the script of "The Most Precious Thing in Life" and is now writing "Whirlpool," the next Jack Holt vehicle.

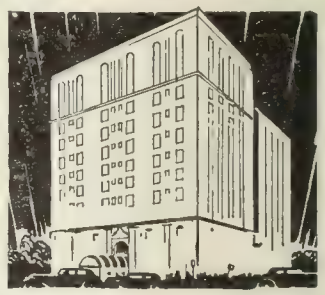
Rites for Rob Wood Today

Funeral services for Robert Wood, formerly business manager for Richard Barthelmess, will be held at the Little Church of the Flowers at Forest Lawn Memorial at 2 p.m. today.

London Newsletter

As Julius Hagen is now making pictures for Universal over here in addition to the Radio British product he is enlarging his studios and, until the new stages are complete, is using the Wimbledon Studios in addition to his own at St. Margarets.

Gaumont is going to go after the Colonial market in a big way this coming season. Three units will leave for parts of the British colonies to grab exteriors. Walter Forde will meg a story about Cecil Rhodes, this with exteriors in Africa. Victor Saville, on completion of "Evergreen" for Gaumonts, will meg "Soldiers Three" in India, this from the Kipling story; and Bob Flaherty, having finished "Men of Arran," goes to Australia for one.



John Carrick, on the coast not so long ago for Fox, gets a long term contract at the St. Margarets studios.

Lunt and Fontanne open in London in "Reunion in Vienna" at the time that Metro generally releases in England the picture version with Wynyard and Barrymore and, in view of this, MGM is making use of this tie-up.

Bernard Vorhaus, young American director, is recognized as the most promising newcomer in the latest megaphone field this side. He has a contract with Julius Hagen in addition to his own producing organization. Hagen also has John Baxter under contract. Baxter has made a big name for himself for his sympathetic-down-to-earth pictures, notably "Doss House," "Song of the Plough" and "Say It With Flowers."

'GIRL IN CASE' JUST BAD; MUSIC ONLY GOOD FACTOR

Actors, Dialogue, Direction Hopeless

"THE GIRL IN THE CASE"
(Screen Art Productions)

Directed by.....Dr. Eugene Frenke
Story by.....Dr. Eugene Frenke
Photography.....Arthur Martinelli
Cast: Jimmy Savo, Dorothy Darling and Eddie Lambert.

"The Girl in the Case," according to the definition it gives itself on the screen, is a Russian comedy done in the American manner.

At which all good Americans should rise to take exception. For it is no credit to the American manner.

The preview audience was stunned into unbelieving silence until the picture was about half over, after which it recovered sufficiently to reward the film with a large assortment of derisive noises.

The one and only thing to recommend "The Girl in the Case" is the extremely clever musical accompaniment. Possessing the sense of humor, the drama and the comedy the picture thinks it has but hasn't, the music is undauntedly fine. And if any of you exhibitors have audiences who like to listen to concerts with their eyes closed this is the film for you. Otherwise, give it a wide berth.

Dr. Eugene Frenke has two burdens to bear. He wrote the thing and he directed it—unfortunately.

The picture opens in the Russian manner—with a close-up of some spring blossoms, followed by some fields. The rest of the film features close-ups of Jimmy Savo's face (too many and monotonous for comfort) and slightly longer shots of him clad in long white underwear which bags down to his knees. There are also some close-ups of Dorothy Darling in panties and brassiere. Eddie Lambert has a few gesticulating moments.

Don't blame the actors. They were terrible—but what did they have to be good about? The dialogue is deadly dull, the story as unfunny as is possible, the direction is slow and labored, and the photography is hard on the eyes.

Obviously designed for the small art theatres, "The Girl in the Case" is a pain in the neck. It is a cinematic freak. Some cutting would help—if the whole thing were cut into tiny pieces and cast to the wind, leaving only an interesting concert.

Woods Stepping High

Donald Woods so impressed Warners with his work in "As the Earth Turns" and "Merry Wives of Reno" that he has been assigned an important role in "Gentlemen from Frisco," which is now in production and directed by Wilhelm Dieterle. Others in the cast include Lyle Talbot, Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay, Arthur Byron, Douglas Dumbrille and Henry O'Neil.

Bachmann Due Tomorrow

J. G. Bachmann, head of Preferred Pictures, gets in by train tomorrow from New York. He was away a month and a half.

Mike's Reply

While negotiating with a well-known writer to sign a managerial contract with him, M. C. Levee discovered that Phil Berg was also after the writer. "What's the matter?" asked Levee of the prospective client, "Berg got anything I haven't?" Writer's reply was, "He was just showing me a lot of antique furniture he has in his new home."

"Well," said Levee, "you come to my house and I'll show you more furniture with prop numbers on it than he's got."

Levee once ran the United prop outfit.

Seven New Shows Coming on B'way

New York.—Broadway will take a look at seven new shows during the next week. "The Joyous Season" goes into the Belasco; "Hotel Alimony" at the Royale; both opening Monday. Tuesday will see "All the King's Horses" at the Shubert and "American Very Early" at the Vanderbilt. Wednesday will lift the curtain on "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" at the Selwyn and "Theodora" at the Forrest.

The final attraction of the week will be "The Wind and the Rain" at the Ritz.

Raymond and Dunn Up For 'Sadie McKee' Lead

Clarence Brown's selection of the leading man to play opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee" for MGM has dwindled down to a choice between two actors, Gene Raymond and James Dunn. The decision will be made within a day or so. Raymond arrived in New York yesterday from Europe and will leave immediately for Hollywood if he gets the spot.

Fain-Kahal Stick to Pics

Sammy Fain and Irving Kahal, songwriters, have turned down the offer from the Shuberts to return to New York to write a musical show and will remain here for pictures. The team still has three more weeks to go on its Warner contract.

'Johnny Mack' Set

Johnny Mack Brown goes into the leading role in Sig Neufeld's "Widows" upon completion of his role in "Three on a Honeymoon" for Fox. Hallam Cooley of the Weber office set the deal.

Waycoff Coming Back

Leon Waycoff returns to town after closing in "Among Those Sailing," a New York stage production. He gets in February 10.

Norma Talmadge Sails

New York. — Show personalities sailing on the Europa today include Peggy Wood and Norma Talmadge.

U.A. Will Release 9 British Pictures

New York.—Joseph M. Schenck will leave for Hollywood Tuesday. Interviewed by a Reporter representative he said that United Artists will release nine British pictures during the next ten months; six from London Films Productions and three from British and Dominions.

Of the London Films Productions, "Catherine the Great" will be first, opening at the Astor Theatre here February 14. Of the rest Charles Laughton will star in two, Douglas Fairbanks Sr. in one, "Don Juan"; Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in another in addition to "Catherine"; Maurice Chevalier in one.

Schenck also announced that he had signed a Mexican actress sporting the name of Edna Reid, who will be in Hollywood next week.

Fox Buys Latest Sinclair Lewis Yarn

New York.—Ray Long's influence is seen in the purchase by Fox of rights to Sinclair Lewis's latest book, "A Work of Art."

The price is understood to have been very high because of the independent attitude taken by Sinclair Lewis on all of his works for the screen, and despite the fact that there was no active bidding because other story heads had passed the story up as not adaptable to the screen.

Guy Kibbee Gets Break In WB 'Without Glory'

Guy Kibbee has been assigned his first dramatic role at Warners. He gets a featured role in the James Cagney-Joan Blondell opus "Without Glory," which permits him to play something else besides the usual comedy roles he has been playing.

Lesser Clears Dog Pic

Terminating his argument with Spencer Bennett over which of them is responsible for the debts accrued on "Ferocious Pal," Sol Lesser paid off the claims against the negative, clearing it for further work. Producer shelled out $4,800 to wipe the slate clean. Principal Pictures releases it.

N. O. Joins MPTOA

New Orleans.—Exhibitors here have decided to join the southern showmen in the MPTOA. Organization will be known as the Louisiana MPTOA. H. S. McLeod was elected president, S. Higgenbotham, Joe Barceloni and Charles Lauve vice presidents

Benny Rubin in N. Y.

New York.—Benny Rubin arrived here yesterday for vaudeville appearances. He will return to the coast for pictures on completion of this tour.

Moyse an Associate ASC

Hollis Moyse, technical expert of DuPont Film, last night was elected an associate member of the ASC.

Cleverly explains international complications, political, economic and social, in the Balkans. . . . Michael Farmer, Gloria Swanson's husband, hints that he may produce films over here, but won't go into details about what country, the financing, or anything. Incidentally Farmer is quoted locally as saying that "all Hollywood stars are yearning for European studios just to get away from the hectic Hollywood atmosphere." . . . Donald Harper has been elected president of the American Club.

Benoit-Leon Deutsch, French stage producer, has returned from Russia with reports that the Soviet nation is theatre-mad. . . . Kurt Bernhardt, author of the novel "The Tunnel," celebrated at the opening of the French version of his film. . . . Critics gave it a rave as a masterpiece of European technic, though some of them won't forget that the author went out of his way when in Germany to assure the press that he is "Aryan" clear through the family tree to his grandmother.

Five First Cameramen Admitted to ASC Roster

At a meeting last night of the board of governors of the ASC five first cameramen were admitted to membership. The officers declined to reveal their identity. Others admitted included second cameramen, still men and assistants to the number of thirty. Forty applicants were held over for another meeting.

Ruggles for 'Magoo'

Wesley Ruggles has been selected by Paramount to pilot "The Great Magoo," on which Al Lewis is handling the supervisory reins. Howard J. Green is writing the screen play. Aside from Ben Bernie, no cast decisions have been made yet.

Sheik Baer Returning

Max Baer comes back to Hollywood February 4, but will not take a picture deal. Purpose of his trip will be to appear at San Francisco February 7 in connection with a suit he has instigated against a former manager.

Columbo and 'U' at Point of Breaking

Russ Columbo and Universal are not exactly on the best of terms. Columbo is trying to get out of playing the role assigned him in "Glamor," with Paul Lukas and Constance Cummings, along with getting out of his contract with that studio.

Columbo claims that the studio has kept him sitting around for four months doing nothing and promising him right along that they were planning to give him a story that would be a swell build-up to stardom, and instead they give him this role in "Glamor" which he feels will not do him any good in the line of furthering his career.

Warner Pic in Roxy To Outwit Zanuck

New York.—Something new in New York bookings comes up with the placing of the Warner Brothers picture "I've Got Your Number" in the Roxy to open on February 2.

The official explanation given is that the Warner boys are filled up with pictures for their Strand and Hollywood theatres, but the undercover story is that the deal is intended to beat Darryl Zanuck to Broadway on his picture with a similar theme, the telephone company trouble shooters. Zanuck's picture, "Looking For Trouble," will probably have to wait its turn at the United Artists Rivoli, which won't be in the near future because of the success made by "Gallant Lady."

Gaumont Starts Epic On Rhodes in Spring

London.—British Gaumont has set on the Spring to send its expedition to South Africa for the making of the epic based on the career of Cecil Rhodes. Geoffrey Barkas, unit production manager, is already on the ground making preliminary arrangements.

Victor Saville will direct, with script by Leslie Arliss. The company will have one hundred per cent cooperation from the South African government.

'U' Shelves 'The Deacon'

Universal has shelved plans for the remake of "Alias the Deacon," the John Hymer play made as a silent in 1927, because of its inability to secure talkie rights from the author. Stanley Bergerman and Eddie Grainger were the choices to produce the picture.

WB Tag Barbara Blair

Warners yesterday signed Barbara Blair to a long term contract. Miss Blair has been appearing on the air for some time. This makes the second player recruited from radio signed by Warners this week.

D'Arrast Makes 3 Versions

Madrid—"An Old Spanish Child" is the title given the picture being made here by Harry D'Arrast, well known in Hollywood. Three versions, Spanish, French and English are being made.

LeRoy Departs Tonight

Hal LeRoy and his father will leave for New York tonight.

Take Your Choice

A couple of the boys were ribbing Eddie Rubin about his broadcasts. One of them asked "Why do you imitate your brother Benny? You know it will hurt you later on." The other said, "Yeah, but think how it hurts Benny now."

Ass't Directors Get Break By Academy

The Academy's steering committee met yesterday and pushed plans for a resumption of interest in the organization's functions.

Recognition of the work of assistant directors was made through the decision to give a special award of merit to each assistant director elected for that honor by the production personnel of the studio employing him, as many awards to be made as studio putting forward their selections. This is the first time that the assistant director has been singled out for attention. Writers at each studio will not vote on the assistant director choice since they do not come in contact with the production side.

All awards will be made public at the Academy's annual banquet on March 15.

MGM Gets Tracy For 'The Show-Off'

Putting through a deal with Fox for the loan of Spencer Tracy MGM is prepared to place "The Show Off" into work today after several months of on-again-off-again decisions.

Charles Reisner directs the picture, with Madge Evans in the spot opposite Tracy. Clara Blandick, Lois Wilson and Grant Mitchell have featured roles. Company is using the Herman Mankiewicz screen play of the George Kelly stage script.

Bankrupt Austrian Firm Blames It on German Pics

Vienna.—One of the most prominent Austrian film distributors, Kopperman and Reiter, have filed in bankruptcy. Chief among the reasons given is the drop in quality of German made talkies in which the company specialized.

'Polly' Back to Stage

New York.—Pauline Frederick is coming back to the stage in the play which she had on tour for a long period, "Her Majesty, The Widow." She opens up at the Jackson Heights Theatre here, then moves to Philadelphia for two weeks.

New Bernstein House

London.—The Bernstein circuit has just added a two thousand seater in Maidstone, the Granada. The circuit has announced a plan to spend at least four thousand pounds of its yearly rentals on British made pictures.

Para. Seeks Vienna Play

Vienna.—Paramount in America has shown interest in buying the picture rights to "More Than Love," theatre piece just staged by Bus-Fekete.

Round Up Cast For Lloyd's 'Catspaw'

Casting on a wholesale scale was concluded yesterday by Harold Lloyd, preparatory to starting production on his forthcoming opus, "The Catspaw," on which the cameras will commence grinding the first of the week at the Metropolitan studio.

Seven names were added to those of Una Merkel, George Barbier and Alan Dinehart, already chosen as members of the Lloyd cast.

Grant Mitchell drew down one of the character parts of the Clarence Budington Kelland story when he was assigned to the part of Magee. Others included Warren Hymer as Slattery, a slippery politician; James Donlan as Red, a reporter; Frank Sheridan again gets a police commissioner assignment; Charles Bollon plays Dr. Withers, the reformer, and Jones Burke a politician's henchman.

Basil Dean Plans Ambitious '34 List

London.—Gracie Fields, at present rated the highest paid British film star, has been grabbed by Basil Dean for his production of "Grace Darling," which will be made at the Ealing studios.

New improvements at the Dean Studios cost over 50,000 pounds. Other pictures planned for the coming season are "Java Head," from Hergesheimer's story; "Lorna Doone," "The Beggar's Opera," "Twelve Chairs" and "Come With Me."

"Lorna Doone" has already been announced for production this year by an American company, Monogram.

Turkish Film Market Is Shot To Pieces

Stamboul—The picture market here is in the doldrums because the theatres haven't yet caught up with the expense of installing sound. Only about fifty out of one hundred and fifty theatres are wired.

American and German pictures lead, with the French getting a better break lately because of the boycott of German pictures by the Jewish population. In addition Turkey has also produced two pictures of its own in recent months.

German Skill Helps French

Paris.—The influx of German technicians due to the Nazi influence is going to have its effects on the French cinema in the next year in the opinion of the best posted observers here. The Germans know tehir technique, and the effects are being felt.

Actor Turns Manager

London.—John Gielgud, young actor producer, is going it completely on his own with the ownership and production of "Spring, 1600" at the Shaftesbury Theatre February 1. Richard Clowes, former journalist, is associated with him.

Zellner at Warners

Arthur Zellner, who formerly did publicity for Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, joins the Warner publicity staff Monday as a feature writer.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

Three rousing cheers to you for printing the letter published in the January 19 issue of Hollywood Reporter, and three more cheers to "A Script Girl" for writing it. We script girls, or studio stenogs, do not squawk out loud about our salaries and working conditions, because we've come to know all the answers, including that celebrated one: "If you don't like it, you know what you can do."

But now, anonymously, I second the plea of "A Script Girl" for a higher scale of wages among stenographers in the script department. The additional expenditure would not stagger the studio budget, and it would disperse the prevailing spirit of dissatisfaction and resentment among the girls, as mirrored by "A Script Girl." For the amount and quality of work, intelligence, and diplomacy required of us, we should be more adequately compensated. Surely, it would be to the advantage of a studio, as far as cooperation and morale are concerned, to take us out of the "What-do-you-expect-for-that-salary" class.

Thanks for giving us a chance to air our views.

ANOTHER SCRIPT GIRL.

'Rosy' Draws Into Shell

tion that Sol Rosenblatt doesn't give a rap about what Hollywood thinks of his official acts.

While Rosenblatt was busy changing into his best clothes to confer with the Actors Guild every reporter in town assigned to follow him, by the top dailies as well as the others, was accumulating a marked peeve as to the Deputy Administrator's personal attitude. Likewise they were trying to absorb and analyze all the near-news that was happening in the lobby of the Beverly-Wilshire.

At the afternoon session with Rosenblatt the agents licked themselves by not being willing to agree on anything. In their case no fault could be found with the Deputy Administrator.

Finally the administrator suggested a committee be appointed to confer with him. Later it was understood the agents had agreed upon the following committee: Phil Berg, Myron Selznick, Scottie Dunlap, Charles Feldman, Mike Levee and Ralph Blum. They will await Rosenblatt's pleasure for a confab.

After this Jessie Wadsworth, still bolshevik, said that at every meeting of the agents one group seemed to dominate the whole thing. To this the Administrator replied that any agent could write him stating any grievance and the same would be kept strictly confidential and if, as a result of those letters, he felt he should see the correspondent, the writer would be sent for.

A Reporter representative who happened to get a few minutes of the precious Rosenblatt time was told:

"If those fellows can't agree among themselves how do they expect a stranger to walk in and settle their problems?"

MAJORS TO SHOW PROFIT

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•PITY the writer.

Yes, you are reading right.

And the writer here in the motion picture studios is deserving of pity for he is not writing what he believes to be the proper writing, but that which is dictated by his supervisor. And we all know supervisors.

Ninety per cent of all the successful writers of the world are in Hollywood. They have been brought to Hollywood because of their success, and for the reason that motion picture studios can pay successful writers more money than they can earn by creating plays, books or magazine or newspaper stories.

But they are not permitted to write. They are not permitted to use their writing brains for the making of GOOD PICTURES. The success that they have had means nothing. It got them a job at a princely salary, but what caused them to be successful authors—their own good writing and their knowledge of the subjects on which they wrote—is thrown out of the window.

The successful writer must write for the UNSUCCESSFUL PRODUCER. He does not write for the public, he does not write for what he KNOWS to be the ticket-buying picture patron; he must write for his producer, who, in the majority of cases, has little knowledge of writing, of the public fancy, of what picture patrons want to see in screen entertainmet, of what will SELL. He is simply the PRODUCER, placed in that position through some trick or favor—family relationship, pull or through good politics—and he is the man for whom the SUCCESSFUL WRITER must write.

Yes, pity the writer.

And if that writer is fortunate in having one of the three or four good producers looking over his work, he has the additional hurdle—and the worst jump to make—in confining his writing to the intelligence of the "14 year old child" that Mr. Hays has sold to the studio heads here. The writer finds himself having to write stories to please that 14 year old monster that DOES NOT EXIST. He can't write adult entertainment, because Mr. Hays has sold Hollywood that motion pictures are not for adults but for the 14 year old boys and girls. Fancy that.

So pity the writer.

Gem of the Ocean

New York.—Columbia Pictures has declared its regular 75 cents a share on the preferred stock, payable March 1 to stockholders of record February 15.

Tracy Comeback In Eastern Picture

New York.—Lee Tracy is going to stage his comeback simultaneously with the first feature production of Meyer Davis-Van Beuren Corporation. The company, which has been releasing its short product through Radio, starts its first feature April 1.

Lee Tracy will co-star with Bert Lahr in the picture, which will be a semi-musical, produced at the Biograph studios here. Harold Spinna and Johnny Burke will do the music, and assignment of story writers will be made this week.

'Nick' Schenck To Be Here Next Week

New York.—Nicholas M. Schenck is expected to leave here for Culver City the end of this week. This is the trip that was planned some weeks ago but delayed due to his illness which caused a three weeks confinement at his home.

Hedda Hopper Hangs Hat in John Zanft Office

Hedda Hopper has hung up her thespian wardrobe to don the toga of an agent, affiliating herself with the new organization being started by Major John Zanft.

Ray Long on Way West

New York.—Ray Long boarded the train Saturday to return to Fox at Westwood Hills.

Trick Handling And Foreign Market Will Lift Most Majors Into A Profit Reading For Year

New York.—Every major company, with the possible exception of Universal, will show rather healthy profit for 1933. This is due mostly from the big returns in foreign markets and aided, to a great degree, by trick manipulations of collections and disbursements, amortizations, etc, etc., in the handling of the books, done for the purpose of attracting financing and stock buying.

But taken by and large, 1933 was the best year that the picture industry has had in the last three years and there is every indication that 1934, with its forced economies, with a greater drive for better pictures and the continued success of the foreign

John Barrymore For 'Monte Cristo' Lead

Edward Small is closing negotiations with John Barrymore to star in "Count of Monte Cristo," which he is making for Reliance-United Artists.

Deal is said to involve a $50,000 guarantee for two weeks. Understood that the John Gilbert negotiations are cold, with the Fredric March deal still warm until the Barrymore signature is on the line.

'Jock' Whitney Goes East

John Whitney, expected to make his entry in the picture business as producer of a Technicolor feature with Merian Cooper for Radio, departed for New York last night after a week's conference with the producer.

'DESIGN FOR LIVING' LIFTS RECORDS IN LONDON RUN

London.—The best business done in these parts in a long time, possibly the top for all time, was shown by the Plaza with Paramount's "Design For Living" the attraction. To say that the picture was a smash is placing it mildly. There were long lines at the box office from early morning until late at night and there was hardly a minute during the day that every seat in the house was not occupied. The picture will be held indefinitely at this spot and may do a solid month in a house with a usual weekly change policy.

"Going Hollywood" did a swell business also. Bing Crosby was the big draw and is now one of the greatest attractions in London.

The big flop of the week was Twentieth Century's "Broadway Thru a Keyhole" at the Rivoli. London ticket buyers wanted no part of that

Karen Morley Back In Columbia Pic

Karen Morley's return to active picture work since the birth of her baby occurs in Columbia's "Most Precious Thing in Life," signing of the play on a loan-out from MGM Saturday bringing to a close an exhaustive hunt by the studio for a leading woman.

Remainder of the cast, which was held up owing to the uncertainty of the choice for the top spot, will be rushed through with a view to starting next Monday under Lambert Hillyer's direction and Robert North's supervision. Robert Young is being sought on loan from MGM. If the negotiations fail Richard Cromwell gets the next important spot.

'Gallant Lady' Off to Good Start Locally

Darryl Zanuck's production, "Gallant Lady," continues its record breaking box office take with $1,700 for the first day at the local United Artists and $2,100 for Saturday. First day's sales are $300 over those of "Henry VIII." Ann Harding has the top spot in the picture directed by Gregory LaCava.

Schenck and Giannini Leaving New York Today

New York.—Joseph Schenck and "Doc" Giannini leave here today for Hollywood, the former from his European trip and the latter from the meeting of the eastern division of the American Bankers Association, at which he was the principal speaker.

Tom Mix Returns

Tom Mix rolls into town today by car, completing an eight months' vaudeville tour. He will stay here for three weeks before going to Dallas to the winter quarters of the Sam B. Dill circus, which he owns.

THE LOW DOWN

Lotsa parties over the week-end: There was the Herman Mankiewiczes dinnering at which Greta Keller warbled divinely but not long enough. . . Ernst Lubitsch and Greta Koerner reminisced for hours in German but didn't say anything that could have been amiss in English! George Cukor, Jean Negulesco, the Sam Jaffes, the Eddie Lowes, the Ralph Blums, the Dick Rodgers, the Edwin Knopfs, Ben Wasson, Helen Gwynn, Arthur Kober, Alice Glazer among those present. . . . Kay Francis gave a soiree too, at which the Clive Brooks, the Dick Barthelmesses, Virginia Gilbert, Jock Whitney, the Freddie Frelinghuysens, Corinne Griffith, Maurice Chevalier, Lewis Milestone, Eddie Kane, Countess di Frasso, Bert Collins, Freddy Kruger and other dined and backgammoned. . . . But the week-end antics of the David and Myron Selznicks were something! They leaped into a plane Saturday at noon, which plane also carried the Sol Rosenblatts, and flew down to Caliente for a quick lunch, a quick bet on the races, a quick nip and a quick trip back to the Beverly Wilshire for dinner and a quick dance! Also at the Beverly Wilshire were Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard, King Vidor with Betty Hill, Joan Blondell and George Barnes, Sue Carol, Walter Wanger, Mary Nash and Edward Everett Horton.

A news item that strikes us as unconscious humor is the one about Lowell Sherman wanting Mrs. Leslie Carter (who is older than Ben Bernie's jokes) for a role in "Elizabeth and Mary"—and Universal wanting Helen Mencken for the SAME role! Just a SLIGHT discrepancy in opinion—and one which must be very flattering to Helen Mencken—we DON'T think!

'U' Execs Go Scouting

John Stahl, Eph Asher and Henry Henigson visited the Radio lot and caught Corinne Griffith in action on the "Crime Doctor" set. Universal is bagging a one-picture deal with her.

New York REVIEWS

"MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN"

Paramount prod.; director, Alexander Hall; writers, Rupert Hughes, Adela Rogers St. Johns.
Paramount Theatre

World-Telegram: Told simply, with all the agonizing reality of truth, the story of "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" is as graphic, gripping and heartrending as a news story. It is admirably and tastefully directed by Alexander Hall, who keeps it intensely human and never mawkish, and it is acted to utter perfection by its entire cast and more notably by Miss Wieck, little Baby LeRoy and Alice Brady.

American: Entertainment all the way. Although this is a better motion picture than Miss Wieck's earlier American effort, and provides the star with far greater opportunities, which, incidentally, she grasps with skill and understanding of her art, she has the misfortune of losing the picture to Alice Brady, who triumphs in a portrayal entirely different from those in which Hollywood threatened to type her.

Mirror: Thrilling and heart-breaking, "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" is a splendidly made, smartly written and brilliantly acted film, which deals with a timely and important subject. Alice Brady is magnificent.

Herald-Tribune: It emerges as an effective if perhaps too studiously unpleasant screen play. Dorothea Wieck plays with sympathy and understanding, but her role is naturally a rather monotonous one, and it is Miss Alice Brady who has the fattest part in the film.

Times: Even those who are averse to the producing of pictures concerned with kidnapping wil probably decide that in this film the subject is dealt with in an intelligent, restrained and provocative fashion. In this stirring narrative, which was written by Rupert Hughes, Dorothea Wieck gives a beautifully sensitive and commanding portrayal.

News: This was made from Rupert Hughes' short story of the same name, and while the photoplay follows the line of the story pretty closely the ending has been mercifully changed. If the baby had been allowed to die the picture would have been unendurable. As it is it will wring tears both of laughter and pity from the flintiest of hearts.

Sun: The effectiveness of the story is perhaps hampered by the occasional incoherence of its telling. There are unexplained lapses of tim, jumps from place to place, too many omissions of necessary details. But with a theme like that it is sure of a few tears, and at the close a few handclaps from any audience.

Journal: The picture, emotionally, is disturbing. Dramatically it is vividly developed with mounting suspense. It is tense, both in its subject matter and in its effectively smooth method of narration. Easing the strain a bit is the more than welcome humor supplied by Baby LeRoy. Dorothea Wieck gives an excellent performance.

"I AM SUZANNE"

Fox-Lasky prod.; director, Rowland V. Lee; writers, Rowland V. Lee, Edwin Justus Meyer.
Music Hall

Times: Succeeds in being quite a fascinating diversion. Its story is inconsequential, but the frailties are forgotten when the puppets strut their stuff. There are one or two pleasing musical compositions which are staged with fine effect.

News: The dialogue is clever and the picture has been directed with skill.

Sun: Mr. Lasky, who likes to make pictures different, has succeeded again. Miss Harvey's deceptively fragile personality, her porcelain voice and astonishingly athletic dancing are at their best in this. She has a lot to do and she does it all well, even to sharing honors gracefully with the pleasant Mr. Raymond.

Herald-Tribune: The latest in the series of striking, intelligent, ambitious and artistically courageous motion pictures which have been emerging from the valiant hand of Mr. Jesse L. Lasky with such gratifying insistence.

Mirror: The producer who dared to use travesty in "The Warrior's Husband," the supernatural in "Berkeley Square," this time has ventured into the realm of whimsy to make a romance which is as unique as it is tender and appealing. Lilian Harvey gives an enchanting performance. Gene Raymond is splendid opposite her. A fairy story which will entertain the whole family.

American: Again Jesse Lasky brings us a beautifully sensitive, whimsical, imaginative film idyll, wistfully fragrant. It is one of the most delicate, exquisitely wrought entertainments to emanate from any studio here or abroad. It is Miss Harvey's supreme contribution to the cinema.

Post: "I Am Suzanne" employs marionettes generously and lavishly, sometimes so lavishy as to obscure the simplicity and effectiveness of their art. However, it is superior entertainment, distinguished in its story, direction and acting.

World-Telegram: A dainty, whimsical little story, which blends fantasy and realism so skillfully that the effect is thoroughly charming and entertaining. First rate screen entertainment from beginning to end.

Journal: Told with imagination and charm, the film is a diverting mixture of novelty, romance and music. Miss Harvey's performance is the best that she has yet contributed to the American screen.

There's a Joker In New FTC Powers

Washington.—President Roosevelt may have returned the Federal Trade Commission to a lot of its old glories in reviewing complaints against the NRA, but Director of the Federal Budget Douglas has his own ideas.

The budget director is keeping the Federal Trade Commission appropriation on a shoestring basis, which will probably leave it just as ineffectual as ever in trying to handle the moving picture industry.

Lewis Handles Reins On RKO 'Dover Road'

David Lewis takes over the supervisory reins on "Dover Road" for Radio and will have J. Walter Ruben directing the Clive Brook starrer.

Although many scripts were chopped out by Paramount writers when the A. A. Milne play was up repeatedly at that studio during Brook's contract there, Radio has its own ideas on the screen play and has assigned H. W. Hanneman to fashion the new one.

Chance for Eight Stars

The Bernard and Meiklejohn agency has been commissioned to sign eight different movie stars for personal appearances at a coast auto show. Players signed will receive $1,000 per day and expenses, including airplane transportation to and from.

Healy Gang Renewed

Ted Healy and his stooges, Howard, Fine and Howard, were signed by MGM to a new term contract. The comics are now working in "Hollywood Party" and a short subject which Jack Cummings is supervising.

Blochman Takes a Rest

L. G. Blochman, the only writer on the Universal staff holding a long term ticket, has checked off the company's payroll on a three weeks' layoff. He handed in a revised script on "Golden Fleece" for Paul Lukas.

MONO'S 'MYSTERY LINER' RATES ONLY FAIR MYSTERY

Good Thriller Basis Unevenly Produced

"MYSTERY LINER"
(Monogram)

Direction .....William Nigh
Story by.....Edgar Wallace
Adaptation by.....Wellyn Totman
Photography .....Archie Stout
Cast: Noah Beery, Astrid Allyn, Edwin Maxwell, Ralph Lewis, Gustav von Seiffertitz, Zeffie Tildway and Booth Howard.

If Monogram's "Mystery Liner" were a little less lethargic in places, it would be one of the best. The guts are there, but the spirit is weak.

Due partly to direction which is sometimes timid and sometimes ragged, and partly to the acting which is not of the best, the picture as a whole fails to give full value to the essentially dramatic and exciting basis of the Edgar Wallace yarn.

Under novel conditions, a huge liner puts out to sea. Its captain, Noah Beery, has been confined to an insane asylum because of a mysterious drug which has been given him in his food and which temporarily paralyzes the brain; the succeeding captain and his first mate are at sword's point over the ship's nurse, Astrid Allyn; but the most exciting element of the ship's voyage is the part played by S505. S505 is a tube which at nine o'clock that night is to be screwed into a huge electrical set-up on board ship which connects with the radio control station on land.

The tube is inserted, and the huge ship immediately comes under the control of one man who is turning little dials in New York. The crew sits back and does nothing, as the vessel speeds up, slackens, or changes its course at this one man's whim. This is the highlight of the picture.

The trouble starts, of course, when the inventor and the captain are killed, and the fiends also steal the tube which leaves the ship's controls frozen and the vessel at the mercy of the tides.

William Nigh, the director, squeezed all the juice out of the radio-control sequence, but fell down on the rest of the picture. Wellyn Totman made a passable adaptation of the Edgar Wallace story, and Archie Stout's photography is remarkably fine.

Noah Beery is swell as the captain, but the rest of the cast, including Astrid Allyn, Edwin Maxwell, Ralph Lewis, Gustav von Seiffertitz, Zeffie Tildway and Booth Howard, was not, at all times, convincing.

Discreet cutting of unimportant and languid scenes throughout will help this film tremendously. Its framework is strong, and even as it stands now it is a pretty fair mystery.

Col. Cuts Sound Crews

Rumbles of new trouble in the sound men's ranks are heard as a result of a Columbia order issued Friday reducing the crew per picture from four to three and saddling the duties of the fourth man between the grips and electricians.

Ronnell-Cowan Bells

The rumor had to go all the way to New York and reverse itself, but here it is as Broadway is telling it: Lester Cowan and Ann Ronnell, sister of Administrator Sol Rosenblatt, will be wed in Yuma this week, with the NRA chieftain giving the bride away.

Chaplin and Beery In Talking Picture

Charlie Chaplin and Wallace Beery are both hot on the idea of appearing in a picture together. The story idea is set around a King and his Jester.

Beery still has nine or ten months to go on his MGM contract and there is no chance of MGM loaning him at this time, so if anything comes out of this new idea it will have to be done on the completion of Beery's term at MGM.

Warners Building Yarn With Para Star in Mind

Claimed to be the first such instance on record, Warners are laying plans for a production aimed at a player from another studio.

Picture is "Friends of Mr. Sweeny" and a bid has been registered with Paramount for a farm-out deal on Charles Ruggles for the ace spot. Story is by Elmer Daves, with Sidney Sutherland and Warren Duff treating it for the screen under Sam Bischoff's wing.

Local Clubs Raided

The film center's leading clubs, the Colony, Clover and Boheme, were the victims of raids by the Sheriff early Saturday morning at the height of their activity and when packed with picture folk.

Flu Delays 'Jew Suss'

London.—Conrad Veidt lost a few days on "Jew Suss" at British Gaumont because of an attack of the flu, but is now back on the job again.

No European Trip for Junior Laemmle

New York.—There will be no European business trip or vacation for Junior Laemmle right at this time as Universal has decided to rush through the completion of their program of 36 pictures, which still has 14 pictures to go.

Accordingly Junior is expected to remain here not more than ten days and then return to Univeral City and get the remainder of the program in work. He will also lay out next year's production activities and then, maybe, will get that trip to Europe.

Talmadge-Meighan To Co-star for B&D

London.—Thomas Meighan and Norma Talmadge have been signed to co-star in a picture that is to be made here by British & Dominions with United Artists releasing it throughout the world.

The picture is "Somehow Good" and will be directed by Jack Raymond with production starting within the next two weeks.

'Design' Lifts Record

one and there was a fight between the house management and United Artists to keep the picture there for the full week.

Gaumont's "Constant Nymph" had a swell week and is being held over for a second. The other holdover is "I'm No Angel."

The new pictures of the week are "Eskimo," titled "Mala the Magnificent" on this side, which goes into the Empire; "Invisible Man" replacing "Broadway Thru a Keyhole"; "I Cover the Waterfront" replacing "Henry the Eighth" and "Little Women" goes into the Regal replacing "Voltaire."

Business generally, not so good.

SMALLER FELLOWS BURN OVER 'ROSY'S' ATTITUDE

Smaller fellows in the ranks of producers and agents are doing a burn over what they claim is their inability to get a word with the ear of Administrator Sol Rosenblatt.

Few of the indies want to be quoted. But Jack Jasper, of the Davidge Laboratory, a factor in indie production financing this year, was willing to say:

"Mr. Rosenblatt is being led around by the silk hats and has shown no interest whatsoever in the little fellow. If the little fellow were only given a few minutes he could tell Mr. Rosenblatt plenty.

"Most of the Hollywood gang," he continued, "is seeking to defeat the code with their own selfish demands. They haven't even given it a fair chance to operate and are in a terrific uproar over salary questions and everything affecting their own pocketbooks while the code, originally planned to spread work, create work, and help the rank and file is not getting anywhere."

Haven MacQuarrie, listed as a "small agent," but doing a pretty active annual business in the industry, slammed both Rosenblatt's advisors and the big agents for not even notifying the smaller individual representatives of the Friday meeting.

WampasWieldsClub On Non-Paying Boys

The Wampas is going through a clean-up and to narrow the organization down to active members is using the method of serving notice on all who are in arrears for dues.

The Board of Directors has been given power to use its judgment in the handling of the cases. As a result twenty-five were dropped last week, and fifteen other publicity men given until today to meet their obligations. A break is being given boys who have been out of work for long periods.

The members dropped lose out on insurance benefits.

Hubbard Signs New Contract at MGM

Lucien Hubbard signed a new term contract with MGM Saturday to remain on that lot for another year as an associate producer. "The Show Off" makes the eleventh picture he has produced within a year.

Hubbard will leave for Europe in June on a two months' vacation.

Code Will Investigate Vaudeville Actor Labor

New York.—Robert H. Cochrane, chairman of the third meeting of the Code Authority held at the Hotel Astor, has appointed a committee to investigate the provisions of the code of fair competition of the motion picture industry relating to vaudeville actor labor.

Members of the committee are Edward A. Schiller, Sam Dembow Jr., Major Thompson, Joseph Bernhard, George Skouras, Jack Partington, Henry Chesterfield, Ralph Whithead, Charles B. Maddock and Marty Forkins.

Deported Train Idea Again Up at Studio

Warners have purchased an original story by Doctor McLaughlin and Laird Doyle titled "Deportation Train" and has handed the yarn to Robert Presnell for his supervision.

Universal's sales announcement over a year ago carried a title covering this idea but nothing ever happened beyond that.

Rosenblatt Rests Up

After a flying one-day trip to Caliente Saturday Sol Rosenblatt did a hide-out yesterday to get at least one day's rest from the conferences. While the Beverly-Wilshire denied any knowledge of his whereabouts it is believed he spent the day as the beach guest of Louis B. Mayer.

'Bottoms Up' Closes

With the finish of the dance numbers at Fox Hills studio Saturday night Buddy DeSylva completed "Bottoms Up" after five and a half weeks in production.

Producer Cameron Here

John Cameron, play producer, is in Hollywood for a short stay. He is angling for two picture names before returning east.

'BY YOUR LEAVE' B'WAY HIT; 'MACKEREL SKIES' CONFUSING

Theme a Bit Spicy For Use on Screen

"BY YOUR LEAVE"

By Gladys Hurlbut and Emma Wells. Presented by Richard Aldrich and Alfred De Liagre, Jr. At the Morosco Theatre. Staged by Mr. De Liagre; settings by Joe Mielziner. Cast: Dorothy Gish, Howard Lindsay, Kenneth MacKenna, Ernest Glendinning, Elizabeth Love, Josephine Hull, Esther Dale, Elizabeth Bruce, Cynthia Rogers, Henry Fox and Carl Endicott. Special auto horn effect at end of third act by Louis Bromfield.

New York.—Howard Lindsay last night proved that not only is he a first-rate playwright (via the hit "She Loves Me Not") but is also a first-rate comedian extremely fortunate in having chosen for his histrionic display this excellent production which now joins the goodly company of Broadway hits. "By Your Leave" proves to be a swell show for anybody's money and while dealing with a situation not exactly new—that of the suburbanite who feels himself gradually being swallowed up by encroaching respectable married life and approaching middle-age, tearing himself out of the established rut in an effort to find his lost youth and to reassure himself that any one else, other than his wife, could possibly find him desirable; there is introduced a novelty that offers unlimited possibilities on the screen.

That idea involves an organized business establishment whose mission is that of supplying feminine companions of any size, color and shape to suit, for lonely and tired business men. The girls are available on a time basis by the hour or day or night—the gentleman signs a report card checking the girl in and out—the girls are practiced in the arts of love and it is their business to make themselves pleasantly and efficiently amenable in whatever capacity they are desired. You can imagine the limitless opportunities for giving audiences forbidden tasty fruit—dished up in a daring delightful way with a minimum of offensiveness. And so it is in this play, the bedroom scene in the hotel room registering heavily as the best of the evening and especially well-played by Howard Lindsay and his ready-to-order lady of the evening. In this episode is delivered the best line of the play (and there are hundreds of them) when Ernest Glendinning, playing Freddie, one-time buddy of our suburban hero and now a sophisticated bachelor in the big city who has dallied long and exceedingly well in the sport of love, arranges the matter of getting a companion of the evening for Henry. In calling the agency, Freddie remarks, "the girl can be over in a few minutes, the office is only a short distance from the hotel—over in Rockefeller Center—but you understand—they are not part of The Foundation!"

Wrong Size

The overcoat taken from the Writers' Club checkroom at the Wampas meeting three weeks ago, belonging to George Thomas, was delivered to MGM studios in a bundle Friday. Evidently it didn't fit.

Fight Looms On Wild Animal Films

New York.—What is expected to grow into a national campaign that will make plenty of trouble for producers of wild animal features was launched in New York last Friday by the Women's League for Animals.

President Sydney H. Coleman of the American Humane Association protested at a meeting of the Women's League against the type of picture that must use animals in studio shot fights to get thrills.

Spencer Turns Actor

Robert Spencer, secretary to Maurice Chevalier, has turned actor and is appearing in a series of playlets at the Beverly Hills Community Playhouse.

MGM Tests Geva

Tamara Geva was tested Saturday by MGM for a term contract.

In brief, the plot outline is this. Henry Smith calls a halt to a humdrum peaceful and passive existence and demands that both he and the wife (Dorothy Gish) separate and take a week's vacation away from each other so as to look at things from a distance in retrospect. The wife objects at first but is won over by the idea. Henry spends his week in N. Y. He cuts loose a bit but has lost the knack of the easy ways of his single life. The experience with his charming companion of the evening (very effectively played by Elizabeth Love and a sure bet for pictures) serves only to shock and disillusion him and back home he goes with his tail between his legs.

On the other hand, his wife makes the most of her vacation, indulging in an orgy of beauty treatments, new clothes and best of all a love affair with David Mackenzie, a young Scotch explorer (played by Kenneth MacKenna in a pleasing and unexaggerated fashion). According to agreement, the wife returns home on scheduled time and finds a husband who is tickled silly to have her back and who cannot exhibit enough ways to show how much he really appreciates her. He blurts out his experiences to ease his conscience and then demands an explanation of her—which she gives him most charmingly but with utmost discreetness and finesse. None the wiser, Henry is completely satisfied—both have had their fling and life resumes its normal swing.

Dorothy Gish, Lindsay, Glendinning, MacKenna and Elizabeth Love stand out as the bright stars.

But Has Background Tempting For Pics

"MACKEREL SKIES"

George Bushar in association with John Tuerk presents "Mackerel Skies," by John Haggart, staged by John Roche, settings by Aline Bernstein, at the Playhouse. With Violet Kemble Cooper, Carol Stone, Cora Witherspoon, Tom Powers, Charles Trowbridge, Max Figman and John Griggs.

New York.—Mackerel skies are said to presage a storm. So that the moment Elsa Gerrard gazes out of an upstairs sitting room window of her Gerrard mansion on upper Fifth Avenue and makes sombre reference to them, one knows something is about to happen. What happens is the sudden appearance of an old love of Elsa's who is the father of her now seventeen year old daughter Elizabeth.

The main trouble with Elsa, outside of this one little peccadillo, is that once upon a time she had a voice, a voice which had brought her nothing but failure and frustration, although it did, in the course of years, accomplish David Gerrard, a charming second husband. Gerrard had spent a fortune trying to put Elsa over in opera. But Elsa just didn't have it, which made no difference to Gerrard, who loved her anyway, as well as Elizabeth, whom he believes to be the offspring of Elsa's earlier marriage to an Austrian nobleman.

As the curtain goes up we soon learn that Elsa's daughter too has a voice, inherited, we are presently assured, from her real father, who once as a humble peasant in the wheat fields of Austria had a yen to sing tenor. Now the peasant turns up as Mr. Kubeck of Chicago, a titan of finance, who, discreetly withholding his identity, makes it possible for Elizabeth, when David Gerrard is financially unable, to go abroad and cultivate her gift, and three years later make a successful debut at the Metropolitan. All this in the face of strong opposition on Elsa's part, who will not have her daughter fail as she failed, and who is torn betwixt a corroding bitterness and an unreasoning jealousy. It is all very temperamental, febrile, and imminent. Unquestionably the basis was there, but somehow the play isn't able to evoke the emotional response aimed at. The one thing that can be definitely recorded is that the storm, when it has passed, has done no damage. For Elsa remains undiminished in her devotion to her husband; her jealousy of Elizabeth is conquered; and Kubeck has his big moment of renunciation—and the secret of Elizabeth's nativity is safe forevermore.

To enhance the conflict the author provides Elizabeth with a beau in the person of a Harvard senior, who moons about and at one point threatens to shoot himself unless he can marry her. John Griggs, as the senior, is ingratiating enough to make one glad that in the end he gets his heart's desire. Cora Witherspoon, as Elsa's girlhood friend, projects what soupcon of humor the play has, with her nostalgia for gold braid, gay hussars, and the Strauss waltzes of pre-war Vienna. Max Figman, as an elderly violinist, does well by his part. Charles Trowbridge and Tom Powers, in the roles of Elsa's husband and lover respectively, and Violet Kemble Cooper, as Elsa, give three finely blended performances. As for Carol Stone who essays Elizabeth there is only one word for her—swell! She deservedly made a hit with the audience, and it looks as if the youngest of the "Stepping Stones" is on her way.

The play, despite its shortcomings, has glamorous background and atmosphere which could be utilized to much greater effect in a picture version.

Open Arms for Stars On Zanuck Journey

Washington.—Hollywood stars with the Darryl Zanuck "Moulin Rouge" caravan will get a reception in Washing rivaling any ever given diplomats or politicians.

On Friday they will be feted at a luncheon given by Senator McAdoo in a private dining room of the Capitol. Many members of the House and Senate will be present. It will be broadcast by two radio stations.

Following the luncheon the stars will visit the House of Representatives and then entrain for New York to be on hand for the opening of the Constance Bennett picture February 6.

MGM Shoots the Works On 'Christina' Ballyhoo

Claimed to be the top price ever expended on a trailer, MGM checks off a budget of $3,000 against the ballyhoo short for "Queen Christina," the Garbo-Gilbert picture. It is expected that the company will put on an exploitation campaign for the picture which will break all precedents.

Herman Starts Indie

Postponed from last Monday, Al Herman today starts work on "Twisted Rails," an independent melodrama which Triumph Pictures is making at the Alexander Brothers studio. Cast has Jack Donovan, Alice Dahl, Philo McCullough, Elyn Glyn, Donald Keith, Bob McKenzie, Don Mack, Pat Harmon, Bill Patton and Tom London.

Another Mono. for Nigh

Monogram signed William Nigh Saturday to meg "City Limits," making the third picture he has directed for the plant in the past two months. "City Limits," a novel by Jack Woodford, adapted by George Waggner, goes into production the middle of the week on the completion of "The Curse of Kali."

Kober Stays at Home

Arthur Kober has changed his plans about going to Spain and will go to Palm Springs instead. The studio would not give him a leave of absence at this time, wanting him to write the screen play of the Edward Hope novel "Calm Yourself."

Wadsworth in 'Show-Off'

Henry Wadsworth, MGM's latest addition to the contract list, has been set for a featured spot in "The Show Off," which will star Spencer Tracy. Charles Reisner will direct.

SHUBERT'S 'NO MORE LADIES' CLICKS WITH N. Y. CRITIC

Would Make Smart Farce for the Screen

"NO MORE LADIES"

A comedy by A. E. Thomas, presented by Lee Shubert at the Booth Theatre; staged by Harry Wagstaff Gribble; settings by Watson Barrett. Cast: John Bramall, Bradley Cass, Lucille Watson, Miriam Battista, Mary Sargent, Edward Fielding, Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Weston, Boyd Davis, Rex O'Malley, Nancy Ryan, Louis Hector, Marcella Swanson.

New York.—Lee Shubert has come no closer this season to having as big a comedy hit as "Her Master's Voice" as he did in "No More Ladies," which for two and a half acts maintained a light-hearted, scintillating, sophisticated pace in witty repartee and goings on among the upper crust of Park Avenue—and then slumped badly by allowing its two principal characters to get serious and ordinary in their solution of marital troubles.

The characters in this play never take anything too seriously and turn everything aside with funny backtalk—the quips flying fast and furious. Particularly when Lucille Watson, as the brilliant but commonsensical and blessedly enlightened grandmother is on the scene and guiding her little chicks about—in an inoffensive manner, of course. Although in her last decline and with mixed concern over the antics of the present generation, which she understands fully and more than they suspect, Lucy is not one of those doddering mix-up-in-everything old beldames. Not this lady! She is a rip-snorting, scotch-highball imbiber, cigarette dangler and wise-cracking delight, keeping the audience in constant howls with her pertinent remarks, which she gives better than she takes.

Her grand-daughter Marcia, a bored and sophisticated young lady who can take care of herself in any melee with male or female, refuses to seriously consider marriage and certainly not with her sober methodical young bond salesman lover. On the other hand, there is Sherry Warren, played by Melvyn Douglas, and smoothly, too, who is a charming libertine, a lover of women but not marriage. Unconvinced, but willing to give it a trial, Marcia gets Sherry to propose marriage and with utmost misgivings they plunge into the matrimonial sea (as it is swum in Southampton).

After several months of this delightful existence, Sherry inevitably becomes enamored of a night club blonde and Marcia, finding that she is after all but a woman with a broken heart, determines to teach her spouse a lesson. She invites his mistress, an ex-mistress, her husband and the ex-husband to a week-end party, with the idea of carrying on an affair with Salston (played by Rex O'Malley), the ex-husband of Sherry's ex-mistress. They both spend the night away from the villa, to Sherry's rising rage and jealousy, and when questioned Marcia refuses to explain. Sherry sees the parting of the ways and is prepared to pass out of her life, but in the end they finally talk the thing over and decide that love is everything and they should carry on.

O'Malley and Miss Watson are the bright spots in this amusing bit. Louis Hector as the Earl of Moulton, Boyd Davis as Stafford, his ex-butler, contribute humor in their parts, but Miss Watson steals the show. Ruth Weston, a tall, statuesque heroine, handles herself and her lines forcefully, but was more boring than bored to the audience. Douglas played acceptably in every way. When the films are ready again for smart Park Avenue drawingroom comedies they won't have to look any further than this.

Tennis Tonight

The studio basketball craze gets a temporary sidetracking tonight with Tom Gallery reporting that film reservations for the Vines-Tilden tennis matches at the Olympic give every indication of a turnout rivaling the good old Hollywood legion days.

Showmanship Does It For N. Y. Rialto

New York.—Showmanship is not dead. The Rialto Theatre surprised Broadway last Friday with capacity business on a program that was an example of showmanship rather than relying on sure-fire attractions to automatically bring in the business.

The program consisted of "The Ghoul," a British picture; the Ross-Petrolle fight pictures, Screen Souvenirs, and a Grantland Rice Sportlight. The men showed up in numbers that amazed White Way observers.

MacGregor Pushes Plan To Stage Film Buys Here

Planning to produce locally play properties owned by the studios, and using the stock companies in the employ of the studios, Edgar MacGregor is negotiating with Paramount and MGM to put his project through.

Stage director, associated with "Sailor Beware," figures that the companies have nothing to lose and plenty to gain since their stock players will get the benefit of practical stage experience and the scenario writers preparing the plays for picture production will get important data from audience reactions. Both studios own outstanding Broadway hits which stand a good chance of working out profitably on local runs.

Gould on MGM Dances

MGM Saturday signed David Gould to handle the dances on "The Hollywood Party," which goes back into production today. Harry Rapf produces.

Mayer in Catlett Pic

Kay Mayer of the vaudeville team of Evan and Mayer gets his first picture break in a Walter Catlett comedy at Radio this week. Bernard and Meiklejohn agented.

Relief Fund Hears Stamp Tax Idea

Meeting tomorrow, the executive committee of the Motion Picture Relief Fund makes its report on last year's activities.

Advance dope has it that two important announcements will be forthcoming. One is that a profit of between $50,000 and $75,000 is expected as the Fund's portion from the two series of "Hollywood on Parade" shorts which Louis Lewyn produces for Paramount release.

Other is the committee's action on a suggestion from Warren William that a three-cent stamp tax be placed on all autographs given by stars to autograph hounds. Proposal would net the Fund at least $10,000 per year. Stamps are to be sold by the Fund and a star would cancel the stamp when signing the autograph book.

New Shorts Company To Film MacHamer Cartoons

New York.—A new entrant in the short subject field is Carter-MacHamer Productions, planning six one-reel subjects based on Jefferson MacHamer's page in the New York Sunday Mirror, "Gags and Gals." No release announced yet.

D. L. Carter, formerly with Paramount and Universal in the east, is business and production manager. Don Malkames will co-direct with MacHamer.

McCall Joins Agency

George McCall becomes affiliated with the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency today, leaving newspaper work. McCall has been in the local trade-paper field for the past five years prior to which time he was a producer.

It's 'Honor,' Not 'Glory'

Guy Kibbee has been spotted in a dramatic role in Warners' "Without Honor" instead of "Without Glory," as erroneousy reported. This is the first dramatic role for Kibbee, who heretofore has played comedy parts.

Pendleton in 'Catspaw'

Harold Lloyd closed a deal with MGM Saturday to borrow Nat Pendleton for a featured spot in "The Catspaw," which Sam Taylor directs when it goes into production today. Lloyd and Una Merkel have the leads.

Wallace Did 'Girl' Score

Ollie Wallace wrote the music for "The Girl in the Case," a Screen Arts Production, previewed in the Saturday issue of the Reporter. Credit for this work was not furnished the press.

Col. Gang in Chi Meet

Chicago.—The second of the Columbia regional sales meetings to drive on the company's current big specials was held here on Saturday. Home office, midwest and coast sales executives were in attendance.

Stoloff Declines N. Y. Pic

New York.—Ben Stoloff, who recently finished directing "Palooka," begged out of a deal offered him by Columbia to pilot a picture here and is off on the return trip to the coast. Edward Small is reported offering him the direction of "Count of Monte Cristo."

Patricia Ellis to 'U'

Universal Saturday borrowed Patricia Ellis from Warners for the feminine lead opposite Lew Ayres in "If I Were Rich," which goes into production today. The William Anthony McGuire play will be directed by Edward Ludwig.

market, will turn out to be a real banner year.

Of course the foreign market has saved the American industry from bankruptcy during the past twelve months. This condition analyzed shows the American picture the greatest draw in all foreign houses, and with the flop of the dollar, the returns from Europe and all other foreign spots, in actual dollars, show a greater count than the entire American market.

That foreign business is astounding. MGM, for example, is collecting almost $750,000 a week from that source. Paramount will average close to $400,000; Fox has had weeks of $400,000 and is never lower than $275,000. Warners have been doing a weekly business of well over $400,000 for the past eight months. Universal and Radio have averaged from $175,000 to $200,000 in their returns outside of America. So the foreign market continues to save the American picture industry.

MGM will show a profit statement of well over $4,000,000 for the year. Paramount and Warners will announce better than $2,000,000. Fox and Radio will run between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Columbia will hit $1,000,000. The only company that will show a loss will be Universal, this due to an exceptionally bad first and second quarter, and the desire of Carl Laemmle to amortize the negatives faster than any other company in the business.

But Universal with a loss, will still show the most healthy jump in collections of any other company in the business. It is known that the past twelve weeks has brought more weekly money into the Universal exchequer than any twelve-week period in the history of that company.

The most astounding success that will be shown by any company for a twelve months business will be that of Twentieth Century. On returns in so far and with only four more pictures to complete for their year's output, it is estimated that that organization will net well over $2,000,000 for their efforts.

As a consequence, if our American industry can hold that tremendous foreign business, get any kind of a lift at all in the American market through better pictures and greater economy in making them, the 1934 readings will put the picture business back on its feet.

NAT'L. SCREEN COMPETES WITH WARNERS' TRAILERS

Having long refused to do business with National Screen for the making of their trailers, Warners were surprised Saturday to learn that the big trailer company has gone into competition with them on their own product and is making action trailers, known as the de luxe type. National heretofore confined its interest in the Warner product to the still type of trailer with synchronized sound.

Three classes of trailers are put out by all studios, de luxe, still picture and title, latter with a sales talk backing it. Warners maintains its own trailer department under George Bilson at the studio, selling its own trailers and making a healthy profit. National's tie-up is with a majority of the remaining studios, contracts giving the studios about ten per cent of the take.

National previously restricted itself to the still and title divisions on Warner pictures, but is now branching out with three de luxe trailers made on "Hi Nellie," "Fashions of 1934" and "I've Got Your Number."

'U' Gets $100,000 Income Tax Melon

New York.—Universal tops the big winners in the heavy gravy on income tax refunds with approximately a hundred thousand paid back by the Government in refunds on taxes for the year ending June, 1933. Of Hollywood folk John Barrymore is the beginner with a $5,000 rebate.

Other picture companies and individuals are represented in the list just made public for varying amounts. The roster follows:

Balaban & Katz Corporation, New York, $3,761.22; Consolidated Film Laboratories, $9,897.31; Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., $2,440.25; Loew's Ohio Theatres, $7,969.94; David L. Loew, $3,135.63; Loew's Inc., $3,470.31; Richard A. Rowland, $8,162.76; United Artists Corporation, $1,940.08; Universal Film Manufacturing Co., $91,877.15; Universal Pictures Corporation, $5,416.02; United Artists Theatre Circuit, $9,380.30; Walter F. Wanger, $1,283.23; Warner Bros. First National Films, $2,006.20; Wilmer & Vincent Theatres, $1,033.65; First National Pictures (Washington, D. C.), $1,072.75; John Barrymore, $5,028.93; Dorothy Mackaill, $1,526.22; Ernst Lubitsch, $844.95; Walt Disney, $715.82; Rupert Hughes, $551.13.

'Rip Van Winkle' On Radio Schedule

With every studio in the business now going in for classics and fantasies, Radio is trying to clear the screen rights to the Washington Irving fantasy "Rip Van Winkle." The studio is completing negotiations for the screen rights to this yarn and Kenneth Macgowan will produce it for RKO.

A few weeks ago Edward Small started preparations on the same yarn but has now apparently dropped the idea.

Legitimate Houses Fight Free Broadcast Shows

New York.—Because the radio broadcasters are entering the field of theatrical entertainment through the presentation of free admissions which are hurting the theatres and motion pictures here, a protest has been made at a meeting of the Legitimate Theatre Code Authority.

A committee composed of Frank Gillmore, Marcus Heilman and William C. Elliott was appointed to confer with the Code Authority and seek aid in having the practice prohibited.

'Joyzelle' Coming Back With New Monicker

Monogram has signed Laya Joy, formerly known as Joyzelle, to a featured spot in "The Curse of the Kali," which William Nigh is directing. Ed Lowry and Verne Hillie head a cast which includes John Sheehan, Brandon Hurst and Phillip McCullough. Albert De Monde wrote the screen play.

Moss on Para's Radio Tale

Paramount has signed Paul Finder Moss to work with Julius Epstein on the screen play of "The Big Broadcast of 1934." Deal was handled by M. C. Levee. Moss recently finished the original "Hot Air" for Warners in collaboration with Jerry Wald.

Pickford Smashes All Boston Records

Boston.—The week's engagement of Mary Pickford, on the stage of the Metropolitan Theatre here, was the greatest this theatre has ever had, taking present conditions into consideration.

The Metropolitan played to over 125,000 people on the week and her presence, and the business she drew, acted as a boon to business all over town as it got the "stay-at-homes" movie conscious.

Mary goes to the Paramount Theatre in Brooklyn for the week of February 2, taking the current week to rest up from the ordeal of five shows a day. It looks as if she will take a week's rest between her future engagements on this personal appearance tour that will, very likely, embrace every important key center in the country before she goes to Hollywood to do a picture.

MGM Has Problem In Indo-China Lead

MGM cannot make up its mind as to the cast decisions for "Indo-China," originally scheduling it under Bernie Hyman's wing for Constance Bennett, but now giving it serious consideration as a possible Greta Garbo vehicle.

In the event Bennett goes into it Clark Gable will be teamed with the star. Leon Gordon is turning out the screen play.

Golden Reports 41,822 Sound Theatres in World

Out of a total of 60,347 picture theatres in the world 41,822 are equipped for sound reproduction, reports N. D. Golden of the Department of Commerce. In the United States approximately 15,000 out of 19,000 are sound equipped.

Berlin Takes Magna Songs

New York.—Magna Pictures, producing shorts for Radio release, has made a tie-up with the Irving Berlin Publishing Company to handle all songs used in their pictures. Songs from the Ethel Waters and Cliff Edwards pictures will be the first used.

Estabrook Moves in Today

Howard Estabrook hangs his hat on an MGM rack today to start work on the film version of "David Copperfield," planned for George Cukor production under David Selznick's supervision.

Sherwood Due Soon

New York.—Robert Sherwood is on his way to you in Hollywood to join the MGM writing staff.

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE WAMPAS announces to its guests that it will be possible to hear Mr. Sol Rosenblatt's speech and still attend the celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday tomorrow evening, since Mr. Rosenblatt will speak at 6.45 p.m. sharp and he too will leave at 7.30 o'clock for the President's birthday celebration.

MILLION PLOT THEFT SUIT

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IS it any wonder that pictures are as bad as they are, when those responsible for writing the screen plays are compelled to write for Mr. Hays' fourteen-year-old moron?

And why do the producers fall in line with the Hays idea and demand that writers do their writing within the limitations of that fourteen-year-old myth? Such actions are ruining the business and there is no necessity for them. The producers are being taken for a sleigh ride, and the sooner they realize this the quicker the theatres will start to do better business.

The motion picture audience is not a fourteen-year-old audience; our entertainment has passed that age many years ago. And there are no forces demanding that we confine our entertainment to such an age. The whole thing is a brain child of Mr. Hays in an effort to give him something to do and something to talk about, and if our producers continue permitting him to do such things and talk about such things there will be no picture business because picture entertainment that will PAY cannot be made for the moron Mr. Hays has created.

No one will ever sell us other than the fact that the motion picture industry is its own censor, that if an audience objects to pictures or situations they will not attend theatres when those pictures are being exhibited.

Most of the censorable material is not in the pictures or the stories from which the pictures were written, but in the manner in which the exhibitor attempts to sell them. In that respect this industry is wrong, and if Mr. Hays wants something to do and have something to talk about let him level his guns in the direction of the exhibitor who generally gets all the dirt there is to a picture inserted in his newpaper ads. There's the trouble and there's the reason for any squawks that MAY exist.

Motion pictures have to be entertaining to sell and it is IMPOSSIBLE to get that entertainment on the screen if our writers are compelled to submit to the demands of Mr. Hays, whose funny restrictions would not permit the making of any one of the classics or a page from the Holy Bible.

Bad News

New York.—Much alarm here today over the report that while the Government would defend its representative, Sol Rosenblatt, in present suits against the NRA, the individual members of the Code Authority representing all companies would be expected to spend their own legal fees when named in suits. The Department of Justice acts for Rosenblatt as a Government official, but it can't act for laymen.

Grand Duchess To Aid Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg has polished off a deal with the Grand Duchess Marie which will bring the blue-blood writer to Hollywood on her first venture into pictures.

The Grand Duchess will act as technical adviser on the Schulberg-Paramount picture, "Thirty Day Princess," and leaves New York with Sylvia Sidney February 6. Vivian Gaye of the Joy and Polimer office has been engaged as her manager.

'We're Not Dressing' Needs More Dressing

After three weeks of production on "We're Not Dressing," the Bing Crosby picture which is being directed by Norman Taurog, Paramount has run into story trouble.

Harry Harvey and Harry Ruskin were put on the set to build up the story, as the picture is shooting.

Lyn Farnol to Europe

New York.—Don't look for Lyn Farnol back in your midst very soon. He sails for Europe on business for Sam Goldwyn, principally Anna Sten, on February 28. The boat is the Manhattan, if you want to send flowers.

Richard Washburn Child Asks Sum From Para. and Producers of Play 'One Sunday Afternoon'

New York.—Here's a plagiarism suit that looms up a bit different from the usual claim of an amateur. Richard Washburn Child, well known Saturday Evening Post contributor, and former Ambassador to Italy under President Coolidge, yesterday filed a one million dollar plagiarism suit against the producers of "One Sunday Afternoon" in both the stage play and pictures.

Rowland-Brice Split With Former on Own

New York.—After successfully producing for three majors the firm of Rowland and Brice is no more, according to announcement from Bill Rowland here today.

Rowland declares the firm is dissolved and that in future he will carry on alone as a producer. He states he has definitely signed contracts to produce two for Columbia in Hollywood. The first will be a musical. He leaves for the coast Friday.

Mack Sennett Returns

Mack Sennett arrived in town yesterday from Mesa, Arizona, where he has been recuperating from injuries received in the automobile accident in which Charlie Mack was killed. Sennett was accompanied by H. Lee Hugunin, his former production chief, on the trip from Mesa.

Felix Feist Due Feb. 13

Felix Feist, sales chief for MGM, is slated to arrive here for conferences with the MGM executive staff February 13.

Merle Oberon Is Signed By Small

London.—Merle Oberon, the Ann Boleyn of "Henry the Eighth," has been signed on a four-year contract by Edward Small to make two pictures a year during that term.

This contract fits into the ticket the lady has with Alexander Korda and will permit her use by Korda for an additional two pictures a year to be made in England.

Miss Oberon's first picture for Small will be opposite John Barrymore in "The Count of Monte Cristo" and she leaves here almost immediately to be in Hollywood February 20, returning to London for the Charles Laughton-Korda picture, written by Frederick Lonsdale, which will start June 1.

U.A. Shooting 75G on 'Looking For Trouble'

New York.—One of the largest advertising appropriations ever granted a picture by United Artists has just been okayed by Al Lichtman for the Twentieth Century production of "Looking for Trouble." The company will spend $75,000 on the campaign.

Hold-Over for 'Hollywood'

"Going Hollywood" holds over for another week at Loew's State because of record business. Picture, which has Marion Davies and Bing Crosby in the top spots, was directed by Raoul Walsh and produced by Walter Wanger for MGM.

B-I Exec Here

Clyde Cook, production manager with British International, arrived in Hollywood yesterday and is understood set to concentrate his future activity on production circles here.

Spivak to New York

Murray Spivak, Radio's sound chief, left yesterday on a three weeks' trip to New York.

TOUGH SLEDDING FOR CODE IN RANKS OF EXHIBITORS

New York.—As far as exhibition is concerned, the NRA Code for the Motion Picture Industry is in for hard sledding before it starts anything like real functioning. "Assents," the signed agreements by which exhibitors agree unqualifiedly to abide by the

If you are setting yourself to be at the Wampas meeting tonight to hear Sol Rosenblatt—of course, you are—you might want to hear why the boys paid cash for an ad yesterday morning. It seems that so many big producers anxious to bask in the Rosenblatt smile canceled their reservations for President Roosevelt's birthday party that it was in danger until the boys explained that a regular fellow could cover both affairs.

New York REVIEWS

"FASHIONS OF 1934"

Warner prod.; director, Wilhelm Dieterle; writers, Warren Duff, F. Hugh Herbert, Carl Erickson.

Hollywood Theatre

Times: It is a brisk show that has come to the screen of the Hollywood Theatre. The story is lively, the gowns are interesting and the Busby Berkeley spectacles with Hollywood dancing girls are impressive. Wilhelm Dieterle, that expert director who has been responsible for several imaginative pictures, does well by this particular production.

Sun: A typical William Powell picture, filled with wisecracks, the Powell suavity and some highly efficient crime waves. It is not snappy enough, however, to be another "High Pressure" or "Gold Diggers," but it has got some Berkeley dances, and it has got Mr. Powell, Miss Davis and the very funny Frank McHugh.

Herald-Tribune: It boasts a suave performance by William Powell, faultless sets, an engaging musical score and pranks. It has a scarcity of thought behind it, but so facile is its presentation, so elaborate its costuming and design and so inventive its performance that its barrenness of substance flits by almost unnoticed. The photography is beautifully done and the settings are quite stunning. While the plot is scattered and often incoherent, Mr. Dieterle has directed it deftly enough to give a semblance of sensibility.

Mirror: A fashion show, a novelty in films, is the important feature of "Fashions of 1934." A story to introduce it was concocted conscientiously. It very probably will provoke a cycle of cloak and suit epics. It is diverting, clever and immoderately elaborate.

World-Telegram: It may go hungry, now and then, for some funny lines, and business and some new music, but it hides these weaknesses in the vastness of its dance numbers and the striking effect of its gowns and is a comfort and a joy to moviegoers interested in spectacles, both of the musical and dress shop variety. The film undoubtedly will be tremendously successful, since the idea of blending a fashion show and a musical film has the makings of a movie natural.

News: "Fashions of 1934" has but one formal musical number, but it makes up for this lack in speed and presents a fashion parade that will delight the hearts of women and will not be without fascination for men. Some of the clothes are very beautiful, all the models are lovely and the manner of presenting the fashions is novel and interesting. From start to finish the picture has snap. William Powell is mostly responsible for the quick pace of the picture. The backgrounds are elaborate, the dialogue is amusing and the whole production adds up to an entertaining picture.

code machinery, have not been coming in as expected by Sol Rosenblatt.

As a result, the original deadline by which exhibitors were told they MUST file assents or forego NRA privileges has been twice advanced. Under the latest rule the theatre men are given until February 28.

Further trouble develops in a second suit to be filed today against the Code Authority and its individual members backed by Allied States Exhibitors. Fred Herrington, Pittsburgh exhibitor leader, and Al. Steffes of Minneapolis go before Federal Judge Bondy today asking an injunction against the Code Authority denying exhibitors the right to participate in code benefits without having signed a full assent to the code, and claiming the privilege of qualifying their assents as best they see fit.

'ROSY' MAKES A DISCOVERY ABOUT HOLLY SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Says It's Business Wherever He Visits

Sol A. Rosenblatt, Deputy Administrator of the Motion Picture Code, has discovered one of Hollywood's quaintest customs. It is the turning of social affairs into evenings devoted to the interest of business. Judging from his comments yesterday, this discovery leaves him in a sort of daze.

It seems that Mr. Rosenblatt expected Hollywood would be somewhat like Washington—leave business behind when the teacups were filled. But he says he hasn't seen any "social affairs." They have all been devoted to busines. Everyone present figuratively taking him by the lapels and trying to get something personal across.

"Even at Louis B. Mayer's home," said Mr. Rosenblatt, "Everyone present forgot it was a social affair and went in for business. We might just as well have been right here in the hotel. And the other night at Ann Harding's lovely home there were not even the ordinary social civilities. Everyone was out to further his own cause. The same at the Davies' home. This social life of Hollywood seems to have resolved itself into just a plain business affair."

Mr. Rosenblatt had a busy schedule yesterday. He surprised some Hollywoodites by going into conference with Donald Gledhill, Executive Secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He announced that the meeting was for discussion of proposed recommendations and for securing information. He plans to hold another meeting with Gledhill and an Academy Committee. Members of the Academy last night were jubilant over what they interpret as recognition of the Academy which they point out represents the directors 100 per cent, and the technicians almost as well, together with a conservative minority of other branches. Last night he met with a group of directors to get a line on their viewpoint.

Yesterday he named Al Berries chairman of the Studio Labor Committee. This committee, he announced, would have charge of handling all complaints of all the labor groups in the studios, with full authority to settle differences. Only power they won't have is that of decisions in connection with collective bargaining. Other members of the committee are Pat Casey, Ed. Smith and Richard L'Estrange. Office is in the Taft building.

Rosenblatt announced that he has nothing to discuss with the sound and camera men, explaining that he "has nothing to do with jurisdictional fights," and pointing out the Regional Labor Board to handle that.

Yesterday he also met with a committee of nine theatre men, headed by Ben Berinstein, to discuss generalities regarding the Code and the setting up of boards to handle their grievances. He said this will be done by the middle of February.

He devoted considerable time yesterday to investigating complaints regarding "throwaways" being put out by legitimate houses in Los Angeles. This practice is violation of the Code, and he declared a chance will be given to stop it. If they don't they will be stopped.

He also met a committee from the Drapers and Upholsterers Guild yesterday who say they are classified wrongly. He referred them to the Labor Committee.

Mr. Rosenblatt also declared that the committee appointed to handle the extra's employment problems will have full authority to settle all grievances, but announced that the reclassification and reregistration will have to be settled in Washington which will be guided by recommendations.

Today he will meet with representatives of the Motion Picture Federated Crafts and with Dave Allen of Central Casting. He also will confer with Joseph Breen and Col. Jason Joy on the matter of the supervision of scripts which are read before permission is given for shooting.

Tonight he will speak at the Wampas meeting and then attend the Roosevelt Birthday Ball. Tomorrow he will attend the Breakfast Club, meet the agents and with an Academy committee and will wind up his official business tomorrow night, leaving either tomorrow night or Thursday.

Tracy Happy Here

The New York company which thinks it has Lee Tracy signed for a feature is a bit out of luck, as Lee is set to remain in California and not worrying about the working out of his future. If any offer has been made from New York Lee has turned it down.

Small Asks 'Cristo' Title Showdown

Edward Small announced yesterday that he has stopped all preparation on the production of his next picture, "Count of Monte Cristo," until the row between Reliance Pictures and Universal, as to whether the latter will be allowed to use the title "Countess of Monte Cristo," has been settled.

The facts of the case are now up before the Hays arbitration board and Small is waiting for a decision from them. In the meantime Small plans to star John Barrymore in the production.

British Like Kelly

London.—The British picture fans and the lay press have gone for Paul Kelly in a big way. This as a result of the opening of "Broadway Through a Keyhole." They did not go for the picture to any great extent, but did voice fine approval of Kelly.

A. Jympson Harman, in the Evening News, devotes almost a page to Kelly and gives Darryl Zanuck a pat on the back for having the "guts" to defy Hays and others and give Paul a job.

MGM Starts Flurry In N.Y. Story Mart

New York.—MGM created the flurry of the week in story purchases and seems stepping high in preparation for next year's program. List these buys:

An option on the famous Saturday Evening Post series by Guy Gilpatrick, about the S. S. Glencannon and its Scotch captain, with Wally Beery figured for the probable lead.

"Congo Landing," the latest Wilson Collison novel, published by McBride, bought as a starring vehicle for Harlow.

"Gems of 1934," an original by Herman Timberg, purchased for a short.

Clark Gable East For Vacation Before Next Pic

Clark Gable leaves for New York the middle of the week for a short vacation. Studio has no picture ready for the player at this time, but will probably get "Soviet" under way when he returns. Gable was to have had the lead in "Streets of New York," but the studio decided to wait until Spencer Tracy could be borrowed from Fox for the spot.

Foy in Line at Col.

New York.—Look for "Murder in a Theatre" with a Columbia trademark, produced by Bryan Foy. Lou Goldberg and Ed Olmstead of the Columbia home office have sold a story with that title to Foy Productions, Inc., and the understanding here is that a deal is under way for release through Columbia.

Hollytown To Reopen

Lela Rogers will reopen the Hollytown Theatre on February 2 with "And Let Her Be Clever," the cast including Alden Nash and Florine McKinney, by courtesy of MGM, and June Gail, Virginia Tree Boardman, Ethel Wales, Jane Meredith and Lyons Whickland.

Claire Trevor in Lights

Sol Wurtzel is scheming to boost Claire Trevor to star billing with her next assignment. Fox producer yesterday closed a deal to purchase "Dice Woman," an original by Wilson Collison, as part of his plans. The Small-Landau office handled the sale.

Extra Comm. Has Quarters

The Motion Picture Code Committee for Extras, which has been delegated to have complete charge of all complaints and grievances of the extras, will open office in the Professional Building this week. Mabel Kinney is chairman of the committee.

New Fox Star Arrives

New York.—Madeleine Carroll, first Fox star on the new interchange arranged with British Gaumont, arrives today on the Ile de France. Robert Hurel, head of the French M. P. Syndicate, is another picture passenger aboard the same liner.

Goldwyn Hits Front Pages with New One

New York.—Here's one for the book. And it broke on the front pages of every New York paper today, without anticipating what will happen with the news services.

It was nothing less than having the Very Reverend Nicholas Kendroff, archpriest of the Greek Catholic Church, yesterday offer a prayer and confer a blessing on Anna Sten and her first film, "Nana."

It seems that someone (?) in the Goldwyn exploitation department discovered that it is a rural Russian custom to invoke success for a journey, a new undertaking, or the fertility of crops.

Warners Get Wire Break On Plans for Soviet Film

Warner Brothers got an Associated Press and United Press break yesterday on cabled arrangements made by J. L. Warner and Irving Asher of the London Warner staff, for permission to go into the Soviet republic to shoot background scenes for "British Agent."

This is the picture Warners will do with Leslie Howard in the lead after the latter completes "Of Human Bondage."

Miller Starts Second Fox

Sol Wurtzel has tagged Seton I. Miller for another writing trick, the scenarist having turned in "Murder in Trinidad." He goes in to write the Earl Derr Biggers story "Charlie Chan's Case," for which Walter Connolly has been borrowed from Columbia.

Just Another Title Change

Universal yesterday changed the label on "If I Were Rich" to "Let's Be Ritzy" and added Lois January and Hugh Enfield to the cast. Lew Ayres and Patricia Ellis have the top spots, with Edward Ludwig directing. Henry Henigson produces.

Lovelace on Way to N.Y.

Hunter Lovelace left Saturday night for West Virginia for a short visit with his foiks. From there he goes to New York to assume his duties as the head of the Fox story department there.

Jenkins Loaned to Col.

Warners yesterday okayed the loan to Columbia of Allen Jenkins to go into a featured role in support of Jack Holt in "Whirlpool." Roy William Neil directs the Ethel Hill story.

'WHATEVER POSSESSED HER' COMEDY THAT FALLS FLAT

Reviewer Holds Out No Hope For Screen

"WHATEVER POSSESSED HER"

Raymond Moore presents "Whatever Possessed Her," a comedy by Hardwick Nevin; staged by Arthur Sircom; settings by Eugene C. Fitsch. With Catherine Calhoun Doucet, Richard Whorf, Percy Kilbride, Joseph Allen, Pierre Watkin, Constance McKay, Otto Hulett, Gordon Richards, Roland Drew, Flora Campbell, Stapelton Kent, Frederic Forman, George Henry Trader, Edward Fuller. At the Mansfield Theatre.

New York.—Despite the fact that Millicent Bangs throughout three sets continues to reassure everyone that everything is going to be all right, the net result of this comedy, which purports to convey the absurdities of the summer theatre movement, leaves much to be desired—entirely too much. We shall even go so far as to wonder whatever possessed the producer to put it on. Is it possible Mr. Moore persuaded himself to believe that here was another "Torch Bearers"? Or that he was induced to produce "Whatever Possessed Her" as a labor of love, as his contribution to the renascence of the theatre, even as Millicent Bangs?

Millicent is one of those rattle brained creatures who once played Ophelia in amateur theatricals and never got over it. She has an income, a barn, a shepherdess costume and a sensible husband. Unable to suppress her yearning to do something for Art she hires a playwright, a carpenter and a troupe of professional actors, and converts her barn into her notion of an 18th century court theatre, a Petit Trianon no less. And then the panic, such as it is, is on. For two frenzied acts everyone and everything goes completely berserk, and Millicent is just about done in and dithering, and more than willing to let the summer theatre movement shift for itself, when the bedlam finally subsides. No, it isn't nearly as funny as it sounds, mainly because the author tried to be too excruciating. But while one might forgive him a bad play, he should be brought up short for writing his play at the expense of those who troupe so nobly to keep it alive. His leading man is a sot, his juvenile out to seduce, and his villain, who represents the Actors' Equity if you please! a blackmailer and a thief. Shame, Mr. Nevin. No, Mr. Nevin, Hollywood will not be interested, not in the least.

Catherine Calhoun Doucet plays Millicent right up to the hilt. As the callow playwright Richard Whorf works hard. Percy Kilbride is absolutely Jake as Eddie the carpenter. But aside from these no one else was able particularly to distinguish himself or herself. Which is no reflection whatsoever on them.

Fox Signs Dave Gould

Fox has signed Dave Gould to write the musical numbers for "Three on a Honeymoon."

True Blue

Lee Phelps, president of the Junior Screen Actors Guild, who can probably use $25 just as much as you or I, was on a "bit" call at Paramount for that amount yesterday and spent the day at the studio before facing the camera. So he passed the $25 up to a fellow player in the evening because he felt it his duty to attend the NRA extras' meeting as an officer of his Guild.

Warner Eastern Siesta Commences in March

New York.—The Warners plant here goes into a five week siesta early in March when Sam Saxe closes the studio door for a breathing spell after having completed enough short subjects to be well ahead of his release schedule.

Ralph Staub, director, will then go to Florida for a vacation. Ben Blue, featured in a series, hops off to Europe on a six weeks' vacation.

'P. A.' Stepping Up Sales

New York.—Harry Cohen, whose most recent distributing connection has been with Warners in Europe, has been signed by P. A. Powers to act as special representative in the eastern states on the two Iwerks-Comicolor subjects, "Willie the Whopper" and "Flip the Frog," the latter an MGM release.

Brock Signs Ray

Joey Ray, the master of ceremonies at the Club Ballyhoo, will get his first crack at pictures in the Lou Brock feature musical production "Down to Their Last Yacht," which is being written by Herbert Fields for Radio. Sidney Fox has the top spot and Paul Sloane will direct.

Educ. Renews Pagano

Taking up his new contract with Educational, Buster Keaton has teamed up with Ernest Pagano to write the story for the first of the series of two-reel comedies which will star him. Shooting is scheduled to begin February 15.

Grant Again at MGM

Lawrence Grant, who recently washed up a long termer at MGM, returns to the studio with his first free lance assignment in the Norma Shearer picture "Rip Tide." Freddie Fralick is negotiating his deals.

Coleman Hits the Bell

Charles "Buddy" Coleman, recently boosted by Columbia from assistant to full-fledged director, brought in his first production yesterday one day ahead of schedule. It is a Tim McCoy picture, "Storm at Midnight."

Buffington to Columbia

Columbia yesterday signed Adele Buffington to write the original screen play for "Hell Cat," making the third writer to attempt to crack the story. Sidney Rogell produces.

Technicians Back To Academy Fold

Indications are that the Technicians Branch of the Academy will soon be stronger than ever. Instead of resignations, which were the rule a while back, many who resigned are returning to the fold. Chief among these are Major Nathan Levinson, Wesley Miller, Virgil Miller, Anton Grot and Franklin Hansen.

The entire branch is being reorganized and plans are being laid for the resumption of their technical research program which was interrupted when the wholesale Academy desertions started. The art directors' section of the branch met yesterday to discuss rules for annual awards in its department.

London Pic Producers Want Title Protection

London.—The British Producers and Distributors here, up in the air because of the repetition and stealing of picture titles, have appealed to the Board of Censors for their help. To this end the censors have told them that should all producers agree they will establish a bureau similar to the one in America that would permit producers to register their titles.

O'Neill Given New 'U' Job

Universal has signed George O'Neill to write the continuity of "Sutter's Gold," which William Wyler will put into production when he completes his present picture, "Glamor," for the studio. O'Neill turned in an okayed treatment of the novel about three months ago.

Another Anti-Trust Suit

New York.—Encouraged by the recent habit of majors to settle anti-trust suits out of court, the Nithold Brothers of Morristown, New Jersey, have filed suit against Warners, Fox and United Artists, alleging actions that drove them out of business.

Set Montgomery's Next

Robert Montgomery is slated for the starring role in the Edward Hope novel "Calm Yourself," which is being adapted to the screen by Arthur Kober for MGM. Monte Bell is the associate producer on this picture.

'Mank' Polishes '13'

Herman Mankiewicz has been handed the script of the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper co-starring vehicle, "Operator 13," by Walter Wanger for a polishing up before the picture goes into production at MGM.

Harlow Frisco's Guest

Jean Harlow left by train last night for San Francisco to be the guest at the party celebrating President Roosevelt's birthday there tonight. She will return in a few days.

'Welfare Island' Hot

Several studios are interested in "Welfare Island," a story by Nat J. Ferber, one time Sunday editor of the New York American.

Glenda and Pat To Co-star for Warner

Warners yesterday set Glenda Farrell for the feminine lead in "One Man's Woman," the Gene Towne and Graham Baker original, opposite Pat O'Brien, and assigned Claire Dodd to a featured role. Alan Crosland directs when the picture starts the latter part of this week or the early part of next.

Richard Barthelmess was announced in the top spot at the time the story was purchased, but studio decided to given O'Brien the lead as the first on his new long term contract.

McLane Quits for Stage

With a deal to go into Radio's "Crime Doctor" virtually set, Barton McLane called off all bets when Katharine Cornell offered him for her husband, Guthrie McClintock, an important spot in the Broadway play producer's "Yellow Jack," by Sidney Howard. Player hops off by plane for New York this morning.

Break for Lee Beggs

Lee Beggs, who played in the New York company of "Take a Chance" in its year and a half Broadway run, gets his first talking picture break in MGM's "In Old Louisiana." Beggs worked in silent pictures a number of years ago. Sackin agency negotiated.

'Cristo Countess' Finished

Karl Freund brought in "Countess of Monte Cristo" at Universal Saturday, one day ahead of schedule. Paul Lukas and Fay Wray head the cast. Stanley Bergerman produced. Picture was in production about three weeks.

Col. Dusts Off 'Double'

Columbia has dug out the idea conceived by Walter Wanger, when he was on that lot, to make a picture called "The Double" and plans to make the picture in the near future.

Batcheller Title Set

George R. Batcheller has set "The Quitter" as the final release title for the picture which Richard Thorpe completed last week under the tag "Understanding Heart."

Million Dollar Suit

Peter and Leslie J. Stiller are the play producers, and James Hagan is listed as author of the play.

Child claims the play a plagiarism of a story of his entitled "The Avenger," which ran in the Saturday Eveing Post issue of September 19, 1919.

In addition to his literary and diplomatic past, Child is today a Hearst feature editorial writer stationed at Washington and getting front page space for his daily writings.

Because of the prominence of the writer it is expected the suit will set new precedents for plagiarism. In the past most suits have been brought by unknown writers with little claim to past attainments to back up their legal complaints.

UNIONS ASK SHOWDOWN

TRADEVIEWS by W.R. WILKERSON

•A "Little Women" comes once in a lifetime. A nice sweet story such as was adapted for this enormously successful picture is like a needle in a haystack. They may be found (nice and sweet) but their box office attractiveness is another thing altogether. Accordingly the start and finish of every Hays meeting on censorable pictures, with "Look what 'Little Women' is doing" offers the exception rather than the rule.

This business simply HAS TO HAVE BETTER PICTURES, and to be hamstrung by the present Hays edicts will not make GOOD PICTURES. Producers must get themselves away from that damaging influence and make pictures that will be interesting and carry entertainment values. Writers cannot write stories with those values under the present restrictions.

So what to do?

Insist that Mr. Hays stop fomenting censorship by his continued broadcasting of a stupid code of morals that has given him lots of publicity and placed an impossible burden on our activities. Divert Mr. Hays' attention to a censorship work that will HELP THIS BUSINESS, the censorship of exhibitor advertising; and then go to work making interesting pictures containing situations that will arouse public favor, and kill off that "14-year-old moron" that has been dangled in front of the producer's face for these many months.

Even though Mr. Hays has made some headway in selling the idea that our producers take great pleasure in dealing out filth in story material for pictures, THAT IS NOT THE CASE. There is not a man or woman in this industry, with any power or influence, but who knows the proper limitations in telling stories. THEY CONFINE THEMSELVES TO SUCH STORY TELLING and need give little recognition to the Federation of Women's Clubs and the Parent-Teachers Associations that Mr. Hays has seen fit to empower to dictate what we should produce as motion picture entertainment. Our creators recognize that this is ADULT ENTERTAINMENT and it can only exist on that basis. But they struggle against this fact:

We have got to have BETTER PICTURES.

Fox Activities On N. Y. Story Buys Inflating Market

New York.—The story and play situation around here as it concerns their purchase for motion pictures took quite a spurt during the past two weeks due to the activities of Ray Long, representing Fox.

MGM and Paramount have had things pretty much their own way for a brief spell, with Warners only taking periodical flings; but with the advent of Long prices have been shot up with the result that all stories and plays have been boosted 25 percent and more because of this new competition.

Long made a good buy before his activities shot up the market. He grabbed the Sinclair Lewis story "Work of Art" for a paltry $25,000.

Columbia Backs Water On Sound Crew Cut

Columbia's announced cut in sound crew, which had members of the IATSE local hot under the collar the other day, has not materialized. Announcement was that the four-man crew would be cut to three, with a grip and an electrician sharing the duties of the second stage or cable man. Local started preparing formal protest, but studio changed mind and four-man crew remains—at least at present.

Safron Here Today

Jerry Safron, Columbia's western exchange manager, arrives today by plane from New York. Safron was away a little over a week conferring with home office executives.

Revnes in New York

New York.—Maurice Revnes, MGM staff exec, is here on a three weeks' story hunt.

'CODE WILL BE CHANGED IF WRONG,' SAYS 'ROSY'

Speaking at a dinner given by the Wampas, Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt last night assured the motion picture industry that the motion picture code would be changed whenever it is clearly proven that something is wrong with it.

"No doctrine or Code can be perfect," said Rosenblatt. "But the pic-

Cameramen and Others See 'Rosy' Today—Won't Let Buck Be Passed To Labor Board

Despite Sol A. Rosenblatt's announcement that all complaints of sound and camera men would be referred by him to the labor committee and the regional labor board, representatives of all the Locals of the IATSE will go before him today with sufficient complaints to give a lasting headache.

Representatives of Local 659, Cameramen, will demand an amendment to the NRA Code which will do more to limit hours and bring about greater spread of employment, which union officials say is not being accomplished under the Code workings.

Yesterday officials of 659 received the report that the American Society of Cinematographers and the Producers had met Monday and had brought about an arrangement whereby the producers had agreed to employ the extra first cameramen on a 36-hour basis. At the same time, they declared the first cameramen now under contract would have to work unlimited hours and could be changed from company to company at the will of the producers. This, union officials point-

Start 'Hunchback' Script

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is again very much alive on the Universal schedule. Francis Edward Faragoh was this week started on preparing a new talkie version of the classic that is one of Universal's historic money-makers.

Zanft a Bankrupt

New York.—John Zanft has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $244,216 and assets of $407,397, including life insurance to the extent of $238,668.

China No Likee 'Earth'

United Press dispatches yesterday reported that the MGM unit in China to photograph backgrounds for "The Good Earth" had been forbidden permission by the Nanking Central Government on the ground that the Pearl Buck story "was prejudicial to the dignity of the Chinese race."

Latest Shift Sends Morley to Radio

Two star actresses making comebacks after long absences did a bit of juggling yesterday with the final result that Karen Morley will make her return at Radio in "The Crime Doctor," which was originally set for Corinne Griffith.

Karen Morley, on loanout from MGM, had originally been announced to return in the lead of "Most Precious Thing in Life" at Columbia. But company and star agreed mutually to call it off after study of the part. The same condition cropped up on the other part with Corinne Griffith at Radio.

Farrow Gets Quota

Mexicali.—John Farrow, motion picture writer and native of Australia, cleared the border here armed with a quota number granted by U. S. immigration officials.

This puts an end to all the troubles that Farrow has experienced during the past two years in Hollywood.

ASC Makes It Clear

The ASC is planning to print in pamphlet form the agreement recently made between that group and the major studios. Clauses will be interpreted so all cameramen will be sure to understand legal phrases.

Snell-Riddle Move

Paul Snell of the Fox publicity office, and Mel Riddle of Eddy Eckles' gang at Radio, shift as of Monday to new berths. Snell goes to the Howard Strickling staff at MGM and Riddle joins the Fox organization.

Lasky Returns Sunday

Jesse Lasky returns to his Fox unit from a trip to Havana Sunday, according to word received by the producer's office yesterday.

THE LOW DOWN

It happened when Allen Rivkin was telling Jerry Horwin that he was planning a trip to Europe and would make London his first stop.

"Going to ENGLAND?" asked Horwin.

"Yep," answered Rivkin.

Whereupon Jerry grabbed his arm and exclaimed, "You MUST look up the Glicksteins!"

A very hammy actor-friend of Lou Holtz's got all through primping before a mirror the other night and then turned to Holtz and asked, "How do I look?"

"You look," answer Lou, "like a wealthy South American—who's just gone broke!"

Connie Cummings tells this one on herself—and it's not without charm. Seems that when she was in England, she was very desirous of creating a nice impression on all the people she met, and didn't want to pull any of the boners usually pulled by visiting Americans—such as using expressions that mean one thing in the U.S.A. and something horrifying to the Britishers. In other words, Connie wanted to be "correct." So one night she and Benn Levy were dining with some of Benn's fine friends and everything went beautifully—up until dessert time—when la Cummings ordered Yorkshire pudding!

A famous director, who is also a writer, had a pip of an idea for a story a few weeks ago and told it in full to a producer at a major studio. The producer was crazy about it and told the director to go right over and tell it to the head man. Whereupon the director made the appointment and then cooled his heels in the outer office for almost three hours before he got in to see the big boss. When he told his story, the head man of the studio was crazy about it too—but when the head man and the producer compared notes, they found they had listened to two entirely different tales! Now the director will probably lose out, because the execs don't think the fellow can hold one idea long enough for either himself or another writer to get it down on paper!

There has been a hell-to-do in London over the contract of Merle Oberon (just signed by Eddie Small). Alexander Korda holds her ticket, and when she refused to play the feminine lead opposite Douglas Fairbanks Sr. it created a rift between Korda and Fairbanks. And when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wanted her for a termer, and Korda turned it down because he wanted more money, there was loud squawking on both sides of the pond. But seemingly now both Korda and Oberon are satisfied with the Small agreement and Fairbanks and MGM can hold their fingers and fret.

New York REVIEWS

"CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE"

Universal prod.; director, Edward Buzzell; writers, Stanley Rauh, Elmer Harris.

Roxy Theatre

World-Telegram: It is a mournful and stereotyped piece, but well enough acted. Films of this sort should be and can be made thrilling and exciting if handled with some imagination and freshness in writing and direction. That they follow the "Grand Hotel" pattern is of minor consequence. What is important is their treatment, because, essentially, most of them possess the elements of valid and entertaining melodrama.

Times: Unfortunately, for all its strenuous by-play, this film spends most of its trip in the lower entertainment brackets. The passengers are properly diverse, but the drama lacks conviction. It looks, acts and sounds like patchwork. Nor do the central characters seem quite bright.

Sun: Rich, ripe melodrama with not a hint of mystery nor any particular elements of surprise. There is an effort to show the monotony of the long days and nights aboard the bus; but, with all the principals preparing for a grand explosion, the passengers couldn't relax enough to be bored. The plot is a little mechanical, like most of the characters.

American: A snappy murder, a swell chase, a smashing crack-up supply some of the melodramatic incidents in the fast moving film that has come to the Roxy screen. It's satisfying film fare. Director Buzzell has done wonders with a story that might have been a dull and talky picture instead of really thrilling action-drama. His showmanly mingling of the film's various elements makes it fresh and surprising all the way.

Journal: It's mild melodramatics with a scenic stopover at Niagara Falls.

News: An absurd comedy that is diverting if you're in the mood to take your movie fare lightly. So far so good, but let us hope that this epidemic won't spread much further, but in pictures, where the action is confined to a bus and bus stations, the story is bound to be forced to command any attention. Stanley Rauh wrote the story which Eddie Buzzell has wisely directed so that it can't be taken seriously, even though a murder takes place en route.

MGM Gives Up on Search for Crooners

Apparently crooners are not to be found on every corner. Clarence Brown has made half a hundred tests seeking one for the lead opposite Joan Crawford in the MGM picture "Sadie McKee," and finally given up. Studio guessers say that about $50,000 has been spent on the tests.

Latest report is that MGM is seeking Jimmy Dunn on a loan from Fox for the part. Dunn is not a crooner, but a voice dubbing could be done for the few spots needed.

Mrs. Eliscu Sets Her Play

Mrs. Edward Eliscu (Stella Block) returned from a two months' visit in New York Sunday. While there she arranged for the production of her play, in which Laurette Taylor will be starred.

Roth Back to Universal On One-Picture Deal

Murray Roth has obtained permission from Warners to make a one-picture deal with Universal and has signed with that studio to direct an unproduced play by Howard Emmett Rogers titled "A New Deal on Love," which the studio purchased recently. Eph Asher is supervising. The deal was made through the Nat Goldstone office.

Roth has just finished directing "Harold Teen" for Warners, but could not make an outside deal until after Warner's option on him comes up which won't be for a couple of weeks.

Putnam Play at Beverly

With Merna Kennedy and Earle Foxe in the leads the Beverly Hills Little Theatre will present "Gentlemen For Sale," a new play by Nina Wilcox Putnam, for a week starting February 5. Others in the cast include Pauline Garon, Flora Finch and Dan Brody.

Para. Likes Vaughan

Paramount, still rounding up a cast for "Double Doors," which will be directed by Charles Vidor, yesterday opened a deal with Hilda Vaughan, New York stage actress.

Bennett Up at MGM

Richard Bennett may do the part of General Grant in "Operator 13" if he and MGM can get together on terms.

Marley-McAdoo

Peverell Marley, Twentieth Century cameraman, Saturday will marry Miss Virginia Ruth McAdoo.

'Nana' Heads List Of New B'way Pics

New York.—"Nana" arouses the most interest among the new pictures coming to Broadway this week, everybody waiting for their first glimpse of Anna Sten at the Music Hall Thursday.

Other new attractions are: Wednesday, Mayfair, "Frontier Marshal"; Strand, "Hi Nellie"; Friday, "I've Got Your Number," Roxy; "You Can't Buy Everything," Capitol; "All of Me," Paramount.

Burke To Meg Rothstein Yarn As First at Fox

Edwin Burke returned to Hollywood with the story written by Mrs. Arnold Rothstein titled, "Now I'll Tell," which is based on the life of her late husband.

Burke will make his debut as a director with this yarn as his first assignment for Fox.

Rathbone on MGM Fire

MGM is negotiating with Basil Rathbone for a term contract. Player is now Katharine Cornell's leading man in her repertoire company.

ROGERS' 'NO MORE WOMEN' IS LUSTY ENTERTAINMENT

McLaglen-LoweGet Yarn and Direction

"NO MORE WOMEN"
(Rogers-Paramount)

Director .....Albert Rogell
Original .....Delmar Daves and Grant Leenhouts
Screen Play.....Delmar Daves
Additional Dialogue.....Lou Breslow
Photography .....Theodor Sparkuhl
Cast: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Christian Rub, Harold Huber, Sally Blane, Minna Gombell, Alphonse Ethier, Tom Dugan, William Franey, S. P. McGowan and Frank Moran.

Aided by competent dialogue, equally competent direction and a guileless Dutch comic by the name of Christian Rub, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe succeeded in being both believable and entertaining for the length of the Charles R. Rogers picture, which in the version screened last night lasted 1 hour and 20 minutes. Coming from this reviewer, who has been little amused by this team since "What Price Glory," this is news as well as criticism.

"No More Women" has much of the quality of "Sailor Beware." While it lacks the unifying plot of the latter piece, it has the same swing and the same lusty innocence. The protagonists are picked up, or rather let down, as two rival divers of salvage ships. Working on the same wreck McLaglen brings up the ship's safe, while Lowe, with more of the impresario's touch, rifles the pockets of the captain's corpse. Needless to say the safe is as empty as the pockets are full—sufficiently full to allow Lowe to pay for the affections of McLaglen's girl, Minna Gombell. When Sally Blane, distinguished by a magnificent coiffure, inherits McLaglen's ship she hires Lowe as first diver. The courtship which follows is not allowed to become either usual or dull, working to a climax in an underwater sequence which alone is worth loge tickets. Four divers work on the same wreck; one of them, unscrupulous, greedy and above all practical, works with his knife on the tubes of the others.

Another small work of art in itself is the sequence in which word passes along the waterfront of Sally Blane's inheritance, "The Pelican's gone lily on us!" Minna Gombell's small character is excellent; Sally Blane, with more footage and less to say, gracefully leaves Rome to the Caesars.

When credits are split, first mention must probably go to Al Rogell for having given this reviewer a new pleasure in McLaglen and Lowe, and an entertaining picture high-lighted with some extra fine touches. Theodore Sparkuhl's photography hits the mark. And since the whole job was so well liked Delmar Daves, Grant Leenhouts and Lou Breslow must come in for bouquets.

Radio Borrows Frawley

Radio yesterday borrowed William Frawley from Paramount for the top comedy assignment in "Crime Doctor."

More Baby Stars

Feeling happy after last night's Rosenblatt dinner, the Wampas Executive Committee announced that the organization will go ahead with the selection of Baby Stars this year without worrying about producer or other support. Nominations and details will be settled February 13 and selections voted on February 27.

Eilers-Lyon English Picture Well Liked

"THE MORNING AFTER"
British-Gaumont

Director .....Alan Dwan
Cast: Sally Eilers and Ben Lyons in the leads. Further credits not available.

"The Morning After" was advertised as a preview last night at the Colorado theatre in Pasadena, although the film was made some time ago in England. However, this was probably its preview in Southern California territory and so this review is only a matter of record.

The picture is a light, engaging, sparkling, little comedy which gives a delightful raspberry to the mythical kingdom school. It is jaunty, irresponsible stuff, enlivened by crafty direction and swell acting, and backed by good, solid comedy.

After spending a night not wisely, but well, Ben Lyon awakes to find himself mistaken for NG2, a spy in the employ of some villains who are seeking to dethrone Prince Rudolph, the beloved ruler of the mythical kingdom. The description of a blonde Countess whom he is supposed to involve in the plot, and the offer of five hundred pounds weaken his resolution to stick to his office job, and off he starts on his fantastic errand.

His frantic efforts to force the Countess to steal the papers, which she is supposed to crave even at the price of death, her bored indifference at the whole procedure, their sudden arrest and introduction to a firing squad, and their escape by means of Lyon's home-made bombs (egg shells filled with pepper) are the ridiculous and amusing highlights of the picture. Their walk to the courtyard of death is terribly funny.

Ben Lyon bounds happily through the picture. He has never been more the light-hearted, engaging comedian, and his acting is a joy throughout. Sally Eilers gets away with a thick French accent admirably, and her change to plain Molly Malone, the actress who impersonates the Countess in order to lead NG2 astray, is expertly done.

Alan Dwan's direction is extremely clever and individual. He makes the picture a piece of art which is nevertheless acceptable to the average audience. Don't be afraid that "The Morning After" will be too high-brow for your ticket buyers. It will appeal to everyone—and it has two popular names and superb direction.

The title, by the way, may be changed.

Wait on Rosy to Settle Exhib Scrap

New York.—To allow Sol Rosenblatt time to return to New York and fight the cases, Judge Bondy yesterday postponed action on the application for injunctions against the NRA by the Allied States organization. February 20 was set as the date for a decision.

Under the present plan of the Code Authority all exhibitors are supposed to get their assents in by February 28. What the effect of the postponement on the injunction request until the 20th will be no one attempts to guess.

'Rosy' to See Acad. Group Tomorrow

A special commitee of members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will meet with Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt tomorrow morning at the Beverly-Wilshire hotel. The meeting is at the request of Rosenblatt.

The committee will consist of Frank Capra, William Sistrom, Lewis Stone, Major Nathan Levinson, Howard Green and J. Theodore Reed, president of the Academy. Thus being representative of each of the five Academy branches, plus the head.

Universal Plans 14 To Be Made Abroad

New York.—Eight Universal pictures to be made in London and six in Paris are expected to be the outcome of an international Universal conference which started here yesterday.

Max Friedland and Fritz Keller of the foreign department are here from abroad, and in addition to Carl Laemmle, Sr. and Jr., James Grainger, R. H. Cochrane, P. D. Cochrane, C. B. Paine and Robert Harris are taking part in the conferences.

20th Signs Butterworth

Charles Butterworth was signed yesterday by Twentieth Century for a featured role in the Ronald Colman picture, "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which will be directed by Roy Del Ruth. Production is scheduled to start about February 15.

Doris Kenyon on Air

Doris Kenyon, who has been the house guest of Professor and Mrs. Einstein at Princeton, does a week on the air with Rudy Vallee and then a week each in Detroit and Chicago singing.

Junior Likes 'Black Sheep'

Carl Laemmle, Jr. took a copy of "Black Sheep," an original story by Sy Bartlett and Rian James, with him to read during his stay east, and liked it so well he wired an offer back from the train.

Radio Activities At Standstill As Big Confab Ensues

Activities on the Radio lot are at a standstill while J. R. McDonough, B. B. Kahane, Merian C. Cooper and Ned Depinet decide the future policy of production, who will head it and who will be part of it.

Since McDonough's arrival, everything has been up in the air on the lot, no one has seen Cooper, all production plans have been tabled and the plant awaits word from the conference chambers.

Anything is possible as a result of these conferences, but nothing positive has developed. Those capable of guessing are of the opinion that the whole lot will go unit production, with Kahane handling the reins. This will place Cooper in the top unit spot, with the Whitney millions and a good part of Radio's production finances leveled on his productions. It is believed that he will make from six to eight pictures.

In the next production spot Pandro Berman is a cinch to be given a clear hand in the making of anything that suits his fancy. Louis Brock and Kenneth Macgowan are believed to be the only other producers sure of their jobs

Code Vaudeville Body Meets in N.Y.

New York.—The Code Authority Committee on vaudeville—both actors and labor—meets today at the Hotel Astor. Chairmen to handle the various discussions have been named as follows:

Bookers, Major Thompson and Joseph Bernard; presentation producers, Sam Dembow, Jr., and George Skouras; vaudeville producers, Marty Forkins; actors and agents, Louis K. Sidney.

Paramount Takes Back Brooklyn Playhouse

New York.—Paramount has taken back the Paramount Brooklyn from Mort Shea and will start actual operation again this Friday, with William Raynor, Shea's former manager, running the house.

The opening attraction will be Mary Pickford on the stage and "All of Me" playing day and date with the New York Paramount as the picture.

Atwill Ends Vacation

Lionel Atwill is back in town after spending the last six weeks vacationing in New York with Mrs. Atwill. The player did a number of radio broadcasts while there. He is now reading scripts on parts offered him.

MGM Buys Novel

New York.—MGM continued its stirring up of the New York story market with the purchase of "The Heavenly Sinner," a novel by T. E. Harre, published by Macauley.

Jack Osterman Tagged

Jack Osterman has been signed by Lou Brock to star in a two reel comedy at Radio. Al Boasberg will write the story and will also direct.

INDIE SHARPSHOOTERS DIG UP FOREIGN STEN PICTURES

Also Offer Kiepura, Harvey and Others

Independents who miss no bets have gone into the European market on a buying campaign that is going to cause plenty of burns for Sam Goldwyn, Universal and Fox. The sharpshooting buyers are digging up pictures starring Anna Sten, Lilian Harvey, Heather Angel and Jan Kiepura.

Of particular interest are the Anna Sten buys owing to the expert manner in which Goldwyn has cooked up a demand for the previously little known Russian girl. The indies have dug up at least two Ufa pictures starring her and are out selling right now.

The two pictures are "Baum de Monte Carlo," which Independent Film Exchange has locally, and "The Tempest," owned by Jacobs and Bregstein, for Los Angeles. "The Tempest" co-stars Emil Jannings.

Other star pictures are "Love Waltz" and "Quick," Ufa pictures, with Lilian Harvey, held by the Independent Film Exchange;"Farewell to Love," co-starring Jan Kiepura and Heather Angel, held by William G. Smith, and "Two Hearts That Beat As One," a Lilian Harvey owned by Jacobs and Bregstein.

At least twelve more pictures, it is claimed, are expected today from Europe, and will be dumped on the market as rapidly as possible while the interest in the foreign stars continues at its highest pitch.

MGM Tries Two Ways On 'High School' Yarn

With Aurania Rouverol engaged to write a screen play for "High School," MGM now has two sets of writers working on the story in an effort to wrestle a satisfactory script out of the idea. George Seaton and Arthur Bloch are also on it.

Victor Fleming is scheduled to direct under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg. Jean Parker is being talked of for the top assignment.

To Screen Soviet Pic

Julien Bryan, scion of the Tennessee oil family, is putting on an exhibition of the film he made for the Soviet in Russia, holding the showing tomorrow night at the Trinity Auditorium. Bryan has also obtained a group of Russian film documents of the Czarist regime.

'Operator 13' Starts

Raoul Walsh today places the Marion Davies picture "Operator 13" into work at MGM. Besides the star, cast includes Gary Cooper, Ned Sparks and Mae Clarke. George Folsey is handling the cameras. Walter Wanger is associate producer.

Dunne on MGM Yarn

Phillip Dunne has been assigned to the screen play of the Durante-Butterworth picture, "Student Tour," which Monta Bell produces for MGM. Company is figuring on working song numbers into the production, making it a semi-musical.

Big Money

New York.—Max Gordon claims it's a record for $3.30 shows, at the New Amsterdam, famed home of Ziegfeld's Follies, and the boys are searching the books. But "Roberta" did $27,580 at that house last week.

Lloyd on Schedule For First Time

With the Harold Lloyd production, "The Catspaw," actually starting yesterday, this comedy unit finds itself forced to work on some kind of a shooting schedule for the first time since it has been making pictures.

In order for Lloyd to get any kind of a cast, he had to guarantee that players would be finished at a definite time, and in order to meet the commitments the whole picture has been scheduled and a demand made that the schedule be met.

Russell Hopton Tagged At Warners for Three

With talk of a long term deal in the offing, Warners yesterday secured a commitment on the services of Russell Hopton for his next three pictures, tieing the player up for a three months' period.

His first assignment will be in "One Man's Woman," which Alan Crosland directs. The MacQuarrie office represents Hopton.

Thelma Todd Moves Into New Radio Assignment

Thelma Todd yesterday registered at Radio, where she takes up a long term deal negotiated recently through Pat de Cicco. Her first assignment under the contract will be in the next Wheeler and Woolsey picture, "Fatheads," which starts in four weeks.

Lift Frawley Option

Paramount yesterday notified William Frawley that the company was exercising its option on the ticket which Leo Morrison negotiated. Player is on loan to Radio for "Crime Doctor" and a deal is cooking for him to swing over to Columbia for "Twentieth Century" before coming back to the home lot.

Roach Short a Musical

Arthur Kay has been engaged as musical director and Bill O'Donnell as dance director by the Hal Roach studios for their forthcoming all-star musical comedy short which gets under way Monday. Val Burton and Will Jason have written the songs and Leigh Jason will direct.

Wood Megs Montgomery

Sam Wood has been assigned the direction of "Forgotten Girl," the Wilson Collison story which MGM has slated as a Robert Montgomery starring vehicle. Sam Mintz is writing the screen play under Harry Rapf's supervision.

Federal Trade Report in Work

Washington.—The report of the Federal Trade Commission covering executive officers, directors of corporations, etc., etc., is now in the work and will be turned over to the Senate in a short while.

This report covers every corporation capitalized at over $1,000,000 and is to show the salary, commissions, working agreements, ownership and the entire history of those corporations.

It is understood that the questionnaire sent out for the above purpose was given instant action in motion picture circles as well as by all other big corporations.

Willard Mack Cast-Off Wins for Kane-Weber

Walter Kane and Herbert Weber have the laugh today on Willard Mack. It seems Mack had a race horse that hadn't won in two years. He gave it to Weber and Kane for a Christmas present last Xmas. Yesterday it came in first for the boys at Caliente. Weber and Kane cleaned up $500 each as the horse paid 15 to 1 and they had him on the nose for several dollars.

Jory Up at Warners

Working on a deal with Fox for the loan of Victor Jory for one of the leading supporting roles to James Cagney and Joan Blondell in "Without Honor," Warners yesterday tested the player to judge his adaptability to the part.

Para. Signs Dot Stickney

Paramount is bringing Dorothy Stickney out from New York for a featured role in "Murder at the Vanities." The player made a couple of pictures here two years ago, after which she returned to the stage.

Lone Star Starts Today

Lone Star productions will place its next John Wayne western into work this Monday. The script was written by Robert North Bradbury who will also direct the picture. The tentative title is "The Star Packer."

Stepin Stays at Home

Deal for MGM to borrow Stepin Fetchit for "Operator 13" fell through yesterday when Fox discovered it needed the colored boy for a picture in the near future. Picture gets under way today.

WB Tag Stone and Hale

George E. Stone and Alan Hale have been signed by Warners for roles in "Gentleman From San Francisco," which is being directed by Wilhelm Dieterle.

Hecht on 'Glamour' Steps

Harold Hecht has been signed by Universal to direct the dance numbers in "Glamour," which Bennie Zeidman is producing.

UP TO THE MINUTE CASTING NEWS

John Sheehan joins cast of Monogram's "Curse of Kali" on deal set by the MacQuarrie office.

Armand Kaliz into "Love Detective," Columbia.

Sarah Haydon and Adalyn Doyle engaged by Radio for featured roles in the cast of "Finishing School."

Sarah Padden into "All Men Are Enemies," Fox. Harry Wurtzel set the player.

Del Henderson into "You're Telling Me," Paramount. Set by Hallam Cooley of the Weber office.

Margaret Nearing set through Bernard and Meiklejohn in "Hollywood Party," MGM.

George Blackwood goes into "Double Door" at the Mayan. Set by Bernard and Meiklejohn.

Forrester Harvey joins cast of "Mystery of the Dead Police," going into the retakes for his featured spot. The MacQuarrie office set him.

Maurice Black signed by Maury Cohen for "Birds of a Feather."

John Rutherford signed through the William Morris office for a featured role in "Firebrand," Twentieth Century.

Clarence Muse into "One Man's Woman," Warners. Set by the MacQuarries.

Alan Hale for "Gentleman from San Francisco," Warners. The Edington and Vincent office spotted the deal.

Norma Mitchell into "Melody in Spring," Paramount, through Edington and Vincent.

Douglas Wood for "Trumpet Blows" at Paramount. Edington-Vencent negotiated.

Douglas Dumbrille into "Operator 13," MGM. Small-Landau did it.

Gertrude W. Hoffman for "Catspaw," Harold Lloyd, by Bill Woolfenden of Small-Landau.

Sidney Bracy signed through the Sackin agency for Harold Lloyd's "The Catspaw."

Laurence Grant added to the cast of MGM's "Rip Tide." Deal handled by Freddie Fralick.

Universal tested Sue Carol and Beta Bijou for featured spots.

Huntley Gordon signed by Universal for a role in "Frolics of Youth." Menifee Johnstone made the deal.

Pizor Here With Pathe Backing for Pictures

Continuing its financial interest in independent production and distribution, Pathe has completed the details of an agreement with William Pizor to finance producers he selects on state right ventures.

Pizor is now in Hollywood lining up his interests.

'Triumph' Script Done

Charles Grayson yesterday turned in his completed script for "Triumph," which MGM will use as a Joan Crawford starring picture following "Sadie McKee." John Considine is acting as associate producer on the picture.

O'Connell Set By Fox

L. William O'Connell yesterday was assigned by Fox studios to do the camera work on "Odd Thursday." Expect to start work tomorrow.

REELING around LONDON

Jack Votion covering the Wardour Front here—and how! Certainly managed to bring some Hollywood hustle to jolly ole Lunnon. . . . Universal took time out after the trade show of "By Candlelight" to give James Whale a pretty nice little reception which was attended by Countess Landi, A. P. Herbert, Marian Marsh, Frank Ditcham and a host of others. . . . Leslie Williams and Dave Bader were in charge of operations, and boy, they operated! . . . And the press liked Jimmie Whale a whole heap. . . . Metro have billed Maxie Baer as the new surprise star here on the showing of "Prizefighter and the Lady" (called here "Everywoman's Man")—they ain't mentioning him by name, figuring to stir up interest by this Garbo act; trouble is all the film scribes have written plenty about the new Coughload of sex appeal which has rather killed Metro's stunt; or has it?

Timmie Whelan back from Cairo where he has been preparing his next Gaumont directorial subject; some people have all the breaks! . . . Note to Hollywood associate producers and others with them thar' toney titles: Herbert Wilcox's label at British and Dominions is "Director of Productions" whilst Beverley Baxter has "Director of Public Relations" spread over his Gaumont-British door. . . . The latter title sounds almost appropriate enough for Hollywood!! . . . Edna Best appearing at first nights here. . . Norman Loudon will make sixteen pics at Sound City this season, he claims. . . There has been a squawk here to eliminate all blue gags from scripts, but as no one ever "gets" the blue gags, what's it to you? . . . All right, all you dialogicians we've heard and appreciated the line "Nutty as a fruit cake"—now can we let it rest for a while? . . . Yes sir, Mrs. Oakie's little boy Jack is certainly giving us performances these days; but he's getting to look more like Charles Buster Laughton every day! . . . Incidentally, Charlie and Elsa are doing a spot of "Tempest" through the courtesy of Lilian Bayliss and Bill Shakespeare here. . . . Buster playing Prospero and La Lanchester as a poifect Ariel. . . . Phillip (Johnnie) Clare at the Plaza with her mother; honest she was! . . Connerie Chappell, ace film critic on the "Sunday Dispatch," interviewed by Fox Movietone, pulled a grand crack about Mae West's—er—lovely eyes! . . . Freddie Y. Smith back from Paris where he has been scissoring a French talkie, is still wearing his French beret around town.

"Little Women" trade shown at the Regal to a very appreciative audience . . . one of the most popular Americans here of all times, was Joe Schenck . . . if it isn't too late maybe we add our praise to the acclaim on the writing jobs for "Lady For a Day"? . . . Johnnie Green at the Park Lane, visit co-incides with the London release of "I Cover the Waterfront," which plays Leicester Square Theatre after "Henry the Eighth." . . . Flo Desmond will appear in "Adventures of Blackshirt" here, shooting on March 5. . . . Nita (I quit Hollywood!) Harvey appearing at flicks—accompanied by Mama. . . . Jimmie Barker, (hi there Fox Hills!) getting real pally with the great H. G. Wells, who is writing an original for Korda. . . Phil Tannura is the champ boxing fan in this burg. . . . Bill O'Bryen greeted by all his friends on his return here, but we think he's got an itch to be back in sunny California. . . . Benita Hume has been taking bath after bath in the Lothar Mendes pic, "Jew Suss"; but it was Lothar who caught a cold!

Unions Call Showdown

ed out, would react against the extra cameramen who would be penalized and forced to lay off without pay an hour for each hour overtime they had worked. This alleged agreement will be reported to Mr. Rosenblatt with a vigorous protest on the part of 659.

Alan Watt, business manager of the ASC, declared he knows of no such agreement between the ASC and the producers. "Of course the producers have been cooperating with us to the fullest extent to spread employment ever since our agreement was signed some time ago," he said. "But there was no meeting this week between ASC and producers. That must be just a rumor."

Union men also want to tell Mr. Rosenblatt a method they allege is being used to cut first cameramen's salaries to $135 per week and less. This is the way one union man expressed it yesterday:

"The minimum scale is $250 a week for first cameramen of Class 1A on a weekly basis. The agreement permits a minimum of $200 on a four-week basis and $150 on a six-months basis. Many of the studios are now hiring first on six-month basis and after several weeks are dropping them, and we can do nothing about it, for the union agreement is not in effect. The ten per cent cut which was granted some time ago, thus brings the first cameraman's salary to$135 per week. And it is reported that in some cases a twenty per cent additional cut is being allowed."

This same union man declared that one clause in the ASC-Producer agreement opens the way for producers to replace high priced cameramen with low ones, unless they want to take a cut. This man points out that the clause which allows advanced classification of cameramen who are approved by the ASC does this. He also indicated that there is much rumbling because of this which threatens to break out sooner or later.

Other Locals of the IATSE which will attend the same conference with Rosenblatt today at ten o'clock include the sound men, projectionists, electricians and grips and the laboratory technicians. The sound men want to take up the question of a fixed wage scale and the limitation of hours.

Gaumont Saves Day For Overseas Unit

London. — British Gaumont has stepped in and saved the day for British United Film Producers, an organization with government sponsorship active in spreading British made pictures in the Colonial territories.

The company has shown a small annual loss since its inception and was about to give up the ghost when Gaumont stepped in because of the importance to the British film trade as a whole. The company has been reorganized with representation from the Gaumont board and sufficient capital to continue will be available.

Lawson Play Hit in London

London.—"Success Story," by the Screen Writers' Guild president, John Howard Lawson, got pretty good notices when presented on the stage at the Shilling, Fulham.

50,000 in a Week

London.—It is estimated that fifty thousand people attended the Tatler Theatre in one week to see a program made up of Disney cartoons and other short subjects.

Butler Building Up Roach Story Staff

The first five writers to be selected for the Hal Roach junior school of writers by Frank Butler, scenario chief, are Winston Miller, Edward Domaine, Ramona Bergere, Harry Friedman and Charles A. Powell.

Writers added to the regular staff are Carl Harbaugh, Wallace MacDonald, Walter Weems and Charles Rogers.

Setting Gaye Right

An error in the Hollywood Reporter's exclusive story on the Grand Duchess Marie yesterday had Vivian Gaye named as her manager. Miss Gaye negotiated the deal with B. P. Schulberg from this end, acting for Curtis-Brown, the well-known literary agents, in New York.

Jack Frost With Sale

Jack Frost has resigned as manager of the local Hillstreet theatre to handle Chic Sale's personal appearance tour through the west. Troupe will include the Randall Sisters, who were set by the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency. Have eight weeks signed to date.

Lloyd Shorts in Court Battle

New York.—Pathe Exchanges and Embassy Pictures are having a court battle over the reissuing of the Harold Lloyd shorts, and after they get their matter settled Lloyd will probably lick both of them in the same kind of battle.

Lloyd still owns 50 percent interest in the old shorts. Pathe made leasing arrangements with Embassy to reissue some of the subjects. Embassy got the idea they should be synchronized, and when Pathe heard that, they decided to cancel their lease with the thought of "sounding" the subjects themselves. The present court battle centers in that cancellation.

Lloyd will not permit the subjects to be synchronized and has made a proposition to Pathe to buy up their 50 percent with the idea of destroying all the negatives.

Aubrey Smith at 20th

C. Aubrey Smith was yesterday handed one of the juciest roles in the Ronald Colman picture, "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which Twentieth Century produces. He enacts the role of the Scotland Yard Inspector Neilson. Bill Woolfenden of the Small-Landau office set the ticket.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

I will greatly appreciate any courtesy you may extend in connection with the following reply to "A Script Girl" and "Another Script Girl":

Your complaints, recently published in the Open Forum, regarding the unfavorable wage scales and working conditions of script girls and stenographers may be entirely justified, and there is no question but that they should be adjusted. However, whose fault is it that you are required to work under these conditions? Very frankly, it is your own fault.

In regard to script clerks, the Associated Assistant Directors & Script Clerks have been very active in your behalf for a long period of time, and on January 9th Pat Casey signed an agreement with this organization, effective January 15th, providing certain minimum wage scales and conditions for you, but have you supported this organization and born your share of the necessary cost? Positively NO!

Concerning the others you mention, a small group of stenographers and other clerical workers, namely the "Office Employees' Association of Los Angeles," for the past year has vainly attempted to gain your support, or even your interest, in an effort to help you better your conditions, with absolutely no results as far as studio clerical employees are concerned. President Roosevelt, through the NRA, has given you every opportunity to organize for this purpose, but you persist in disregarding his invitation, although it still stands as originally offered, with all the protection of the Government under Section 7A of the National Recovery Act. You must see by this time that you cannot accomplish any improvement through individual efforts, especially after having witnessed the favorable progress made by groups of studio employees through collective bargaining.

The handwriting on the wall (the NRA) says "Organization for collective bargaining." Meanwhile, can you conscientiously say that you have availed yourself of the great possibilities therein, or even given others, the organized groups of "Script Clerks" and "Office Employees," a chance to help you? Echo answers "No." Considering all of the above, if you are determined to play the "lone wolf," then must we constantly be entertained (?) by the "lone wolf's howl of despair in the wilderness," or will you join the pack for a concerted and effective "howl"?

It is up to you, and don't forget that the NRA codes, including that of the motion picture industry, which concerns you and you and you, ARE NOT PERMANENT, so that you must consider your future as well as your present interests. If you wish to keep on working under the present low wage scales, or revert to even lower scales when the codes become ineffective, you are retarding not only your own advancement, but also that of your fellow-worker at the next desk. If you want to accomplish any improvement in your conditions, then start the wheels turning by doing something about it instead of crying about it, and DO IT NOW!

Sincerely,
KEITHA HOCK,
7306 Denker.

Code Will Be Changed

ture Code is a flexible instrument and is not difficult to change. When we are shown that something is wrong, whether it applies to the highest or the most lowly, a change can and will be made. However, the Code must be given a chance to function. It will not bring the millennium, true. But it will help, so we can go forward and in time wipe out the wrong practices."

Rosenblatt declared that he does not believe in government regulation, interference or censorship, but that he does think a proper coordination between government and industry is necessary inasmuch as there are always the few who will not do right. He said that if everyone in the picture business practiced the Golden Rule there would be no need for a Code. He also declared that he has had the finest possible cooperation from everyone in Hollywood in his quest for information, and that he expects to carry back with him to President Roosevelt information that will be welded into a complete picture of what is happening here.

Yesterday Rosenblatt went deeply into the business of the strict supervision of motion picture scripts with Joseph Breen, Col. Jason Joy and Dr. James Wingate of the Hays office. While he would not say what took place, it is understood he delved thoroughly into just what is and is not allowed to be photographed in Hollywood, and who is attempting to step across the forbidden line.

He also conferred with Dave Allen and Fred Beetson of Central Casting, getting a line on the general problem in the "extra" situation. Last night, following the Wampas dinner he attended the Roosevelt Birthday ball.

Mono Branches Out in Australian Territory

New York.—Foreign expansion for Monogram is coming as a result of a deal closed yesterday by Ritchie Export Corp., the Mono representatives, with Al Aronson and Max Ehrenreich for Australia and New Zealand. The two agree to open eight exchanges for Monogram product in that territory.

Ehrenreich is former manager for United Artists and Columbia in South America, and Al Aronson a European specialist. They left New York yesterday for Los Angeles and plan to sail for Australia on February 7.

Bill Lackey Bereaved

Carrie Truesdell Lackey, mother of W. T. Lackey, Monogram producer, died at her home in Hollywood Monday night at the age of 61. Interment will be at the Forest Lawn cemetery, with funeral arrangements to be announced later.

United Artists .....122 sq. inches

There are more stories than you can shake a stick at in the February Photoplay, but over the magazine as a whole, comparing it with past issues, you can shake your head. It's not up to par.

The best yarns are: "The Passing Show of '33," by Sara Hamilton; "Everybody's Stooging Now," by Kirtley Baskette, who also has another good one, "Last Round-Up"; "Who's in the Dog House Now?" by Ruth Rankin; "And Here We See the Real 'Little Women,'" by Virginia Maxwell; and "John, the Great," by Charles Darnton.

Interviews are "Can a Man Love Two Women at the Same Time?" (Gary Cooper), by Virginia Maxwell; "I Meet Miss Crawford," by Frazier Hunt; "Why I Quit Hollywood" (Douglas Fairbanks Jr.), by Kathlyn Hayden; "Two Toughs from the Chorus" (James Cagney and Allen Jenkins), by Ben Maddox; and "The Lady Who Laughed at Hollywood" (Margaret Sullavan), by Wilbur Morse, Jr.

"Working Girl," by Kenneth Baker, is about Myrna Loy; Dana Rush has "Back of the West Front," and Morse also writes about Laura Harding in "The Power Behind the Hepburn Throne."

Ruth Rankin has "Undraping Hollywood," and Henry A. Phillips writes "Drums in the Jungle," a story of the making of the picture called "Drums in the Night."

Lots of printed matter, but nothing to get excited about.

The best story on the Tracy situation that has appeared yet is in the February Movie Mirror. It is "Is Lee Tracy Taking the Rap?" by Dorothy Manners.

Harriet Parsons has an amusing interview, "His Son—and Jack Holt"; Marquis Busby is funny in "Oh-h, the Pain of Hollywood Divorces!" Dora Albert does right by Margaret Sullavan in "I Hate Everything!" Franc Dillon writes well in "The House That Bing Built," and Harry Lang has the third installment of "Mae West's Life Story."

Llewellyn Miller offers an interesting departure from the usual fan mag yarn in "Famous Faces—But Do You Know Their Names?" Maude Latham writes "Myrna Loy Talks on Men"; Jerry Asher covers the ground pretty thoroughly in "Young Doug Speaks Out!" Muriel Babcock tells about Joan Bennett in "Modern Madonna, Hollywood Style"; Susan Talbot has a nice story, "Joan Crawford's Men" (those she has helped); and Gary Cooper "Talks About His Marriage" to Adele Whitely Fletcher.

Extremely readable this month.

There's lots of good reading in the February Movie Classic, with almost every story ringing the bell.

Some of the best are "So You Really Want to Know How Garbo Lives? Here's How!" by Jack Hill; "Imitation—the New Path to Screen Fame," by Jay Brien Chapman; "The Stormy, Sensational Sten—Have You Heard About Her?" by Dorothy Spensley; "And Watch This Uncheckable Czech—Francis Lederer," by Grant Jackson; "What's This! Is Hollywood Going Nudist?" by Winifred Aydelotte; "Their Best Performances," by Gladys Hall, and "Why Margaret Sullavan Hasn't Been Interested in Hollywood Men," by Boris Nicolai.

Other stories, all good, are "Barbara Stanwyck's Secret—Now It Should Be Told," by Sonia Lee; the second installment of Ruth Biery's "The Private Life of Mae West"; "Joan and Franchot Make Some Denials—and Revelations," by Jack Grant; "The Prizefighter—and the Ladies," by Faith Service, and "She's Franker Than Hepburn or West," (Jean Muir) by Ben Maddox.

They're all extremely readable.

Goldsmith Jumps List

Ken Goldsmith moves to the Talisman studios today and at the same time announces that he will make ten features this year instead of the six previously planned. Goldsmith will start "I Hate Women," an original screen play by Mary E. McCarthy, the middle of next week. Aubrey Scotto directs.

Raymond Up for Stage

New York.—Gene Raymond, since his arrival here last Thursday, has had three offers to do a Broadway play. Edgar Selwyn, Elmer Harris and Courtney Burr are bidding for his services, with Burr having the inside track.

Carrillo on the Air

Leo Carrillo returns from a personal appearance at Denver to get a featured spot on the Shell Oil broadcast from San Francisco Monday. Leo Morrison booked.

THE BOX OFFICE—

NEW YORK.—The opening day on the Twentieth Century production of "Gallant Lady" did a land office business at the Rivoli here, topping all other opening days for quite a period with a take of $7,613.

Sam Goldwyn's "Roman Scandals" held the top spot with $7364 for opening; "The Bowery" followed in receipts with $7122, offering a conclusion that in "Gallant Lady" United Artists has another big hit attraction.—Hollywood Reporter, January 22.

NEW YORK.—"Gallant Lady" is attracting the women strongly to the Rivoli. Probabilities are for a first week of $40,000, which may mean three weeks if UA isn't too anxious to get other product into the house.—Variety, January 23.

CHICAGO.—United Artists—"Gallant Lady" (UA). Pride run flicker of the loop. Maintaining terrific pace from opening and headed for swell $19,000. Reports are raves all around.—Variety, January 23.

BOSTON.—State—"Gallant Lady" (UA). Best film in town doing grand biz for this spot which has for the most part been slumpish due to product averaging poor. Fred Roche for producers spread a notable ballyhoo in and out of town, and very first day saw finest audiences spot has seen in months.—Film got applause which is rare event in Boston. May reach $14,000.—Variety, January 23.

PHILADELPHIA.—If the week-end at the Aldine is any criterion, "Gallant Lady" is on its way to prove the biggest cleanup United Artists has had in many a day. The Darryl Zanuck-Twentieth Century picture broke all house records for a week-end opening at the Aldine.

The figures take an added importance when it is realized that "The Bowery" and "Henry the Eighth" had preceded "Gallant Lady" with great business.—Hollywood Reporter, January 23.

MINNEAPOLIS.—The big Minnesota again is currently setting the loop box office pace with "Gallant Lady." (UA). Gals are falling hard for this sobber and Ann Harding's name commands considerable attention. Opened well and should breeze through to a pretty good $10,000.—Variety, January 23.

CINCINNATI.—Albee—"Gallant Lady" (UA). Vehicle right down Ann Harding's alley and rolling the heavy love fans for a plenty good $12,500.—Variety, January 16.

NEW ORLEANS.—Loew's State—"Gallant Lady" (UA) was perfect for the femmes, clicking the turnstiles to the tune of $12,000. —Variety, January 16.

LOS ANGELES.—Darryl Zanuck's production, "Gallant Lady," continues its record breaking box office take with $1,700 for the first day at the local United Artists and $2,100 for Saturday. First day's sales are $300 over those of "Henry VIII." Ann Harding has the top spot in the picture directed by Gregory LaCava.—Hollywood Reporter, January 29.

My sincere appreciation to the cast and staff for their splendid co-operation in the making of this production . .

'PULL TOGETHER'-ZUKOR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE production end of this business now finds itself so bottled up that it is almost impossible to make a picture that will command the attention of a paying audience. This condition has been created by Mr. Will H. Hays, who is supposed to be working for this industry.

Mr. Hays has made a daily exhibit of his fourteen year old moron, also letters, telegrams and all types of reports coming in from his Federation of Women's Clubs and Parent-Teachers groups throughout the country; organizations that Mr. Hays has constantly reminded that pictures have jumped the bounds of his deacon-mind. This representative of the motion picture industry is understood to have brought in a Catholic priest to a recent producers' meeting and that priest told the gathering that there were rumblings throughout the Catholic Church that "the Jews in the picture business are demoralizing our youth."

Bunk, all bunk.

It is our impression that Mr. Hays has been having a hard time finding something to do to collect that regal salary that is placed on his desk each week; that he has long since shown himself to be of little value to this business, so he, accordingly, gets our producers frightened on this censorship angle, thereby making a job for himself. But there will not be a job much longer, as there will be little left of the picture business, if producers are compelled to make their entertainment to fit the intelligence of a fourteen year old child.

THIS IS ADULT ENTERTAINMENT, this picture business. Why write and produce down to the level of that fourteen year old moron, thereby keeping the big paying assemblage out of our theatres? What's the angle?

Producers know it cannot be done, but still they are attempting to do it by placing restrictions on the work of our screen writers. How long will this continue? When will the producers get wise to Mr. Hays? Or are they?

And suppose Mr. Hays is right, suppose all those busy-bodies in women's clubs and their ilk are lined up against

'Rosy' Speaks To Local Legit Mgrs.

Administrator Rosenblatt took on all the local legitimate managers yesterday in the persons of Homer Curran, Ed Belasco, E. E. Clive and George K. Arthur and gave them a general scolding on the cut rate and two-for-one ticket proposition, acknowledging that where three or more managers get together on this practice there can be no kick from his quarter, but suggesting that the idea be minimized as much as possible.

The Administrator told the producers that a Deputy to take care of the theatre situation out here will be appointed February 1 and he will work out of either San Francisco or Los Angeles.

MGM-MacDonald Talk New Term Contract

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Jeanette MacDonald are still wrangling over that new contract that both parties want signed, but the actual signing has not taken place yet.

According to the old ticket Miss MacDonald still has one picture to do and it will more than likely be "The Merry Widow," the determination of which seems to be holding up the new deal.

Hawks Back for Col.

Howard Hawkes returned yesterday from New York, where he sat in on the writing of the script of "Twentieth Century" by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur.

Picture is set to go into production at Columbia under Hawkes' direction within two weeks.

Vidor Drops Radio Plans

Finding that the contract with Radio had never been officially signed in New York, King Vidor has abandoned plans for an independent production on the lot.

SEN. BORAH PUTS ALLIED NRA KICK ON THE RECORD

Washington.—No less than the fighting Senator Borah yesterday placed the kicks of Allied Exhibitors before the Senate and in the Congressional Record. The Senator entered a telegram from the exhibitor independents as part of his exhibits from other industries and in support of his claim that the anti-trust laws should

New York REVIEWS

"GALLANT LADY"

Twentieth Century prod.; director, Gregory LaCava; writers, Gilbert Emery, Douglas Doty and Sam Mintz.

Rivoli Theatre

World-Telegram: It is the finest screen material Miss Harding has had since "Holiday." Being singularly fortunate, this time, in having an excellent story, Miss Harding rises gallantly to the occasion and gives a performance that is earnest and real.

Sun: Mr. LaCava's direction did much more than hold in check the potential sentimentalities of the theme. It even thawed the ice of Ann Harding's personality and persuaded her to give a human, alive performance instead of the usual coldly competent portrayals for which she is noted.

Mirror: Women who understand that women are the only real gentlemen will enjoy it. Miss Harding never has been more charming. And her supporting cast is great. The settings are handsome.

American: The picture rings true in all its poignant sequences and is exquisitely played by a cast of theatrical craftsmen. Ann Harding, always so effectively courageous in her films, here has a vehicle worthy of all her histrionic artistry.

Journal: Miss Harding contributes a moving and effective portrait and emerges a much more believable person than she has been in her last few films. Another change for the better is evinced by Clive Brook, who has recently been carrying restraint and reserve to somewhat exaggerated lengths. Much of the credit goes to Gregory LaCava for smooth and expert direction.

Herald-Tribune: It is sensibly directed by the expert Gregory LaCava. In this particular, though, it has the advantage of several admirable performances by the men of the cast. Mr. Brook is charming and credible, Tullio Carminati plays with highly engaging humor and Mr. Kruger is, as usual, excellent. Unfortunately the photoplay, for all its incidental virtues, is too ecstatic for comfort in its treatment of the Lady's gallantry.

Times: It is another case of the acting being superior to the story, but there is a good deal of well-written dialogue and Gregory LaCava's efficient direction, coupled with the splendid work of Miss Harding, Clive Brook, Otto Kruger, Janet Beecher, Tullio Carminati and others, results in the rather prosaic story being frequently quite interesting.

Post: "Gallant Lady" struck us as obvious stuff, built on the old formula of sacrifice and smiles through the tears. The triteness of the story is relieved by occasional touches of humor, and for these we can thank Tullio Carminati's ebullient portrait of the romantic Italian nobleman and Janet Beecher's fine performance as the head of the decorating shop. Otto Kruger is believable as the husband.

"LET'S FALL IN LOVE"

Columbia prod.; director, David Burton; writer, Herbert Fields; music, Harold Arlen; lyrics, Ted Koehler.

Rialto Theatre

Sun: Miss Sothern proves herself a capable movie ingenue. She sings pleasantly and her smooth blonde prettiness photographs well. Gregory Ratoff, in a dialect comedy role, is the producer; the catchy Arlen-Koehler songs and Miss Sothern's mimickings make "Let's Fall in Love" a good deal merrier than it would have been otherwise.

American: There are recognizable snatches of Hollywood history in the amusing movie at the Rialto. Of the players Ratoff, Lowe and Miss Birell share honors in that order, with Miss Sothern doing valiantly in a tough spot. Incidentally the play boasts a song hit and also the presence of Art Jarrett.

Post: The picture has humor, a delicate charm and one or two appealing melodies, and there is a story that actually gets somewhere. It isn't a tremendously original story except when you compare it to the run of screen musicals, whereupon its originality becomes positively colossal.

Journal: "Let's Fall in Love" is amusing entertainment, a good-natured spoof of Hollywood studio methods and marking the film debut of an attractive blonde named Ann Sothern, who is a decorative and capable young actress, with a definitely likable screen personality. It's a musical comedy, stronger on the comedy than on the music. Gregory Ratoff practically steals the show.

World-Telegram: In spite of its somewhat time-worn plot it has a certain amiable and charming quality about it. Certainly its leading parts are acted with more intelligence than ordinarily is the case and it has two lilting songs. What raises "Let's Fall in Love" to a slight distinction are its acting, its sane treatment and its pleasant tunes.

Herald-Tribune: There is a pleasantly unpretentious quality about it which helps to make it a modestly agreeable romantic comedy, a film that should supply its share of unexciting amusement. Miss Sothern seems destined for a reasonably eventful film career.

Times: A nimble-witted romantic comedy which trips along so lightly that the fade-out brings the spectator abruptly out of a mood. Musically, the new film is less overwhelming. There is only one song to fortify the title number, and while "Let's Fall in Love" sends you out of the theatre humming the picture repeats it rather too relentlessly for complete comfort. Although "Let's Fall in Love" embroiders a pleasing sentimental gauze around the attractively naive Miss Sothern, it is Mr. Ratoff's show. David Burton's direction has freshness and speed.

Miriam Hopkins Hit In N. Y. Personal

New York.—Miriam Hopkins has clicked with a bang in her "Affairs of Anatole" skit at the Paramount. The result is an immediate booking to repeat at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, opening February 9, with other bookings for Detroit, Buffalo and Boston probably to be lined up before she returns to the coast.

Marian Nixon Set For Durante Lead

Marian Nixon was signed yesterday by Radio for the feminine lead in the Jimmy Durante starring picture, "Strictly Dynamite," with Norman Foster and Alice White playing featured roles. The deal was made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

Sherman Out of MGM To Take Month's Rest

Owing to poor health, Joe Sherman, assistant publicity director to Howard Strickling at MGM, has been granted a one month's leave of absence. He leaves today for a boat trip along the coast of Mexico.

During Sherman's absence, Barrett Kiesling and Paul Snell, the latter coming over from Fox studio, will act as assistants to Strickling.

Ratoff on Another Jaunt of Personals

Gregory Ratoff leaves here tomorrow night for Chicago for a week on the stage of the Palace Theatre. From Chicago he goes to Boston and then Detroit will get him.

He has not signed the contract for George White's show yet.

Runyon Yarn Bought For McLaglen-Lowe

New York.—Damon Runyon's racy dialogue will provide the basis for the return of McLaglen and Lowe in the Quirt and Flagg characterizations, Fox closing a deal with the writer yesterday.

'Laughing Boy' in Can

The MGM production of "Laughing Boy," with Ramon Novarro as the star, is in the cutting room, production work having been completed yesterday. W. S. Van Dyke was the director.

'Moulin Rouge' Feb. 7

BOOST IN MAJORS' COSTS LOOMS AFTER 'ROSY' TALKS

Unions Assert Indie Sound Scale For All

Following a conference yesterday between Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt and representatives of the unions of the IATSE group, Harold V. Smith, business agent of the sound men's union, announced that Rosenblatt had assured him that the wage scale paid the sound men by the independent studios would become the prevailing wage scale in the industry.

"Mr. Rosenblatt told me that I could so notify the members of our union," said Smith. "This will mean a great deal to the sound men working in the major studios, for at present the independents are paying a larger scale than that paid to most sound men in the majors. Now, when this goes into effect, there will be no further discrimination either among men or studios."

Asked when the new scale will go into effect, Smith said he was not certain, but that Rosenblatt had told him to protest to the labor committee if it was violated. This has already been done, Smith declared.

Weekly scale for first sound men on independent productions is $175. On daily basis, it is $35 per day. With four week guarantee it is $140 per week, and on a six months, or longer contract, it is $125 per week.

If this goes into effect it will mean a considerable tilt in the production cost of pictures for the majors where most of the sound men are employed. Sound men feel that, as there is the element of overtime involved, studios will work now for greater spread of employment rather than pay overtime at the bigger scale.

Following the conference yesterday, officials of all of the IATSE unions expressed themselves as feeling, for the first time since the inception of the Code, that they are really getting somewhere in the interest of their members. Most of them also declared that they believed Rosenblatt had heard more real facts and "lowdown" on what is happening in production than he has heard since he has been here.

The cameramen put the question of greater spread of employment in Rosenblatt's lap, but he had no solution, they said, and referred them to the labor committee. However, he did give them one opinion that made them happy. It had to do with the wage scale of film loaders. For the past five years they have been classed as cameramen and after sixteen hours of work drew the flat rate of $12 per hour, known as the "Golden Hour." Under the Code they only get 83½ cents per hour. When asked about it, Rosenblatt told the union men, according to their report, that the film loader rightly belongs in the classification he has had previously. He told them to protest to the labor board, which has already been done.

Rosenblatt also assured the cameramen that the wage scales and hours in effect during the past five years would be protected by the overriding provi-

Dog Fight

Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt last night announced that on his return to Washington he will appoint a special committee composed of agents and producers whose function will be to handle the squawks of agents and producers under the code. A wisecracker was heard to remark that "Rosy does have a sense of humor."

Para To Remake Old Hit 'Grand Duchess'

Paramount has decided to remake one of its silent successes, "Grand Duchess and the Waiter," and will probably spot Miriam Hopkins and Gary Cooper in the leads. Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou headed the cast of the silent version which was produced in 1926. Possibility also that Menjou, now back on the lot on a three picture ticket, will be in the remake. No writers have been assigned to the script as yet.

Charell's First Fox Is 'Gypsy Melody'

Erik Charell's first picture for Fox is slated to be "Gypsy Melody," an original musical by Melchoir Lengyel, starring Charles Boyer.

Producer has signed Ernest Stern and Werner Heymann, German refugees formerly associated with Max Reinhardt, to handle the settings and music for the film. Robert Liebman has written the screen play.

Rumor 'Rosy' Due for Pan On Return to Washington

Washington.—Rumbles here that there is a growing faction among Senators and Representatives ready to put Sol Rosenblatt on the pan about the time he returns here from the Coast. Rosenblatt must naturally be on the receiving end of the flood of complaints that are coming from independent exhibitors and others on the Code.

'Mank' Alone

Marking some kind of a record for the MGM lot, the screen play of "The Showoff" went into production with only one writer having worked on it. That writer was Herman Mankiewicz and the preview will tell the rest of the story.

Charlie Lederer Back

Charlie Lederer is back in town after a ten months' stay in New York, taken up for the most part in backgammon and cribbage with Harold Ross, and Charlie is gloating over his winnings.

Arno on 'Vanities' Sets

Peter Arno has been assigned by Paramount to do the sets for the Earl Carroll picture "Murder at the Vanities," which Mitchell Leisen will direct.

Penalty For Code Dodgers, Says 'Rosy'

Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt last night announced that, while the film Code will be changed whenever it is found to be wrong, all violators of the Code will be dealt with in strict fashion. He did not explain what penalties would be inflicted, but indicated there would be some.

He will wind up his Hollywood visit today, leaving tonight on the Santa Fe Chief. His final day will be a full one, and will include among other things a meeting with a special committee from the Academy. His report to General Johnson will take him approximately a month to prepare, he said.

He met with a group of agents yesterday and heard what they had to say about Hollywood practices and high salaries. He will appoint a committee of agents and producers soon to handle their matters, and asked the agents to meanwhile prepare their recommendation on the famous Article 5 of the Code, covering raiding.

La Sullavan Does Airplane Fadeout

Margaret Sullavan, Universal star, did another airplane fadeout Tuesday night, it was learned yesterday. She hopped a plane for New York without telling the studio. It was all a big secret until she hit Kansas where reporters recognized her and the black eye she got while fishing recently. Promises to be back next week.

Six Tests on 'Sadie'

MGM claims that only six tests were made for the lead opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee," at a cost of $1200. The tests were made of Art Jarrett, Henry Wadsworth, Phil Regan, Al Morris, Charles Kaley and Senor Don Deane.

Some of the trouble was caused by change in the characterization as the writing of the part developed. The studio is now seeking Jimmy Dunn, as the part developed more for an actor than a crooner.

Lila Lee With Holt

Lila Lee has been signed by Columbia for the top spot opposite Jack Holt in "Whirlpool," which Roy William Neill will direct. Allen Jenkins has been borrowed from Warners for a featured role in this picture.

Art Directors to Dine

Art Directors Section of the Academy is planning to forget artistic creations and Academy problems by staging a "stag" dinner some time next week. Definite date not yet set.

Van Dyke on 'Thin Man'

W. S. Van Dyke has been set as the director to bring "The Thin Man," Dashiell Hammet's best seller, to the screen for MGM.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

When Dorothy Parker, sophisticated wit of the literary world, made her debut with Alexander Woollcott last Friday eve, things were a bit topsy-turvy now and again in the New York CBS studios. Miss Parker herself was frightened no little, and personally doubted whether she would be able to go through with the reading of her sarcastically humorous bit of verse, "The Waltz." Furthermore, the appearance of three of her friends added little comfort. They were James Montgomery Flagg, who seated himself nearby to make some charcoal sketches; Oscar Levant, brilliant young piano tickler, and Harpo (the silent one) Marx, of the capering Marx Brothers, who almost forced her to call the police.

Miss Parker, however, pulled herself together and gave a delightful reading. But this was nothing less than a cue for some frivolity. As Flagg put the finishing touches on the sketches of Miss Parker and Woollcott, Harpo scuttled across the studio and embraced Dorothy for the assembled photographers. Still unleashed, Harpo skipped up a staircase and sought out a pretty CBS hostess. He kissed her hand and threatened to break her arm if the camera clickers so wished. All this insanity upset everybody except Miss Parker, who believes, no doubt, that anything can happen in a broadcasting studio.

Mary Pickford nixed a dozen picture offers in past weeks because she still wants to do that play for Max Gordon, her "personal appearance" success having whetted her craving for the footlights.

If the money temptation is strong enough Roland Young will go the way of all flesh and "go radio" along with Hope Williams.

With the majority of the motion picture producers always on the lookout for new "stars-to-be," how come they've all passed up Ross Alexander and Frank Parker of the air waves? Alexander, who is by no means bad on the eyes, can out-act most of our present day "top" male attractions, while Parker, who sings sweet songs for sponsors, is the "t-d-h" type (tall, dark and handsome). You can thank me for the tip.

Provided Danny Winkler can persuade Miriam Hopkins to stay on, she'll go vaudevilling at four grand per!

Nazi propoganda films are getting into the country but are being kept off the screens because cautious exhibitors are turning thumbs down.

International Premiere Set for 'Wonder Bar'

Seek Cut in Chorus Girls $35 Wk. Check

New York.—Vaudeville houses and picture presentation houses are understood to be seeking a reduction in the $35 minimum weekly salary set by the code for chorus girls. This was the principal bone of contention at a Code Authority meeting yesterday.

No announcement was made as to conclusions reached, the matter being passed to a later meeting of the Code Authority, probably on the return of Sol Rosenblatt from the coast.

Foy Plans Third Dimension Picture

Stopping in Chicago for a few days en route from New York, Ben Stoloff returns here Sunday to start preparations for a third dimension feature which Foy productions will put into work in two weeks. Stoloff was away for five weeks.

Juggling With Censors In New York State

New York.—With the expectation that bills will be forthcoming in the state legislature within a few days to abolish censorship entirely, Assemblyman Neustein yesterday took a new tack and presented a bill calling for control of censorship to be taken from present hands and given the state comptroller.

Censorship is at present under a committee appointed by the Department of Education.

Ladies' Day at AMPA

New York.—Ladies' Day at the AMPA today is going to bring out a bevy of big names. Blanche Yurka, Elizabeth Arden, Kathryn Dougherty, of Photoplay, Carol Stone, Tamara, Lyda Roberti, Florence Desmond are among those already listed to be present.

Add to 'Men in White'

MGM put "Men in White" back on the stages yesterday for a day of retakes. Richard Boleslavsky directed the picture which has Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Jean Hersholt in the cast.

Assign Coslow-Johnston

Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston were teamed yesterday by Paramount to handle the song numbers for "Murder at the Vanities," which Mitchell Leisen directs.

May's First Foreign Play

Joe May's first directorial assignment on his term contract with Columbia is slated to be a Hungarian play which has not yet been given an English title.

Collins Out; McDonald In

Arthur Collins yesterday withdrew from the dialogue direction on "Hit Me Again" and Warners pushed Frank McDonald in to take over the task.

Horsley Up for Lead

M. H. Hoffman is considering John David Horsley for the juvenile lead in his next picture to go into production, which is yet untitled.

search for entertainment and if they find it, this industry will again prosper, but this time a prosperity even greater than ever before.

"But we must have entertainment to show our patrons. Good pictures are the beginning and end of this business and those good pictures can not and will not be made without a hard pull, a cooperative pull by every creator in every branch of production. If our pictures do not measure up to the entertainment desires of audiences from now on, I fear for the future of this business because I don't believe we will ever get another chance such as we have now.

"This whole industry here in Hollywood, those in every branch of it, must realize their importance in the making of screen entertainment. The technician is just as important as the star; the writer, the director, the producer, the cameraman, all have their important spot. We cannot make pictures without any one of them and with the whole collection working for better pictures, we will have greater pictures.

"Salaries? Certainly we will have to pay salaries proportionate to worth. If there is a difference in opinion as to that worth, or if the star, the writer or the director wants more, believes he deserves more than we (Paramount) think he is worth, then we are willing to arrange a sharing contract. We must be fair; anything that is unfair will not last.

"The crafts can not, must not, pull away from each other. There must be united action towards the making of great pictures and if one of the crafts fail, all will fall. We must all give and take, but must all contribute in the effort to make better pictures. The writer must work with the director and vice versa; the producer and the star must be in unison; the cameraman and the technician must have that enthusiasm that makes of their work a help, one to the other.

"This is no time for petty arguments, fits of jealousy or bickerings that will tend to hamper progress; we have a work to perform, certain that a great reward will result from its performance and we must go about it with the enthusiasm that makes success. We can't inspire ourselves with that enthusiasm if we are carrying a chip on our shoulder, if our forces are divided and one taking shots at the other.

"Paramount, as well as every other company, has just been through some very trying years, we have learned our lesson and I believe will profit from it. We have come out of our trouble and are headed for better things and this condition has been brought about through the loyalty and hard work of our employees. I am deeply grateful to every person in our organization for that loyalty and that hard work, without it there would not have been a Paramount now, with it we are in a position to go forward."

Zukor is leaving either tomorrow night or Saturday for New York and will return here in late March or early April to sit in on the formation of next season's program for Paramount.

sions of the code. When he was told that approximately 500 cameramen, seconds, still men and film loaders are now unemployed, he expressed more than mere surprise, and assured them he would do all possible to assist in solving the matter.

Lew Blix, business agent of Local 37, comprising grips, electricians and property men, had many complaints. He told Rosenblatt that studios are changing classification ratings to avoid higher pay rates. Blix said Rosenblatt declared that a violation of the Code. He was also told that some studios are relegating certain work to a lower pay class. That, too, he said, was a violation.

Blix also presented the suggestion that a card system be put into effect to spread employment. This would compel men to show their card at the start of a day's work, and if it showed 36 hours of work for the week, the man was not to be allowed to work, but another man be given the job. Rosenblatt told him to present that idea to the labor committee. Blix pointed out that some men are now working as much as from 70 to 110 hours a week.

All in all, the union officials were much encouraged, and expressed gratification over their conference.

'Sutter's Gold' Set As 'U' Fall Special

New York.—"Sutter's Gold," on and off the Universal program since 1927, and on which George O'Neill is now preparing a script, will be made on a scale to rate it the next big special of the company.

The Laemmles made the announcement here today that the story was now definitely set for the first big fall release, with the possibility that William Wyler will direct.

Joe E. Brown to Play Satevepost Tractor Hero

After setting a team of staff writers on the story for development before purchasing the property, Warners yesterday closed for the rights to the William Hazzlit Upson series of Saturday Evening Post stories of the adventures of a tractor salesman.

Joe E. Brown will star in the picture made from the series, with James Seymour supervising. The Ivan Kahn office negotiated the sale.

Frank Craven Back to Grease Paint for Mono

Laying aside the pen for a spell, Frank Craven turns actor for a star spot in Monogram's "City Limits," which William Nigh places into production tomorrow. The William Morris office negotiated the ticket.

Sally Blane, Ray Walker and Terry Ray have featured roles in a story by George Waggner.

Myers To Do 'Sea Girl'

The Dominos will hold their annual revel Sunday night, February 4, at their clubhouse, 1284 N. Crescent Heights boulevard. They have a nine-act show featuring Jean Harlow's first stage appearance in a sketch entitled "Rings on Her Fingers."

'U' Shifts Writer

Gertrude Purcell has taken off the script of "Human Side" at Universal and has been assigned to do a rewrite job on "Bachelor Wife," which Eddie Buzzell will direct. She will return to the script of "Human Side" later.

Gates on MGM Tag

Harvey M. Gates has been signed by MGM to do additional work on the script of "The Duchess of Delmonico's," which will be Jeanette MacDonald's next. Edgar Allan Woolf wrote the screen play.

'Operator 13' in Work

"Operator 13" got started yesterday at MGM, marking the shortest period ever experienced between pictures on a Davies vehicle.

Don Alvarado Returns

Don Alvarado has returned from his trip to England where he made two pictures for BIP.

Hugunin Trying To Untie Sennett Tangle

All claims for delinquent salary against Mack Sennett were on file with the referee yesterday with the exception of H. Lee Hugunin's for $5,685.85. Hugunin said that the reason he failed to file his claim was that all the creditors who signed the bankruptcy petition followed the action a few days later with a motion to withdraw. The motion was denied at that time. For that reason Hugunin will await the decision of the court on claims pending before taking action.

'Green Gold' Lead May Go To George Bancroft

Gary Cooper will not have the leading role in Charles R. Rogers' "Green Gold," as previously announced, because the picture is scheduled to get under way before the player completes "Operator 13" at MGM. Possibility Rogers will spot George Bancroft in the lead, now that "The World's Greatest Spender" has been shelved.

Roach Starts Next Monday

Patsy Kelly and Billy Gilbert head the cast of the Hal Roach all star musical comedy which the studio puts into production Monday. Others set for the comedy are Don Barclay, Will Stanton, Jack Barty and Douglas Wakefield. Leigh Jason directs.

Pichel in Dieterle Pic

Irving Pichel was yesterday added to the cast of the picture Wilhelm Dieterle is preparing as his next Warner opus.

In and Out

About three months ago MGM signed Jay Lloyd, who has a southern drawl, to a term contract and turned him over to Oliver Hinsdell to rid him of that drawl. Hinsdell rid him of the drawl and the actor's first assignment on the lot is to play the role of a confederate soldier in "Operator 13."

Guy Kibbee Plays 'Heavy' In WB's 'Without Honor'

Guy Kibbee steps out of the comedy class with his next Warner assignment, going into the role of a heavy in "Without Honor," the forthcoming Cagney-Blondell production.

Sarah Padden, Harold Huber and George Pat Collins have also been assigned to casting spots.

be reinstated at once. A bill which he has introduced to that effect is now pending.

In addition to claiming that the Code is monopolistic and the Code Authority dominated by major interests, Allied made a specific kick on the ground that majors are violating the Code by forcing an excessive amount of shorts with features.

The exhibs declare this is done by stamping the contracts with a clause stating the exhibitor has agreed to purchase the excess amount and then getting the exhibitor to initial that clause.

RKO-COOPER MAY QUIT

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WHY should the picture business permit itself to be pushed into any corner that professional reformers and politicians may choose? Why should this industry bow with thanks to every edict issued by State and Federal governments, restricting its operation? Why has not the screen the same freedom that is enjoyed by the press; if not that, the stage, magazines or books?

The answer to all of those questions is Will H. Hays in number one spot and our (so-called) industry leaders in the next position. Hays, because he is paid by this industry to work for the industry and our (so-called) industry leaders because they permit Mr. Hays to bulldoze them into submitting to anything.

This censorship thing has done more to harm motion pictures than all the depression you have ever heard of. It has killed off 90 percent of the really interesting stories that could have been adapted into fine screen entertainment.

The whole thing is silly and should be stopped, and it can be stopped if our picture heads finally get up enough courage to tell Mr. Hays he has done a bad job. Then put someone in his seat who will remind those responsible for censorship that we will not stand for it any longer and that it has to be changed, AND IT WILL BE CHANGED.

Professional reformers and politicians know the power of the screen as well as they realize the power of the press; they won't fool with the press and we should not permit them to ruin this business.

Of course the censorship angle as it now exists is for the most part a monster constructed by Mr. Hays. He has put words and actions into the persons of those professional reformers and politicians, and when their demands come in he calls meetings of his organization and then frightens the producers to death with what will happen if they don't submit.

The whole thing is more or less a threat to keep this industry believing that Hays is earning his regal salary and all of it should be licked by a few threats on the part of this business, once our so-called leaders are

N.Y. Bill Would Cut Agent Slice to 5%

New York.—Proposed legislation already introduced at Albany will be of interest to Hollywood agents. The bill calls for a limitation on commissions to five per cent, a $500 license fee and the posting of a bond.

Arthur Lyons, of Lyons and Lyons, has been elected president of the new organization, the National Association of Theatrical Representatives, to fight the legislation.

Mexico Will Get First Look at 'Villa'

David O. Selznick, George Cukor and Myron Selznick are packing their bags for a trip to Mexico City and the trick of using Mexico City as a preview town for the first time.

The Selznicks and Cukor will take a print of "Viva Villa" to show to Mexican officials for their O.K.

Schenck and Mannix Through The Canal

New York.—Nicholas M. Schenck will take his first ocean boat ride when he gets on a boat with Mrs. Schenck and Eddie Mannix Saturday bound for Los Angeles.

The boat trip is more of a recuperation jaunt for the Loew's boss in the hope of completely recovering from his recent flu attack.

Foy Sets Col. Release

New York.—Release arrangements have been set by which Bryan Foy will distribute a baseball picture, "Called on Account of Darkness," through the Columbia organization.

Salary, Percent Demands By Present Production Head May Split Them. Rowland in for Unit

There is every indication that Radio Pictures and Merian C. Cooper may split, with the present production head leaving and taking his Whitney millions and production to another lot and with another release, very likely Paramount. New York believes that the deal that is being talked between Radio and Richard A. Rowland will soon be closed for Rowland to join the production organization here as a unit producer.

It is understood that the Cooper matter will be cleared today, that either the deadlock that has existed in the conferences between J. R. McDonough, B. B. Kahane, Cooper and Ned Depinet will be broken or Mr. Cooper's resignation will be accepted,

Announcement—

Believing that the creative workers of the motion picture industry desire a method of making annual awards for exceptional contributions to the screen art, that will reflect the impartial choice of ALL members of the picture-making branches, the Hollywood Reporter is privileged to announce that it will conduct a vote soliciting the opinions of creators on the outstanding achievements of 1933 in performance, direction, writing, photography and technical.

Within the next week a booklet will be sent out to every member of the production industry listing all the pictures produced during 1933 with the proper credits for those productions. A ballot will be attached with a request that each member write in his selections of the most meritorious work in each division.

A representative committee covering each branch in the industry will be asked to count and tabulate these votes. Announce-

Velez and Hubby As Team for MGM

David Selznick plans to bring Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller together in the South Sea story "Paradise," which was written by Leo Birinski for MGM.

The original plan was to co-star Jean Harlow and Weissmuller in this vehicle. Richard Boleslavsky is slated to direct.

Warner Aides on Train Carrying 'Rosy' to East

Sam Schneider, assistant to H. M. Warner, and his wife and Harold Bareford, of Warners legal department, and his wife left last night for the East on the same train that carried Sol Rosenblatt to Washington. Bareford and Schneider were out here two weeks.

Swanson-Thalberg Close

Negotiations between Irving Thalberg and Gloria Swanson have been concluded, the MGM producer yesterday signing the player to a one-picture deal with options. No story has been selected as yet, although two are being considered.

Gable and Missus Go East

Clark Gable and his wife left last night on the Chief for the New York visit that he has been waiting for a long time. He plans to be gone three weeks, unless the studio sends for him before then.

Lasky Sr. Delays Return

Jesse Lasky Jr. gets in tomorrow from his month's vacation in Havana. Jesse Lasky Sr. does not return until Monday, having stopped off for a few days in Florida on the return trip.

MGM Dusts Off 'Zenda'

"Prisoner of Zenda" has been put back on MGM's production schedule for this year and will be produced by David Selznick.

THE LOW DOWN

The day's ha! ha! So it seems that a pair of agents had a swelegant crooner that they imported from New York—a humdinger for pictures. So the crooner was so dumb they wouldn't let him out anywhere except under guard for fear he'd say the wrong thing. So finally they had him all set for a swell contract at a major studio—the deal was to be signed the following morning. So they let the crooner out by himself the night before. The fellow went to the Brown Derby for dinner and got into conversation with a man who happened to be the casting director of the studio where he was about to land—but the singer didn't know that. And he started telling the director all about how wonderful Hollywood is—and that he was about to sign with a studio for seven hundred and fifty a week—and that he had never made more than a hundred in his life! P.S. When the agents got to the studio the next day the contract was not forthcoming on account of they wanted "too much money." And they finally landed their singer-actor at this studio for a hundred and seventy-five per!

Ben Wasson swears it's true—in fact he swears that Beulah Bondi heard it at the same time. They were listening to the radio—and a man was extolling the wonders of a certain brand of maple syrup. Al Kaufman is about to get a much-needed vacation, on account of he works so hard. Someone was reminding Al that he needed a rest, and reminded him how hard Irving Thalberg worked before ill-health forced him on a long vacation. "You know," said the pal, "Irving worked eighteen hours a day—nobody should work that hard!"

"Irving didn't work so hard," countered Kaufman, "I know for a fact that he played bridge one night a week."

'ROSY' OFF FOR WASHINGTON WITH HIS EARS NEEDING REST

Final Day Packed In Meets For All

Declaring that his visit to Hollywood had been more than satisfactory, and praising everyone in the industry for the cooperation given him, Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt left for Washington last night.

His final day was the busiest of his entire visit. Among those with whom he conferred were: A special committee from the Academy, a committee from the Screen Actors' Guild, a committee of "extras," a committee of independent producers, another of independent theatre operators, Pat Casey, Dave Allen, Richard L'Estrange of the studio labor committee, Harold V. Smith of the sound men's union, Harry Edington and a group of other agents, Ben Berinstein and Charles W. Cunningham, local NRA compliance official.

Rosenblatt said that he had listened to the complaints and reports of these people, but refused to comment upon what had happened or what action he had taken, other than to confirm his instructions to the Academy to select nominees for possible appointment to code committees.

However, it was learned that the independent theatre men protested against discrimination and told why they believed they should be allowed to show double features.

With Cunningham he discussed the details of the setup of the many and sundry committees which will be appointed on his return to Washington for the handling of the grievances of the many groups in the industry.

To Harold Smith of the soundmen's union he reiterated his decision of the previous day to the effect that the prevailing wage scale of soundmen among the independent studios would become the prevailing scale in the entire industry.

"I could not say too much about the cooperation that has been given me in Hollywood by everyone from the highest producer to the lowliest extra," he declared. "I accumulated more information in less time and with less effort than I had even anticipated in my most enthusiastic moments. My report will be ready approximately by March 1."

'Rosy' Leaves To Take Rest

The Sol Rosenblatts went Hollywood in a very big way. This despite the fact that the Deputy NRA Administrator said on arrival that he would not attend any parties.

He was "partied" morning, noon and night every day that he was n Hollywood, and even took a flash at Caliente and Palm Springs on the run. He is said to have confided to friends that he was returning to Washington for a REST.

Indies Make It Easy For New Members to Join

Forty-three new members are expected to be added to the Independent Motion Picture Producers of America as a result of last night's meeting.

Meeting over luncheon at the Hotel Roosevelt earlier in the day, the association's officers voted to drop the $250 initiation fee and $25 a month charge for dues, all members now being charged five dollars the negative reel dues. M. H. Hoffman continues as president, as do the remaining officers and board.

Rogers Para. Unit Goes Into Brief Lull Period

With six of his ten pictures on the 1933-34 Paramount program finished, the Charles R. Rogers unit is again quiet and will not have any productions working for from two to four weeks.

The next picture to hit the stages will be "In Conference" and no cast has been set as yet.

Back Where He Started

Harry Oliver, busy on the General Service lot these days as Harold Lloyd's art director, is getting some good natured kidding, being back with Lloyd with whom he started seventeen years ago. Oliver is on loan from MGM.

Wiener Moves Offices

Hal Wiener has moved his independent publicity offices to 9000 Sunset boulevard, being located with the Kay and Stuart agency.

Velez-Durante Will Team for Radio Also

With Edward Small pointing the way by teaming Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez in "Palooka," Radio yesterday effected the loan of El Velez from MGM to again be bracketed with Durante in "Strictly Dynamite."

Picture goes into work February 15 under Elliott Nugent's direction. H. N. Swanson is supervising.

Lowe Goes on the Air

Edmund Lowe has been signed, through the Selznick and Joyce radio department, for one appearance on the Ipana toothpaste hour from New York the second week of this month.

Lowe leaves with his wife, Lilyan Tashman, for New York the first part of next week.

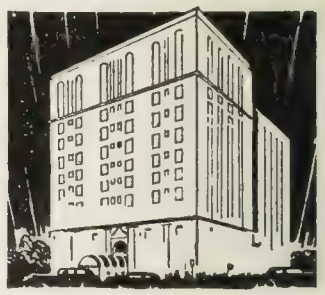
able to convince themselves that they are being taken for a sleigh-ride by Hays.

The entertainment served picture patrons MUST hold the same attractiveness as that furnished by books, plays, newspapers and magazines. Submitting to the Hays edicts, writers cannot write that type material, without which there is very little screen entertainment. No entertainment, no patrons and—you write the rest.

PARA SIGNS ROXY AND GANG IN N. Y.'S FIRST RUN WAR

New York.—There's a personal appearance war on in the big Broadway first runs which gives an indication of how scarce the pictures are that can be counted on to fill the big houses.

Paramount has been shooting the big guns, starting with Mary Pickford and Miriam Hopkins and yesterday slamming a big one over with the signing of Roxy and His Gang for a ten weeks' engagement, splitting five each in New York and Brooklyn. The act will get $10,000 weekly.



The Capitol has countered with Buddy Rogers backed by other big names and a reorganized orchestra slated to open February 16 simultaneously with Roxy.

Over in Brooklyn the Fox rushed frantically around and grabbed Mae Murray for a week's personal starting tomorrow to counteract Mary Pickford's appearance at the Brooklyn Paramount.

PARA. FIRST ON CARPET BEFORE THE LABOR BOARD

Cameramen Battle For 2ds and Asst's

One of the first of the major studios that will find itself involved with the Studio Labor Committee, appointed by Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt to handle the NRA grievances of the labor element, will be Paramount, according to authoritative information disclosed in camera circles yesterday.

It was learned that the cameramen's union is preparing to present a protest, claiming that Paramount has been discriminating against a group of some twenty-eight cameramen and assistants who were among those who walked out during the strike last summer.

The Paramount situation, according to the cameramen, is unusual in that while the studio officials will not allow these men to return, some of the most important first cameramen in the business have been pleading with the company to bring them back.

"Most of these seconds and assistants," explained one cameraman yesterday, "had been working at Paramount for from five to fourteen years. They have become invaluable to the first cameramen who have been working with them for years. Victor Milner, of the A.S.C., and one of the ace cinematographers on the Paramount lot, has pleaded the cause of some of the men to no avail. Union officials are appreciative of Milner's efforts.

"The first cameramen have put forth the claim that the return of these seconds and assistants would speed up production, as they would increase efficiency and thus cut down camera costs. But to date thumbs have been kept down upon them."

'Lily Mars' Set As Next For Jean Harlow at MGM

Although MGM has half a dozen scripts ready for Jean Harlow as her initial production since settling the star's contractual difficulties last week, hottest is said to be the Booth Tarkington story "Presenting Lily Mars," which the Saturday Evening Post published.

It now remains for the player to accept the assignment. Larry Weingarten is handling the supervisory reins and Margaret Hawkins turned in her completed script on the screen play yesterday, checking off the company payroll.

Boland-Radio Deal Set

Radio brought its negotiations with Mary Boland to the signing and sealing stage yesterday, getting the player for an important spot in "Stingaree" on a deal exclusive of her Paramount ticket. Richard Dix and Irene Dunne rate top billing.

Pascal Back in Town

Ernest Pascal returned from New York yesterday, after having set the arrangements for the publication of his novel, "Woman at Thirty," by Harcourt-Brace & Company. Warners are talking a term deal with the writer.

Tough Luck

After the Police Department carefully pasted up the lobby displays at the Marcal Theatre on "Elysia" a few days ago someone approached said displays with a safety razor blade Tuesday night. And you'd be surprised at the amount of disappointment.

Robinson in 'Dark Tower' Before 'Nap'

Edward G. Robinson has been assigned the lead in "The Dark Tower" by Warners and the picture has been scheduled for production before "Napoleon."

"The Dark Tower" is a current stage success by George S. Kaufman and Alexander Woollcott. No writers on the script as yet.

Ratoff Finally Signs Deal With Geo. White

Gregory Ratoff put his name on the contract for George White yesterday to appear in the new White's "Scandals" opening in the spring.

By the contract Ratoff is to receive top male billing.

Orry-Kelly to Paris

Warners announce that Orry-Kelly, designer for the studios, will leave for Paris in a few weeks to combine contact with coming styles and special searching on "Napoleon" and "The Key."

Schenck Finally Leaves

New York.—Joseph M. Schenck finally got away on the Century yesterday and will arrive here Sunday afternoon. His departure had been delayed from day to day since Monday.

Bank V-P with Warners

New York.—Louis Kaufman, a former vice-president of the Guardian Bank, of Cleveland, has joined Warner Brothers to handle Code violation complaints.

Cukor-Estabrook May Visit England

George Cukor and Howard Estabrook are discussing a trip to England, departing within a couple of weeks, to get a first hand slant on locations and atmosphere for "David Copperfield."

Casting problems on the picture are already worrying David Selznick. Since the story is semi-autobiographical the question to be decided is whether to have two or three stars handle various stages of David Copperfield's life, according as the screen development makes the different periods important.

London Fox Publicity Head on Way to Holly

London.—Roy Simmonds, Fox publicity head for most of Europe, has left for a six weeks' sojourn in Hollywood, looking over the pictures that are now in work and getting an idea the way they are sold in America.

Dick Powell Goes North

Dick Powell left yesterday for a two weeks' vacation in Del Monte. He will commute from there to San Francisco February 7 for the first Old Gold broadcast over the CBS chain. He returns here for his second broadcast a week later and to start his next Warner picture.

Allvine on 'Clever' Yarn

Glendon Allvine has taken over the supervisory reins on "And Let Who Will Be Clever" at Radio. Ray Harris is writing the screen play for the Alvin Asher yarn.

Alex Moss to Para.

New York—Alex Moss, recently with the Rialto, has joined the Paramount exploitation department.

Evelyn Venable Returns

Evelyn Venable, Paramount young star, returned yesterday from a visit to Cincinnati, her former home.

ACAD. ROSY OVER 'ROSY'S' ENCOURAGEMENT IN CHAT

Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt met yesterday with a special committee of the Academy and instructed the five branches of that organization to elect nominees for the various code committees that will be appointed when he returns to Washington.

The writers' and actors' branches were advised to select nominees for the Agency Committee; also for a committee that will be made up of five producers and five actors, and another to consist of five producers and five writers. Also nominees for the Code Authority.

Technicians' and directors' branches were also advised to select nominees for the Agency Committee and the Code Authority, these nominees' names to be forwarded to him as soon as the selection has been made.

While Rosenblatt did not definitely state that he would appoint these Academy nominees to any of the committees, Academy members were jubilant last night because they gathered from his attitude that his instructions to the Academy would just about dispel the idea that the guilds would be the only people recognized in Washington.

Rosenblatt was also asked by the committee as to what he thought of the work of the various conciliation departments of the Academy and the various codes the Academy has placed in effect. He was asked if they would conflict with the NRA code. To which he replied that he thought the Academy had been doing a fine and constructive work in the past, that the machinery of the Academy does not conflict with the NRA code, and he hoped they would continue their excellent work.

YESTERDAY IN New York

A very dull show indeed was considerably livened up the other evening by the antics and carryings-on of one of the better known critics of the drayma. Said critic walked into the theatre considerably happier from the benefits of repeal, walked out in the middle of the first act and didn't come back until the middle of the second. By that time his condition had become sooo bad, that two gentlewomen sitting next to him rose and left hurriedly. And then, after the show, came the big laugh of the evening when an usher had to be sent back to recover the critic's shoes which he had conveniently removed and inconveniently forgotten.

Walter Connelly has been hoping that the studio won't send him that telegram demanding his return to the coast until after the opening of his wife's show.

Elsa Maxwell has taken off for other fields to conquer. The farewell party given in her honor by Vernon Duke and Jules Glaenzer was so good that we quite forgot to find out just where Elsa is going, but it's bound to be some place good just as soon as La Maxwell gets there. At any rate, Moss Hart, Cole Porter, Carman Barnes, William Rhinelander Stewart, Conde Nast, Erskine Gwynne and Lois Long came around to say "good-bye" to Elsa.

Vincent Sardi is earning himself a nice bit of extra income due to the fact that Miriam Hopkins is making a personal appearance at the Paramount this week. The skit in which she appears calls for the serving and eating of food. And five times a day Miriam has to eat a lamb chop, a souffle and trimmings. She could have had her diet and kept it, too, if they had made it lamb chop and pineapple.

Bill Howard gave a tea party that really served tea the other day. Only the tea happened to be of the Joyz Mate variety which is stimulating to say the least. It's a tasty little dish that Doug Fairbanks Sr. brought to New York some years ago when he filmed "The Gaucho" and every once in a while ever since then somebody thinks of having a tea party. Mrs. Emily Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Glaenzer and Blair Niles attended but everyone but Miss Niles preferred bacardi cocktails.

Irene Barrymore, who arrived in town the other day with her husband and under the care of a nurse, dashed from her suite right over to the hairdressers for a permanent; came back, had a large luncheon party followed by a cocktail party that she gave for Tallulah Bankhead, Peggy Fears, Tom Douglas and Roland Leigh, went out to dinner and stayed out until four in the morning. The next day Mrs. Barrymore suffered a very serious relapse. So serious, indeed, that even Lionel is not allowed to see her.

FIRST ACT HURTS 'ALIMONY'; NEW BARRY PLAY A SERMON

Has Film Chance With Treatment

"HOTEL ALIMONY"

A comedy by A. W. Pezet; adapted from a farce by Adolph Phillipp and Max Simon; presented by Franklin and Stoner at the Royale Theatre; directed and staged by A. W. Pezet; in nine scenes; settings by P. Dodd Ackerman. Cast: Eve Farrell, Peter Goo Chong, John Henry McKee, Robert Emmett Keane, James Shelburne, Nancy Evans, Sheldon Leonard, Winifred Law, Desmond Gallagher, Tom Dillon and fourteen others.

New York.—This play is a mixture of both good and bad writing. Starting with a theme that hasn't been touched upon extensively in the theatre at all, and one which cries aloud for biting sarcastic farce treatment, the author has seen fit to foist a very bad first act on his public which ruined whatever chances the play might have had. Especially since the play does warm up in its last two acts and some members of the cast are allowed to strut their stuff to good advantage. Robert Emmett Keane, for instance—who nearly succeeds in stealing the show in the last act.

The opus deals with a vindictive woman who wants to eat her cake and have it too. Not satisfied at being permitted to file an uncontested suit for divorce—receiving her husband's cooperation in planting divorce grounds collusively arrived at, and other liberal treatment at the hands of her ex-spouse—she jealously objects to her first husband remarrying.

Backed by her unscrupulous mother, the wife demands $300 a week alimony as part of the divorce agreement. The husband is advised by his attorney not to agree to it; that he is putting his head in a noose and his future entirely in the hands of his first wife—who can put him in jail and keep him there for the rest of his life as long as alimony remains unpaid. Determined to be free of her to marry his new sweetie, the hero, who is a musical comedy producer, signs the agreement.

We next find him in jail sure enough. Life in the alimony jail is humorously and bitterly depicted—with its squabbling wives calling for their alimony payments—the gambler who has framed himself into jail so as to recoup his fortune playing poker with the inmates—the poet who has unjustly been committed—the grafting wardens and jail keepers—all make an interesting and moving picture of the plight of victims of feminine greed.

The best scene in the play is between the wife and the second husband (Nancy Evans and Robert E. Keane), both returning to their apartment New Year's eve, very drunk. Recriminations fly thick and fast as does the crockery.

The picture flashback technique is employed in the third act to bridge time gaps between the four scenes, which just barely gets by. Given a good cast headed by Lee Tracy, this play would furnish excellent material for a picture, or best of all a light farcical musical comedy treatment of this theme would serve best of all.

Forbidden Word

Leo Birinski tells it. In Germany people are not allowed to mention the word "Jew" even in connection with humorous stories. So now the stories go like this: "Two Chinamen were coming out of a synagog when one said to the other, 'Scholem Aleichem'."

Headaches Loom For Code Authority

New York.—An idea of the headaches that will hit the Code Authority on exhibitor scraps may be judged from the fact that the important Lee Ochs circuit in New York is preparing to put up a bitter scrap over inability to get product.

Ochs complains that the Springer-Cocalis chain following on Loew's and RKO in his neighborhood leave him nothing to play.

Cherrill Scorns Offers To Return With Cary

London.—Virginia Cherrill has turned down every offer made to her by two of the major studios here to do a picture immediately after she finishes the quickie ("Monday at Ten") that is now in production, because she wants to be with Cary Grant when he sails February 9.

Virginia Van Upp, former secretary to Horace Jackson, was given a break by Paramount with the assignment to write a treatment on "Lovers in Quarantine." Miss Van Upp handed in a finished script of a story which met with the approval of the studio, and she was given this opportunity to become a full-fledged writer.

Erwin Child in Danger

News became public yesterday that a fire in the home of Stuart Erwin and June Collyer on Tuesday night had endangered the life of their eighteen months old son who was saved through the presence of mind of his nurse. The fire did little damage.

Small Talks to Lachman

Negotiations are being concluded for Harry Lachman to direct one picture for Edward Small in the near future. Small, who has seen and likes the director's work, is signing him for one picture, with no story in mind at present.

Dumbrille in 'Operator 13'

Douglas Dumbrille and Samuel Hinds are the latest additions to the cast of "Operator 13," the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper co-starring picture, which Raoul Walsh is directing for MGM.

Latest Lillian Gish A Screen Problem

"THE JOYOUS SEASON"

By Philip Barry; presented by Arthur Hopkins at the Belasco Theatre. Cast: Eric Dressler, Jane Wyatt, Jerome Lawler, Barry McCollum, Alan Campbell, John Eldredge, Florence Williams, Moffat Johnston, Mary Kennedy, Lillian Gish, Kate Mayhew and Mary Hone.

New York.—Philip Barry preaches a sermon. In his new play, "The Joyous Season," which is much after the manner of "The Servant in the House," this eminent author brings a saintly influence to straighten out the turmoils of a family.

Written with distinction and honesty, but limited by its subject matter, the play unfortunately lacks the entertainment value of his earlier plays like "The Animal Kingdom."

The plot is simple. The Farleys are a prosperous Irish family living in the smart Back Bay section of Boston and striving to keep up with Boston culture and fashion. They are a large family, all living together in the substantial house left by their parents, and in their desire for ease and comfort never striking out for themselves. Only one has strayed from the fold—a daughter, who has entered the Church. Now she is a Reverend Mother, greatly beloved and respected.

It is Christmas and the Reverend Mother has come to spend the day. There is the question of disposing of the house which really belongs to the Reverend Mother, and her sisters and brothers are reluctant to give it up. The nun expects a joyous family to greet her but finds each engrossed with his particular problem. With a radiance that contains more of the joy of fine living than the remote saintliness of the Church, and with quiet good sense and humor, she helps everyone. She reconciles her young sister and brother-in-law who were about to become estranged—she urges the oldest brother, who has taken the cares of the family too literally upon his shoulders, to look out for himself. He must marry and have a family of his own. She comforts the youngest sister of all—a tense, neurotic child who fancies herself in love with her sister's husband, and even the other members of the family, who seem to need no help, cannot but feel her influence.

She finally departs, leaving the disposal of the house up to the family itself and it is they, not she, who decide to give it up and go their separate ways, standing upon their own feet.

Lillian Gish, as the Reverend Mother, gives one of the most outstanding performances of her career. Moffatt Johnson as the oldest brother is excellent. June Wyatt as the young married sister gives a fine account of herself. Eric Dressler, Alan Campbell and Barry McCollum are all good in their respective roles. Picture possibilities are problematical.

Leonard on MGM's Next For Dressler

Robert Leonard is slated to direct "Coming Around the Mountain," which will be a Marie Dressler-Polly Moran co-starring vehicle, as his next assignment for MGM.

This picture is scheduled to be next on the program for Marie Dressler.

Lloyd Tags Al Newman To Handle Music Score

Yesterday, through the courtesy of United Artists, Harold Lloyd borrowed Al Newman to handle the musical score of his picture, "The Catspaw."

He also purchased yesterday the latest song from Roy Turk and Harry Akst, called "I'm Just That Way." This will be featured in a big cabaret scene in the picture.

RKO-Cooper May Quit

with no successor announced, inasmuch as the lot will go entirely unit production with Kahane in direct charge. This whether Cooper remains or not.

The deadlock, it is understood, was created through the desire of Cooper to receive about the same remuneration he was paid last year, even though the desk of "production head" will be entirely abolished. Cooper drew in excess of $500,000 during the past twelve months with $2,500 a week salary and the rest represented as 20 percent of the profits on every picture the lot turned out.

It is believed that McDonough has steadfastly held that Cooper is entitled to a percentage only on the pictures that his unit produces and that each producer will be given the same break. Cooper is understood to have reminded the gathering that the majority of his pictures, which will include most of the year's big specials, will be financed outside of Radio (by Whitney) and for this reason his split should be adjusted to approach his past year's earnings. Thus the deadlock.

It is rumored that if Cooper packs up and gets out that he will lease space in a rental plant and make the Whitney pictures for a Paramount release.

The angle on Richard A. Rowland is that negotiations have been going on between Radio and himself, which, if closed, would provide a berth at the plant for the former First National boss as a unit producer.

It is reliably stated that when announcement is made as to the new policy of Radio it will be straight unit production with from five to seven unit producers making from four to eight pictures a year each and that all will have a weekly drawing account against a percentage of the net gross of their product.

Pandro Berman, Kenneth Macgowan and Louis Brock are definitely set as producers, with from two to four others added.

'NANA' HAS EXCEPTIONAL OPENING IN N.Y. AND 'CHI'

New York.—For the first two shows of the screening of "Nana" at the Music Hall here yesterday the house did absolute capacity with plenty of standees. The total take for the two performances amounted to $6,149, indicating a $14,000 take for the day This will not show a record for the day, but will probably do so for four shows. "Little Women" holds the record, but played five shows, opening at 9.30 in the morning.

The Goldwyn deal for the Music Hall engagement gives him 75 percent of everything over $65,000, demanding that he contribute $3,500 for advance advertising, with RKO to spend $12,000.

Business here today was remarkable in face of a severe snowstorm. An hour before the theatre opened there was a line three abreast extending around the side of the house, almost to Fifth avenue.

All the local papers gave the picture raves.

Chicago.—In spite of a fierce snowstorm here the Samuel Goldwyn production of "Nana" got off to a flying start at the United Artists Theatre, doing almost three times the record business of "Roman Scandals" in the same theatre. "Scandals" did $1,209 up to 3 p.m. and "Nana" rolled in a gross of $3,020

All the papers gave it raves, with the Daily News stating: "We don't know what to talk about first, the great picture or the great romance in its making."

Indie Sten Picture Set For L.A. Debut Monday

First Anna Sten foreign picture to crack the Los Angeles sector will be the Ufa production, "The Tempest," which Jacobs and Bregstein have set for a run at the President Theatre next Thursday.

Picture co-stars Emil Jannings and comes in a week ahead of the Sam Goldwyn production, "Nana."

Yiddish Talkie Here 22nd

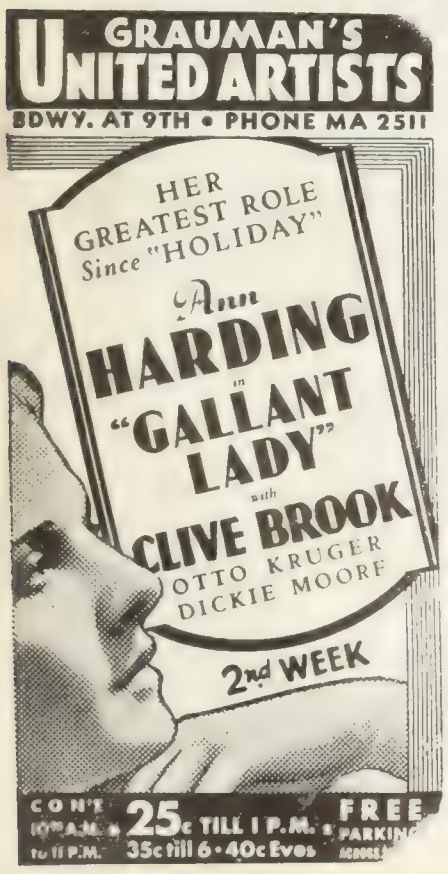
Sam Berkowitz is opening a two week engagement at the Figueroa theatre on February 22 of an all-Jewish talking film, "Uncle Moses," featuring Maurice Schwartz. Sholom Asch wrote the story and Sidney Golden directed.

Marcin Changes Yarns

Max Marcin will not do "The Night Cap" for Universal as previously announced, but instead will write and direct "The Humbug," his own story.

Mitzi Green Bows Out On Radio's 'School' Pic

Mitzi Green was given her release yesterday from a featured role in "Finishing School" by Radio.



Player, through Small-Landau, registered the request for the contract cancellation stating the part was not important enough for her. Understanding was when the deal was sealed in New York that the role would be built up for her, but it developed that the script could not be altered to suit, Radio subsequently agreeing to the release. Dawn O'Day gets the part.

Premiere to Sennett

Sig Neufeld and Leslie Simmonds, producing as Premiere Attractions, have moved production to the Mack Sennett lot and will start shooting "Marrying Widows" next Saturday. Deal was set by Jed Buell, head of the Sennett rental department. Premiere was formerly located at Talisman studio.

Christine Ames has completed her treatment on the Edward Sloman story temporarily titled "Today We live" for Universal. She was at the studio on a one-picture deal.

Klangfilm Goes Easy on Infringing Exhibs

Berlin.—As a means of working out disputes with exhibitors showing talkies on non-patented apparatus, Klangfilm has agreed to put a special low cost output on the market for theatres having less than four hundred seats.

The company will then refrain from action against theatres that replace present infringing outfits with the new low cost proposition. The deal has been worked out in cooperation with the exhibitors' organization.

Monogram Lists Buys For 1934-35 Program

New York.—Monogram is getting its story purchases for the 1934-35 season lined up well in advance. W. Ray Johnston, president of the company, summarized buys to date today:

"Heads Up," by Adele Commandini; "The Right Man," by A. Payson Terhune; "Women Who Kill," by Frederick and Fanny Hatton; and "Twenty Years," by Robert F. Roden.

Columbia Plans American Version of Mexican Film

Columbia has polished off a releasing deal with Miguel Contreras Torres, Mexican producer, to handle "Jaurez and Maximillian" which Torres made in Mexico.

Deal came through after Joseph Seidleman, Columbia sales executive, saw the picture and got the company to agree to make an American version of the film for the English-speaking market.

IATSE CAMERAMEN PLAN ENTIRE REORGANIZATION

What many cameramen predict may prove to be one of the most important general meetings in the history of Local 659, IATSE, has been called for next Monday night at 8 o'clock at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting, announced yesterday by General Manager E. T. Estabrook, is for the purpose of laying plans for a complete reorganization of the cameramen's local before the members. Some indication of its importance lies in the fact that only members bearing paid-up cards will be admitted. For some time officials of the union have been very quietly working out extensive plans for a reorganization of the local. The late strike brought out some of the members point out, and while remaining comparatively quiet and giving some people the impression that they were merely marking time union executives have been busily engaged in formulating a setup that it is expected will make the organization one that will not only function with smoothness and efficiency, but will make it an organization that will be more beneficial to its membership.

The plans that have been worked out will be presented to the members at the meeting and, says Estabrook, "every member will be given the opportunity to express his views and make his suggestions. Nothing will be done without the fullest opportunity being given the membership for discussion."

★★★★ The audience gave it unanimous acclaim!

Previewed at the California, Glendale. Running time, 60 mins.

Carried largely on the capable trouper shoulders of Lucile Gleason, with Skeets Gallagher supporting with an odd but agreeable kind of comedy, and direction which pilots a hard working cast through a constantly twisting story, 'Woman Unafraid' provides first class entertainment, with special appeal to the family trade. NO COOPER SUCCESSOR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•GOOD news ————!

BUSINESS IS BETTER.

Yesterday we talked to four out-of-town exhibitors, all key-city exhibitors, all running big houses, all in widely different sections of the country, AND all told us that for the past five weeks business has been EXCELLENT.

That's news—good news.

The story runs that from the middle of August to the first week of November business was all right, not good, but profitable. Then something happened, something terrible happened; the bottom dropped out of everything and for six or seven weeks conditions in the ticket selling business were the poorest ever experienced. "It was awful," said one of our informants.

Along towards the last week of December things began to pick up, what with a few better pictures and a general loosening of the purse strings, and the past month has been tremendous —with every indication that it will even be better "IF WE GET GOOD PICTURES."

We told you twice recently of Adolph Zukor and his enthusiasm regarding Paramount. But he has even a greater enthusiasm (if such a thing is possible) and that is the feeling that most of these big white elephants that have been sinking Paramount and most every other company and individual operator are doing better business. And that's news also.

Says Zukor: "We can't get our costs back out of the small towns and neighborhoods; we have to get it out of the big houses with their higher admissions, longer runs, etc. And, too, those big houses have to advertise the pictures for the little fellows. If business is bad in those spots, as it has been, it gives us very little money return for our production efforts and sinks the little fellow who depends on that word-of-mouth advertising to get his patrons in for the show. Consequently when business in the big houses picks up to such an extent we can restore proper admissions and play to something resembling capacity, we will have licked the depression."

"But," says Zukor, "we must have good pictures to do it."

Yea! Yea! Mr. Zukor.

MGM, Fox Jammed On Musical Idea

MGM and Fox will both soon release musical pictures with a single sequence that will be identical, in idea.

The White Scandals at Fox has a bit burlesquing the Busby Berkeley dance routines and girls. All men are used and they are dresed as bums.

"The Hollywood Party" has the same idea, but instead of bums, they are using all the comics in the picture to depict the dances and formations.

Fox is finishing shooting theirs and MGM is just starting camera work on their part.

Junior Tells the Boys They Talk Too Much

Universal's executive staff was delicately charged with talking too much in a note that went to every associate producer on the lot from Carl Laemmle Jr. advising them in the future to maintain a closed mouth on all studio business.

Action was taken to plug up a score of news leaks which have been keeping the newspaper boys happy so far as Universal was concerned.

Job Of Producing Head Closed At Radio With Studio On Unit Basis And Kahane The Boss

There will be no successor to Merian C. Cooper at Radio. The job of production head for Radio Pictures is no more. That's a thing of the past and a new deal goes into that plant. Radio will go 100 per cent unit production with B. B. Kahane, president of Radio, as the studio boss to decide all arguments, make unit assignments, attend to the signing of contracts, and become a general service head for his unit producers.

The above follows the exclusive story printed in these columns yesterday that a showdown was at hand with Cooper and it looked as if he would wash up at that plant as production head. Cooper's resignation

Soviet Yarn Still Hot at Columbia

Contrary to reports, Columbia has not abandoned the production of "Red Square," a Lewis Milestone picture, but instead has set it back on the schedule. Laurence Stallings' script is now on the way to Russia for an official okay and in the meantime Jo Swerling is writing additional dialogue.

Milestone, who has a two-picture deal with the studio, will produce "Red Square" on a 58-day shooting schedule as his second feature. He is now looking for a story for his first production.

Fox Gal Up at Col.

Sidney Fox is being considered by Columbia for the top spots in two pictures. The pictures are "The Most Precious Thing in Life" and "The Party's Over."

Award Plan Praised

Expressions of enthusiastic approval on the plan for Hollywood Reporter awards for achievements in connection with the motion picture productions of 1933 deluged The Reporter offices yesterday. And in addition, many valuable suggestions which we will take pleasure in publishing starting next week.

While the bulletins listing all productions of 1933 are being prepared, Hollywood Reporter will appreciate hearing still more suggestions from creators in the motion picture field.

This is to be YOUR award—an honor bestowed by the votes of ALL your fellow workers, and any constructive suggestion you may have to make it truly representative will be welcomed.

Schenck Trip Starts U.A. Foreign Quake

New York.—J. A. Koerpel, long considered a fixture in European distribution, and head of United Artists continental activities for some time, will be succeeded by J. A. Kastner.

Another new result of Joe Schenck's recent European trip is the appointment of Emanuel Silverstone as special representative for London Films in New York. This is the British affiliate of United Artists.

'Firebrand' Gets Going At U. A. Monday

The Twentieth Century production of "The Firebrand" (formerly titled "The Life of Cellini") will get under way at the United Artists studio Monday under the direction of Gregory La Cava, with Fredric March playing the title role.

John Barrymore Returns

John Barrymore and his wife returned to town yesterday by train from Mexico after leaving their yacht trip at that point. Barrymore goes into "Twentieth Century" at Columbia February 19 and then completes his deal with MGM where he still has one picture to do.

'WONDER BAR' CLICKS AS ALL-AROUND ENTERTAINMENT

All Star Cast All Get Chance to Star

"WONDER BAR"
(Warners)

Director .....Lloyd Bacon
Play.....Karl Farkas and Geza Hercaeg
Screen Play.....Earl Baldwin
Music and Lyrics.....Harry Warren and Al Dubin
Numbers Created and Directed by Busby Berkeley
Photography .....Sid Hickox
Supervisor .....Robert Lord
Cast: Al Jolson, Dick Powell, Ricardo Cortez, Dolores Del Rio, Hugh Herbert, Guy Kibbee, Robert Barrat, Henry O'Neill, Kay Francis, Louise Fazenda, Fifi D'Orsay, Merna Kennedy, Mia Ichioka, Henry Kolker.

You may as well parade the adjectives. Line them up foursquare, counter-march them, drop in a few "ifs" if you are Hollywood-minded and thinking of story, but finish by giving all the adjectives a chance to march.

Warners have a brilliant and sparkling production in "Wonder Bar." The music is fresh and new; the dance numbers have a magic touch; the girls are plentiful and beautiful and the cast is GREAT.

Al Jolson heads the cast. But one of the greatest breaks Al Jolson ever got, and one of the advantages of the picture is that it is not a lone star vehicle. Everybody in the cast plays, and how. It helps the picture, and it puts a number of players in line for orchids.

Ricardo Cortez, for example, in his scenes with Dolores Del Rio, could just as well been handling a star picture of his own for the effect he secures. Dolores Del Rio has never been more fascinating than as Inez the dancer, madly infatuated with Cortez. And the gals in the audience were ready to admit she had reason to be.

Kay Francis looks as beautiful as something out of a book, though handicapped by a part that forces her to be tempestuous throughout the picture. Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert are funny—in fact, we should use the phrase TERRIBLY FUNNY—in their scenes showing two husbands who wish very much to lose their wives while in Paris. And after you mention them you just have to add that Louise Fazenda as Kibbee's wife is very droll.

Dick Powell fits into a straight musical comedy lead that is helped by his personality.

The sequence in which Al Jolson enters the pearly gates and "nigger heaven" is one of the cleverest things the screen has seen.

I don't suppose we should bother telling the story of a play that has had a couple of years on the stage. But it is something about Del Rio, exotic dancer in the "Wonder Bar," becoming madly infatuated with her dancing partner, Ricardo Cortez, and then discovering that he is planning to run away to America with Kay Francis. So she very neatly stabs him during one of her gaucho dances, and then there is the problem of getting rid of Cortez' body. A romance between Powell and Del Rio develops which is the unbelievable note of the story, and it should be mentioned in any review. But we suppose the comedy and the dances will carry most people, as they did the preview audience, over the rough spots of the story.

Give Lloyd Bacon a good share of bouquets for direction of the story, and hold out plenty for Busby Berkeley for the charm and magic of the dances. You may use orchids for both. And whatever you have left in your arms hand to Earl Baldwin for a fine result on what must have been a tough screen play job, then give the rest to Sid Hickox—and probably an army of unnamed assistants—on the photography. And then send out for a new supply of the flowers for Warren and Dubin.

It is one of those three-ring circus pictures on which it is not necessary to tell the exhibitor anything except to repeat the fact that this time Jolson is not the only thing he has to sell; it is a well-rounded piece of picture making.

Too Tame

Sam Goldberg's local burlesque show is reported to be folding up this Saturday night, which ends a run of one week at the Music Box Theatre. The house did a $30 business Wednesday night.

Betty Allen Renewed

MGM has exercised the option on Elizabeth Allen's contract. The player has just finished the lead opposite Robert Montgomery in "Mystery of the Dead Police."

No Cooper Successor

yesterday confirmed that yarn in full. Just what the new production set-up, as it concerns the unit producers on that lot, will be, is known only by McDonough and Kahane, who refuse to make any announcements right at this time. But the jobs of Pandro Berman, Louis Brock and Kenneth Macgowan seem set, with at least three other appointees required to round out the necesary staff for the pictures required for Radio's distribution.

There is an indication that Radio will take an outside product to the extent of 12 pictures during the year and may contribute to the financing of part of each production should finances be required. But in either case the story, cast, direction and other essentials must be given the Radio O.K. before a deal is made.

Radio would like to get a good foreign production set-up of the type of Alexander Korda and are understood to be laying plans to this extent, seeing the advantage of having a European connection such as Joe Schenck has arranged with Korda and British and Dominions for United Artists and their producers. For with such a tie-in the talent market in Europe will cinch personalities for a swap-about here and vice versa.

Radio's official announcement of the resignation indicated that there is still a possibility in the mind of Radio that Cooper will make special pictures for the organization, including the "Last Days of Pompeii" and other "Jock" Whitney productions recently publicized.

CAMERA UNION OVERHAUL AIMED TO GIVE ALL CHANCE

A plan to make the cameramen's union one that is run by really democratic methods, rather than an autocracy, will be laid before the members of Local 659, IATSE, at its general meeting next Monday night, according to union men who are close to the reorganization situation.

Whereas the first cameramen have been the only members who have held positions of power and authority during the five and a half years the union has been in existence, the new reorganization plans will give the seconds, assistants and still men a voice in the affairs of the organization.

While nothing official was announced by executives in charge of the union, it was learned yesterday that the new plan will call for a new setup of the union's Executive Board, and if it is approved by the members the new arrangement will see several men in the lower brackets sitting with the firsts in the conclaves in which the affairs of the union are handled.

"A democracy instead of an autocracy is what we need," explained one cameraman yesterday. "The present reorganization plans if carried through will assure every member of the union of an opportunity to have a voice in the conduct of his organization. The new setup will be truly representative, giving all members a voice in everything pertaining to the union.

"The by-laws that have been in existence since the start of the union will be revised. Those that are inoperative and unenforceable will be thrown out. The plan calls for making the organization one in which no minority or small group can control it, and in which its operation will function smoothly and efficiently.

"Only those by-laws which will be of benefit to the cameramen, without hurting the producers, will be retained. Our aim will be to assist the producer, for after all he pays the bills. And when we place our stamp of approval upon a cameraman we want him to be such that the producer can feel confident of the highest efficiency, and be sure of cooperation such as has never been seen before."

'MEN IN WHITE' EXCELLENT FINE CAST – GOOD DIRECTION

Script Job Helps Slim Story Plot

"MEN IN WHITE"
(MGM)

Direction .....Richard Boleslavsky
From Play by.....Sidney Kingsley
Screen Play.....Waldemar Young
Photography.....George Folsey
Cast: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Hersholt, Elizabeth Allen, Otto Kruger, C. Henry Gordon, Russell Hardie, Wallace Ford, Russell Hopton, Henry Walthall.

It is to be hoped that a long run of hospital yarns will in no way sidetrack patrons who might be foolish enough to think this is "just another hospital yarn." It is up to you to let them know that if they are shopping for something really fine, thrilling and touching in screen entertainment, MGM's clinical contribution, "Men in White," is worth a ticket at any price!

By saying that "Men in White" is thrilling, we don't mean to imply that the picture offers speed or crashing climaxes—for it does not. But it is thrilling nevertheless, because of the very things it represents, and for the simplicity and sincerity with which these ideals are brought before the audience.

Without the personality of Clark Gable, doing the finest work of his career to date, and the wonderful performances of Jean Hersholt and Elizabeth Allen, together with the intelligent and sympathetic direction of Boleslavsky, we would certainly hesitate to recommend "Men in White" as a satisfying picture for any kind of an audience, for its story is slim and its characters stripped of hokum, but with the three aforementioned players to carry it through the film emerges as one which any customer will take to his heart, for they make it real—they make every situation and every spoken word something to remember.

Needless to explain, this picture comprises all the highlights and sidelights of a big city hospital, and has for its main theme the mental struggle of a young physician who is torn between his desire for a soft practise and time for the wealthy girl he loves, and his chance to work with one of the day's leading scientists—with little opportunity for aught but work. It takes the film's length to make him realize how much this work will mean not only to him but to humanity, during which he lives the tragedy of watching a nurse, with whom he has had a liaison, die from an illegal operation.

Too much attention to detail, and some sudden "cuts" detracted from last night's preview, slowing things up in a few sequences which can easily be remedied, and when this is done "Men in White" will rate with the best offerings of its kind.

Just where the play leaves off and the picture begins we don't know, but the screen play of Waldemar Young was entirely satisfactory to this reviewer, and the photography by George Folsey is something to rave about.

Again we must mention Gable, who has a most sympathetic but by no means easy role to play—he was splendid. And Jean Hersholt who has a part he has deserved for a long time. Myrna Loy was adequate as Gable's sweetheart, but Elizabeth Allen, though her role was smaller, far outshone her. There's a gal—mark you! C. Henry Gordon, Henry Walthall, Russell Hopton and Wallace Ford appeared briefly with good effect, and the directorial methods have benefited every phase of the film.

Embassy Reopens

New York.—Where Fox couldn't "take it" Pathe steps in. Announcement was made yesterday that Pathe would take over the Embassy Theatre for an all-newsreel program. Fox quit after complaining that overhead was too high.

Lanfield Abroad For 'Sons o' Guns'

London.—British and Dominions have borrowed the services of Sidney Lanfield for the direction of their big musical "Sons o' Guns."

Hollywood. — Lanfield will direct the next George Arliss picture "Head of the Family" before hopping the pond for the B & D picture.

Reginald Denny Set For Two at Major Plants

Fox and Radio yesterday closed individual deals with Reginald Denny through the Rebecca and Silton office.

Denny will first appear in "Of Human Bondage," the Leslie Howard starring vehicle which John Cromwell directs for Radio and then moves out to Westwood to take a featured assignment in "The World Moves On," which John Ford pilots.

Montgomery Plans Trip

Upon completion of his role in "Rip Tide" at MGM, Robert Montgomery gets a leave of absence and is planning on a jaunt to his home in Westchester, New York.

He finishes work in three weeks, hops off for a two months' period and returns to take a place in "Calm Yourself" as his next job.

Spitzer Gets MGM Deal

Harry Rapf has set a deal with Nat Spitzer for a series of six short subjects which Pete Smith will handle for MGM. The former state right producer goes on a trip to Florida to film special alligator scenes and is reported receiving $4,000 per short.

Nunnally Johnson Rests

Nunnally Johnson will leave next week for a six weeks' vacation in Florida as soon as he polishes up the script of the Donald Colman picture, "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," for Twentieth Century.

'Rouge' Auto-Train Snowbound in Md.

Baltimore.—The "Moulin Rouge" auto-caravan ran into difficulties its very first day out. After being wined and dined in Washington, the members of the tour started out for Baltimore as the first coast to coast stop and ran into a terrific snowstorm just after crossing the border of Maryland, necessitating the desertion of the autos and walking miles to a railroad flag station, catching the train to make this town.

The cars were dug out of the snow and continued here today and the stop of the tour will be attempted.

'Little Colonel' Set in MGM's 'Operator 13'

Looking forward to the publicity breaks which will be received from the tie-up with his work as the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation," MGM yesterday signed Henry B. Walthall for the role of the spy in Marion Davies' "Operator 13."

"Operator 13" is one of the first civil war stories to be produced since "The Birth of a Nation" was made in 1915. In the latter feature Walthall became famous as the Little Colonel. Player has also clicked recently for MGM in "Viva Villa" and "Men in White." He is represented by the Hoffman-Schlager office.

Rogers Grabs Pitts

Charles R. Rogers has borrowed Zasu Pitts from Universal for a featured comedy role in "In Conference," which will be directed by Harry Joe Brown.

Reisners Go East

Mrs. Charles F. Reisner and her son left by boat Thursday for a seven weeks' vacation in New York. Charles F. Reisner, her husband, is now directing "The Showoff" for MGM.

Calhern on the Job

Louis Calhern arrived yesterday and goes into Twentieth Century's "Firebrand."

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

Bert Lahr's new stage show will be authored by Buddy DeSylva, Lew Brown and Sil Silvers, with Harold Adamson and Burt Lane writing the tunes. Alex Aarons will produce.

Monty Shaff, who supervises for the Davis-Van Beuren unit here, has made three false starts for Florida. . . . Groucho and Chico Marx are having sponsor trouble, as who isn't?

Understand that Jed Harris' trip to the coast was for the purpose of trying to snare Lee Tracy's moniker to a play contract.

Benny Rubin barged into town. May do shorts. . . . What smart young Miss goes on the make for every West Coast director who hits this here yar town, and makes him think that he's the only one? Up to this writing she has seven in tow! . . . Jimmy Geller, William Morris story department head, airplanes west for some story conferences.

Bert Wheeler was telling some of the movie folk about his doctor who had gone in for this nudist stuff in a big way. He had his entire house staff going in for it, too. Wheeler claims that one day he visited the medico. On ringing the house bell the butler came to the door. Harry Hershfield butted in as Bert told the yarn and questioned him as to how he knew it was the butler. That stumped Bert for a few minutes, but finally he replies with "Well, it wasn't the maid." . . . And that's all for this writing.

Incidentally, we apologize profusely to Miss Regina Crewe for our statement of last week that she is going to the coast to look over the picture situation. Miss Crewe has but one idea regarding her sojourn in Hollywood and that is to get a complete rest. Her palatial home in Beverly Hills will shortly undergo a complete spring cleaning to make ready for the arrival of Regina.

B. O. BUSINESS SPOTTY IN B'WAY FIRST RUNS

New York.—"Nana" seems to have hit a box office stride just after a week in which most of the Broadway houses took pretty much of a licking. Based on the afternoon figures the Samuel Goldwyn picture seemed certain of $14,000 for yesterday, and with the boosted prices for Saturday and Sunday is sure of passing that figure today and tomorrow.

Receipts for pictures last week at Broadway houses are not very encouraging to the boys who must watch the grosses. The Music Hall, where "Nana" is now playing, and which became accustomed to thinking in terms of $100,000 for "Little Women," had to be satisfied with $68,000 for "As Husbands Go" even after good local reviews; "Four Frightened People" did $40,000 at the Paramount, not so hot when it is remembered that the split figure at this house on the Mary Pickford engagement was $65,000; "Woman in His Life" got no cheers at the Capitol with $18,000.

More cheerful figures for the week were: $28,000 for "Beloved" at the Roxy; $25,000 for "Gallant Lady" at the Rivoli, a great figure in this size house; $18,000 for "The Ghoul," English picture at the Rialto, a bit of showmanship; $10,000 for "Fashions of 1934" at the Hollywood, a bit disappointing; and $8,700 for "Sixteen Fathoms Deep" at the Mayfair, which is about a thousand dollars up for this house.

'KING'S HORSES' JUST FAIR; 'AMERICAN, VERY EARLY' FLOP

Great Cast Wasted In New Musical

"ALL THE KING'S HORSES"

A romantic musical production presented by Harry L. Cort and C. H. Abramson by arrangement with E. Steuart-Tavant; at the Shubert Theatre; book and lyrics by Frederick Herendeen; music by Edward A. Horan; staged by Jose Ruben; production designed and painted by Ward and Hervey Studios; adapted from "Carlo Rocco" by Lawrence Clarke and Max Giersberg. Cast: Guy Robertson, Nancy McCord, Andrew Tombes, Betty Starbuck, Doris Patston and eleven others.

New York.—The name of Harry L. Cort on the program brought back memories of a decade ago when Cort played a prominent part in the theatrical life of that day—and so with reluctance one is forced to report that "All the King's Horses" would have been an eminent success in that day but not in this. There has been, after all, quite an advance in the art of smart up-to-date musical play, especially in book, lyrics and dancing. This operetta blithely ignores all of that and gives us once again just a pleasant uneventful evening of some charm and wit, of fair singing and stereotyped Princess and Commoner love.

If you must have the "story" of this romance it concerns a King who finds that he isn't as popular with his subjects as he thought he was; of a dashingly handsome Hollywood movie hero and his irrepressible press agent doing Europe; of their meeting with the King—a substitution of identity at Kingie's suggestion (so that he can get away to Paris and play around incognito for a few weeks) and subsequent adventures of the cinema star at the Palace, when the Queen, who has been estranged from her King since the day of their marriage, hears the voice of our hero (as the King) over the radio and comes back to find out what all the shooting's for.

An intense love affair develops only to end on a very sad note when the real King makes his return, the false King discloses his identity, secures forgiveness from the Queen and passes out of her life.

The fine work of these members of the cast, Tombes as the press agent, Nancy McCord as the Queen, Guy Robertson as the movie star, Betty Starbuck as the Queen's lady-in-waiting, and Doris Patston as another movie star, helps immeasurably to impart whatever pleasure there was to the evening. Tombes' rapid-fire gags register heavily; Miss McCord and Guy Robertson's singing is satisfactory and Miss Patston and Miss Starbuck run close honors in comedy-singing parts, though neither of them has enough to do. Particularly Miss Starbuck, whose impish mimicry isn't given the chance it deserves. Her several numbers with Tombes scored heavily with the audience, who wanted more of them but didn't get it, probably because only the stars in operettas are permitted and often insist upon numberless encores. Starbuck is another Pert Kelton and the movies will grab her if she doesn't watch out!

As to the music these numbers were pleasing and hummable: "Fame Is a Phoney," "Tamboree" (especially tuneful and sprightly), "You're Asking Me," "Charming," "Nuts Over You" (the hit number of the show) and "Romance Is Calling." One of the best lines in a production number sung by the dancing chorus goes as follows: "When the axe fell, and Anne Boleyn was guillotined by order of Henry the Eighth, he chanted softly: 'Annie doesn't live here any more!' " Of small note also is the use of a situation in the third act which was very much like that used in "Of Thee I Sing," when the entire nation breathlessly awaits the arrival of an heir, only in this case the King and Queen are substituted for the President and his consort.

Oh, Boy! Oh, Actors!

Another Roman holiday for actors is anticipated in present plans for MGM's "David Copperfield," the picture calling for 68 speaking parts. The David Selznick-George Cukor production will run a close second to the Twentieth Century picture "Rothschild," which had 75 talking roles.

King Vidor Under Way on Own Indie

King Vidor has rented space at the General Service Studio and is going ahead with the preparation of "Our Daily Bread." Picture will be produced as an independent production, with no release yet being set. Harold Buchman and Betty Hill worked on the script at the time it was scheduled for a Radio release.

Marion Dix Renewed

On the strength of her work on the script of "So You Won't Sing, Eh?" Radio engaged Marion Dix for another one-picture deal yesterday. She teams with Henry Myers on the screen play of "Escape to Paradise," which is tentatively scheduled as a Joel McCrea production.

Stephenson Back at RKO

Upon completion of his Fox ticket for a top spot in "All Men Are Enemies," Henry Stephenson returns to Radio for featured billing in "Stingaree." Of his last nine pictures seven have been for Radio. Beyer-MacArthur represent him.

Marin Aide to Selznick

Ned Marin, formerly an assistant to Harry Rapf, MGM associate producer, becomes an associate producer in the David Selznick unit at MGM. He will handle the South Sea story which Richard Boleslavsky directs.

Skipworth in 'Magoo'

Alison Skipworth has been set for one of the top spots in "The Great Magoo." Howard Green is writing the script under Al Lewis' supervision.

Pretty Hard to Find Pic Angle In This

"AMERICAN, VERY EARLY"

A "confession" in three acts by Florence Johns and Wilton Lackaye; presented and staged by Mr. Lackaye; settings by Yellenti; at the Vanderbilt Theatre. Cast (in order of appearance) Lynn Beranger, Edward Favor, Florence Johns, Harry Tyler, Edith Yachna, Alexander Clark, Vincent York, Florence Auer, Marion Warring-Manly, James Seelye, Grant Mills, John P. Brawn.

New York.—The program designates this offering a confession, and refuses to commit itself further. Perhaps that is as it should be. Perhaps Miss Johns and Mr. Lackaye, Jr., having some qualms about their endeavor, simply intended to unburden themselves, and let it go at that. Having gotten it out of their systems, we sincerely hope they feel better, as we most certainly shall after adding our confession to theirs. "American, Very Early" is so non-existent as a piece for the theatre, that one can regard it only as one of those dramaturgic phenomena that come to pass every so often.

When Winifred Proctor separated from her husband, she and Nippy Andrews, her friend, shook the dust of Manhattan and hied themselves to Botsville, a quiet little village nestled at the foot of the Berkshires in northern Connecticut, where they took the old Cadoo Place and burgeoned forth into the roadside antique business, or racket rather. For that is what the distressingly honest Winifred and her equally inexperienced partner very soon, to their dismay, learned it was, and changed their tactics accordingly.

Such trials and tribulations as were theirs with the motley of wayfaring customers who came to gyp and be gypped! Such fun as they had with the menagerie of natives who resented their wearing trousers and being partial to black bath tubs. If this innocuous expose points any moral at all, it is to go in for Grand Rapids instead of Early American. Also, to learn something about fireplaces, shingles, cesspools, old oaken buckets and sugar elms.

Yes, indeedy, it was all most verdant and bucolic, not only the writing of it, but the direction and acting, for the most part, as well. At one point one of the characters remarked that he was going off to Hollywood to write for pictures. We can safely assure him he will never be called upon to stay up very late to adapt "American, Very Early."

Miss Johns, as Winifred Proctor, had her moments of appeal; but one, for a most obvious reason, can hardly sympathize with her for having handicapped herself with a role that is very slim at best. And in the equally tenuous role of Nippy Andrews, Lynn Beranger supported as best she could, with a natural charm of manner and a safe surplus of attractions.

Burns, Allen Due For Star Build-Up

Burns and Allen's option for another picture was exercised by Paramount yesterday. Team goes into a third picture, having completed work in two.

Although they are entitled to star billing, they have backed out of that spot on the ground that they do not wish to carry the burden of responsibility for such an assignment. William LeBaron will handle the picture in which they will be featured next. Paramount, however, is understood to be planning a star build-up.

Five MGM's in Work Have Musical Angle

Jack Chertok's music department at MGM is one of the busiest spots on the lot these days with five pictures under way in which music is planned to play an important part.

The five are "Hollywood Party," "Operator 13," and in preparation "Merry Widow," "Duchess of Delmonico's" and a Monta Bell picture, still in the rough stages, "Student Tour."

Two Big Fights Before Acad. Committee Tues.

Most important meeting of the Academy's conciliation committee in many months is scheduled for next Tuesday evening. Two important cases coming up have big names reported involved. Rosenblatt's okay of the work of Academy makes Tuesday's meeting still more weighty.

Bergerman Signs Team For New 'U' Musical

Stanley Bergerman has signed Jay Gorney and Sig Herzig, who co-authored "Moonlight and Pretzels," to write an original romantic comedy with music in which Roger Pryor will be starred. This yarn will be produced following "Practical Joker," Bergerman's next for Universal.

Knight May Winter in Fla.

June Knight, Universal contract player, who went to Miami to fill a two weeks' dancing engagement, will probably remain there for the remainder of the Miami season. She has had the offer, having bowled them over. Only thing that might stop her is if Universal spots her in a picture.

Dot Spear on Para. Tag

Paramount handed Dorothy Spear a one-picture contract yesterday and the writer joins the company's staff today to write the screen play for a murder mystery which Bayard Veiller is supervising. Edington and Vincent set the ticket.

MGM Buys 'Repeal'

MGM yesterday purchased "Repeal," a Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Francis Coe, and plans to use it for Jean Harlow. John Considine produces. No writers set as yet.

Joe 'Mank' Returns

Joseph Mankiewicz returned yesterday from New York. He was away three weeks.

The BOOK WORLD

Mysteries In Lead Among Recent New Publications

In the mushroom crop of books that has flooded the country lately, there are many solid, interesting and reliable volumes that stand upon the midway shelf, with very few books that are important enough to warrant critical gasps.

Two points worth noting are—first—that there has been a steady decrease in the proportion of woman authors on the fiction best seller lists in the last three years. In 1931, women wrote seven of the ten best fiction sellers; they wrote five in 1932 and three in 1933.

The second interesting item is the tremendous number of mysteries (and good ones, too) that roll off the country's presses every week.

Speaking of mysteries, Dashiell Hammett's new one, "The Thin Man," was published in its entirety in the December Red Book, and it provided one of the sparks that started the latest literary blaze. The Editorial Committee of the National Association of Book Publishers is having its own troubles, chief among which is the publication of complete novels in single issues of magazines. Red Book is one of the principal "offenders," while one Philadelphia newspaper is buying novels way ahead to assure its program of publishing a complete novel in its Sunday issues.

MGM has "The Thin Man" for pictures.

Well, anyway, the books reviewed on this page represent the best of the latest literary output.

"The First Billion"

Author.....John K. Winkler
Publisher .....Vanguard Press

One of the greatest bankers who ever lived, James Stillman, was also one of the most fantastic figures that ever supplied the meat for a red-blooded biography. Read John K. Winkler's "The First Billion," which, instead of being a dry, uninteresting recountal of how Stillman put the National City Bank on the money map, is a breezy, fascinating character study.

Stillman was an extraordinary person. He was crafty enough to learn early that a complete silence would be devastatingly impressive. The strange part about it, however, is that he carried this method into his own home, forcing his family into total silence through formal dinners which were accompanied by printed menus, playing solitaire for hours on end, and favoring his wife and children with nothing but occasional long, silent stares. Every morning as he left home, he marched like a Czar, unsmiling, between the silent ranks of his entire household.

"The Mother"

Author.....Mrs. Pearl S. Buck
Publisher.....John Day Co.

Mrs. Pearl S. Buck has done it again. Her new novel, "The Mother," through its power, artistry and compassion, puts her up on the novelistic heights.

It is the story of a Chinese peasant mother, whose sorrows and joys, because they are so profoundly average, are translations of the joys and sorrows of the universal woman.

This Chinese mother, symbol of all mothers, is enslaved by her love for man from his babyhood through his adolescence to his maturity.

Mrs. Buck makes of this book a gesture that will bear comparison anywhere in modern literature for its tragic power. Her penetrating pity, her uncanny reading of the unguessed thoughts and emotions of the Chinese woman, stamp this novel as a thing of beauty and importance.

"Take The Witness!"

Authors..Alfred Cohn, Joe Chisholm
Publisher.....Frederick A. Stokes

Adela Rogers St. Johns writes the foreword to "Take The Witness!" the life story of her father, Earl Rogers, written by Alfred Cohn and Joe Chisholm.

While the book does justice to Earl Rogers as a great actor (with juries for audience) it carries a ballast of too many accounts of trials, technical anecdotes, and repetitive cases that almost sinks it. The authors disagree entirely with Lincoln Steffens over the McNamara case, and also with the reports that Darrow was framed. However, the book is interesting in that it reveals a great many of the tricks upon which lawyers rely to win their cases.

"The Paris Front"

Author .....Michael Corday
Publisher.....E. P. Dutton

Another war book. It is "The Paris Front," a diary of the late bloody insanity, by Michael Corday.

He was a member of the French Civil Service, and a definite pacifist. His comments are cynical rather than constructive.

"First Love and Last"

Author .....Howard Coxe
Publisher.....Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Howard Coxe offers an innovation in story telling that is more interesting than excellent.

In "First Love and Last," his heroine in the first chapter is over sixty, and in each of the succeeding chapters she becomes younger, the yarn leaving her when she is twenty.

Because his material is subservient to his method, and the method more sensational than convincing, Mr. Coxe cannot capture the intrinsic pathos of the story as he might have. However, it's unusual reading.

"Out of Life"

Author .....Myron Brinig
Publisher.....Farrar and Rinehart

Myron Brinig goes on an emotional spree in his book, "Out of Life," that borders between fantasy and realism.

Sam Baggot, a sad, quaint little man of forty, staggers into a sort of ecstatic insanity when his wife informs him that she is going to have a baby. This miraculous shock to the dull order of Sam's life sends him reeling into New York where, for a day and a night, he goes on a cosmic pilgrimage, in the course of which he finds for the first time the terrifying meaning of birth, life and death.

At the Battery, he meets Henry, a sailor, whom his distorted fancy stamps as his son grown up; they watch a policeman's horse cut down a pregnant woman. They see a banker blow out his brains; they see a child born and the birth balances the death in Sam's mind. He gets into a fight, he gambles, and finally in an exalted trance returns to his wife who tells him that it is all a mistake—there will be no child. Sam commits suicide by swimming out to sea in search of his son.

The mysticism and the chaotic emotionalism of this book may prove disconcerting to some, but "Out of Life" is a volume of strange, effective beauty.

"Work of Art"

Author .....Sinclair Lewis
Publisher .....Doubleday

Sinclair Lewis, disturbing not a hair on his head, writes again of the small town business man in "Work of Art."

It is really the story of two brothers, Ora, who fancies himself a poet and is a rotter; and Myron, who, in the hotel business, finds a real poetry.

The book is attracting almost as much attention as his previous "Main Street" and "Babbitt." Take it or leave it. You know your Sinclair Lewis.

Fox has it for pictures.

"From Bdwy to Moscow"

Author .....Marjorie E. Smith
Publisher .....Macaulay

A New York newspaper woman, Marjorie E. Smith, has written a book called "From Broadway To Moscow," in which she relates in well chosen words of one syllable what is taking place in Russia.

She was accompanied on her trip to the U.S.S.R. by her husband, Ryan Walker, the cartoonist, who, because he was a radical known and loved in Russia, was able to take her to places most tourists cannot go. This is swell reading.

"Cannibal Quest"

Author .....Gordon Sinclair
Publisher .....Farrar and Rinehart

Another newspaper hound takes his typewriter to strange places, this time to the jungles of the East Indies.

Gordon Sinclair flitted facetiously through Bali, Burma, Borneo, Java, New Guinea, India and Siam, never forgetting for one moment that he was a wise guy columnist, with the result that his book, "Cannibal Quest," reads like a meeting of gag men in Hollywood.

What little information he inadvertently lets slip into his yarn is about as excitingly new as the thought that airplanes are here to stay. His profoundly important discovery that white elephants aren't white is an example.

"Watch the Curves"

Author .....Richard Hoffman
Publisher .....Farrar and Rinehart

Richard Hoffman has written a gay, swift yarn of the joys and adventures of a "share expenses" automobile tour across the country to California.

It is "Watch the Curves," and Mr. Hoffman has done a swell, amusing job of getting a queer assortment of passengers all balled up in fights, love affairs, and a suspicion of a mystery.

This is lots of fun to read, and it is written vividly and with an effective speed.

"The Cadaver of Gideon Wyck"

Author.....A Medical Student
Edited by.....Alexander Laing
Publisher.....Farrar and Rinehart

Even the setting of this mystery is shuddery . . . the dissecting room of a medical college.

Added to the general gruesomeness are grisly details and conversations in the dissecting room which will test the fibre of anybody's nerves.

Fantastic, shocking, but enthralling.

"Murder Runs in the Family"
Author .....Hulbert Footner
Publisher .....Harper and Brothers

Herein Lance McCrea, who had every reason in the world to kill Jim Beardmore, an old meanie, plays detective on the run while trying to evade the police who are upon his trail.

Lively, melodramatic . . . with some swell villains.

"The Second Bullet"
Author .....Lee Thayer
Publisher.....Sears Publishing Co.

The cops miss the one clue of any importance in the murder of Dr. Lacasse. But Peter Clancy and his famous valet, Wiggar, discover it, and forthwith, after the usual number of exciting pages, solve the mystery.

The clue is the clock on the mantel that had stopped at exactly 12:03.

Very much up to the Lee Thayer standard.

"The Kitchen Cake Murder"
Author .....Christopher Bush
Publisher.....Wm. Morrow & Co.

Because Frederick Lewton so richly deserved being murdered, and because so many perfect alibis shielded any number of people who would have been glad to bump Lewton off, the solution of this mystery is complicated.

But the story holds together well and is consistent.

"The Death Wish"
Author....Elizabeth Sanxay Holding
Publishers .....Dodd, Mead

This is a different one. Whether you crave for pure, unadulterated mystery, or are more interested in married life in Long Island, or both, the book will satisfy you.

It is smoothly and expertly written.

"Murder Flies the Atlantic"
Author .....Stanley Hart Page
Publisher ..... King

Page lets his imagination run to effective extremes in this mystery. The setting is the giant dirigible Jupiter flying between London and New York, and the double murder takes place on the air liner.

Wild, improbable, exciting, and not a dull moment.

"Death Sails The Nile"
Author.....F. Burks McKinley
Publisher ..... Stratford

Another strange setting. Here are murders among the old Egyptian gods and tombs. It is sinister, savage and features some swell snakes.

GOSSIP OF AUTHORS

W. Somerset Maugham will point his pen no longer toward the East. "Ah King," a collection of short stories published by Doubleday-Doran, is the last of his stories of the Orient. Maugham is now in the south of France, studying life and literature of Spain in the sixteenth century.

Christopher La Farge, brother of Oliver, has written his first novel, "Hoxie Sells His Acres," and Isabel Wilder, sister of Thornton, has sold her second, "Heart, Be Still." Both books will be published by Coward-McCann.

Alfred Cohn and Joe Chisholm are arguing over their percentages on their collaboration, "Take the Witness."

If you believe in ghosts read "Family Ghosts," by Elliott O'Donnell, which lists the varied forms that ghosts take upon themselves to frighten people. Mr. O'Donnell, by the way, has offered to sleep in any haunted house in New York.

"Anthony Adverse," the best selling novel of 1933, is out of stock again. Fifteen thousand new copies will be struck off.

The largest first edition that Covici, Friede ever issued will be given George Cronyn's novel "The Fool of Venus," publication date, March 5.

Greenwich Village authors have published 57 books in the past six months.

B. Traven's "The Death Ship" has been published already in ten languages. Knopf will bring it out here in the spring.

Edgar Rice Burroughs has forgotten Tarzan temporarily and has written "Pirates of Venus," which is described as "a tale that would make Jules Verne green with envy."

Did you know there was a six volume history on Slang, printed in 1890 and called "Slang and Its Analogues, Past and Present"? It was written by John S. Farmer.

The new editor of "The Golden Book Magazine" will be Joseph Anthony, who has just returned from two years abroad.

April will see the publication of a unique book, "It's a Small World," by Walter Bodin and Burnet Hershey. (Coward-McCann, publishers). It's all about midgets.

Josephine Reynolds is now in charge of all publicity and promotion at Stokes. She was formerly with Bobbs Merrill.

H. G. Wells, pepped up by the filming of his "Invisible Man," is planning a picture based on "The Shape of Things to Come," with the tentative title "Whither Mankind?"

Blair Niles' new and long novel, "Maria Paluna," is almost finished. Longmans Green are now waiting for the last few pages of this love story of a Quiche Indian girl.

Jeffery Farnol, who wrote "The Broad Highway" and "The Way Beyond," will start a lecture tour in this country some time in February. His latest book, "Winds of Chance," will be published by Little, Brown and Company in March.

A long distance swimmer turns editor. William Henry Warner, who once swam across Lake Taal, has written a book called "The Dragon's Brood," which Kinsey will publish in March.

Last week while in New York to join his brother Garrett at rehearsals of "Queer People," Carroll Graham also saw the publication of his new novel, "Border Town" (Vanguard Press).

The man in back of the bookstand at the Hotel Plaza reports that Sinclair Lewis bought "The Manuscript Murder" and "The Case of the Gold Coins," which indicates that Babbitt's papa likes mysteries.

The Unemployed Writers Association is sponsoring a meeting of all writers at Irving Place on Fifteenth Street.

You can now get Clemence Dane's play, "Come of Age," in book form, published by Doubleday, Doran.

Did you know that William Edward Hayes, famous for his railroad stories in the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's, has worked on thirty-three railroads over a period of seven years?

Already over 30,000 copies of Eric Linklater's new book, "Magnus Merriman," have been sold in England. Farrar and Rinehart will bring the novel out in America March 12.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, who is recovering from an illness, will leave California soon to start a novel on life in Washington, D. C.

Fowler Signed For 20th Cent's Barnum

Darryl Zanuck has signed Gene Fowler to write the story of the life of P. T. Barnum for Twentieth Century. Fowler is en route to Hollywood from New York.

Although George Bancroft was talked about for the top spot in this production, it is reported that Twentieth Century has placed a bid with MGM for Wallace Beery for the spot. Picture will be produced next fall.

Strong Credit Omitted

The name of John Mikale Strong was unfortunately omitted from credits on "No More Women," as author of the original story, the screen play being by Delmar Daves and Grant Leenhouts. Camera credits are divided between Harry Fischbeck and Theodor Sparkhuhl.

Art Directors Dine

The Art Directors Section of the Academy will hold a stag dinner at the Vendome Friday evening, February 9. Committee in charge of arrangements consists of Park French, Robert Odell and Earl Hedrick.

Ceballos on Lloyd Dances

Harold Lloyd is concluding a deal for Larry Ceballos to direct the dance numbers for his picture "Catspaw," which Sam Taylor is directing. The William Morris office is negotiating the deal.

ACADEMY OUTLINES PLANS FOR MAKING ITS AWARDS

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences yesterday announced final plans for the handling of its yearly Awards of Merit for outstanding distinction in the various branches of the picture industry.

An awards committee composed of 45 actors, directors, producers, technicians and writers was appointed, and March 15 was decided upon as the date for the annual awards banquet and the awarding of the gold statuettes. Next Tuesday ballots will be sent out to the members and the voting will begin.

The system decided upon for the selection of the winners, according to Donald Gledhill, executive secretary, is as follows: Members of each branch will vote first only on the awards in their own field. That is, actors will vote on acting, directors on directing, etc. The first ballot will be for the purpose of choosing a list of nominees for the final voting. Three nominees will be named for each award on the first ballot. Then the entire membership will vote on the final list of nominees and make the final decision.

Awards will be given for production, acting, direction, writing, cinematography, art direction, sound recording and for the best short subject. All voting will be limited to members of the Academy only, but anyone in the industry, whether an Academy member or not, will be eligible for the awards. All feature pictures released between August 1, 1932, and December 31, 1933, will be included in the list.

The following are the members of the Awards Committee: Actors, Lionel Atwill, Warner Baxter, Marion Davies, Leslie Howard, D. C. Jennings, Mary Pickford, Lewis Stone. Directors, Lloyd Bacon, Frank Capra, C. B. De Mille, Frank Lloyd, R. Z. Leonard, Mervyn LeRoy, Norman Taurog, King Vidor, Henry King. Producers, E. H. Allen, Emanuel Cohen, Harry Cohn, Walt Disney, B. B. Kahane, Winfield Sheehan, Irving Thalberg, Walter Wanger, J. L. Warner. Writers, Jack Cunningham, Howard J. Green, Grover Jones, W. S. McNutt, Jane Murfin, Robert Riskin, Carey Wilson, Waldemar Young. Technicians, John Arnold, George Barnes, Carl Dreher, Harris Ensign, Robert Haas, Fredric Hope, Nathan Levinson, Wesley Miller, J. M. Nickolaus, Max Parker, Van Nest Polglase, I. James Wilkinson.

Script Completed on Col.'s 'Whom the Gods Destroy'

Fred Niblo Jr. and Sidney Buchman yesterday handed in their screen play for "Whom the Gods Destroy," which Sam Jaffe is supervising at Columbia. Story is up as a starring production for Walter Connolly.

Niblo has been assigned to work with Adele Buffington on "Hell Cat." Sid Rogel's unit is handling the picture.

A Writer Asked:

'Why Should I Advertise?'

We Answered:

The whole industry pays off in good pictures.

Who writes them? You and you and you and you.

Who knows it? No one; unless you tell them and SELL THEM.

The Hollywood Reporter's Special Writers' Number will do just that. It will perpetuate your NAME and FAME in the minds of those contract-signing executives: the men who hold the pens that spell M-O-N-E-Y.

It will be a permanent reference manual, hot all year round.

Writers, like everyone else in this commercial world, have a product to SELL. It can't be sold unless it's SEEN. It's seen in the Reporter, because this paper is READ—by everyone who counts.

That's why YOU should advertise—and in here!

COOPER LOOKS ABROAD

TRADEVIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•STUDIO whispers and sneak previews indicate that there are four or five good pictures about ready to be given the theatres. All who have had anything to do with, or have seen any part of, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Viva Villa" rate it as a hit. The Zanuck organization is on fire with the success of "Rothschild" and both Paramount and Warners have had sneaks on their hot bets, "Bolero" and "Wonder Bar."

Those who have been fortunate in seeing Columbia's "It Happened One Night" rate it as the best ATTRACTION that organization has ever turned out. This together with the names of Frank Capra, Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert is a cinch to send this one away up in the money.

News from the Fox lot indicates that the White "Scandals" will be a wow if and when they are able to properly assemble the best of the footage that has been photographed. One of our reporters saw most of it in a projection room and is still laughing at some of the bits.

Zukor hit the nail on the head when he indicated that the public was ready and waiting to buy good screen entertainment just as soon as this industry could serve it; that the purse of that vast assemblage of movie patrons was bulging; that they were hungry for GOOD PICTURES. Accordingly any hint that those good pictures are on their way is good news.

The only depression in the picture business is the one brought on by the lack of attractions, the lack of entertainment. Hit pictures have been playing to more people than ever walked into a theatre before, grosses have not reached records in money, because admission prices have been lowered, but many all time records have been shattered in attendance and that's something for our producers to think about.

And another thought that should get their attention, is the absolute disinterestedness on the part of the ticket buyer for the program attraction. They don't want them and WILL NOT BUY THEM. So why not start out every picture with the desire for a hit, with schedules arranged and budgets approved for the making of

'The Lake' Closing; Hepburn to Europe

New York.—Jed Harris has announced the closing of "The Lake" here next week with Katharine Hepburn stating that she will go to Europe for two months, vacationing, before returning to Hollywood for picture work.

It has been understood that disregarding the local flop of "The Lake" that it would go on tour of the principal cities in an effort to get the show cost back on the strength of the name of Hepburn. Now it is heard that the star herself killed that idea feeling that it would hurt the draw of her future pictures.

'New York Town' First Rowland Picture

Bill Rowland, now on his own after the dissolution of the Rowland-Brice production unit, arrived in Hollywood last night ready to begin work on "New York Town," a musical.

This is the first of two set for release by Rowland through Columbia.

Selznick to Mexico

David Selznick leaves for Mexico City with a print of "Viva Villa" tomorrow night, to show it to Government officials. George Cukor accompanies him. The producer will continue to New York to take in the latest shows, while Cukor will go on to England to gather material for "David Copperfield."

Fox-Frank Lloyd Dicker

Fox and Frank Lloyd are in the midst of a deal, with the director asking $75,000 a picture on a two-pic deal. First would be the reuniting of Farrell and Gaynor.

Former Radio Head Will Soon Announce Plans For Foreign Production; Probably for Radio

Merian C. Cooper seems likely to realize his great picture ambition now—that of making pictures when and if he feels like it, with plenty of money to do the job right, and with the whole world as his stage. This is the "between the lines" reading of the official statement issued in connection with his departure from Radio's executive post.

This publication printed shortly after Cooper left Radio on a leave of absence assumedly for his health, that he would never return to that job, that he had no desires for the duties of head of production, that he would stall through his contract (which ended February 1) and announce his resignation, for having Jock Whitney and

Marie Dressler Picks Major Zanft as 'Rep'

Marie Dressler shot the first cannon off for Major John Zanft and his new business of personal representation when she let it be known yesterday that she had signed an exclusive contract with the veteran picture executive.

Zanft will be "personal business representative" for the star. When queried by a Reporter representative she said "There's nothing further to say except that I am very happy over the association."

Stone Up for 'Cleo'

Lewis Stone is the latest up for DeMille's "Cleopatra," but the veteran actor under his MGM contract must see the script and okay the part before the deal can be made.

Award Bulletins Ready Soon

John M. Stahl, James Gleason, Frank Borzage, William Goetz, Ray Griffith, Karl Freund, Bartlett Cormack, Lowell Sherman, Edward Buzzell, Stanley Bergerman and B. F. Zeidman are among the picture names giving hearty approval to The Hollywood Reporter's announcement of a method of making awards of merit in all branches of the picture art which will be the result of a comprehensive vote by all creative workers in Hollywood.

The bulletin listing all pictures of the year is now in course of preparation, and as additional constructive suggestions are received during the week they will be embodied in the final method of voting and selection to be adopted.

Rogers-Paramount Again In Battle

Charles Rogers' scrap with Paramount over getting the people he wants for his pictures has again resulted in his placing a yarn on the shelf. This is "Nick the Greek," which had been built with hopes of George Raft being set for the lead.

Instead Paramount shifted Raft into the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin." Another Rogers story that had reached the point of a completed script, "Green Gold," was shelved last week also because of cast difficulties.

Neilan Here Looking For a Picture Cast

Marshall Neilan arrived in town Saturday. He expects to remain here just long enough to round up a cast for his next Associated Film Producers picture that will be made in New York.

Henry King in New York On Plans to Head Unit

New York.—Henry King has arrived here from the coast. Director is planning to turn producer and is trying to match together the details necessary to a deal which will have him operating a unit through one of the large companies.

'Looking For Trouble' Tradeshowed Feb. 20

New York.—United Artists announces that the national tradeshow of the Twentieth Century production of "Looking for Trouble" will be held on February 20.

Rivkin-Wolfson Grab Idea

Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson, seeing the national attention Darryl Zanuck is getting with his "Star Train," wrote a story called "Star Express" and MGM bought it for Wanger production.

THE LOW DOWN

It seems that Corinne Griffith's statement that she gave up her role in "Crime Doctor" because "Otto Kruger insisted on facing the camera," and that "the director was in accord with him, etc.," was just HER side of the story. We learn that Miss G. was most "unmanageable" during her brief sojourn at Radio, and that she made demands which any actress in the position of making a "come-back" has no right to make. Besides which, we are told that "Crime Doctor" is definitely a man's story — a fact which Miss Griffith chose to ignore, complaining about every set-up that did not give her the best of it. Consequently, we are most reliably informed, that Radio was very relieved and willing to "let her off" with full pay, for the part she is NOT playing. And in behalf of Otto Kruger, we must tell you that everyone on the picture agrees that he is "one sweet guy to work with" and that he asked for nothing which was not required in the picture!

Nice Mayfair! Not too crowded—but enough people to make a lotta noise for the Mills brothers who warbled for the guests during the evening. Charlie Lederer and Harry Crocker entered the dance contest together—but not for long. Verna and Sonny Chalif won the loving cup by a Rhumba—with Larry Gray and Virginia Pine as runners-up. Lupe Velez, be-jeweled and be-banged; Johnny Weissmuller, the Bruce Cabots (Adrienne Ames), Ben Wasson, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Farrow, the Charles Rogers, the Monta Bells, the Harry Rapfs, Alice White, the Walter Wangers, Marion Davies, Lois Wilson, Winslow Felix, Mary Brian, Helen Vinson, Mrs. Jack Warner, the Eddie Clines, Barney Glazer, the Norman Taurogs, Barbara Bennett, Eddie Hillman—among those present.

The Darryl Zanucks gave a huge party for the Lynn Howards and the Alden (Polo) Roarks. In their party were the Freddie Marches, the Eddie Loews (Lil Tashman), the Mike Curtizes, the Ray Griffiths, Countess di Frasso with Lyle Talbot, the Gene Markeys (Joan Bennett), the Bill Goetzes, the Raoul Walshes, Jean Negulesco, the Hal Roaches and more.

New York REVIEWS

"FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE"
Paramount prod.; director, Cecil B. DeMille; writers, E. Arnot-Robertson, Bartlett Cormack and Lenore Coffee.
Paramount Theatre

News: Under the skillful direction of Cecil DeMille and the excellent acting of the cast a more absorbing story is evolved on the screen than comes from the pages of the book. Besides Claudette Colbert, who gives a delightful performance, Mary Boland is highly amusing; Herbert Marshall and William Gargan give intelligent performances.

Times: It is an extravagant mixture of comedy and melodrama and the terror in some of the scenes stirred up almost as much mirth from an audience yesterday afternoon as did the levity in others.

World-Telegram: For about one-half of its unreeling it is pretty thrilling and exciting. Played extremely well by Herbert Marshall, William Gargan, Leo Carrillo and Mary Boland, in addition to the fine performance contributed by the beautiful Claudette Colbert, "Four Frightened People" is at least one-half of an entertaining film.

American: The picture is a Cecil B. DeMille production and this showman-director has invested it with every element of popular entertainment.

Post: The film is a prosaic and only occasionally vivifying account of the adventures of two men and two women.

Sun: "Four Frightened People" is a comedy and, for the most part, an amusing one. Mr. DeMille has, for a welcome while at least, put away his love of spectacle and regained his sene of humor. Miss Colbert strides about in leopard skins and enjoys still another DeMille bit of drama when she refuses to return to civilization. Miss Boland, her giggles and her flutterings, however, combined with some excellent dialogue, help to turn a DeMille drama into something much rarer and entertaining, a DeMille comedy.

"AS HUSBANDS GO"
Fox prod.; director, Hamilton MacFadden; writers, Rachel Crothers, John Golden, Sonya Levien and Sam Behrman.
Music Hall

Times: If the edge has been taken off Rachel Crothers' play, "As Husbands Go," in its picturization, there is some balm in the variety of scenes set upon the screen. The film is enriched by a good measure of hilarious suspense and it has also the presence of Catherine Doucet. Mr. Baxter is well cast. Miss Vinson is believable as the vacillating Lucile.

Herald-Tribune: It was placid material on the stage, and somewhat less strikingly done in the films it is even less lively entertainment.

World-Telegram: Played, as it is, with much humor and spirit by a cast that includes Warner Baxter, Helen Vinson, G. P. Huntley Jr., Catherine Doucet and Warner Oland, it is gay and abundant entertainment. True it has a certain static quality since it depends almost entirely on dialogue and not on action. But it is an excellent transcription of an amusing stage play.

Mirror: Filmed with literal fidelity to the stage technique, it is a movie which entertains with sprightly dialogue and provocative situations, rather than with action. It is a pleasant, mildly diverting little entertainment.

Post: It is a picture which has been handsomely treated in the adaptation, the casting and the direction. So smoothly does it flow that if you didn't know better you might suspect that it had been prepared directly for the screen instead of snatched from one of those horrid Broadway theatres. It is a shining example of how a stage play can be taken apart and put together again for purposes of the screen, with the parts rearranged and telescoped and none of them missing.

Sun: Has all of the good humor and sound sense of the original; but somewhere in that difficult translation from stage to screen it has lost a good deal of the sparkle. But it's still full of pleasantly keen observations about real enough people; and it's still pretty funny.

American: It's a light, sparkling story that provides an hour's pleasant entertainment for anybody's money. Warner Baxter, that excellent trouper, is completely at home in the part.

Journal: The film is a gay and amusing comedy, a smartly contrived entertainment that depends as much upon its dialogue as upon its actors. The picture is directed with charm and skill. And as an example of a suave and understanding husband, Baxter should become the town's favorite actor when the film hits Dubuque.

News: Good light entertainment, well acted by a carefully chosen cast and beautifully mounted by the producer. Warner Baxter plays his role with his usual charm. Catherine Doucet is a good comedienne who will undoubtedly become a familiar screen personality.

Hymie Fink got a double-break Saturday night too—because while he was waiting for the Mayfairers to arrive, he caught (snapped) Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Marion Davies, Fay Wray and a few others coming out of the theatre where "Candida" holds forth. Fink was all excited—but then, he always is!

Carroll Back to Rogers

Completing a month's work in New York with Rex Beach on the screen play of "Green Gold," Richard Carroll returned to Hollywood yesterday. He joins the Charles R. Rogers unit at Paramount in a production capacity on the picture.

Big Ether Tie-up For 'Lost Patrol'

Shell Oil's broadcast from San Francisco today goes in for a tie-up with Radio on their production, "Lost Patrol," the oil company rushing the deal through Saturday night with Walter Kane of the Weber office swinging it.

The broadcast has rarely gone in for sponsoring a film company's picture and Radio's tie-up is only the third since the beginning of the programs, MGM and Warners getting a break some time ago. Victor McLaglen, Wallace Ford and Boris Karloff contribute their services in a sequence from "Lost Patrol." Featured on the program, aside from the picture plug, is Leo Carrillo.

Larkin Handles Film Folk On 'Christina' Opening

Through the cooperation of the different studios a plan is being worked out to facilitate the advance sale of tickets for the premiere of Garbo's new starring vehicle, "Queen Christina," which MGM is launching.

With Mark Larkin serving as contact man, a set-up will be arranged by stars, executives, featured players and others planning to attend the opening.

Stoll on Shell Hour

After more than six months as musical director for the Shell Oil Hour, Horace Heidt vacates in favor of George Stoll, who signs a thirteen broadcast contract when he finishes the scoring of Paramount's "We're Not Dressing." Walter Kane did it.

Dixon Reports to MGM

Jean Dixon, New York stage actress, will arrive here Wednesday to fulfill her one-picture deal with MGM to play a featured role in the Joan Crawford picture "Sadie McKee," which will be directed by Clarence Brown.

Zeidman Starts Original

B. F. Zeidman Saturday signed Winifred Dunn to write an original and do the screen play for a Universal production. Deal was set by Fritz Tidden of Hoffman-Schlager.

'GAMBLING LADY' A JUMBLE; RATES FAIR ENTERTAINMENT

Mayo and Cast Deserve Big Hand

"GAMBLING LADY"
(Warner-First National)

Director .....Archie Mayo
Story .....Doris Malloy
Screen Play.....Doris Malloy and Ralph Block
Photography .....George Barnes
Supervisor .....Henry Blanke
Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Pat O'Brien, Claire Dodd, J. Aubrey Smith.

"Gambling Lady" finishes as fairly good entertainment, but it is done in spite of a story that must have been a directorial headache to keep it in anything approaching a straight line. The story is piled with complications and entanglements. Only the efforts of the cast, backed by Archie Mayo doing yeoman's work, bring it through. And it must be said that the audience seemed satisfied.

The story finds Barbara Stanwyck the daughter of one of these "poor but honest" gamblers. The father's suicide puts Barbara unknowingly in the hands of an unscrupulous group of gamblers who use all the tricks there are to the trade. Joel McCrea enters the plot when he comes to their gambling house accompanied by two strange gentlemen who turn out to be detectives and raid the place. The crooks feel that McCrea double-crossed them.

Coincidence and formula pile on the story which later finds Stanwyck in love with McCrea, but almost giving him up when her past is brought out before his father. But in the end she wins him from the father in one of those theatrical situations where they cut cards to reach the decision.

From there on it becomes the triangle yarn, with O'Brien, McCrea and Stanwyck in the corners, and Claire Dodd pot-shotting for McCrea from the side-lines. There is a murder, O'Brien the victim and McCrea the accused, and a final happy ending—again bringing in Old Man Coincidence—which finds Stanwyck and McCrea sailing for Norway and the future.

And if that doesn't sound like much—just take it as it sounds. And, as we said at the start, give the credit to the folks who at least made it seem entertaining for the length of the preview Saturday night.

Stanwyck has never looked better, O'Brien turns in a neat performance. Claire Dodd and Joel McCrea are seen to advantage. And George Barnes' photography is worthy of mention. After which we repeat that Mayo was given a tough job, but at least came through on his end.

Al Lichtman Will Show 'Catherine the Great' Here

Al Lichtman, who arrived in town yesterday with Joe Schenck, brought along a print of the Alexander Korda production "Catherine the Great" and will show it to the local press today or tomorrow.

The picture co-stars Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Elizabeth Bergner.

Guild Says 'Thanks'

Screen Actors' Guild is sending letters to all members listing advertisers in the program for the recent ball and citing their cooperation. Something new from organizations, and a stunt that will be remembered by future advertisers.

'U' Will Go Ahead With 'Cristo' Tag

Although Edward Small is fighting Universal through the Hays office to keep them from using the title "Countess of Monte Cristo," on the grounds that it would hurt the business of his picture "Count of Monte Cristo" inasmuch as it is to be released before his, Universal is going ahead with the release of its picture as though nothing were happening.

Universal purchased this German play which bore the title "Countess of Monte Cristo" long before Small announced plans to make "Count of Monte Cristo" and feels that the producer has no kick coming.

'Roxy' Celebrates

Miami.—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rothafel celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary in Florida last week.

his millions behind him and with Whitney in perfect accord with his idea of making pictures, he would jaunt through the universe searching for ideas for unusual pictures. That's just what happened.

But a new slant on Cooper's future activities is found in the official statement's inclusion of an epic based on the life of Cecil Rhodes, England's great colonizer. It is known that Radio is desirous of a British contact for big pictures similar to that United Artists has with Alexander Korda. And in this connection it is remembered that British Gaumont has been at work for several months on plans for a special based on the spectacular Cecil Rhodes career. Already a production unit manager is in British South Africa arranging for locations and the hundred per cent cooperation of the South African Government.

Cooper's announcement that he plans a Cecil Rhodes subject may presage a later statement that he will work out the idea in cooperation with the Gaumont outfit.

Cooper's other announced subject, "The Last Days of Pompeii" also shows how his eyes are turned towards distant corners of the earth. With one hundred per cent Technicolor planned for the "Pompeii" subject, it is clear that the aim is a high budget picture on a most elaborate scale. And with Cooper's desire for authentic locations and background, dating from his production of "Grass" with Ernest Shoedsack, it follows that "Pompeii" will also be produced abroad.

'Nana' Cleaning Up At the Music Hall

New York.—Sam Goldwyn is covered with smiles.

The Goldwyn picture, "Nana," is doing a sensational business at the Music Hall in face of extremely cold weather, a taxicab strike and a few other things that would be used as excuses if the business has sagged.

Friday, the second day, beat the opening day by $1,900 and Saturday, with advanced prices for that day and yesterday, the business was the best the theatre has ever had for a single day.

The picture will be held for a second week.

20th Has Problem on 'Bulldog' Fem Lead

Twentieth Century is having trouble casting the role of the feminine heavy in the Ronald Colman picture "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which will be directed by Roy Del Ruth.

Darryl Zanuck wanted to borrow Myrna Loy, who occupied that spot in "Bulldog Drummond" with Colman for Goldwyn, but neither MGM nor Miss Loy seem hot on the deal after Miss Loy's elevation to stardom.

Michaels Tagged at Fox

Gertrude Michaels has been signed by Fox for one of the featured feminine roles along with Rosemary Ames and Rochelle Hudson opposite Warner Baxter in "Odd Thursday," which will be directed by James Flood.

Production is scheduled to get under way the first part of next week.

Warners Renew Phil Reed

Warners have taken up the option on Philip Reed's contract for another period.

The player has been loaned to Universal for the role in "Glamour" of which Russ Columbo was relieved. William Wyler is directing.

Buster Crabbe Renewed

Paramount yesterday clipped a coupon off Buster Crabbe's contract and the player continues with the company for another year. It is the second session on a long termer negotiated by Small-Landau.

Montgomery Returning

Doug Montgomery is headed back to Hollywood. Boarded the train Saturday in New York. He has withdrawn from the Play Guild production on which he was rehearsing.

Thalberg Signs Pearson

Irving Thalberg has signed Humphrey Pearson to his writing staff. Pearson will be given an assignment soon.

Principal Sets P. A.

Bill Plant has been set by Principal Pictures to be director of publicity on the west coast.

Technicians Select 12 For Code Body

Following Deputy Administrator Sol Rosenblatt's request that the Academy branches make nominations for consideration on local NRA boards, the Technicians Branch of the Academy was the first to swing into action.

The executive committee on Saturday selected twelve names, from whom the members will elect four, this to be followed by Rosenblatt choosing one of the four.

The twelve named are Cedric Gibbons, Jack Okie, Ben Herzbrun, Max Parker, George Barnes, Karl Struss, J. M. Nickolaus, Hal Rosson, Carl Dreher, Douglas Shearer, Wesley Miller and Major Nathan Levinson.

The code does not call for a technician on the Code Authority committee but should a question arise concerning these workers the Deputy Administrator has the right to appoint a member of this branch to sit on the particular question.

Operator Czars Must Go to Jail

New York.—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has sustained the jail sentence of the former operator czars, Sam Kaplan and Ted Greenberg, and they must serve six months in prison for their union activities in connection with Local 306.

Lowe's Next 'U' Will Be 'Where Is Brown?'

Edmund Lowe's next starring picture for Universal is slated to be "Where Is Brown?" in which Gloria Stuart will have the top spot opposite him. Kurt Neuman has been assigned to direct this picture.

Lowe will make this picture on his return from New York in about three weeks.

Hertha Theil Due Here

Berlin.—It is understood that Krimsky and Cochrane, the firm distributing "Maedchen in Uniform" in America, have contracted with Hertha Theil, who played the school girl heroine in that production, to go to New York for a picture that will be made by them.

Scotto Directed 'Moses'

Credits announced for the direction of "Uncle Moses," all-Yiddish talkie, by the local distributor inadvertently gave direction to Sidney Golden. Aubrey Scotto directed the picture, Golden only collaborating on dialogue direction.

Frank Wead at 'U'

Lieut. Commander Frank Wead has been signed by Universal to the screen play on a story of a foreign newspaper correspondent which will star Edmund Lowe. No title has been agreed on for the picture.

Jones the Honored Guest

Robert Edmund Jones, noted artist and former art director, will be the guest of honor at the stag dinner of the Art Directors Section of the Academy next Friday night at the Vendome.

'Little Women' Tops London Pic Business

London.—"Little Women" rang up the best business of last week here, trailed a bit by "Design For Living," "The Invisible Man" and "The Constant Nymph."

"Mala, the Magnificent" (Eskimo) was a disappointment and was jerked for "Fraternally Yours" that goes into the Empire this week.

The holdovers are "Little Women," "Design For Living," "Invisible Man" and "The Constant Nymph."

The new pictures are "Eight Girls in a Boat" at the Plaza, "Duck Soup" at the Carlton, replacing "I'm No Angel," which had a prosperous run but nothing like the first Mae West attraction.

Business with good pictures is exceptional over here, but with the ordinary programer there are very few tickets sold, accordingly the demand for hit attractions is greater on this side than ever in the history of pictures.

'Moulin Rouge' Gag Gets Big Wash. Break

Washington. — Pictures of Vice President Garner, Anna Q. Nillson, Antonio Moreno, Mary Carlisle, Postmaster Farley, Senator McAdoo have been given a spread in over 1300 papers in connection with the "Moulin Rouge" caravan that had its start here last week.

The Capitol had a great thrill lamping this parade and the theatre playing the picture has gotten the full effect of the ballyhoo, having played to standing room only since its opening on Friday.

Joy-Polimer Add Willson

Henry Willson, former fan magazine writer, has tied in with the Joy and Polimer office and will handle a department devoted to developing new talent. Willson will concentrate on finding and plugging new faces.

Two New Songs for 'Party'

Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn have written two new musical numbers which will be used in "Hollywood Party," which Alan Dwan is directing. The titles are "Feeling High" and "I've Had My Moments."

Kingston-Hoffman Happy

Al Kingston and M. H. Hoffman have settled their brief spat and it now appears that the producer did not insist on a paltry cash settlement over the Charles Wilson deal. Everybody is now happy.

Hornblow Gets Scripter

Stephen Morehouse Avery has been assigned to script "Pursuit of Happiness," which will be Arthur Hornblow's first production for Paramount. Avery collaborates with Garrett Fort.

Gone to Hell

Harry Lachmann must have shown some special stuff in the scenes he handled for George White's "Scandals," for now Fox has offered him the direction of "Dante's Inferno." Harry doesn't know whether it is a compliment or a wisecrack.

WAS LEE TRACY THE GOAT FOR UNION ROW IN MEXICO?

"Camera Angles," publication of the IATSE camera unit, in an issue delivered to members today, and before tonight's general meeting, publishes—without comment—translated excerpts from Mexican papers during the stay of the "Viva Villa" unit in Mexico which tell of the union troubles of the MGM company in Mexico City and the fact that every worker connected with the unit was actually forced, in one way or another, to become a paid-up union member before the shooting was finished.

While the accounts are published without editorial comment, and union officials refuse to be quoted, the general undertone of talk about the headquarters gives an impression that the union believes that roiling of organized labor in Mexico may have had a lot to do in the background with the quickness to seize on Lee Tracy's alleged peccadillos.

It is expected that questions from the floor at tonight's meeting may bring to the open the union's reason for publication of the Mexican papers' stories.

The Hollywood Reporter on November 11 and previously forecast that one of MGM's problems on "Villa" would concern unions. With the local strike just over, picture producers were apparently not aware of the close tie-in between the American Federation of Labor and the Mexican unions, dating from the time the A. F. of L. aided Calles in combating Communistic activity in Mexico, and also before the United States Congress when efforts were made to chastise Mexico for alleged religious persecution. As a result of A. F. of L.'s aid in organization work Mexico is today more strongly union than the United States.

The hint is given that MGM's present problem of getting an okay on "Villa" from the Mexican Government will be complicated by union matters having their inception in Hollywood.

Apprentice System Likely For Extras

Old-time system of "apprenticeship" seems to be in the offing now that NRA is bossing the "Extra" situation. While plans are still very embryonic, the committee handling the extras is figuring out a plan whereby people breaking into the game through extra ranks will have to serve some time proving their worth before they are placed on the regular rolls as qualified extras. Nothing will come of it until after the big weeding process in which the present big group is cut down to maximum of about two thousand.

Polito On 'Wonder Bar'

An error in the "shooting schedules" carried on "Wonder Bar" all through production resulted last Saturday in giving credit for photography to Sid Hickox on "Wonder Bar," when the good words handed out should have applied to Sol Polito.

Jory Moves to Warners

Victor Jory's test at Warners early this week has clicked and the company put through a loan-out ticket with Fox, placing the actor in a spot next to Joan Blondell and Jimmy Cagney in "Without Honor."

Bans Sunday Show Tax

New Jersey.—The Supreme Court of this state has just given a decision that it is illegal for local communities to levy special taxes on a theatre for opening on Sundays.

Edwards in 'Showoff'

Alan Edwards has been signed by MGM for a role in "The Showoff." Charles Reisner is directing. The Selznick-Joyce office set the player.

'Hips' on B'way Feb. 22

New York.—"Hips, Hips, Hooray," the latest Wheeler-Woolsey offering, has received its Broadway dating—February 22.

Jean Arthur in Demand After N. Y. Stage Work

Jean Arthur is hot on a trio of deals right now. After appearing in four shows in New York in the past year and a half the player came to Hollywood for a vacation and immediately stepped into a Columbia lead in "Whirlpool."

In addition two deals are up at Universal, "The Behavior of Mrs. Crane" and "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," and MGM is this week making tests with a long term deal in prospect. Ralph Farnum handles the player.

Amity Trying For Break in Britain

New York.—Bill Fitelson, attorney for Amity Pictures, sailed for England Saturday to arrange some kind of a distribution for the product of his organization throughout Europe, particularly in England.

Amity wants to swap distribution.

Birinski on 'Cabby' Yarn

Harry Rapf has assigned Leo Birinski to work on the script of "Cabby," which will have Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in the top spots at MGM. Michael Simmons and Lou Breslow continue their work on the screen play.

Schayer Finishes Script

Richard Schayer has completed the screen play on "Round The Mountain," which will co-star Marie Dressler and Polly Moran.

hit attractions? They all can't be hits, certainly, so those that miss go into the program class and those that click will more than make up for the losses of the cost of the programers that result this way.

Forget about those pictures that have been scheduled to meet releases, to fill in gaps. They don't pay. MAKE GOOD PICTURES.

Para. Set to Remake Gleason's 'Is Zat So'

Paramount's deal to buy rights to "Is Zat So" from Fox has reached the signing stage and E. Lloyd Sheldon has been set to supervise the picture. James Gleason and Robert Armstrong will be co-starred in the roles they played on the stage.

Fox made the picture in silent days, but didn't use Gleason, who wrote it in collaboration and played the lead in the year long New York run. Ray McCarey is being talked to on the direction.

Warners Ready to Renew Presnell Before Deadline

Although he does not come up for option at Warners until April, Robert Presnell is set to get a new ticket which will go into effect before the expiration of his former contract and keep him with the company for another year. Details on the new papers have been agreed upon and contracts await the signature of the principals. Presnell retains his writer-director-producer status, stressing production activities.

Batcheller Gets Yarn By Brown and Thorpe

George R. Batcheller has purchased an original story idea from Karl Brown and Richard Thorpe called "Marriage by Capture" and schedules it for his next Chesterfield picture.

Both Brown and Thorpe are writing the screen play for the latter's direction. The Hoffman-Schlager office handled the deal.

Towne-Baker Back Home

Gene Towne and Graham Baker have terminated their deal with Charles R. Rogers and returned to Twentieth Century, their home lot. Writers have no assignment yet but probably will go back on the script of "Gentlemen, the King." Towne and Baker were on a leave of absence at Rogers writing an original story for George Raft.

Osterman Turns Author

Jack Osterman is spending these days writing a story titled "The Big Show," a circus yarn, which may be used as the first vehicle for Ted Healy and his stooges at MGM.

Osterman submitted this idea to Harry Rapf, who liked it, and asked Osterman to put it down on paper for him.

'Bad Boy' Script in Work

Marguerite Roberts, recently with Fox, has been engaged by Principal Pictures to write the screen play for "Peck's Bad Boy." Eddie Cline directs and production is scheduled to start March 6, with Sol Lesser still seeking to borrow Jackie Cooper from MGM for the star spot.

McCarey Does a Fast One

Ray McCarey has just established a new record for the shooting of a short, having completed the one-reeler with "Red" Grange and the Chicago Bears in six hours. While the picture was on a three-day schedule there were only six actual hours of shooting.

Technicians' Research Group to Renew Activity

Definite steps were taken Saturday by the Technicians Branch of the Academy to resume the work of their research council which has been dormant since last winter.

Meeting at the Academy offices Saturday the Executive Committee of the branch discussed future plans and appointed a committee composed of Major Nathan Levinson, Harris Ensign, Wesley Miller and Van Nest Polglase to start the work of lining up a definite program.

Several technical projects, such as silent camera development, etc., were halted when research committee ceased functioning. Expected to be resumed with many other ideas on the slate. Detailed announcement will be made later.

Award For Dog

Clifford Jones received word Saturday that his police dog Wotan had finally been given the first prize award in the recent Ambassador dog show, through the disqualification of the original winner. But Wotan doesn't know it, having died three weeks ago a victim of the Hollywood dog poisoner.

CWA Actors Start Work

New York.—Actors working with the backing of government money through the CWA started their programs in various school halls last week. First offerings are "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "She Stoops to Conquer," "Tommy" and "The Curtain Rises."

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Roger Cluett signed by Radio for "Stingaree" through Hallam Cooley of the Weber office. This is the first picture part for the ex-Broadwayite.

Eddie Borden engaged by Hal Roach for his musical short through Hallam Cooley.

John Qualen signed for "Without Honor," Warners. Harry Spingler of the Small-Landau office did it.

Garry Owen for "Little Miss Marker," Schulberg-Paramount. The MacQuarrie office negotiated.

John Sheehan into "Sawdust," Warners, through MacQuarrie.

Barbara Blair, new Warner stock player, assigned a role in the Joe E. Brown picture, "Sawdust."

Doris Lloyd, Olaf Hytten and Jesse McAllister complete cast of "Glamour," which William Wyler is directing and Bennie Zeidman is supervising for Universal.

Joan Wheeler in "The Key" at Warners.

Cupid Ainsworth signed through Bernard and Meiklejohn for featured spot in Lou Brock Radio short.

George Irving goes into "You're Telling Me," Paramount. Deal set by Menifee I. Johnstone.

Olive Fay added to "Glamour," at Universal. Negotiated by the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency.

Monogram has signed Fern Emmett, Dorothy Short, Harry Bradley, George Hayes, Jane Keckley, George Cleveland, Billy Van Every and Phyllis Lee for "City Limits."

Jay Eaton, Vince Barnett, John Rutherford, Eleanore King and Buddy Messenger signed by Twentieth Century for "The Firebrand."

Harold Huber signed through Small-Landau for "Without Honor," Warners.

Sterling Holloway and June Clyde added to "The Showoff," MGM.

Ruth Channing assigned a role in "Louisiana," which George Seitz is directing for MGM.

Glen Boles by Twentieth Century for "Firebrand." The Beyer-MacArthur office negotiated.

Charles Erwin set through the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency for "The Mystery of the Dead Police," MGM.

Bobby Watson into "Glamour," Universal. Set by Leo Morrison.

Bradley Page to Warners for "Without Honor," on a ticket set by Small-Landau.

Charles Wilson signed through Al Kingston for another assignment at Warners, going from "Golden Gate" into "Sawdust."

Sarah Padden into "Without Honor," Warners, through Harry Wurtzel.

N.Y. Indie Exhibs Go to Mat on Code

New York.—Another definite fight against the NRA Code Authority is announced by the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, who state they will go to court if necessary to oppose the paying of an extra projection machine operator when he is doing work just to live up to the code's insistence on a thirty-six hour week for employees.

A peculiar situation may find one of the local unions joining with the exhibitors in the code fight because of an inter-union strife which has radicals among the operators battling with the union.

Course in Business Law Opens at Hollywood H.S.

An intensive course in business law has been opened at the Hollywood Evening High School on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9.

The class, which is without charge to the student, has been organized to fill the need of workers for knowledge of the laws that affect their business.

WB Assigns Bretherton

Howard Bretherton was elected by Warners yesterday to direct "Return of the Terror," the Peter Milne-Gene Solow yarn which Sam Bischoff places into work in two weeks.

Sam Coslow will act and sing his own song as well in "It Ain't No Sin," Mae West's next picture for Paramount which Leo McCarey directs.

"I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER"

HOLLYWOOD REPORTER
Jan. 20, 1934

Good old action is the keynote of this film, but comedy pervades even those scenes when Terry is jumping off a burning building.

Crisp, wise-cracking dialogue . . . Shouts of laughter greeted Pat O'Brien's lines and business.

They Must Be Constantly Reminded

WRITTEN BY . . . . ?

Those are magic words.

BUT BY WHOM?

The men at the head of studios must be reminded of who wrote what. They must constantly be told that this or that writer accounted for this or that yarn. Agents are supposed to, and generally do, but

THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER ANNUAL WRITERS' NUMBER tells them every day, because it is referred to when a writer's name is brought up for CONSIDERATION. . . .

THERE IS TOO LITTLE SCREEN CREDIT ACCORDED WRITERS. If you want your work known, tell them in the FOURTH ANNUAL WRITERS' EDITION. It will tell them, and tell them every day.

PARA. GETTING RELIEF

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IT seems that all of the motion picture industry, its trade press and the newspapers of most of the big cities have combined to help Sam Goldwyn put over Anna Sten as a star and sell her first picture "Nana" to the public.

There has been some adverse criticism of both Sten and the picture, but very little in comparison to what has been written in favor of both. Just how good the picture is, we can't say, as we have not seen it; but we believe Sten has great possibilities in pictures from patches of "Nana" we saw some time ago.

But the fact remains that Goldwyn himself is leaving nothing unturned in his effort to put both the star and the picture over. He is spending money like a drunken sailor. His newspaper space in New York and Chicago set him back a cool $35,000, his other expenses (which he has tacked to the production cost) will run his exploitation bill up to $200,000. Is Sam doing this because he has some doubt about both picture and star and feels that such expenditures are required to protect his huge investment, or does he believe in Sten and her future and see in "Nana" an opportunity to launch her on both feet with a bang?

Take your pick, but either way you have to take off your hat to Goldwyn; you have to place him at the top of producers for his showmanship, backed by a gambling instinct and the nerve to bet his dough, that is matched by no other firm or individual in this business. Whether Goldwyn is right or wrong, whether he has a good or bad picture, whether Anna Sten is a star that will sell, can only be answered by the customers who walk up to the box office and pay to see her and the picture she is in.

The business at the Music Hall in New York is not a fair test, not with what Goldwyn and RKO had to pay out to get that amount in; nor does the \"take" at the United Artists Theatre in Chicago mean a great deal. The answer will be from now on, in the big and small towns.

We hope for Goldwyn's sake that he is right, because being right in this instance will encourage him to create other personalities and put just as much money into other pictures. This industry needs both.

Loew Profits Jump

New York.—Loew's, Inc., report for the twelve weeks ended November 23 shows a net profit of $1,594,608, which is double the business for the same period last year.

Powell Stands Pat On $60,000 Per Pic

William Powell is preening his feathers standing pat in the big money class. Player has tilted the ante on his services to $60,000 per picture, one major studio dropping negotiations with him when he stuck to his demand.

However, MGM is cooking up a deal with him to take the top spot in the Dashiell Hammett story, "Thin Man," which the Cosmopolitan unit is handling.

Lou Diamond Arrives

Lou Diamond, Paramount shorts subject manager and executive of the Famous Music Publishing Company, arrived in Hollywood yesterday. Some rumors that his visit may see a shake-up in the Paramount short subject producers.

Postpone Next Dressler

Feeling that Marie Dressler is not well enough to do the subject at this time, MGM yesterday shelved plans for "Comin' 'Round the Mountain."

Kaufman-Hart Due Feb.12

George Kaufman and Moss Hart arrive here February 12, then go to Palm Springs to confer with Sam Harris on a play which they are writing.

General Boost in Business Plus Trustee Help and Aid of Banks Will Speed Receivership Relief

New York.—Every indication points to Paramount releasing itself from its receivership burden before many months have passed. This is shown by the recent actions of the court in granting most every request the organization has made. Also that the "wreck or ruin" front that was maintained by most every bank having any financial interest in the company has been changed to one of constructive help.

The reasor for all of this is the progress being made by Paramount in twisting itself out of one of the worst tangles that ever beset a big business. This has caused astonishment within

Sam Jaffe Will Also Do Producing at Columbia

In addition to his other duties as assistant to Sam Briskin at Columbia, Sam Jaffe will produce a group of pictures. He is now looking for material for Carole Lombard, Elissa Landi and Jack Holt.

Selznick Trip Off

The Mexican trip of David Selznick with a print of "Viva Villa" has been called off and the producer is now only planning his trip east before the end of the week for a chance to see the New York shows.

Captain Fawcett Here

Captain Roscoe Fawcett arrives tomorrow for a short stay out here. Fawett publishes Hollywood Movie Novels, Screen Book and Screen Play.

Radio Talking Deal With Pandro Berman

Radio and Pandro Berman are in a huddle regarding the new production set-up at the studio. McDonough wants to revamp the contract of Berman's providing for all the new features of the unit production deals that his organization will hand out.

It is understood that just as soon as Berman is in line, McDonough will go into similar conferences with the other producers, on and off the lot, whom he hopes will make up the production personnel of Radio for the next twelve months.

Carroll's First Fox To Be 'International Cavalcade'

New York.—According to statements here Madeleine Carroll's film to be made in Hollywood for Fox will be "The World Moves On," an original by Captain Reginald Berkely, described as an "international Cavalcade." John Ford expected to direct.

Zanft List Grows

Major John Zanft is letting no grass grow under his feet. Yesterday he signed George O'Brien and Hans Schwartz, the latter well known German stage director here for Fox, to managerial contracts. Added to Marie Dressler this gives Zanft a start for his list.

Elder Laemmle Returning

Carl Laemmle leaves New York by train Friday, arriving here next Tuesday. He will have been away for a little over two weeks. Carl Laemmle Jr., who left at the same time, remains in New York for a week or two more.

Gene Fowler Back

Gene Fowler is back in town to start work on the screen play of "P. T. Barnum" that Twentieth Century will produce.

MOVIES DUE FOR PANNING WHEN 'ROSY' TELLS IT ALL

Washington.—Prepare for headlines that will blast the picture business from all angles. Sol Rosenblatt, arriving here today, said that the salary questionnaires were coming in satisfactorily, and as soon as they were all in he would compile them and make GENERALITIES PUBLIC.

Newspapermen are sharpening their pencils over the headline prospects of these generalities.

Of interest to easterners in connection with Rosenblatt's return was a confirmation of the fact that the members of the Code Authority will have to hire their own attorneys to defend any suits and the smug statement that he himself would probably be defended by a special assistant to the Attorney General, plus the services of the NRA legal division.

Rosenblatt had a grip full of reports and data, but said he had reached no conclusions regarding anything. He said he had found producers and creators very cooperative, but admitted that he got more information from private confidential talks than from any of the open meetings.

UNITED ARTISTS' WORLD ORGANIZATION COMPLETE

"United Artists has an office in every country throughout the world for the distribution of the product we will release," said Joseph M. Schenck on his return to Hollywood over the week-end from a lengthy visit to England, France and Italy.

Commenting on conditions in Europe Schenck stated "Europe has never been so prosperous in so far as theatre attendance is concerned. All the picture theatres are crowded and production, particularly in England, is making great advances. While in London I completed all the details of the five year contracts our organization signed with London Films Productions and British and Dominions Pictures. The former will make at least four pictures a year and the later will make twelve a year for our distribution and I feel that the product will measure up to the best that is being made in America, as all British studios are making great progress.

"British and Dominions," continued Schenck, "are starting their new program with 'Sons o' Guns' that will co-star Jack Buchannon and Lily Damita under the direction of Sidney Lanfield. Douglas Fairbanks has completed the casting on his picture and will start production in the next few days.

" 'Catherine the Great' is one of the greatest hit attractions ever to be shown in Paris. It is playing at the Miracle theatre to standing room only. Elizabeth Bergner, co-starring with Douglas Fairbanks Jr., in this picture, is coming to America to do a picture for Darryl Zanuck, but from the success of her play, 'Escape Me Never,' it looks as if it will be at least a year before this will happen. London has gone crazy over Miss Bergner and it is impossible to get seats for that play unless you plan many weeks ahead.

"The most remarkable thing I have seen in motion pictures in many a day," said Schenck, "is the quality of the dubbing done in the foreign countries. It is amazing how they not only match the lip movements of characters speaking the lines but they match their speaking voice as well. I saw the French dubbed version of 'Henry the Eighth' and it was astounding the perfection that was obtained. If this could be done here in America with such perfection, we would have something to feel proud of."

Mr. Schenck is leaving tonight for a short stay in Mexico City. "After that hectic European trip, I need a rest," he said in answer to his reason for going to the Mexican capital.

CAMERA UNION BOYS PEP UP AFTER GREAT MEETING

The cameramen's union is not dead! That was the feeling carried away last night from what was described as one of the most enthusiastic and harmonious general meetings of Local 659, IATSE, held at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

The important news of the meeting is the fact that to a man the members left the meeting bubbling over with a renewed enthusiasm, after hearing a complete report of the affairs of the union since the time the late strike was called and the outlined plan for a complete reorganization that will give the union a new deal in executive set-up.

"We had expected at least a few embarrassing questions from the floor when the meeting was thrown open and every man was told he had an opportunity to speak," said President Alvin Wykoff, "but not an embarrassing question was asked. There was nothing but close-knit harmony and a determination to go forward and forget the discouragements of the past."

Among the details of the meeting were the following:

The members voted recognition to those men who, while not members of the union, refused to take positions as strike breakers during the strike. Many of them are applying for membership. The board of executives will be allowed to accept them now.

The financial report revealed that the late strike cost the union much less than $10,000, and that the union is in excellent financial condition.

There are four hundred members in good standing, and since the strike there have been but three resignations and two expulsions.

A large steering committee was authorized to assist in the working out of the plans for reorganization of the union. The members urged that plans aiming to secure an amendment of the NRA Code to secure greater spread of employment.

Those men who because of lack of employment have been unable to meet their dues payments, have been taken care of in a manner satisfactory to all members, assuring them of protection.

All members were urged to forget the animosities that developed during the strike. They were urged to forget them, forget the fact that the strike had been lost. But to remember that the union had not been annihilated, and to devote efforts to building for the future and developing a spirit of cooperation that would not only extend throughout their own ranks, but into the ranks of the producers as well.

'Beloved' in Filmarte

"Beloved," Universal's musical with John Boles and Gloria Stuart in the lead, opens next Friday for an extended run at the Filmarte. This is the first American picture to play the house in over six months. Last Universal musical at the theatre, "Be Mine Tonight," set a Hollywood record, running 17 consecutive weeks.

Mrs. Langdon Asks 21G

White Plains, N. Y.—Mrs. Helen Walton Langdon, wife of Harry Langdon, obtained judgment against him for $21,078.57 in Supreme Court here. Represents alleged unpaid alimony since March, 1932, and counsel fees.

ASC Starts Rotating Plan to Spread Work

The American Society of Cinematographers has adopted a work rotation system by which it is hoped to bring about greater spread of employment among Hollywood cameramen who are not under direct contract to studios. System is to rotate work on a basis of actual productions rather than hours or weeks.

A rotating list of members of the society has been prepared, and the major studios are obtaining all photographic personnel through the society. When a call comes in either for an individual or a crew the ASC office submits names at the head of its list. As members finish assignments they report back and names are placed at bottom of list. Such plan, members of ASC feel, will equalize employment to a high degree.

Ambassador Dinner Dance For The Sheltering Home

The Junior Auxiliary of the Hebrew Sheltering Home, headed by Mrs. L. B. Mayer, Mrs. Ida Cummings and Mrs. Jack Stodel, will give a dinner dance at the Cocoanut Grove Sunday evening, all the proceeds to go to the hospital unit of that organization.

Edgar Allan Woolf will be in charge of the floor show that will comprise many of the most prominent stars in the studios.

Schubert Joins Lesser

Sol Lesser yesterday signed Bernard Schubert to collaborate with Marguerite Roberts and Eddie Cline, the director, on the script of "Peck's Bad Boy." Jackie Cooper has the lead, having been borrowed Saturday from MGM for the spot.

RADIO'S 'LONG LOST FATHER' HACKNEYED FORMULA YARN

All Concerned Waste Efforts

"LONG LOST FATHER"
(Radio)

Director .....Ernest B. Schoedsack
Story .....G. B. Stern
Screen Play.....Dwight Taylor
Photography .....Nick Musuraca
Cast: John Barrymore, Helen Chandler, Donald Cook, Natalie Moorhead, Alan Mowbray, E. E. Clive, Doris Lloyd, Adele Thomas.

"Long Lost Father" doesn't merit any particular enthusiasm, despite the distinguished presence of John Barrymore, and sincere efforts on the part of Helen Chandler and Alan Mowbray to play uninspired roles.

It seems to be one of those cases of a splendid story—if you were to read it, or hear it told—but the type of story that eventually you decide should not have been made into a picture. It just doesn't "jell" on the screen.

The story gives us Barrymore as a glorified head waiter or captain in the popular Happy Hour Cafe, owned by Alan Mowbray. Barrymore, who had deserted his wife and daughter on his fourth wedding anniversary, meets the daughter, now Helen Chandler, in a lawyer's office during the reading of a relative's will.

The daughter is bitterly resentful of Barrymore, which gives us our theatrical situations when she is later engaged to dance in his cafe. A rigamarole of smart society stuff (treasure hunt, ol' deah, you know) and all that finds Helen, accused of a robbery, about to lose her fiance, Donald Cook, and finally saved by the distinguished John Barrymore.

The entire production gives the feeling of a short budget job just turned out to make a picture. Ernest Schoedsack, with so much ability on the sincere, open-handed type of picture, seems wasted directing a hackneyed story about uninteresting people. We won't attempt to divide the blame between Dwight Taylor and the original author for a dull vehicle.

Doug Senior Named in English Divorce Suit

London.—Lord Ashley, heir to the Earl of Shaftesbury, yesterday filed suit for divorce from Lady Ashley, naming Douglas Fairbanks Sr. Lady Ashley is the former Sylvia Hawkes, blonde British actress. As papers in suit were sealed, charges are not made public.

Sport News

Just to keep this industry up with the important news of the film world we wish to chronicle that Universal's basketball team defeated the Los Angeles Junior College last night by a score of 39-21. Leland Hayward is back in town for an indefinite stay in connection with the Selznick-Joyce and his own agency.

'M'Lord, The Duke' 'Twixt Good and Bad

"M'Lord, The Duke," which made its bow on the Hollywood Playhouse stage last night, is amusing in a disconnected sort of way. It is of more importance as a reminder that this type of comedy, which the movies have neglected for several years, may still be worth doing—and be the better for being half forgotten by audiences. In this instance Norman Cannon's dialogue must be praised for its part in creating an atmosphere of 1934, albeit he was not so fortunate in the other departments of his play. Several sequences, as well as the second and third acts, were quite without connection.

E. E. Clive has done an excellent and not un-difficult job in reconciling his comedy Englishman with a public conception which has undergone considerable enlightenment in this respect in the past ten or twenty years. As the unintelligibly garrulous Lord Spendlove he creates and defines a character which in less able hands might have been pretty awful. Zeffie Tilbury, as his mother-in-law, receives the best of the remaining dialogue and handles it with an effectively gruff sort of care. Arthur Treacher has a part which keeps him busy figuring opportune entrances and exits, while maintaining the supercilious near-idiocy of a expressionless English gentleman of leisure. He does it very well. Peggy Campbell brings freshness and a degree of charm to an ingenue role which permits her to do nothing else. John Stanhope was handicapped by his drooping spurs and the fact that he was not allowed to open his mouth until the middle of the second act, but it must be said for him that he sincerely strove to make up for lost time.

Such pieces of the plot as can be located concern a movie company which hire an Englishman's castle for their set, and find that their star once rescued his Lordship's daughter from some water around Deauville. In justice to E. E. Clive's stage direction, he did everything he could to make this stretch out for three acts, but the task was quite impossible.

HAYS GROUP STANDS PAT; GIVES BREEN NEW POWERS

The Association of Motion Picture Producers held its annual meeting yesterday and relected the officers who served last year. They are: Louis B. Mayer, president; Jack L. Warner, 1st vice-president; Winfield R. Sheehan, 2nd vice-president; Fred W. Beetson, secretary and treasurer.

At the meeting it was announced that Joseph I. Breen has been appointed to represent Will Hays and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on matters pertaining to the Production Code and the Advertising Code.

The entire Board of Governors was reelected, with only one change, that being R. J. Obringer chosen to represent First National in place of Darryl Zanuck. The personnel of the board follows: Harry Cohn, Columbia; E. H. Allen, Educational; Winfield R. Sheehan, Fox; Hal Roach, Hal Roach studios; W. R. Frazer, Harold Lloyd Corporation; L. B. Mayer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Emanuel Cohen, Paramount; B. B. Kahane, RKO; Carl Laemmle, Jr., Universal; Jack L. Warner, Warner Brothers; R. J. Obringer, First National.

The work of the past year was unanimously approved and the same sized budget voted for the coming year.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BURNEY

New York takes a trip around the country and abroad. Let's see what we can find. From Paris comes a startling bit of news to the effect that Henri Littiere, a baker, was sentenced to three months in prison and fined 500 francs for cruelty to his wife. He forced her to wear a medieval "chastity belt." (It's too bad if this becomes a Hollywood custom). If you think Henri had the wrong idea, listen to what Juliette, his wife, had to say: "Henri may be slightly crazy, but I am, too. I can't look at any man without following him."

Right on the heels of this quaint Parisian episode is a Budapest dispatch dealing with a program adopted by the Society of Awakened Magyars (Hungarian Nazis). The program suggests that every girl upon reaching the age of 12 shall be put in a chastity belt. The father is to keep the key until the marriage contract is signed, when it is to be turned over to the husband. The return to Medieval life via the restriction of personal liberty ought to be some fun, kid!

Returning to the good old U. S. A. R. (not the Union of Socialist American Republics) but the U. S. A. Roosevelt—we learn that the Government has just organized 1,500,000 tramps (transients to you) into camps where they are being clothed, fed, housed and kept going. These people who have been wandering back and forth across the land are now lodged in 261 lodging centers and 27 work camps already set up in 44 states. The transients receive no pay but are allowed approximately 90 cents a week for spending money. Hurry, hurry, the line forms on the corner of Hollywood and Vine.

From Chicago comes news of a novel scientific test conducted by C. W. Muehlberger, a coroner's chemist, who has established the various degrees of intoxication—follow closely—Dry and Decent: Less than one milligram of alcohol in the blood; Devilish: One to two milligrams; Delinquent and Disgusting: Two to three milligrams; Dizzy and Delirious: Three to four milligrams; Dazed and Disgusted: Four to five milligrams, and Dead Drunk: Any amount over five milligrams. Boy, see what the blokes in the back room will have.

And finally to cap the day's journey we offer a theme for the great American novel (the universal Nobel prize theme) . . . the saga of an American, Addie Crawford, who arrived at a farm in Tennessee after walking 100 miles in a week and asked permission to sleep in the barn. A short time later a cry came from the corn crib . . . the good samaritan who gave Addie shelter found her there clutching a newborn babe, protecting it from the cold in her ragged coat. Addie had been deserted by her husband in North Carolina and had started out in search of assistance from a grown son. . . . Mother and child are doing well . . . and so will you if you write that novel.

'THEODORA, THE QUEAN' HAS 'LYSISTRATA' PEPPED UP

Quaint(?) Customs Might Make Picture

"THEODORA, THE QUEAN"

By Jo Milward and J. Kerby Hawkes; presented and staged by Jo Graham; scenery by Yellenti; lighting by Louis Hartman. Cast: Hitous Gray, Lina Abarbanell, Harriet Freeborn, Sarat Lahiri, Julia Colin, Tom Fadden, Robert Anderson, Horace Braham, Carla Gloer, Rex Ingram, Elena Miramova, Paul Everton, Raymond Jones, Raymond Bramley, Lester Alden, Minor Watson.

New York. — "Theodora, the Quean," or the saga of how a courtesan became an empress. The authors, Jo Milward and J. Kerby Hawkes, have gone back to the Byzantium period, where even then the Greeks had a word for it. The producer, Jo Graham, has given this a lavish production with beautiful settings and long flowing gowns. Elena Miramova, as the young and beautiful circus girl, is quite delightful, as she sets her heart on becoming the empress and does so too before the last curtain.

The authors, it seems, tried to impress the audience that being a Quean (harlot, to you) in the old days was a fine and honorable profession, and they came quite near proving it to us by having the most famous Quean advance herself to position of Empress.

Theodora is the famous star of the circus. She is also a woman with a great reputation and price, and as such she is able to get nothing but the best. She gives her favors for emeralds and jewels until she meets the Prince Regent Justinium, the next in line for the throne, unless he is put out of the way by Prince Hypatius, who also aspires to the throne and for the love of Theodora. Theodora incurs the jealousy of the empress, who immediately has her thrown into a dungeon, whence she is rescued by Justinium, the strong man of the country, who, although he is infatuated with Theodora, cannot take her unless he wishes to do so as her equal.

So great is Theodora's love for Justinium, that she forsakes the circus and the pleasures of other men for a quiet and simple life in the country, hoping for the time when Justinium will call for her.

Justinium comes to Theodora and later, while he is bathing, word comes to her that the Emperor, who has been ill a long while, has finally died and that Prince Hypatius has seized the throne. However, Theodora is equal to the situation and she drugs Justinium and has him brought to her dressing room beneath the circus. Playing for time until Justinium can rouse himself from the effects of the drug, Theodora agrees to come to Hypatius. In the meantime, Justinium's legions arrive to save the day, which ends in the death of Prince Hypatius and the crowning of Theodora Empress.

Minor Watson is an honest and reliable Justinium. Horace Braham as Hypatius is a bold and convincing schemer. Yellenti sets and costumes by Helene Pons blend very well with the production.

Picture angles are a problem. Some producer could toy with the idea profitably—if he has the secret of cleaning it up—and is also not afraid of costume pictures. There is a "Warrior's Husband" idea about it somewhere. But don't ask us where.

Enterprise

A young girl walked into Adolph Zukor's office yesterday and asked to see the Paramount head. Asked what she wanted to talk about, she replied: "I want to get picture work." On being told she should go to the casting department she piped, "I have been doing that for three years and have yet to get a job, so I want to see the top boss."

'Cleopatra' Starting Date Back 5 Weeks

Cecil B. DeMille has set back the starting date of his next production for Paramount, "Cleopatra," five weeks due to story trouble. Jeannie Macpherson is on the script.

This delay will enable Claudette Colbert, who was to have started next week in the title role, to play the lead in "Honor Bright" before starting the DeMille opus. Tay Garnett will direct and Louis D. Lighton will supervise.

Garbo Advance Sale Tops at the Chinese

One of the best advance sales of recent years has been realized at the box office of the Chinese Theatre for the opening of "Queen Christina" Friday night.

The box office sold sixty-eight $5 ducats in a single hour yesterday morning. Gittleson and Frankel, ticket brokers, bought an additional 180 seats and the Lloyd Mitchel agency, having agencies in out-of-town drug stores, checked in with 63.

Looks like a sellout in another 24 hours.

Gombell in Premier Lead

Premier yesterday signed Minna Gombell for the feminine lead opposite Johnny Mack Brown and Virginia Sale for a featured spot in "Widows," which Sam Neufeld directs when it goes into production tomorrow at the Mack Sennett studios. Miss Sale was set by Mitchell Gertz of the Al Kingston agency. Lucien Littlefield and Judith Allen are also in the cast.

Holloway Starts Shorts

Sterling Holloway starts his three-picture deal with Warren Doane, producing shorts for Universal, today in "Heartburn," which James W. Horne directs. Dorothy Christy, Gloria Shea and Alene Carroll are also in the cast.

Wheeler-Woolsey on Way

New York.—Wheeler and Woolsey leave for the coast by plane today. Dorothy Lee must have cold feet, because she selected the train, leaving also today.

'Nana' Still in High At Radio Music Hall

New York.—The picture that has the eyes of all New York's showmen and half the picture business on it, "Nana," is showing surprising strength at the Radio City Music Hall. To date the Sam Goldwyn production has checked in $66,200 at the box office and has every indication of a week that will range between $105,000 and $110,000.

The picture business is watching because of interest in Sam Goldwyn's job of selling a new star. The weather and the stay-at-home effects of a pretty serious taxi strike must be figured in connection with the picture's gross.

Thalberg Tries Again

Still dissatisfied with the story on "Stealing Through Life," Irving Thalberg yesterday set Dan Totheroh on the script to write a new screen play. Rowland Brown is to direct, and Franchot Tone takes top billing.

May Robson Clicks

New York.—May Robson is doing so well on her personal appearance here that MGM is shipping her down to Baltimore and Washington for two more weeks.

N. Y. Goes Limit on 'Moulin Rouge' Gag

New York.—If you want to appreciate the circus feeling that is evident in New York these days just begin to check up on what will happen to the "Moulin Rouge" troupe of Twentieth Century's when it arrives here.

There will be a parade with police motorcycle escort from the City Hall up Broadway to Columbus Circle, a ball at the Hotel New Yorker, and the attendance of all the stars at the opening of the picture at the Rivoli. All this happens Wednesday.

Cameraman Gets Break

Lauron Draper, first cameraman, gets a break this week. Last night he took off by airplane for Dartmouth College, in the hills of New Hampshire. There he will make an MGM-Pete Smith short on the annual winter sports. Break for him is that he will make it all alone, with no director to tell him what to do. Carried his script in his pocket and rest is up to his own judgment.

Lachman With Rowland

Marc Lachman has been engaged as director of publicity and advertising for William Rowland in the producer's venture as a unit producer for Columbia.

Barry Trivers Returns

Barry Trivers has returned from New York. Writer was away three weeks. Before he left, Trivers completed his work on "Redheads on Parade" for Jesse L. Lasky.

'HAT, COAT,' ETC., JUST MISSES; 'WIND AND RAIN' TOO PLACID

English Stage Hit Has Little for Pics

"THE WIND AND THE RAIN"
Play by Merton Hodge; presented by George Kondolf and Walter Hart at the Ritz; staged by Mr. Hart; setting by Philip Gelb. Cast: Mildred Natwick, Lowell Gilmore, Alexander Archdale, Frank Lawton, Edward Raquello, Rose Hobart, June Blossom, Charles Campbell and Albert Whitley.

New York.—One often wonders why a play can be a success in London and just so-so in New York and is forced to the conclusion that our British cousins like their theatre very scholarly and reserved—perfectly written and acted—while we on the other hand seem to prefer a drama that moves and gets somewhere—characters who have depth and vitality and fairly leap at you from the stage. Otherwise, why is it that this play which has run over 100 performances abroad and which is played with utter simplicity and naturalness fails to intrigue us? Lack of dramatic quality is the answer.

The most that can be said for "The Wind and the Rain" is that it is pleasantly diverting. It relates the experiences of a group of medical students at Edinburgh who face five or more years of humdrum quiet and abstention from worldly pleasures.

Charles Tritton comes up from London to qualify for his M.D., buoyed by the love and financial support of his mother, a London antique dealer, and the loyalty of Jill, his boyhood sweetheart.

At the Edinburgh boarding house Mrs. McFie immediately takes her boys in tow and provides for their tea, porridge and beer. There Tritton finds Gilbert, a perpetual student and wastrel; John, an earnest chap and friendly; Paul Duhamel, a Frenchman who dabbles more seriously in love and the study of human souls than he does in medicine, and last but most important, Anne. She is a sculptress who has a studio in the town and is one of Paul's friends.

In time their friendship ripens and she comes to mean everything in Charles' life. He is the type of young man who needs the comforting and guiding hand of a woman, or else go to smash. Anne guides him spiritually through his college years. Jill comes up from London to visit Charles, the net result of which is the realization to both that they do not mean as much to each other as they once did.

When Charles graduates, Anne walks out of his life and prepares to go home to her folk in New Zealand. Charles goes to London, where his mother is gravely ill. She dies and he returns to Edinburgh to accept a minor position on the faculty, and to his intense surprise and delight finds that Anne is still in Edinburgh. She had stayed behind instead of sailing, to stand by Charles in his bereavement. He convinces her that Jill is finally out of his life, that he cannot go on with his career without Anne and all ends well. Life at the boarding house resumes its routine as a new student arrives to live over the same years as his predecessors. That is all there is to the tale.

Contributing beautiful performances are Frank Lawton, the actor who appeared in "Cavalcade," as Charles; Rose Hobart, who gives an especially masterful portrayal of Anne; June Blossom, who makes a beautifully vivacious Jill; Edward Raquello, as the all-understanding French student; Mildred Natwick, as the Scotch boarding house lady; and Alexander Archdale, as the carefree eternal student, and Lowell Gillmore, as John. The picture possibilities are meagre.

Tip-Off

That studious looking gentleman you see coming out of the Huntington Library these days—if you ever go near a library—is Howard Estabrook laying the foundation for David Selznick's MGM picture "David Copperfield."

Mono. Starts Plan To Build Star List

The inception of a plan to build up its own personalities in seen in the announcement from Monogram yesterday of the signing of Dixie Lee, wife of Bing Crosby, to a five picture deal. The Trem Carr organization, with Lou Ostrow as executive producer, has been confining past deals to two picture arrangements.

Kay and Stuart set the deal for Dixie Lee, who will make her bow in "Manhattan Love Song," from story by David Silverstein and Leonard Fields, directed by Fields.

banking and financial circles and instead of continually heaping their path with stumbling blocks, as was the case during the first six months of their receivership, the same organizations and individuals are bending backwards to get them out of the bankrupt hands.

Referee Davis yesterday approved the plan of the Paramount to spend up to $500,000 to buy up claims against some of Paramount bankrupt subsidiaries. The Referee also approved the expenditure of $175,000 to pay up the back taxes of the Seneca Holding Corp., which controls the Criterion theatre property. This after the National City Bank and the Farmers Trust Company had shown their inclination temporarily to withdraw their $4,000,000 claim against the Seneca Corporation, for at least six months, with the belief that by that time Paramount may be in the position of either paying it off entirely or reducing this claim to a point that will satisfy the banks.

Due to the above, it looks as if Paramount will be able to jerk the Seneca Corporation out of bankruptcy making the first subsidiary to get that whitewash.

But Is Tempting Bet for the Screen

"A HAT, A COAT, A GLOVE"
Crosby Gaige and D. K. Weiskoff present "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," a new play in three acts adapted from an original work of Wilhelm Speyer by William A. Drake; staged by Crosby Gaige and Robert C. Fischer; settings by Aline Bernstein, at the Selwyn Theatre. With A. E. Matthews, Lester Vail, Isabel Baring, Nedda Harrigan, Philip Van Zandt, Helen Wynn, Boyd Irwin, George Alison, Charles G. Johnson, Horace Casselberry, George W. Williams, Henry Brent, Clare Woodbury, D. J. Carew, Oscar Berlin.

New York.—When a play is able to survive miscasting, a wrong tempo and a subtle emasculation of its theatrical effectiveness, that play must have an inherent vitaity, a vitality implicit in its writing and in its idea. Not that "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" is to be considered a great opus in any sense of the word, but William Drake's rendering of this transplanted work does present, in our estimation, as neat a piece of intelligent dramatic craftsmanship as has been witnessed on the boards this season.

A hat, a coat, a glove—these are the only clues to a killing that has taken place in the studio apartment of Jerry Hutchins, who had fallen in love with Felicia Mitchell, estranged wife of Robert Mitchell, a celebrated criminal lawyer. In the opening act Mitchell, during the absence of Hutchins from his apartment, has the misfortune of accidentally encompassing the death of Ann Brewster, a prostitute whom Jerry had thwarted in an attempt at suicide. Thereafter, to save the life of her lover who has been accused of the crime, Felicia goes to her husband, confesses the infidelity he is already aware of, and pleads that he undertake Hutchins' defense. Mitchell agrees to, out of a great love for his wife, and as a matter of conscience. In a concluding courtroom scene Mitchell, making most ingenious use of the hat, the coat, the glove (in a manner not to be divulged here) secures the acquittal of Hutchins—and wins back his wife.

A. E. Mathews, as Mitchell, though splendid in sheer performance, conveyed the English barrister rather than the native trial lawyer as we know him. Nedda Harrigan, as his wife, was emotionally lacking. Robert Ross, as the prosecuting attorney, also left something to be desired. As the prostitute Isabel Baring did a good job of it. The same can be said of Lester Vail, as the wife's lover.

Picture companies will be interested in "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" (incidentally an intriguing title), regardless of its New York fate, because all the ingredients of an entertaining box office picture are there.

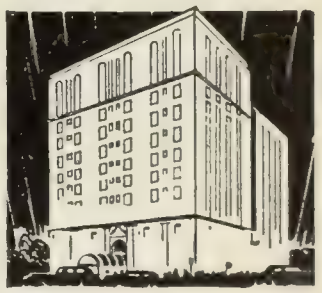
Zellner on 'Fashions'

Arthur Zellner leaves for San Francisco tomorrow to handle special exploitation on Warners' "Fashions of 1934."

Wellman on 'Barb. Coast'

Sam Goldwyn is going ahead on plans for Anna Sten's next, "Barbary Coast," getting William Wellman from Twentieth Century to direct and signing a ticket with Dwight Taylor, through Edington and Vincent, to write the screen play.

New Tag for 'Boley'



MGM yesterday tore up Richard Boleslavsky's contract and handed him another ticket with a nice tilt in pay. Director just completed "Men in White" and is now on the added scenes of "Mystery of the Dead Police."

RADIO LOT IN TURMOIL

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IN a chat with Irving Thalberg yesterday he brought out the point that whatever the hardships the NRA may have heaped on this production industry in additional salaries, shorter hours, etc., etc., it was more than made up through the fact that this same NRA made it possible for a greater attendance at the theatres, much greater than has been experienced in the past few years.

This additional attendance has not been brought on through better pictures but because the majority of working people have more free time now to seek amusements, what with the thirty or forty hour week, five day working schedules, etc., etc. That vast assemblage has not only the time to go places and see things, but has the money with which to do it.

Not only does this NRA make it possible for people to have more time to go to see the movies, but it has caused more people to secure work, enabling them to have the money to spend for motion picture entertainment, to such an extent when all our NRA bills are paid the gross income will balance that and give the companies a handsome profit IF the studios here are able to turn out GOOD PICTURES.

There is a greater audience waiting for good pictures right at this time than ever in the history of the picture business. That big public, the working man and his family, not only has the money to go to the movies but has the time to enjoy such recreation.

So whatever may be the kicks from this end on the additional costs with which the NRA has burdened us, it should be remembered that the same NRA has made it possible for motion pictures to run up a greater gross, and, as a consequence, a far greater profit, than has ever been possible before.

If producers here would only take a little time off to digest the opportunities that are now offered for GOOD PICTURES, if they would only scan the pages showing money that is being paid into box offices on hit pictures, MAYBE there would be a greater effort towards making those hit pictures. As it is, they are rushing pictures into production that have no chance to hit—thereby killing off the great possibilities that are offered.

Radio Puts Ban On Hepburn Personals For $10,000 a Week

New York.—Katie Hepburn is doing quite a burn due to the fact that Radio has refused her permission to accept a deal for personal appearances with an initial five weeks and ten more weeks in the offing at $10,000 a week.

Radio feels that the stage appearance of Miss Hepburn did her enough harm and that the personals in picture houses would not be of any benefit to the star or the company. As a consequence they have taken advantage of a clause in their contract and turned thumbs down on the tour.

Columbia to Make 32 On 1934-35 Schedule

New York.—On Jack Cohn's return here from Hollywood he announced that his organization would produce 32 pictures during the next 12 months and may take on from 6 to 12 outside pictures for their distribution.

Swanson in 'Widow'

The latest report from the MGM lot yesterday was that Gloria Swanson would likely play the lead opposite Maurice Chevalier in "The Merry Widow." One element in her favor is the approval of the French star.

Cooper Departure Results In Scramble For Top Post—Big Bosses From N. Y. In A Daze

With Merian Cooper definitely out of the picture the Radio lot is today "Any Man's Land." The producers who are not certain that they are "in right" are walking around with their fingers crossed, and the ones who feel they are "set" have their chests out to the point of demanding all sorts of preferential treatment on story selection and profit sharing deals such as Merian Cooper had.

The net result of which is that the New York big shots here to clear up everything are in as big a daze as the lowliest bystander. To give them a

CWA To Help Find Jobs for Cameramen

Assured of the backing of Governor Rolph, officials of the cameramen's union yesterday felt that they are finally winning in their efforts to secure cooperation of CWA in providing employment for a large number of cameramen now out of work. Governor Rolph wired the CWA administration in Washington urging that photographers be set to work making photographic record of CWA progress here. Senator Hiram Johnson also backed the idea.

Word has now been received from Washington saying the matter has been placed in the hands of the State CWA. With Governor Rolph favoring the project, cameramen hope something will materialize shortly.

THE LOW DOWN

A famous and glamorous star, many times wed, is about to relinquish her most recent husband. We say "relinquish" because the lady has certainly tried to make a go of this union—but her patience has been sorely tried—and there's a limit to everything it seems—except the "chiseling" indulged in by her present spouse. She doesn't want to face the deluge of publicity that is bound to follow the break-up—nor does she hate her husband—but things have gotten to the point where she just can't stand much more in the way of disappointment and embarrassment. So it will surprise us very much if the marriage lasts the year out.

The Busby Berkeley-Merna Kennedy wedding promises to be quite an affair. It's the first church wedding, with all the attendant ballyhoo, that Hollywood has had for a long time. M. C. Levee, we hear, is now in charge of things, and hopes it will be very "social." In other words, he's "running the show." Jack Warner will give the bride away—but don't ask us who's going to give Jack away!

Give an ear and die laffing! A friend of ours was talking to a newshound who just returned from Sweden and he says that the whole country is so Garbo-conscious that they're desperate for more publicity angles on her. While this news-hound was there, one of the Stockholm papers SCOOPED the whole town by printing a beautiful photograph of the garbage can that Greta's mother had used for years!

And believe it or not, Si Seadler just received a letter inclosing an ad for a new refuse-container called The Garb—O! Which is carrying things a bit too far in the way of publicity—or is it?

Seymour Robinson, who came here from N'Yawk to pursue his writing, has decided he wants to be a director instead, and is putting on "The Terrible Turk" at the Pasadena Playhouse any minute. The play is all about Jed Harris, we hear—which promises well in the way of laffs. Besides, this is the play that George Jean Nathan wrote a piece in praise of, after reading the manuscript, even though the show hasn't yet been produced in New York.

New York REVIEWS

"BELOVED"

Universal prod.; director, Victor Schertzinger; writers, Paul Gangelin and George O'Neil; music, Victor Schertzinger and Howard Jackson.

Roxy Theatre

News: A romantic picture with a musical background. The accompaniment is made up of lovely old-fashioned melodies beautifully played by a stringed orchestra. The story covers a lengthy period and a good deal of ground. The picture is too episodic to be really gripping, but each part is well acted, with John Boles and Gloria Stuart acquitting themselves with honor.

Times: Too sad for comfort and too long for effectiveness. Victor Schertzinger's music, although it is pleasant rather than striking, is superior to his sense of drama.

Herald-Tribune: It is a sentimental story of the lush sort and its performance sometimes verges onto burlesque, although it is evident Mr. Boles tried to avoid this. Nevertheless, "Beloved" has that spark of feeling and emotions worth dozens of technically perfect but cold pictures. Like "Little Women" its charm is old-fashioned and its romance flowery.

World-Telegram: The film misses fire because of the way it has been reduced to the stuff of pure and unadulterated hokum. When it was over I felt nothing but melancholy regret for a fine idea gone wrong.

Journal: Since the scenario covers a great deal of time, the picture is unfolded in an episodic manner and, while rather prolonged, is pleasantly told for those who like nostalgic sentiment.

American: The tedious phases of the film are materially lightened by the fine music with which the director has studded his story, but somehow the play lacks the gripping quality necessary to hold audience attention through lengthy sequences.

Mirror: Victor Schertzinger, the movies' only composer-director, put a great passion for music into this ambitious musical film. It is a sensitive and touching film, which has dignity, sweep and grandeur. An exhilarating romantic theme, a pleasing musical score, inspired casting and tasteful production raise it above the tawdry level of musical movies.

Post: It is a large canvas, replete with costumes and flourishes, and parading the pageant of America from the pre-Civil War days down to the present time. For some reason or other it ought to be more exciting than it is. One difficulty is that the picture seems to have been manufactured from a set of blue prints designed to supply as much all-round entertainment as could be crammed into a single story.

Sun: "Beloved" does have a certain charm; but its efforts to create illusion are heavy-handed. It is a pretentious production, perhaps too pretentious for such a well-known theme. Director, writer and actors treat it solemnly. There is a stiff stagey air about the whole picture.

Reginald Owen Has Busy Signing Day

Radio signed Reginald Owen yesterday on a three-picture ticket, with Universal duplicating the signing act for one, both contracts being manipulated by the William Morris office.

Owen's trio for Radio are "Stingaree," "Dover Road" and "Devil's Disciple." Universal gets him for "The Human Side."

Jack Grant Free Lances

Jack Grant, for the past five months associate with Dorothy Donnell, western editor of Motion Picture and Movie Classic magazines, resigned yesterday, effective immediately. Grant filled in for Miss Donnell last spring when she went to Europe for a vacation. He will devote his time to free lance magazine writing.

'BOLERO' SWELL PICTURE; 'SPITFIRE' ALL HEPBURN

Raft, Lombard Perfect Team

"BOLERO"
Paramount

Direction .....Wesley Ruggles
Authors.....Carey Wilson and Kubec Glasmon
Adaptor .....Horace Jackson
Photography .....Leo Tover
Cast: George Raft, Carole Lombard, Sally Rand, Frances Drake, William Frawley, Raymond Milland, Gloria Shea, Gertrude Michael, Del Henderson, Frank G. Dunn, Martha Baumattre, Paul Panzer, Adolph Milar, Anne Shaw, Phillips Smalley, John Irwin.

The Paramount picture "Bolero" was made for George Raft, and George Raft was made for "Bolero." So you exhibitors have a humdinger of an attraction coming your way.

"Bolero" is not a great picture, but it is a darn good picture. The interesting thing about it is that it follows, emotionally and dramatically, the musical tempo of the Ravel masterpiece that accompanies it. The ending of the picture is ruthless and sadly final, but it is logical and inevitable.

Just as the music starts, so does the picture—George Raft trying to get auditions, trying to get a break dancing, trying to prove to someone what he already knows—that he is the greatest dancer that ever lived—and meeting only discouragement. Then it picks up; Raft gets a job dancing in a beer garden, the tempo gets faster; he and his partner are featured in a night club, the rhythm is excited and more pronounced. Then Europe, big breaks, fame—and the war.

After the war, with lungs and heart dangerously weakened, Raft opens his own club, the fulfillment of his dreams, but after dancing the strenuous Bolero, the ambition of his life, he suffers a heart attack and dies—at the height of his career.

Raft gives everything he's got to this role, and then some. His performance is as perfect as his dancing. Carole Lombard, who plays the only one of his many partners whom he really loved, will prove an agreeable surprise to the public, for she also dances excitingly well and her acting contains a warm, languorous, sensuous note that is fascinating. She and Raft are a perfect team.

William Frawley, who has the part of Raft's long-suffering, but understanding brother, is a definitely valuable discovery. His performance is flawless and impressive.

Sally Rand and Frances Drake, two of Raft's partners, are well cast, and Miss Rand does her fan dance, which is really lovely. Miss Drake scores well.

Raymond Milland, Del Henderson, Martha Baumattre, Adolph Milar, Anne Shaw and Phillips Smalley are all outstanding in small roles.

Wesley Ruggles directed masterfully, drawing the picture to the same high frenzy at the finish that so dramatically ends the music. Horace Jackson's adaptation of the Carey Wilson and Kubec Glasmon story is skillful and his dialogue is clever. Leo Tover's photography is in harmony.

'Mamy' Not Sure

When Rouben Mamoulian's mother was approached with congratulations on the (supposed) marriage to Greta Garbo, she replied, "Not yet, not yet. My son has not made up his mind yet."

Mono's 'Beggars' Is Top Notch Picture

"BEGGARS IN ERMINE"
(Monogram)

Directed by.....Phil Rosen
Novel by.....Esther Lynd Day
Adaptation .....Tristram Tupper
Photography.....Gilbert Warrenton
Cast: Lionel Atwill, H. B. Walthall, Betty Furness, Jameson Thomas, James Bush, Astrid Allyn, George Hayes, Stephen Gross, Sam Godfrey, Lee Phelps, Clinton Lyle, Sidney deGrey, Myrtle Stedman, Gordon deMaine.

The best way to adequately describe this picture is to say that if it had been made by a major studio all executives who had anything to do with it would be dropping in on the boss today for a bonus.

"Beggars in Ermine" is a wow of a picture from every point of view. Lionel Atwill gives a magnificent performance, at times an inspired performance. He is surrounded by an exceedingly well-chosen cast. Phil Rosen's direction is well nigh perfect, and the story, while at first glance almost a bit too fantastic to be plausible, is so well done that you forget plausibility and forget that it is a picture.

This picture has a wealth of production value and atmosphere in the first five hundred feet in which there are steel mill shots that are magnificent. Starting with this atmosphere the story swings immediately into action, and there is no letdown until the end. Tristram Tupper deserves much credit for the adaptation, and Gilbert Warrenton did an unusual job of photography.

It is a story of big business, and a double-crossing associate taking away the steel mill from the man who has built it up by honest effort. In order to do it the mill owner is injured by a startlingly real accident in which he loses both his legs. And there the fantastic yarn comes in, for he becomes a beggar, forms a beggar welfare organization which later comes to his aid with their savings and enables him to get back the mill. But it is woven so well that you live through it with Lionel Atwill. It is box office. It deserves a showing in any theatre.

H. B. Walthall, in the role of a blind beggar, gives a sympathetic and convincing performance. Betty Furness, while given but little to do, does it very well. Jameson Thomas handles the unsympathetic role of the crooked mill associate with a convincingness that makes you hate him.

Cromwell's Work And Cast Good

"SPITFIRE"
(Radio)

Directed by.....John Cromwell
From the play by.....Lulu Vollmer
Screen Play.....Jane Murfin and Lulu Vollmer
Photography.....Eddie Cronjager
Cast: Katharine Hepburn, Robert Young, Ralph Bellamy, Louis Mason, Sarah Hayden, Virginia Howell, Martha Sleeper, Sidney Toler.

"Spitfire" (formerly called "Trigger") will be a cheerful and tearful picnic to the Hepburn fans. For though the story is off the beaten path of screen fare and offers much in the way of naive charm and touching sincerity, it is nevertheless a character study. Whether or not a character study, no matter how brilliant, is entertainment for the great masses of movie-goers we would hesitate to say—but we will go on record with the statement that Katharine Hepburn's interpretation of "Trigger" is something to rave about, and one which will add to her screen glory and thrill her fans.

One cannot set down on paper the very things that furnish "Spitfire's" finest moments, without going into a tedious description of its psychological twists and turns. But it is easy to tell of the beautiful shadings, the utter simplicity and depth that Hepburn brings to the part of the mountain girl (imbued with religious faith and native intelligence) that make even the most hackneyed situations in the picture refreshing and real.

"Spitfire" was a swell choice of character for Hepburn—and it will not disappoint as such. But there is much in the story itself which, though it is sincere and beautifully done, is nevertheless in subject matter purely adult in appeal, inasmuch as so many morons will fail to see the very spirit in which it is made, and probably take offense at many of its nuances.

John Cromwell's direction is full of first-rate technique and noticeably charming touches. Though a trifle slow in spots at preview, the picture has been splendidly handled throughout. Eddie Cronjager's photography has given Hepburn "benefit of camera" to her own great advantage, and the screen play by Jane Murfin and Lulu Vollmer rates bouquets, though a trifle repetitious.

Outstanding performances in support of the star are those of Louis Mason who rated a hand for his swell work at last night's show—and well he deserved it. Next comes Sarah Hayden who furnished the "comedy relief"—only she's better than that. Ralph Bellamy was excellent in a straight role. Robert Young, Sidney Toler, Virginia Howell and others, O. K.

Bill it for, by and with Hepburn—she's the show!

David Manners, who is supposed to be too ill to come back to Los Angeles, was at "As Thousands Cheer" last night looking very fit. Dick and Mary Wallace—have taken a penthouse and it looks like that theatre proposition is really going through. . . Lois Moran, whose name has been coupled with many of the young swains of New York since she deserted Hollywood, is very much liked by George S. Kaufmann.

Douglass Montgomery, who has been three months looking for a play, finally gave up in desperation and signed a contract with Universal for "Little Man, What Now?" and two days later he found the part he has been looking for all Winter. . . . . Kelcy Allen, one of New York's oldest dramatic critics, made a faux pas the other day—he has been having trouble with one of his eyes and couldn't see very well—so he walked over to Sylvia Sidney and asked her how she managed to get a mink coat and do so well while she wasn't working. He was very much surprised at the look he received, having mistaken her for some one else.

A. S. C. GOING INTO AGENCY BUSINESS FOR CAMERAMEN

Threat to Regulars in Lower Commissions

According to present plans which are still in the formative state, the American Society of Cinematographers will eventually branch out into the agency business.

The plan is to set up a department in the A.S.C. which will take over the management of "ace" cameramen who feel that an agent or manager can take better care of their business relations with studios than they can themselves. The ASC will charge a regular percentage commission same as agencies handling other talent in the industry.

Alan Watt, executive manager of the A.S.C., in commenting on the plan, stated that the commission undoubtedly will be a lot less than the regular agents are charging, but would not venture to name the figure, as it has not yet been definitely set.

For some time past some of the cameramen have been trying out the various agents, but with few exceptions, have dropped out of the agents' folds within a short time. However, the idea has never died among them, especially among those who realize that they are much better artists than businessmen. They figure that an agent can toot their horn with much better success and fewer blushes than they can talk about themselves.

A.S.C., since addition of Watt as business head, figured that it would be the best organization to handle the camera stars as they are closely in touch with them, know all about them, have their records, and have means of publicizing them in their own monthly magazine.

Rumor had spread about town that percentage would be charged all cameramen who secure work through A.S.C., but Watt emphatically denied this, saying only percentage will be on those who want A.S.C. to act as manager. It is not obligatory, he says.

Col. in Music Hall With Capra Picture

New York.—Columbia steps into a great break with "It Happened One Night," getting the Washington's Birthday date at the Radio City Music Hall for the Frank Capra production which stars Gable and Colbert.

Sardi's Has Birthday

Eddie Brandstatter and David Covey celebrate the first anniversary of Sardi's Friday night, the restaurant having weathered the first year with Eddie's luck looking up.

Hyskell With West Coast

Dean Hyskell has joined the Fox West Coast advertising department, going in as assistant to Oscar Kantner, department chief for the circuit.

Tiomkin Plans Recital

Dimitri Tiomkin is drawing up plans for a local piano recital. The composer will put on a concert in April at a Los Angeles auditorium.

'Franc's' Big Day

New York.—Leon Franconi, first editor of Pathe Weekly in 1910, and industrial daddy of such executives as Emanuel Cohen and Lou Diamond, will be the guest of honor when Pathe opens the Embassy as a newsreel house. The house re-opens Saturday.

Zeidman Deal at 'U' Set for 4 More

B. F. Zeidman has signed a new contract with Universal to remain on that lot as a producer for four more pictures.

The first picture under his new contract is "I Give My Love," from an original story by Vicki Baum. Karl Freund will direct this picture as his next assignment and Winifred Dunn has been assigned to write the screen play.

Wynne Gibson will be starred by Universal in this picture.

Two New Books Out With Picture Names

Two books which will create interest have made their appearance on the local bookstands. They are "Border Town," by Carroll Graham, a Vanguard book, and "Innocent Bystander," Faith Baldwin's novel which ran serially in Cosmopolitan, published by Farrar and Rinehart. Both the novels and writers are handled by Fritz Tidden of the Hoffman-Schlager agency.

Arthur Friend Up For Code Authority Counsel

New York.—Members of the Code Authority who now find they will have to engage their own attorneys to defend suits against the NRA bodies are understood to be considering Arthur Friend, one-time big Paramount executive in the original Zukor days, and in recent years combining New Haven exhibiting with his legal practice.

Ryerson Novel Optioned

MGM has taken an option on Florence Ryerson's novel "Mild Oats" and has handed the story to Edgar Allan Woolf for a screen treatment.

The cast of this production will include the younger players now on the lot.

Hold-Over for Lederer Pic

Radio decided yesterday to hold the Francis Lederer picture, "Man of Two Worlds," over for a second week at the RKO-Hillstreet, which pushes back the premiere of "Lost Patrol" from February 9 to 16.

Oliver at Rivoli

New York.—Hal Oliver, of RKO Theatres, will succeed James Hood MacFarland as Rivoli publicity head, the latter having moved to the Radio houses to succeed Joe Shea, called west by Fox.

Film Colony Backs Guild Stage Plan

Ground will be broken on February 14 for the erection of a theatre that will be known as the Westwood Theatre Guild, which is backed by the movie colony. The building, according to present plans, will be finished by May 1 and the first legitimate show to open there will be on or about May 6.

Zeppo Marx is president of the Guild and Dickson Morgan is the producer. The advisory board consists of George Fitzmaurice, Lewis Milestone, Sam Harris, Dr. Edwin Janss, Harold Janss, King Vidor, Lowell Sherman, Robert Montgomery, Gregory LaCava, Frank Morgan and Frank Borzage.

Ernst Lubitsch will direct a play for the Guild.

Corrigan Will Direct 'Bachelor Wife' at 'U'

Lloyd Corrigan comes back to the picture fold after more than a year's absence to direct "Bachelor Wife" for Universal on a ticket negotiated by Edington and Vincent.

Corrigan was handed the assignment after the company acceded to Edward Buzzell's insistent declaration that the play was outside his ken, and the company would be better off with him off it. Buzzell was made happy by being moved over to Eph Asher's unit to pilot "The Human Side."

Schayer in Demand by MGM and Paramount

MGM yesterday turned down a bid from B. P. Schulberg for the loan of Richard Schayer whom the Paramount producer wanted to work on the screen play of "Cosmetic." MGM has several assignments waiting for Schayer, who is slated to go from "Comin' Round the Mountain" to the Walter Wanger unit for the latter's Navy story.

Offer Exhibs Protection

New York.—General Talking Pictures is notifying all exhibitor licensees that they will stand back of any infringement claims and carry out all responsibilities under the contracts for installations. This is in view of alarm caused by the recent Tri-Ergon victory, in which suit, however, General Talking was not a party.

Schary to Zeidman

Having secured his release from Columbia recently, Dore Schary swings over to the B. F. Zeidman unit at Universal, where he will write the screen play for an original story which will serve as Chester Morris' second vehicle following the Stanley Bergerman picture "Practical Joker." Nat Goldstone set the writer.

Setting 'Humbug' Leads

Nils Asther is slated for the male lead in "The Humbug," the Max Marcin original story which Marcin will write and direct for Universal.

Gertrude Michaels is being considered by the director and the studio for the feminine lead in this picture.

Exhibs Refuse To Restore Operators

New York.—Although they have not been advised as yet, to restore fifty-five operator members of Local 306, by the Grievance Board of the NRA, local exhibitors involved state that regardless of the NRA action, they will not put the men back to work.

The exhibs believe that the Grievance Board has no power to make such demands.

Novarro Leaves for Eastern Personal Appearance Tour

Cleaning up his contract with MGM, Ramon Novarro hops off today on a tour that will keep him busy for over a year.

His first stop is New York, where he makes a week's personal appearance at the Capitol February 13, in conjunction with MGM's "Cat and the Fiddle," proceeding then to Washington for a week. He returns to Hollywood the first of next month for a brief respite and pushes off subsequently for a six weeks' tour of South America on concert appearances. Late April will find him en route to Europe for the following ten months.

Important Acad. Ruling on 'Weather Permitting' Call

The Academy Conciliation Committee last night settled two cases. One concerned a player, Phillip Cooper, and MGM in connection with the "Viva Villa" location trip and was handled without recourse to committee action.

The other on three players against Fox on a "weather permitting" call resulted in the ruling for the future that on weather permitting calls a company may not hold a player beyond the time set for the call without paying a full day.

Carroll Position Stated

Richard Carroll, described in a recent Reporter story as being with Charles Rogers in a production capacity, is only with the Paramount producer as a writer in connection with his story "Green Gold." Carroll is, however, considering production plans in the east.

Buell Short Placed

Jed Buell yesterday concluded negotiations with the Beverly Hills exchange for the release of his timely short on gold, "Thar's Gold." Exchange has offices in 23 key cities. Mack Strengler photographed the short.

Morrison Signs Gleckler

New York.—Robert Gleckler, the original heavy of the famous Jed Harris hit, "Broadway," and since up and down for picture consideration on innumerable occasions, has been placed under contract by Leo Morrison.

Grainger Gets 'Frailty'

Universal has purchased an original story titled "Frailty," by Edith and Edward Ellis. The yarn was handed to Edmund Grainger for his supervision. Grainger has assigned Edwin Marin to direct.

'PATENTS POOL' IDEA TO GIVE NEW LIFE TO M. P. ACADEMY

Tech. Plan Follows Auto Industry Lines

The Technicians Branch of the Academy may be destined to become one of the most far-reaching and powerful organizations in the motion picture industry, if present embryonic plans reach final development. Under the leadership of Major Nathan Levinson the work is quietly under way, even though the ultimate goal is a long way off.

Plan in mind is to adopt the "patents pool" idea that has prevailed in the automobile manufacturing industry for the past seventeen years, with the Technicians Branch of the Academy as the central figure handling the details and around which every technical development in the industry must rotate.

The "patents pool" idea, originated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, is said to have saved the automobile industry millions of dollars. Leaders of the Academy's technical branch figure the idea applied here will do the same for the picture business. And while in very formative state, the plan will doubtless eventually be presented to the producers.

The "patents pool" system is this: All studios would agree that all patents secured by them or their engineers would become the property of the pool for a period of two years. Thus for this time all studios could get the benefit of the development or invention free. Then it would revert to the developer.

"This system would save the terrific waste of industry money that is now taking place and which has taken place in the past," explained one Academy member. "Take, for example, the money spent on the development of wide film. No one will ever know how many hundreds of thousands of dollars were wasted by the various studios who were working independently on the project—each hoping to be first to get it right and thus clean up, regardless of what it would do to other companies. Under the 'pool' idea this would have been averted. All would have worked together, for they would have known that they would all benefit from the solution. Thus duplication of effort and expense would have been prevented.

"The research committee of the Technicians Branch is the ideal body to handle such a project here. There are representatives from the various studios on it. Their sole interest is in the advancement of the technical side of the industry.

"At the same time the research committee will endeavor to become the clearing house for all the technical inventions and ideas that are being brought to Hollywood constantly by thousands of inventors. Clearing through the committee, it would be possible to keep accurate check on what is being done and in many cases when the same idea has already been advanced, and is perhaps being worked on, the inventor would be saved much trouble, money and heartaches."

Selwyn Goes N. Y.

New York—Edgar Selwyn, MGM director, after a stay in New York, returns to the Coast, stating that producers should pay more attention to sales angles. Where have we heard that before?

'Little Women' A London Sensation

London.—The Radio production of "Little Women" played to more people at the Regal last week than has ever paid to see a picture before in the history of that house.

The check-up for the first week showed that 48,219 people bought tickets for the picture.

First Steps Taken in Suit Over 'M' Picture

New York.—The suit of Joseph Plunkett against Paramount in connection with the German picture "M" and the American company's "This Day and Age" has reached the point where George Schafer, general manager for Paramount, will be examined today before Saul Rogers, attorney for Plunkett. The plaintiff is asking $100,000 damages in a joint action for losses claimed because Paramount delayed action on releasing "M" until their own picture was ready for the market.

Wanger-Taurog Take on Academy Steering Jobs

Walter Wanger and Norman Taurog were added yesterday to the "steering committee" of the Academy. This committee, headed by King Vidor, is the one that is paddling the rehabilitation canoe for the revived Academy, and is responsible for the decision to give annual awards this year.

'Fur Coats' Closes Today

Aline MacMahon's first starring picture for Warners' "Fur Coats," finishes tomorrow night. Al Green directed.

'Flesh War' Hits L. A. First Runs

The "flesh show" war that has New York by its heels, and has stretched to frantic name buying in Chicago and other mid-West cities, is now to hit the Coast.

Pantages is setting plans to produce its own condensed versions of operettas as a means of combating trouble getting picture attractions. First show set is Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta." Flesh show will go on three times a day.

Johnny Boyle Holds Out Coast in His Picture

New York.—John Boyle has sold distribution rights of "Sweden, Land of Vikings," for all territories except California, Washington and Oregon, to Associated Cinemas of America, Inc. Will handle reserved sections himself. Picture is in Cinecolor. It has clicked big in New York, and looks like a plum for the popular cinematographer.

Mack and MGM Cool, But Assignment Set

While Russell Mack and MGM are trading palaver on a new deal, the director's ticket expiring at the end of the month, he has been tentatively set in to pilot the picture which Irving Thalberg is to make from the "Tish" stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart. James K. McGuinness is handling the screen play.

London Wants Ratoff

London.—British International is burning up the cables in their effort to land Gregory Ratoff for one of the leads in their production "Forbidden Territory."

Hollywood.—Ratoff left last night for a three weeks' tour of personal appearances, opening at the Palace in Chicago Friday, playing Boston next week and Detroit the week following and the chances are that he will leave for London directly after this tour.

Majors Have Steuer In Rembusch Action

New York.—The major companies are taking no chances in their defense of the Frank Rembusch anti-trust suit that hit the local courts here today. They have Max D. Steuer as their counsel. He is being assisted by Judge Solon J. Carter of Indianapolis.

As a curtain-raiser yesterday morning Steuer asked that further hearings be postponed to February 13 to give him time to acquaint himself with the case.

The hearing was before Judge Coxe.

week or two to think things over productions are being shelved and postponed arbitrarily.

"Escape to Paradise," "Sea Girl" and "Speed King" were three yarns put on the "future" shelf yesterday. All three were to have been Shirley Burden productions, which gave the gossips reason to figure that Burden, a Cooper man, may not be standing so well with future Radio plans. David Lewis, another Cooper man, is also understood to have a problematical future with Radio.

Ken Macgowan, because of "Little Women," stands in a position to talk; Cliff Reid has "Lost Patrol" on his list and the bosses are watching for the first box office reports; Lou Brock is standing pat on "Flying Down to Rio"; and Pan Berman, in the center seat, is making it tough for the bosses to do business with him through demands approximating the terms that Cooper was receiving.

B. B. Kahane is caught in the middle of all the talk. While having to take the grief for the past year or so, he naturally can't point to any particular picture as his own baby. Frank O'Heron, who for a year or more has emphasized the fact that his sole worry is "cash" and how to get it to make the pictures, seems to be safely on the fence in the discussions.

GUILDS AND ACADEMY ARE BUSY ON NRA NOMINATIONS

With the Screen Writers' Guild having selected their candidates to the Code Authority, the Screen Actors' Guild and the Academy yesterday announced that both are holding individual elections to select their candidates. The actors meet Sunday night, February 18, at the Hollywood Women's Club while the Academy holds its election tomorrow night.

Following the lead of the SWG, the actor group throws open its doors to all actors, including non-guild members. In view of the appointment of Eddie Cantor and Marie Dressler as actor representatives on the Code Authority, the players will only select their choices for the agents' committee and their five-five committee, to meet with producers on arbitration.

Actors will check screen credits and have appointed Lucile Gleason, Boris Karloff, Bradley Page, Minna Gombell, Jean Hersholt and Edwin Maxwell as a credentials committee.

Operating through its organization machinery, the Academy will have its branches and its executive committee do the nominating. Tomorrow night's meeting is of the executive board. Branch board selections will be made next week.

Final selections from all submitted to Sol Rosenblatt will be made by the administrator on his own responsibility.

AYLESWORTH DUE HERE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•"WHY are the officers of the Screen Writers Guild after your scalp?"

That question was fired at us yesterday by a very prominent writer, a member of the Guild, and a friend of ours. And we replied, "Are they? And if they are, we don't know what it's all about."

But things like that happen in this business and will continue to happen as long as there is a picture business.

In digging into the matter it sort of astounds us. We know that no publication, influence, individually or collectively, even the writers themselves, has put up such a fight for the motion picture writer as has this paper during its four years of publication. We have written more and FOR the writer than for any other craft in this industry, believing that GOOD STORIES are the answer to good pictures.

Maybe the officers of the Screen Writers' Guild would like to air that grievance towards this publication, out in the open, instead of behind closed doors. Maybe they will accept our invitation to use the columns of this paper to TELL what they want done to us and why they want it done.

It should be a source of great encouragement to a lot of people who are fighting for a place in this business, knowing they have what is required to make successful pictures, to view the short history of Richard Boleslavsky.

"Boley" told us over two years ago, "I want to direct, I know that I can direct and I am going to direct." And he is directing and making a swell job of it, his "Men in White" is testimony to that. But the rub to carrying out his ambition was the lack of ANY desire on the part of studio heads to give him a chance. But that did not stop him. He knocked at every door, he pushed into almost every office; always insisting that he should be given a chance. Most of the doors remained closed, most of the offices saw him but would not listen. But he stuck to it and won.

This department believes that Boleslavsky is one of the best directors in pictures and MGM shares this view, because they have just given him a contract that reads DOLLARS instead of the nickel deal he has had.

Hepburn Peeved As RKO Bans Personals

New York.—Katharine Hepburn is doing a big burn up at her Radio bosses. The immediate reason for the peeve is the refusal of Radio to allow her plans for a juicy personal appearance jaunt at $10,000 a week. But back of it are details of La Hepburn's entire deal with Radio.

It appears that Hepburn's Radio deal calls for two pictures a year, during the making of which she draws $2500 a week, plus an intangible

Brown, MGM Wash Up

MGM yesterday decided to shelve "Stealing Through Life" and Rowland Brown has washed up with the studio. Brown was there on a three months' ticket and failed to get to the point of agreement with the executives in that time.

Pitts East for Health

Zasu Pitts, just after closing a deal with Charles Rogers within the past week, yesterday had to beg off because of a desire to go to New York for a medical check-up.

Educ. Reduces Output

New York.—Educational, releasing physically through Fox, has already decided to reduce next year's output by about twenty-five per cent.

Radio's Big Boss Coming To Sit In On Final Deals For New Set-Up At RKO Studio

New York.—M. H. Aylesworth is on his way to the Radio studios in Hollywood, leaving New York on Monday. The big chief of National Broadcasting Company and Radio Pictures, who ordinarily likes to leave all action on the picture company to his right hand man, J. R. McDonough, has decided to be on the ground for the sessions that will decide the new set-up at the picture making plant.

Hollywood.—General feeling on the Radio lot is that within a few days of Aylesworth's arrival there will be definite announcements clearing away all guessing on the company's production future, and with the dropping of

Exhibs Still Stall on NRA Code Assents

New York.—Plenty of headaches in the offices of the Code Authority here. "Assents" received from exhibitors to date total about 7200. Latest Hays' figures on theatres in the country show close to fifteen thousand active houses.

The headache is how the code is going to go into effect without the extra fifty per cent, and just now the whip can be used to bring them into line if they don't care to come. General feeling now that the NRA got off on the wrong foot by blandly ignoring the little fellow and now no one knows how to get him in line.

Vidor Has Radio Release

King Vidor, in preparation on the General Service lot on "Our Daily Bread," is understood to have a release deal for the picture set with Radio.

Crawford Quits Fox In Studio Shake-Up

William Crawford, Fox business manager and assistant to J. J. Gain, tendered his resignation yesterday. Executive and the company were unable to get together on the terms of a deal which was to take Crawford to New York as business manager of the company's office there.

Understood another major studio is discussing a contract with him. John Zinn is slated for his spot at Fox.

Goldwyn's N.Y. Cut On 'Nana' Is $28,500

New York.—Sam Goldwyn's final check-up for the week on "Nana" at the Music Hall will show that the old Roman has lost none of his skill at making deals. If Goldwyn had put the picture in at straight rental he would have drawn down about $20,000. As it is, with the picture hitting $103,000 for the week's gross, a fine figure for the house, he will come out with about $28,500 on the deal.

Hoot Gibson Going On 'Personal' Tour

New York.—Hoot Gibson opens at Elizabeth, New Jersey, Friday, to break in an act for a personal appearance tour of the picture houses.

MGM Story Ed. Resigns

New York.—Bertram Block has tendered his resignation as MGM Eastern story editor. He plans to finish some plays he is writing and then do some play producing in association with Sidney Phillips.

Wilk Returns East

Jake Wilk, eastern story editor of Warner-First National, leaves Hollywood today to return to his New York office.

'MOULIN ROUGE' AND 'TIGER' BRING B'WAY SMILES AGAIN

New York.—It looks like old showmanship days on Broadway with Arthur Mayer's campaign on the Fox picture "Devil Tiger" doing the biggest business the Rialto has done since he took over the house. The picture by Clyde Elliott, who directed Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," is getting almost 100 percent male audiences, but business is business.

But the picture isn't alone on good business for the start of this week. "Moulin Rouge" looks like a $6500 day at the Rivoli, which has it running neck and neck with "Roman Scandals" and "Gallant Lady."

New York REVIEWS

"ALL OF ME"

Paramount prod.; director, James Flood; writers, Rose Albert Porter, Sidney Buchman and Thomas Mitchell.

Paramount Theatre

Herald-Tribune: Finding its origin in the stage play "Chrysalis," this "All of Me" has, in spite of its length, little to tell and, instead of being the social document it started out to be, is just a diffuse, awkward and unbelievable melodrama in spite of some good acting by Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft and Helen Mack—especially by Miss Mack.

News: The film drags hopelessly along.

Journal: The dark-eyed Helen Mack, who first came to screen attention with a brief but vivid bit in Lionel Barrymore's picture, "Sweepings," wins the acting honors here. Raft is convincing in his role, March is whimsical and Miss Hopkins is decorative.

American: All together it is a better than average film entertainment, enhanced by the presence of such popular players as Hopkins, March and Raft in the cast. In distributing the laurels of the piece, Helen Mack must be included on a par with other principals.

Mirror: Attractive people are to be seen on the Paramount screen this week. They are more interesting than their story material, which is a play to prove that love is, indeed, love. The actors do all they can to bring credibility to the rather complicated characters they are required to interpret.

Post: Because the theme is concerned with character and circumstance it does not lend itself to screen treatment. An unconscionable amount of time is spent in talk and counter-talk before anything like action begins to develop. Since the conversation is not brilliant and the characters themselves but superficially drawn, "All of Me" turns out to be a thoroughly dull picture.

"YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING"

MGM prod.; director, Charles F. Reisner; writers, Dudley Nichols, Lamar Trotti, Zelda Sears and Eve Green.

Capitol Theatre

Herald-Tribune: I suspect that you will like Miss Robson as she plays the aged hoarder in "You Can't Buy Everything"—she is so unashamedly flambouyant in the role. If she had been absent from the part the film would have been even more disappointing than it is. I suspect, too, that you will like Lewis Stone's dignified and expert performance as Burton and Jean Parker's dark beauty as his daughter. But in spite of these assets, "You Can't Buy Everything" is an indifferent and disappointing offering.

News: Miss Robson in person is a four-star hit and her work in the film is great, but the film is an unreasonable concoction. About the only support that Miss Robson gets for the load she carries is from Lewis Stone, who never fails to give an excellent performance. The rest of the cast is negative.

Times: It is a heavy handed narrative in which the avaricious nature of the leading character is too exaggerated to be believable. Lewis Stone is admirable as Burton. Jean Parker is comely and capable as Burton's daughter.

American: As effective and affecting a demonstration of mother-love as the season has brought us. See it and be convinced, and enjoy, too, the hundred surprises, the laughs, the sobs, the joys and sorrows the story holds in its entertaining length. Lewis Stone, without equal in the type of role he has here, garners a full share of histrionic honors. Director Reisner has endowed the piece with sincerity and feeling.

Mirror: Miss Robson plays the character to perfection, skillfully developing its wit and its deep pathetic quality. Her support is excellent, including, as it does, such fine actors as Lewis Stone, Mary Forbes, Reginald Mason. Jean Parker and William Bakewell play the romantic roles charmingly.

Sun: The whole thing, in spite of Miss Robson's excellent characterization, was the waste of a good idea. There must have been too few story conferences on this one, or too many.

Journal: The picture was fashioned especially—and skillfully—for Miss Robson's brilliant talents.

White's Future 'Scandals' On Own with Erpi Backing

Reports published that George White was to produce his "Scandals" as an annual feature for Fox, with five years stated as the terms of the first deal, met denials yesterday and when the dust cleared it appeared that White owned his own great bet. The understanding now is that while White has made plans for additional editions, he is to produce them in the East with Erpi backing and is not at present worrying about arrangements for distributing the picture.

'Moulin Rouge' Is Held In Wash.

Washington.—Business at the Palace Theatre on the Twentieth Century production of "Moulin Rouge" demanded another week for this picture. The house rang up one of the highest grosses in months with that attraction.

New York.—The "Moulin Rouge" caravan grabbed the attention of most of New York today. It started at City Hall, with more than 75,000 people looking over the ceremony.

As the parade proceeded up Fifth avenue, into Broadway and to the Rivoli Theatre every office window was crowded, and the curbs were lined with mobs.

Sullavan Still Worries 'U'

As soon as Universal can locate Margaret Sullavan rehearsals will begin for "Elizabeth and Mary," which will be her next starring vehicle and which Lowell Sherman will direct. She did a fadeout by plane last week to New York, but numerous wires have brought no replies and Universal is wondering.

Writer's Father Injured

Briton Busch, one of four Americans injured in the rioting of the past two days in Paris, is the father of Niven Busch, Warner Bros. studio staff writer. Busch was formerly an executive with the old World Films, and is well known in picture circles.

Parker East for Stage Play

Austin Parker leaves for New York as soon as he finishes his work on "Honor Bright" at Paramount. Writer will finish and set his play while there. Hopes to get away from here by the end of next week.

RADIO'S 'SING AND LIKE IT' ONE OF YEAR'S BEST COMEDIES

Script, Director and Cast Share Honors

"SING AND LIKE IT"
(Radio)

Director.....William A. Seiter
Author .....Aben Kandel
Adaptation .....Marion Dix and Laird Doyle
Music and Lyrics.....Dave Dreyer and Roy Turk
Photography .....Nick Musuraca
Cast: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, Edward Everett Horton, Nat Pendleton and Ned Sparks.

There is only one laugh in the Radio comedy, "Sing and Like It," but it begins at the very start of the picture and lasts until the last shot. And it is a loud, gleeful, heartfelt, roaring bellow.

People who haven't smiled for years will crack their jaws over this one. Prospectors will hike in from desert camps to see it. Codes will be forgotten; dishes will be piled up in the sink; conferences will be broken up—and all that you exhibitors have to do is worry about the gosh-awful number of patrons who will be so weary from laughing that they'll just stay in their seats to catch the laughs they missed from laughing so hard at the first show.

No kidding. This is one of the funniest comedies let loose in years. Without the perfect direction, the screamingly hilarious dialogue and the flawless cast the picture could have been a swell flop. But it just happens to have that happy combination of taste, brains and wit that raises comedy to high art.

First honors go to Marion Dix and Laird Doyle, the adaptors, and Aben Kandel, the author, for a story that has a supreme sense of the ridiculous and for dialogue that packs a crack—and a good one—in every line. That is the picture's only misfortune, by the way, for the laughs are so thick and fast that lots of lines are drowned.

Second honors to William A. Seiter, whose perfect timing and sly intelligence in directing this film stamp him as a great comedy director. He never missed a trick—and they're all new ones.

All the superlatives that are left go to the cast, and it deserves many more. Nat Pendleton, as the gangster; Zasu Pitts, as Annie Snodgrass, who wants to be a great actress; Pert Kelton, who is Pendleton's moll; Edward Everett Horton, as the famous producer; and Ned Sparks, the gangster's right-hand man—all are perfectly cast and all are bright and shining shrieks in this riot.

Pendleton, as he is cracking a safe in the Union Bank building, hears a 'mother song" being warbled ever so vaguely by Miss Pitts, who is rehearsing in the employees' show. Overcome by memories he drops his racket for the time being and forces Horton to put Miss Pitts into his big Broadway spectacle as the star, still singing the mother song. He feels that it is his duty to put such beauty before the world.

Miss Kelton's attempts to get the part away from Pitts; Pendleton's rewriting of the show and the absurd rehearsals; Ned Sparks' sour wisecracks about the whole proceeding, and the final triumphant first night when The Critic, whom everyone follows, announces, at the points of countless gangster guns, that the show and its star are stupendous—these are great moments in this swell comedy.

The absurd mother song was written by Dave Dreyer and Roy Turk, to their everlasting credit, and Nick Musuraca's photography is excellent.

There won't be an empty seat or a quiet moment in your house when you show this one, Mr. Exhibitor.

Dubin a Stand-In

Production on the Busby Berkeley-Merna Kennedy wedding got under way yesterday with rehearsals starting at the Methodist Church under M. C. Levee's supervision. Chunky Al Dubin stood in for the bride and when the minister asked Buzz the customary questions, dance director got camera-conscious and asked, "Which way do I face—upstage or down?"

'Ferocious Pal' Just Too Bad

"FEROCIOUS PAL"
(Principal Pictures)

Direction.....Spencer Gordon Bennet
Screen Play.....Joseph Anthony Roach
Photography .....Eddie Kull
Cast: Kazan (a dog), Robert Manning, Ruth Sullivan, Tom London, Gene Toler, Harry Dunkinson, Henry Roquemore, Nelson McDowell, Ed Cecil, Grace Wood, Prince (another dog).

There are just two good things about this picture: one is an unnamed jackass; the other is Kazan, one of the most intelligent dogs that ever reached the screen. But the jackass has nothing to do, and the poor dog was given a terrible story, terrible direction, a supporting cast that was amateurish, and a raw deal.

Just too bad that good money was spent on a picture such as this one. After the first few hundred feet the audience howled at the serious lines and situations in which the humans appeared. The dog was excellent when alone on the screen and seemed to have a better idea of what to do than any one else. The story was so poor that it is better to say nothing about it. Even horses passed speeding automobiles as though the cars were standing still. That's enough.

Frank Morgan on Termer

MGM yesterday handed Frank Morgan a long term contract because of his work in "The Cat and the Fiddle," which he just finished. Morgan is now at Twentieth Century in "The Firebrand," which Gregory LaCava directs.

Adrian Off to N. Y.

Adrian, MGM style designer, left by train last night for New York to see the plays and inspect fabrics. He will be away for about three weeks.

'Roman Scandals' Shown In London

London.—The Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists production of "Roman Scandals" was given a tradeshow here yesterday and the most of the picture business on this side was in attendance.

Looks as if Goldwyn will duplicate his "Kid from Spain" success, as the whole industry here has put on a rave for the picture that is a cinch to carry even the "Spain" records. There is a peculiarly strong Eddie Cantor personal following here which showed itself in "Kid from Spain."

Fairbanks Wins Point On Merle Oberon Deal

London.—Douglas Fairbanks Sr. finally won his point with Alexander Korda and Merle Oberon for the British star to enact the feminine lead in his "Don Juan" picture.

Fairbanks had been insisting on Miss Oberon, but the lady herself wanted to go to Hollywood and a deal was set with her for two pictures with Eddie Small, also a United Artists producer. But now that deal has been set back until she completes work with Fairbanks.

Louise Up at Roach's

Anita Louise will be tested today by Hal Roach for the role of Little Miss Muffet in "Babes in Toyland." Studio has tested a number of players for the part, with Charlotte Henry having the inside track to date. Studio is also testing Charles Rogers and Douglas Wakefield for the role of Gumio, the toymaker's assistant.

Talbot a Fire Hero

Possible serious accident was averted on the set of Warners' "Fog Over San Francisco" when flames from a candle ignited a fur coat worn by Margaret Lindsay and were extinguished by Lyle Talbot. Player suffered minor burns; production continued.

Butler Megs for Rogers

David Butler swings over to the Sol Wurtzel unit to handle the directorial reins on "Merry Andrew," the next Will Rogers starring vehicle at Fox. Kubec Glasmon is writing the screen play. Production starts March 1.

'U' Sets 'Deacon' Writers

Clarence Marks and Earle Snell were signed by Universal yesterday to write the screen play for "Alias the Deacon" under Edmund Grainger's supervision. Guy Kibbee is set on loan from Warners for the title role.

Song for Crosby Baby

Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston have written a song titled "Crooner's Lullaby," which they dedicated to Bing Crosby's baby. Crosby will introduce this song on the Woodbury Soap program.

'Dark Hazard' at Rialto

New York.—"The Dark Hazard" will have its New York premiere at the Rialto on February 21.

Corrigan Walks Into 'U' And Out Again

Lloyd Corrigan signed with Universal and walked out on his assignment all within twenty-four hours. Corrigan was signed on a one-picture deal to direct "Bachelor Wife," which also was turned down by Eddie Buzzell, and walked when he was handed three scripts and informed that he was to start shooting in a week. The director felt that more than a week was needed in preparation for the story and turned it down.

Lee Tracy Return In 'U' Brown Yarn

Universal broke the ice on Lee Tracy's absence from the screen and signed the star for the top spot in "Where Is Brown?" which was originally slated to be an Edmund Lowe starring vehicle. This marks Tracy's first job since his parting with MGM.

Paul Kelly and Gloria Stuart also have been set for leading roles in this film. Edward Sedgwick will direct and Dale Van Every is supervising.

Warren William Goes Into 'Mona Lisa' Yarn

Warren William has been set for the starring role in "Mona Lisa," based on an original screen adaptation by Carl Ericson. No director has been assigned.

William was taken out of one of the leading roles of "The Key," which Colin Clive was signed for, in order to step into the top spot in this picture which starts in about three weeks.

MGM Goes Mexican

Antonio Samaniegos and Carlos Navarro leave for Mexico City in a few days to make a short of the local motorcycle police for MGM. Pete Smith will dialogue it. Samaniegos and Navarro were technical advisers on "Viva Villa."

'U' Seeks Judith Anderson

New York.—Universal is talking turkey to Judith Anderson and wants the player to make another trip to the coast for the role of Elizabeth in the Lowell Sherman production, "Elizabeth and Mary."

Irv. Jacobs Goes East

Irving Jacobs, of the Jacobs and Bregstein distributing combine, hops off by plane for New York this morning. He will be gone three weeks on a sales deal.

Cummings to Florida

Jack Cummings, MGM short producer, left last night by plane for Miami, Florida, to confer with Nat Stitzer about some shorts.

'Rosy' Speaks Tomorrow

New York.—Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt will speak tomorrow at the luncheon of the National Board of Review here.

Gleckler with Warners

Robert Gleckler, being brought to the coast from New York, goes into Warners' "Return of the Terror."

"As The Earth Turns"

Warner Bros. production and release. Directed by Al Green. From the novel by Cladys Hasty Carroll. Supervised by Robert Lord. Cast: Donald Woods, Jean Muir, Russell Hardie, 20 others. Previewed at Warners' Beverly, Jan. 25. Running time, 72 mins.

"Warners has made an outstanding picture of Gladys Hasty Carroll's best seller, 'As the Earth Turns.' It is a triumph for all concerned from the director and supervisor to the least bit player. And it has that rare quality of picture-making which combines fine artistry with the universal heart appeal which is box office insurance. It should make a barrel of money, despite the fact that it has no draw names.

"Greatest contribution to the picture's calibre is probably Al Green's inspired direction. Screen has seldom if ever seen children, from four years old to 14, handled with such charm and naturalness. Older players are also piloted for striking results. . . .

"Honesty, sincerity, effective simplicity graced with laughter keynote the production—a design laid down in Ernest Pascal's excellent adaptation, which keeps the story close to vital human relationships.

"Jean Muir gives a topping performance, rounded and mellow, as the simple, maternal girl who reluctantly gives her heart to Donald Woods, who also plays his part with fine feeling."

"I've Got Your Number"

Sam Bischoff production for Warners' release. Directed by Ray Enright. Cast: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Eugene Pallette, 11 others. Previewed at Warners' Hollywood, Jan. 19. Running time, 67 mins.

"A fast, exciting, robust . . . comedy through which a cast of pulling names romps for a sustained laugh fest, is this tale revolving around the adventures of two trouble shooting telephone repair men. 'I've Got Your Number' has money written all over it. With canny showmanship it stirs together exciting, novel, romantic and melodramatic elements in just the right proportions with the laugh substance to get the widest audience appeal.

"Even the melodrama . . . is played to the hilt for comedy.

"Blondell, O'Brien and Farrell swagger through the top spots with plenty gusto, leaving a trail of guffaws, while Allen Jenkins does the best job of his career. . . .

"Lines are racy and toy ludicrously with the double entendre through the novel use of telephone and switchboard technical terms commonly understood.

"Direction of Ray Enright and screen story treatment by Warren Duff and Sidney Sutherland get away from the commonplace and usual routines in getting laughs and maintain breezy freshness."

IT TELLS WHAT IT THINKS

"EARTH TURNS" MISSES MARK

Warners-First National. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Novel by Gladys Hasty Carroll. Screen Play by Ernest Pascal. Photography by Byron Haskins. Associate Producer, Robert Lord. Cast: Jean Muir, Donald Woods, David Landau, William Janney, Dorothy Appleby, Dorothy Peterson, Emily Lowry, Sarah Padden, Clara Blandick, Egon Brecher, David Durand, Wally Albright, George Billings, Marilyn Knowlden, Gloria Fisher, Dorothy Gray, Cora Sue Collins, Joyce Kay, Arthur Hohl, Russell Hardie, Javir Gibson.

Last year thousands of people, sitting around comfortable firesides, read Gladys Hasty Carroll's book, "As the Earth Turns," and thought fondly, romantically of going back to the land. This year hundreds of thousands of people will see the screen play, and thank their lucky stars that they are not down on the farm.

While the tale is not materially changed in Ernest Pascal's screen play the joy in the good earth which permeated every page is gone. This is due, partially, to the lack of weight in the performance of Jean Muir, who carries the central role. Make no mistake about this girl, however, and watch for her next pictures. She is certain star material. She has warmth, beauty, intelligence. There is no doubt that she has everything it takes to be a box office sensation within a short time.

She plays Jen, oldest daughter of the large brood of a Maine farmer. Though she is not out of her teens she is the real head of the farmhouse. It is Jen who stays up through freezing nights when the children have croup. It is Jen who stands over the stove in the blistering summer when fruit must be preserved. She loves it. A farm is her career, just as it is her father's.

She also loves Stan, son of a Polish tailor. He has persuaded his parents to sell the shop and go back to the land.

Allied against these three simple souls is the stubbornness of the seasons, grilling round of work and a rabble of relatives who are temperamentally unsuited to farm life, but who are trapped by poverty to their acres.

"I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER" GOOD

Warners-First National. Directed by Ray Enright. Screen Play by Warren Duff and Sidney Sutherland. Photography, Arthur Todd. Cast: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Eugene Pallette, Henry O'Neill, Hobart Cavanaugh, Louise Beavers, Gordon Westcott, Renee Whitney, Selmer Jackson, Robert Ellis.

You needn't worry about the phone lines on "I've Got Your Number" (new listing for "Hell's Bells"). It's an action melodrama in good working order. Built along routine lines of romance combined with a chase, it is given especial interest by wise-cracking characters and a new background.

Pat O'Brien plays Terry, a repair man for the New York telephone system. Combining pleasure with business has become a habit. He fixes telephones and dates with equal skill. Allen Jenkins trails along, assistant, stooge and chaperon combined. His apprehensive plea, "Let's get outa here!" is a running gag which never fails on laughs.

Joan Blondell as a switchboard girl misdirects a call at the request of a friend. She thinks it is for a laugh, but it tips off a betting deal, and she has to leave her job. Terry gets her another, and the same racketeers pull another job by the simple expedient of keeping her busy answering fake calls while they get away with the bonds.

The only place where the action falls down is when Terry goes alone to a house where a mob is hiding. There is plenty of suspense, but even the engaging dumbell built by O'Brien wouldn't be so dumb as all that.

The whole cast mugs happily and heartily, and the audience liked it well enough to break out in applause when the trouble shooters pile into a car to dash to Terry's rescue.

Colin Clive West For WB 'The Key'

Closing of "The Lake" in New York clears up Warners' difficulties in getting Colin Clive for "The Key," player leaving Saturday by plane for the coast to take the spot into which the company had placed Warren William during the emergency.

Production starts today on the William Powell-Kay Francis picture under Archie Mayo's direction and Robert Presnell's supervision. Phil Regan, Robert Barrat, J. M. Kerrigan, Henry O'Neil and Hobart Cavanaugh have been assigned featured roles.

bonus if the picture's gross reaches a certain amount. When Radio heard that she planned the personal appearance tour, the company suggested that if she had time for that she could make a third picture on the annual deal.

Leland Hayward, representing the player, flew west to suggest that if the bonus was forgotten and cash terms talked a deal would be made for the third picture. But the company only replied by exercising the right to kill Hepburn's personal appearance easy money. And now she is burning up.

Eddie Buzzell, Universal director, doesn't know whether it is a gag or not, but he received a long letter yesterday from a woman in Indianapolis apologizing for having represented herself as his wife. She said she didn't pass any checks. Just had a good time basking in the glory, etc.

'M' Plagiarism Suit In Red Tape Stage

New York.—While Paramount officials admitted in a hearing today that they had originally undertaken to distribute the German picture "M" the actual fight over the plagiarism issues on the picture in connection with "This Day and Age" will go over until March 8 when certain affidavits are received from Germany.

Yesterday's examination of George Schafer by Saul Rogers, counsel for the plaintiff, was on the strictly commercial side of the suit, concerning the charges of conspiracy in conjunction with failing to distribute the picture.

Pat Ellis Set By Warner For Joe E. Brown Lead

Warners have assigned Patricia Ellis to play the feminine lead opposite Joe E. Brown in "Sawdust," his next opus for that studio. Miss Ellis is at present at Universal on a loanout deal playing the lead opposite Lew Ayres in "If I Were Rich" and will return to her home lot next week for this assignment.

Ferdinand Schumann-Heink, player, has sold an original story to Universal. It is "Weather Permitting," with a film background and tells the story of a lowly extra player. Kurt Neumann is slated to direct when he finishes "Alias the Deacon."

Billie Burke Renewed

Radio has extended Billie Burke's one-picture deal into a two-picture contract. After she completes her role in "Finishing School" at that studio she goes into a featured spot opposite Clive Brook in "Dover Road," which will be directed by J. Walter Ruben and supervised by David Lewis.

Fortify 'Viva Villa'

MGM yesterday signed Jean Aguilar to assist Herbert Stothart on the musical score of "Viva Villa." Aguilar is a famous Mexican composer. Studio also signed Montia Santoya, a Mexican artist, to design the title cards on the production.

Lowe-Tashman on Train

Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman left last night by train for New York. Miss Tashman will make "Frankie and Johnnie" for Chester Erskine there and Lowe will do some radio work.

Personals at Pantages

Lois January goes in for a week's personal appearance at the Pantages today with Universal's "I Like It That Way." Mickey McGuire wil make a single appearance Saturday.

Acad. Starts Work On Writers' List

The Executive Committee of the Writers Branch of the Academy met last night and selected a list of twenty writer members from which the Branch will choose ten for possible naming to the various NRA Code committees by Sol A. Rosenblatt.

The list will be mailed to the members today with ballots, and the request that they vote for ten. As soon as the ten are chosen, their names and records will be forwarded to Rosenblatt. The Deputy Administrator while in Hollywood requested the Academy to do this, hinting that some of them would get on the committees.

The twenty nominees are: Houston Branch, Jack Cunningham, Howard Estabrook, Kubec Glasmon, Howard Green, Grover Jones, Edward Kaufman, Willard Mack, William Slavens McNutt, Bess Meredyth, Byron Morgan, Jane Murfin, Samson Raphaelson, Robert Riskin, Richard Schayer, Harvey Thew, Harlan Thompson, Ernst Vajda, Carey Wilson and Waldemar Young.

Warners Close For 'China Oil Lamps'

Rated first on the best seller list, "Oil for the Lamps of China" was snatched up yesterday by Warners, company pulling it away from opposing bids by MGM and Al Rockett at Fox.

Purchase of the story, said to be for $20,000, places on the Warner production slate a spectacle with a Chinese background of a type similar to MGM's "Good Earth."

New Air Stunt Planned For RKO 'Lost Patrol'

For the first time in the history of motion pictures the complete sound track of a picture will be broadcast throughout the country. Radio has cut the sound track of "Lost Patrol" to one hour and has arranged a tie-up for a national broadcast to be put on over station KNX from 7.30 to 8.30 next Thursday, February 15.

Music Department Casts

To help out in the rush of casting for the five musicals in production and preparation at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, Jack Chertok and Dave Friedman of the music department are handling singing and dancing calls, with exception of principals which are still going through the casting office.

Credit Mr. Rainger

Due to an omission in the studio credit list, Ralph Rainger was left out when the nice things were written about "Bolero" in the Reporter's review yesterday. Rainger composed all the dance music used in the picture, with the exception of the Bolero number.

New York.—Samuel Zirn will apply to the United States Supreme Court within the next ten days for a writ of certiorari to effect a rehearing of the lower court findings in the Paramount bankruptcy proceedings.

Technicalities Cloud Fight on Twelvetrees Agent Deal

Simon and Garbus, attorneys for Helen Twelvetrees, argued a demurrer in Judge Thomas Gould's Superior Court yesterday alleging that the court had no power to grant the Rebecca and Silton judgment against the actress, because the complaint does not state sufficient facts among other things. Agency is suing Miss Twelvetrees for commissions on past as well as future work. Agency states managerial contract has five more years to run.

Gayne Whitman Set for Sol Lesser Serial Lead

Realizing the exploitation value which will be gained when the program goes over the entire CBS network in the next two months, Sol Lesser yesterday signed Gayne Whitman for a serial based on his radio character, "Chandu." At the same time Vera Oldham, who writes the radio continuity, was signed to write the story and Basil Dike was handed a ticket to script the continuity. Picture will be produced on the completion of "Peck's Bad Boy," which starts shooting March 6.

Young and Lawrence on DeMille's 'Cleo' Script

Waldemar Young and Vincent Lawrence are doing the script on "Cleopatra" for Cecil DeMille at Paramount, and not Jeannie Macpherson, as erroneously reported in a recent issue of the Reporter.

Incidentally, the only delays encountered on the picture are in the problem of properly casting the part of Caesar, and the script is said to be moving along in shape that has everybody happy.

Nacio Brown and Freed Songs in Top Three

A New York sales survey lists two songs by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed among the first three in demand throughout the country.

Songs are "Temptation" and "We'll Make Hay While the Sun Shines," both for MGM's "Going Hollywood," the Marion Davies-Bing Crosby picture.

Brandt's N. Y. Exhibs Plan National Tie-Ups

New York.—Harry Brandt, reelected president of the Independent Theatre Owners of this territory, is backed by the members in a movement to form a new national organization of exhibitors with the avowed purpose "to foster and consolidate gains made at the Washington code hearings by presenting a united exhibitor front."

Foy Jr. Gets Renewal

Henry Ginsberg, Hal Roach general manager, yesterday punched Eddie Foy Jr.s ticket for the first option on a five-year contract. Foy was signed some time ago for an all star comedy with an option for a five-year deal. He goes into the sixth of the Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly shorts which starts next Saturday.

NRA WORK AT STANDSTILL

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WHEN, if ever, will Hollywood make some sincere effort to check the millions of dollars of waste that goes into the making of pictures during the course of a year? This absolute throwing away of tons of money is appalling and there seems to be no check. Producers don't seem to care.

The money that is wasted in the major studios in a single year is almost equal to the total production expenditure for finished pictures during that year, so what's to do about it? How is it to be checked?

It is not uncommon for a picture to start production with anywhere from $75,000 to $200,000 (yes, and more) checked up against it. Money that has been frittered away on countless screen treatments of the story, many, many salaries of writers, directors, artists charged up to it.

The main trouble, however, is that those causing this waste do not seem to care; they count it as part of their day and are in no way astonished when the sheets, showing this waste, are brought in for their inspection.

In many Hollywood studios production does not get under way (in fact no work starts) until eleven o'clock and after. If a director and his company are assembled on the set ready for work in the mornng they are, most frequently, held up by the absence of the producer, who strolls in anywhere from eleven till noon. And the supervisory system is such in those plants that the director cannot go ahead unless his "producer" is there to give the okay.

Much of the waste in most of the studios could be saved by starting shooting at eleven o'clock instead of nine and finishing up at eight instead of six p.m. Not only shooting, but all work tending to production.

This late start will give the "producer" time to get to the studio from his golf or tennis game and be on hand to confer with his writers, directors, etc., etc.

And another thing that would save a lot of waste is a finished script before the start of production, a script that would be shot.

But you may as well try to change the spots on a leopard as to change the present production methods. What-the-hell, it gives us something to write about anyhow.

Sullavan Returning

New York.—Settle Universal's worries. Margaret Sullavan plans to leave by plane for the coast next Saturday.

State and Agents Go Into Huddle

Ralph Blum, attorney, represented local picture agencies at discussions yesterday before the State Labor Board of Statistics in connection with plans to draft new rules for control of California agencies.

Thomas F. Barker, state labor commissioner, represented the state and put forth the view that representatives were really employment agencies and should come under regulations for those establishments.

No definite action resulted from the meeting which was largely a fact-finding session. Ralph Blum, for the agents, refused to be quoted following the gathering.

Acad. Meeting Today

The Academy's steering committee, headed by King Vidor, will meet today to iron out the final details connected with the Annual Awards and the banquet to be held for presentation of prizes to the winners. Balloting by the members started yesterday.

'Catherine' in N.Y. Feb. 14

New York.—"Queen Christina" closes at the Astor on February 12, being followed by "Catherine the Great," United Artists British importation, on February 14.

After 'Rosy' Passed Buck To Local Labor Body Latter Now Marks Time Awaiting Authority

Sol Rosenblatt had an easy time in Hollywood ducking difficult labor and extra questions by referring them to various committees. Now that Rosenblatt is back in Washington, local representatives of labor with over twenty alleged violations on which they seek action, are discovering that the machinery here is at a standstill, either intentionally or unintentionally.

The position taken by A. J. Berres, of the Studio Labor Board, is said to be that while Administrator Rosenblatt may have appointed him in newspaper interviews to do various things he is still awaiting the official documents from Washington that give

Universal In Black For Current Quarter

New York.—Universal will be in the black, with a profit for the fiscal period starting in November and ending this month that the officials of the company are willing to call "a heavy profit."

Burden to New York

C. Shirley Burden, who resigned his associate producer berth at Radio Tuesday, is slated to hop off for New York today. He is shelving pictures, having pulled out when Radio took away from him two stories, "Sea Girl" and "Escape to Paradise," which were Merian C. Cooper's ideas.

Cornell Gives Cold Shoulder to Movies

Katharine Cornell spurned an offer by Irving Thalberg to turn her talents to the screen for the top spot in "Barretts of Wimpole Street," which he will produce for MGM, or any other play that she might choose to do. It is reported that she turned down a salary that ran well over $100,000 for one picture. Norma Shearer will likely do "Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Miss Cornell laughed at the offer made by Warners to test her for the role of Josephine for the Edward Robinson picture "Napoleon."

Thalberg Must Find The 'Merry Widow'

According to Max Ruppa, Maurice Chevalier's personal representative, despite the fact that the French star has a clause in his contract with Irving Thalberg that gives him the right to approve of the feminine lead in "Merry Widow," he has washed his hands of the job of choosing the woman, and is leaving it up to Thalberg.

Warner Baxter First Fox Exchange with England

From the Fox lot yesterday it was learned that Winnie Sheehan plans to give Warner Baxter to British Gaumont as the first star in the exchange deal which has already brought Madeleine Carroll to this country for a Hollywood picture.

Col. Joy Returns to Fox

Col. Jason Joy returns to Fox March 1 to a special assignment in the story department. Joy was formerly in the Fox story department but left there some time ago to return to the Hays organization.

Harry Warner Leaves

H. M. Warner leaves by train today for New York. He was here for three weeks for conferences on production.

NEW YORK INDIE EXHIBS EXAMPLE DUE TO SPREAD

New York.—The example set by Harry Brandt and the Independent Theatre Owners Association in building up a strong local organization ready to fight anybody for its rights seems to be spreading throughout the nation and may play havoc with present alleged national organizations.

New indie units querying New York about how the local body operates include groups in Ohio and Arkansas. Brandt's group finds that it can gain its points with one hundred per cent local organization and without the ballyhoo of alleged national strength and high-sounding titles.

Kay Francis Refuses Role in Warners 'Key'

Kay Francis has refused to do "The Key" for Warners and the organization has permitted her to step out, offering her either "Dr. Monica" or "Firebird" as her next.

Lewis Winds Up at RKO

David Lewis definitely winds up at Radio on the completion of "Stingaree," which is now shooting. Lewis has been associate producer on "The Crime Doctor" and "Two Alone" recently.

THE LOW DOWN

The long-awaited divorce proceedings between a famous producer and his wife are expected to pop any minute now. The producer no longer makes any secret of his meetings with a well known local lady; in fact he is now busy introducing her around so that there will be a definite group for her association when he makes her his bride. He has also confided to several persons that he has every intention of presenting her at a certain wedding reception as "his future wife"—even though he is not yet free from his present one!

Sam Marx, over at MGM, got a letter recently from a newspaper feller in Wilkes-Barre who said in part that "Wilkes-Barre had given Hollywood Sam Hoffenstein, Herman Mankiewicz and Louis Weitzenkorn and that Hollywood should now take an idea from the town that made Hollywood famous." He suggested that MGM make a picture based on the life of Irving Berlin.

So Marx wrote back that the studio didn't think much of his idea and couldn't use it—so they were returning Hoffenstein, Mankiewicz and Weitzenkorn!

New York REVIEWS

"NANA"

Samuel Goldwyn prod.; director, Dorothy Arzner; writers, Emile Zola, Willard Mack, Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Music Hall

Herald-Tribune: The picture is not worthy of Anna Sten. The film is quite handsomely produced, but I fear that pictorial lavishness cannot disguise the fact that the story is done amid so much artificiality that it never succeeds in being real or touching.

News: Miss Sten's blonde, Slavic beauty is an effective subject for the camera. She is lovely throughout the picture. She manages to bring glamour and interest to the characterization of Nana, but she fails to arouse any real sympathy for her.

Times: Through Miss Sten's efficiency and charm and the splendid portrayals of such players as Mr. Bennett, Mr. Owen and Mr. Grant, it offers a fair measure of entertainment, and even though it wanders far from Zola's work, sometimes catches the illusion of Paris in bygone days.

American: Samuel Goldwyn was right—Anna Sten is a great star. He spent $2,000,000 to prove it, but this bread cast upon the waters will be returned many-fold by the glad, free-will donations of the mighty public which is destined to be hers. In a single picture the "Nana" which held a first audience spellbound at the Music Hall, the Russian Mona Lisa rises to the first rank of picture players and personalities. She stands now with the first six.

Mirror: A film which is all Anna. And Anna is beautiful and interesting. The picture is an extravagantly handsome one, and Goldwyn's Anna is provocative and dazzling. Everyone will want to see her. And they will be bewitched and entertained by her.

Sun: This "Nana," prettified though it be, remains somehow still a sordid tale. It needed Mr. Goldwyn's usual courageous forcefulness; but this time it got only his painstaking care, his sense of showmanship, and his newest star. That may be enough to launch Anna Sten on a new and brilliant career. It is not enough to make a great picture.

Post: Miss Sten very properly dominates "Nana," and she dominates it with her looks, her speech, her gestures and an acting talent that ripples felicitously from comedy to emotional drama. Whatever she does—and "Nana" gives her an opportunity for a great many things—there is never a hint of straining for effect. It would be pleasant to report that the vehicle was worthy of the star, but it unfortunately is not.

Herald-Tribune: "Nana" is a mild, over-written and leisurely romantic drama, pretty, but also pretty thin. Indeed, it suggested mainly that once again a really great actress had been scratched by Hollywood and that the result was less acting than a series of beautifully photographed poses. But in spite of the wordiness of "Nana" and its musty story and pedestrian movement, Miss Sten's ability is not wholly submerged.

Journal: A glamorous, dazzling beauty, brilliantly launched by a master showman. Anna Sten is lovely to look at. She has talent and charm and grace. The Russian star's supporting cast is excellent, with Phillips Holmes, Lionel Atwill, Richard Bennett, Lawrence Grant, Mae Clarke and Muriel Kirkland. But, of course, the picture is entirely Anna Sten. And Anna Sten has made a triumphant debut.

'I'll Tell the World' Next for Lee Tracy

Universal will use the title of "I'll Tell the World" on the Lee Tracy starring vehicle which starts next Monday under the direction of Edward Sedgwick. The story is an original by Lincoln Quarberg. Screen play by Dale Van Every and Frank Wead.

Craven in Kibbee Spot

Warners yesterday signed Frank Craven for the role which Guy Kibbee was set for in "Without Honor," the James Cagney-Joan Blondell vehicle now shooting. Kibbee instead gets a featured spot in "Dames," which will be Busby Berkeley's first directing job for the studio.

Sinus Delays Fox Pic

Production plans of "Gypsy Melody" at Fox are being held up until Eric Charell, who will produce and direct the picture, arrives at the studio. Charell has been confined to his home with a bad case of sinus trouble since he arrived here.

Review Board Does Usual

New York.—About all the twenty-fifth convention of the National Board of Review did was to pass a resolution against motion picture censorship.

Root to Columbia

Wells Root has been signed by Columbia to write the script on an original story for Jack Holt's next picture.

OPEN FORUM

February 6, 1934.

Mr. W. R. Wilkerson:

Apropos of the steadily increasing profits of Loew's Inc., as announced in today's issue of your Reporter, and in view of your kindness in publishing several letters from mere script girls, I wonder if you would be so kind as to make mention of another subject in your very fine "Forum."

At MGM, when the employees had to take the cuts quite some time ago, Mr. Mayer announced, with tears in his eyes, that it was breaking his heart to have to do this—to have to cut our salary.

Now that their profits are so apparent, why the heck are we not reinstated at the old salary?

Last month United Artists very generously reinstated their employees to their former salaries, and it looks as if other studios, especially one as favorably situated as MGM, might follow suit. Of course, they can retaliate by saying that now our working hours have been cut. Yes. But so have United Artists' working hours been reduced, yet they have got their old salary back.

Of course, my little cut amounts only to $1.50 per week. But that's $6 a month and pays for my lunches.

Hope you can see your way clear to print something in your fine paper on this subject which means so much to us. We will be very grateful for your help.

A STENOGRAPHER.

FOX 'I BELIEVED IN YOU' AMATEURISH AND AWKWARD

Story and Dialogue Throw All For Loss

"I BELIEVED IN YOU"
(Fox)

Direction .....Irving Cummings
Screen Play.....William Conselman
Original Idea....Wm. Anthony McGuire
Photography .....Barney McGill
Cast: Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory, John Boles, Gertrude Michael, George Meeker, Leslie Fenton, Joyzelle, Luis Alberni, Jed Prouty, Morgan Wallace.

Those little theatres specializing in unproduced plays by unknown authors might have brought forth something such as "I Believed in You." It smacks of the amateur in nearly every department. About everything that can be said for it on the credit side of the ledger is that it presents an idea somewhat novel for the screen and introduces a new and interesting personality in the person of Rosemary Ames. The girl has promise, a promise that her first picture does not completely realize.

But then, there are a lot of promises unrealized in the treatment of "I Believed in You." The plot concerns a young girl from a small town who is suddenly thrown into association with the denizens of New York's Greenwich Village. She is amused by those she meets, an unpublished poet, an unhung painter (no pun), an unsung dancer and a labor radical. She believes in them as they pretend to believe in themselves.

She slaps the face of a wealthy man and does ten days in the workhouse for her assault. He finds her upon her release and attempts to disabuse her of her belief in her worthless associates. Failing in argument, he offers to finance each of her friends for six months to determine what they will accomplish. Goaded into accepting his wager, she sees them in their true light when they accomplish nothing.

Much could have been done with this theme. But like its characters it gets nowhere. An unusual screen credit proclaims "from an idea by William Anthony McGuire." Better that McGuire had developed his own idea, for it certainly has fallen into alien hands. The dialogue is at times unconsciously funny, at other times just bad.

Rosemary Ames, looking a bit like Tallulah Bankhead, remains interesting despite her inept material. She has not been photographed to the best advantage in several sequences but she does not suffer as severely as does John Boles. As the wealthy man, the dialogue also throws Boles for losses time and again.

Victor Jory swaggers through his role of the radical and scores to top the cast. George Meeker does well by the poet as do Luis Alberni, Jed Prouty and Morgan Wallace in lesser parts. Some of the others are plain ham.

The direction of Irving Cummings and the photography of Barney McGill are both uneven. Cutting hasn't helped either. There is a moment in a typical Fox fog sequence when the studio lights are plainly discernible.

To sum up, a bit of the dialogue is apt. The wealthy chap says in effect to his fiancee, "I thought you liked strange people." She replies, "But not in such large quantities." Yet there was a swell picture in "I Believed In You." They just failed to get it out.

Lacking in heavy cast name draws, your only hope is in selling the Greenwich Village angle, coupled with whatever "Girl's Disillusion" copy you can bat out.

Academy Missed 'Little Women'

Through error, the Academy failed to list the Radio production of "Little Women" in its production book sent out yesterday to members for their selection in the Academy awards.

Many of the copies had it penciled in, but those who do not receive such copies should understand that the big Radio hit is to be included on last year's pictures.

Universal Release For Franklin-Moss

New York.—H. B. Franklin and B. S. Moss will produce the six pictures they plan for release by Universal. This announcement was made yesterday in New York after rumors had connected the theatre veterans with Radio release for their subjects. No news yet as to the amount of money to be spent on the picture or the initial stories planned.

Cagney Name Omitted

James Cagney's name was inadvertently omitted from the list of nominations by the Screen Actors Guild for the 5-5 committee on code agents' operations under the code as published yesterday.

Art Collins Marries

Arthur Greville Collins, Warner dialogue director, marries Rhoda Shepherd February 17. Miss Shepherd, who comes from Portland, Oregon, has had some picture experience.

Baby Boy for Mrs. Karp

An eight pound baby boy was born to Mrs. Jack Karp at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital Tuesday. Mother is wife of Henry Herzbrun's assistant at Paramount.

Edna Best on Way

New York.—Edna Best left here Wednesday to visit Herbert Marshall in Hollywood.

Radio Signs Halliday

John Halliday was signed yesterday by Radio for an important role in "Finishing School."

'The Lost Patrol' Scores In Frisco

San Francisco.—Even though it opened on a rainy day, Radio's "Lost Patrol" started here with a smash equaled only by "Little Women." The picture opened at the Golden Gate Theatre, and took in $2,662 as compared to $2,832 by "Little Women," which opened in the same house.

Executives from Radio are jubilant over the way the picture has caught on. Wallace Ford made a personal appearance at the opening.

Al Alt Company To Carry Through on Mountan Pics

New York.—The "Showman's Pictures" group of indie pictures originally started by D. J. Mountan will be carried through to completion by Screencraft Attractions, according to announcement made here yesterday by Al Alt. "St. Louis Woman," next on the list, is slated to start in Hollywood next week.

Brian Ahearn Hits In British Picture

London.—After a very bad picture start in "Song of Songs" made in Hollywood by Paramount, Brian Ahearn grabs top raves for his performance in Gaumont's "Constant Nymph," which was shown here recently.

Thomson Makes Report

The Executive Committee of the Screen Actors Guild held an important meeting last night to hear the report of Kenneth Thomson, secretary, following his hurried trip east to confer with President Eddie Cantor. No statement made to the press following the session.

Postpone 'Hairy Ape'

"The Hairy Ape," starring Mitchell Lewis, at the Mason Theatre will open February 18 instead of 19 as previously announced. Allen Daily has been added to the cast which includes Wyndham Standing, Alice L. Holcomb and Bess Stafford.

Manners and Sherman Set

Sheila Manners and Vincent Sherman were set yesterday for leading roles in "The Terrible Turk," claimed to be a satire on Jed Harris, which the Pasadena Community Playhouse is putting on February 20.

Joan Lowell Back in N.Y.

New York.—Joan Lowell, whose windjammer story created considerable of a stir some years ago, returned to port yesterday on the first lap of a world journey being made in connection with plans for a Radio picture.

Ulric for Personals

New York.—The personal appearance war is still on with the first runs. Lenore Ulrich yesterday signed a deal to go over the Loew circuit, opening February 16 at the Metropolitan in Brooklyn.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

Paul Green's article on the movies in the Sunday Times has stirred up plenty of talk. . . . The very genial Harry Goetz, who guides the destinies of Reliance Pictures, was like a proud father at the trade showing of "Palooka"—and for a very good reason, too—the picture literally had them laughing in the aisles. . . . There's a deal on, if you're at all interested, for Harry Richman to make a feature musical for Columbia! . . . George Gershwin is out on his concert tour, but only until the end of this week. After that he'll settle down to making an operatic version of DuBose and Dorothy Heyward's "Porgy." He hopes to finish it in time for a production next season. Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin are collaborating on the play's adaptation and the latter is writing the lyrics. In addition George and his brother will probably do the music and words for another show next year. . . . And Bradford Ropes, who was a chorus boy before he became a novelist, has now written a musical show. From what I can gather it will hit the boards very shortly. Who'll produce must remain a mystery till it opens.

That lovely lady of the wild raves, Jane Froman, is being beckoned to the screen by Mister Sam Goldwyn, who wants the canary to sing songs in the next Cantor opus. . . . May 1 will find Sophie Tucker en route for England and the Cafe de Paris. . . . The talk is that Jack Pearl will face the cameras for Warners. . . . And incidentally Harry Hershfield resumes his columning on the Herald-Tribune March 4. . . . Ric Cortez is asking those Yeast folks for two grand to radio. . . . According to those who claim they have the inside "dope" on the situation, rumors have it that Rowland-Brice will be back together again. . . . Others say that Monty Brice will do some production on his own, backed by the Erpi crowd, while Bill Rowland will produce a flock of features for Columbia.

Patsy Flick, whose characterization in "She Loves Me Not" has the nightly audiences that pack the theatre laughing till tears come, should be a sure-fire bet for Paramount, which has purchased the picture rights to this play. Flick has a grand sense of comedy valuations and should prove an important addition to any picture cast, especially "She Loves Me Not." . . . That air-famous group, "The Rise of the Goldbergs," is being chased after again by the flicker companies. . . . Figure this out if you can: On my recent trip to the coast I met Al Jolson on the Warner lot. Al complained to me that he missed radio and New York. So what? So this: Last week after a recent cold spell we had here I met up with Jolson. His first cry to me was that he missed the California sunshine!

Ann Barrie, the Brooklyn Miss who scored such a hit in "Music in the Air," will very shortly be on the War-

GOLDEN'S 'NO QUESTIONS' HAS ONE GREAT CHARACTER

Probably Better Pic Than Stage Play

"NO QUESTIONS ASKED"

John Golden presents "No Questions Asked," by Anne Morrison Chapin; staged by Edward Goodman and John Goldwyn; settings by P. Dodd Ackerman, at the Masque Theatre. With Emma Bunting, Barbara Robbins, Milo Boulton, Ross Alexander, Spring Byington, Barna Osterag, Charles Lawrence, Brian Donlevy, Margery Garrett, Dorothy Vernon, Joseph King, Kate McComb.

New York.—One really has no right to be too querulous with Anne Morrison Chapin because she has chosen to tell "No Questions Asked" from an erroneous bifocal point of view, since in this dramatic comedia entertainment she has drawn one character who is worth the price of admission alone. We refer to the character yclept Pet Walsh, played by Spring Byington (and how!) But the heck of it is that while this play is full of Pet, for which we are duly grateful, the "pregnant" theme concerns her not at all; that is, directly. In other words, it really isn't her play, strictly speaking. As a matter of fact, biologically speaking, it couldn't be—Pet being too definitely dated for that sort of thing. The play belongs to two other characters—Pet's dipsomaniac son, Sonny Raeburn, and a girl, Noel Parker, he has married under extraordinary circumstances.

And here we must charge that the author has stacked the cards against her characters and against her audience. Why Noel Parker must withhold from Sonny the fact that she is about to have a baby by another man until the audience itself is fairly ready to yell out the obstetrical secret and get it over with, can only be ascribed to downright dramatic licentiousness. Because Sonny certainly was a most open-minded young man where the subject of sex and babies, his own or otherwise, was concerned. And Pet, his mother, was even more of a latitudinarian.

This was the way of it. Sonny met Noel one night on the Staten Island ferry. She had just had a quarrel with her sweetheart, who refused to accompany her to Manhattan and marry her immediately, not even when she intimated that he might be by way of considering himself a father sooner than he expected. In her despair she was just about to go off the deep end when Sonny, delightfully drunk, took a hand in her destiny, saved her from a watery grave, and offered her a drink from the emergency kit he always carried. That one drink led to many more in a place called Tony's, and that in turn led to a crazy marriage, which three months later has all the earmarks of turning out swell. For Sonny's mother approved most beautifully, since Noel had straightened out her pride and joy beyond wildest dreams of sobriety. So far, so good. But Noel has her dark secret, remember; and when her mother-in-law innocently comments on the fit of her dress she is ready to have kittens right there and then. To complicate matters her dilatory sweetheart turns up, feeling duty bound to claim his share in the unborn. His fanatically religious mother also drops in, to warn Pet and Sonny that this girl who seduced her son is about to elope with him now. To complicate matters still further, Sonny goes on such a bender again as to require the ministrations of a doctor, nurse and sleeping powders. While in this hectic condition he gets hold of a revolver, finally managing to shoot himself in a scuffle for its possession. We are given to understand by the family physician that the wound is not too serious. Suffice it to say that when Sonny, sobered up, in the end learns about the coming blessed event, he is content to forgive all and to call the real father the real son-of-a-so-and-so. In the play it is pronounced with a capital B (oh, Mr. Golden!)

Ross Alexander plays Sonny Raeburn amusingly. Barbara Robbins as Noel is a capable young actress. But Spring Byington as the rich, twice married widow Walsh, we repeat, is the whole show; and it would really be too bad if she were not drafted to duplicate her performance in the picture version of "No Questions Asked," if such version eventuates. Which we think there is an even chance of happening, because the play with all its faults provides enough meat for Hollywood to go to work on—and turn out a considerably better picture than it is a play.

Nuts!

Andy Devine says he is working on the development of a "careless monkey-wrench" for the purpose of keeping a couple of nuts from getting more than half tight.

Carroll Closes New 2 Yr. Gaumont Deal

New York.—While Madeleine Carroll is here on her way to Fox in Hollywood, detouring for a visit with friends in Montreal, it becomes known that she has signed a new two-year deal with Gaumont British.

Her first picture under the new contract after her return from Hollywood will be "Mary of Scotland." Victor Saville will direct.

A clause in the new contract prohibits simultaneous appearances on the stage and screen.

Getting Morgans Straight

An error in the "Shooting Schedule" credits on "The Firebrand" listed Ralph Morgan for a part that should have been credited to Frank Morgan. Drat those Morgans.

Milt Golden in New Spot

Milton Golden, attorney, is holding open house Saturday in his new offices in the Equitable Building, Hollywood. The attorney is associated with Arthur V. Kaufman.

'Break-In' Period Chorine Problem

New York. — Problem of the "break-in" period proved biggest thorn in side of Code Authority meeting held at the Astor here in connection with the vaudeville industry. Producers claimed 44-hour week provided by code is not sufficient to permit drilling of chorus girls. Charles Madduck of United Vaudeville Producers and Directors Association recommended that artists rehearse two weeks without pay; play two weeks "break-in" time without pay; and the abolishment of pay to chorus girls of $3 a day during layoffs.

Mary Brian to N. Y.

Mary Brian left for New York last night by plane to see the Broadway production of "Men in White" before she decides to accept the role of the feminine lead in that play which will be produced by Henry Duffy at the El Capitan Theatre. Before she left the deal was closed for her to do the show and the decision rests with Miss Brian.

Stars Go for Sov. Dancers

Top flight picture stars are putting in reservations for the concert of Vecheslova and Chabukani, celebrated Soviet dancers, on an American tour through special Soviet permission, at the Philharmonic Auditorium next Tuesday night. Ed Perkins, well known in picture circles, is handling the cross country tour.

Rainger-Robin on Three

Rainger and Robin are now working on three Paramount pictures at a time, B. P. Schulberg having assigned the team to find the melodies for "Cosmetic." "Come on Marines" and "Little Miss Marker" are others in work.

New Para. S. A. Manager

New York.—Jerome P. Sussman, newly named Paramount general manager for Central America and the northern Republics of South America, is on his way to his territory. Succeeds John B. Nathan.

1st Div. Has Scout Serial

New York.—First Division Pictures will handle distribution on "Young Eagles," the Boy Scout serial being produced by George Stout and Harry Hoyt. A radio hook-up is planned.

Arkansas Exhibs Meet

Little Rock. — The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas hold their semi-annual meeting here February 11-12. T. W. Sharp is president, and Ray Morrow vice president

Miller on Vacation

Cinematographer Arthur Miller, of the A.S.C., is off to Santa Barbara for a ten day rest cure on the completion of the Fox picture, "Bottoms Up."

Dot Stickney Here

Dorothy Stickney, with a Paramount contract, arrived here yesterday to start work at that studio.

UP TO THE MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Tenen Holtz added to "Hollywood Party," MGM.

Henry O'Neill and George Cooper to roles in "One Man's Woman" with Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell and Claire Dodd at Warners.

David Torrence into "All Men Are Enemies," Fox. Walter Kane of the Weber office set the player.

Arthur Hohl gets his first free lance assignment since leaving Warners' contract list with a featured role in Paramount's "Cleopatra." The William Morris office swung it.

Leila Bennett was set by the William Morris office yesterday for a featured role in "Strictly Dynamite" at Radio.

Donald Meek goes into an important spot in "Murder in the Vanities," Paramount, the William Morris office doing it.

Alan Hale into "Of Human Bondage," Radio.

Helen Freeman for "Finishing School," Radio.

John Larkin set through the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency in "Louisiana," MGM.

Alan Edwards and Charlie Williams signed for "The Showoff," MGM. Williams deal handled by Bernard and Meiklejohn.

Donald Dilloway signed by Warners for "Sawdust."

Shirley Grey and George Blackwood added to "Sisters Under the Skin," Columbia. Bernard and Meiklejohn negotiated for Blackwood.

Henry O'Neill and George Cooper added to cast of "One Man's Woman," Warners.

Russell Hopton goes into "Without Honor," Warners.

Clara Blandick and Claude Gillingwater added to "The Showoff," MGM.

Leila Bennett by Radio for "Strictly Dynamite."

Shane, Hillman Combine

Max Shane, long identified with Mike Marco of Fanchon and Marco, branches out into the advertising agency business, combining with David Hillman. The new firm will handle accounts including Fanchon and Marco, Principal Theatres, Partmar Theatres, Sardi's and Music Corporation of America.

Ev. Riskin at Columbia

Everett Riskin, former production manager for Edward Small, has joined the Columbia production staff in the capacity of a supervisor. His first assignment is the supervision of the next Jack Holt picture.

London Likes 'Christina'

London — Sam Eckman, general manager of MGM in Great Britian, is raving about the reaction the other night by British exhibitors to "Queen Christina." Eckman's phrase is "It knocked 'em silly."

Selznick Tests Lehman

David Selznick tested Virginia Pine Lehman, wife of the Chicago millionaire, for a termer at MGM. She is also sought for a termer by Warners.

Phil Rosen Off to N. Y. On Way to British Studio

Phil Rosen has settled out of court the two suits filed against him by Milton Hoffman, and Hoffman, Kerr and Quigley for agency commissions. Suits totaled $1,650.

Director reaches New York today and boards the Champlain tomorrow for London, where he is signed on a three months' deal with Progressive Pictures, releasing through British-Gaumont.

May's Columbia Pic To Go Hundred Per Cent German

William Wilder and Jo Schultz, German writers, have been signed by Columbia to write the script on Joie May's first directing assignment at the plant. Wilder and Schultz, who recently arrived in New York, will be out here in the near future.

Lesser Signs Whitman

Learning that the "Chandu" program will go over the entire NBC network the last of March or the first of April and realizing the exploitation tie-up possible, Sol Lesser yesterday signed Gayne Whitman for the lead in his next serial. Story will be based on Whitman's radio characterization of "Chandu" and will go into production on the completion of "Peck's Bad Boy," which starts March 6.

Radio Borrows Wynyard

Radio secured MGM's okay yesterday on the loan of Diana Wynyard for the co-starring assignment with Clive Brook in "Dover Road." Picture, which J. Walter Ruben directs, also will have Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray, Gilbert Emery and Phyllis Barry.

Newmeyer on HoffmanPic

Fred Newmeyer, who leaves for England to direct for British International, has postponed his departure while he makes a picture for M. H. Hoffman. He will leave here February 26. The Hoffman picture is titled "The Quitter."

Dr. Felix Here Again

Dr. Hugo Felix, famous composer, arrived in town yesterday from New York. This is the first trip here since he composed the music for the Pathe picture which Mary Lewis, Metropolitan opera singer, was to make a number of years ago.

Warners Shift Schedule

Warners have rearranged the schedule on "Fog Over San Francisco" so that the picture will wind up with exteriors in San Francisco. Company, which was due to leave tomorrow, will not go there until the end of next week.

'Peck's Boy' Starts Mar. 6

Sol Lesser yesterday signed Frank Melford to the spot of production manager on "Peck's Bad Boy," which starts shooting March 6. Eddie Cline directs and Jackie Cooper has been borrowed from MGM for the lead.

Drop Marston Suit

Order to drop John Marston's suit against KBS Productions from court records went on file yesterday after Sam Wolf, acting for the recently dissolved company, settled the case out of court. It was a salary claim.

NEW TYPE LENS GETS REAL TEST IN EASTERN PICTURE

A new motion picture camera lens, which many cameramen believe may revolutionize the photography field, will be given a practical opportunity to show its worth shortly on a feature production to be made in the East.

This lens, called the "Detrar," has been developed by Dr. L. M. Dieterich, optical and consulting engineer. He leaves this week for New York with his lens. His leaving marks the end of a dramatic and persistent struggle for recognition on his part. For years he has worked on the development of the lens, but after it had been perfected, Hollywood producers would not give him the opportunity to demonstrate its worth and efficiency on a regular production, despite the fact that tests showed what it could do. Dr. Dieterich kept at his task, however, and his efforts are now to be rewarded.

The new lens is revolutionary in that focusing is eliminated. All existing lenses have but one vertical plane that is sharp. Thus the lens is focused on one object and the remainder of the picture in front and behind the subject is fuzzy. The new lens, according to Dr. Dieterich, eliminates the focusing as every object in the picture beyond three feet from the camera is in uniformly sharp focus. This is secured through an automatically moving element in the lens which alters the focus during each exposure. Thus the lens, he claims, will increase speed at which scenes may be photographed. The lens was demonstrated before the members of the American Society of Cinematographers, of which Dr. Dieterich is an associate member.

Jack Cohn Admits Holly Improving on Cooperation

New York.—Jack Cohn is willing to admit that Hollywood is improving, because, as he puts it, "They are more willing to cooperate with New York ideas on picture trends and admit that New York is the place where the pictures must be marketed."

Jack also on his return yesterday gave some of the credit for the improved cooperation to better methods of transportation between the coasts.

O'Brien Overtrains

Training for his role as a prizefighter in "One Man's Woman," Pat O'Brien yesterly severely sprained a finger. Studio hopes to get under way with the subject Monday on schedule shoving the fight sequences back to the end of the picture when the finger will have had time to heal. Alan Crosland directs.

Florey to 'Mona Lisa'

Robert Florey has been taken off "The Return of the Terror," which Sam Bischoff is producing for Warners, and has been assigned to direct "Mona Lisa," in which Warren William will be starred. Henry Blanke is handling the production reins on this picture.

Vidor Considers Talbot

King Vidor is seriously considering Lyle Talbot for the male lead in his production, "Our Daily Bread," which will have a Radio release. If Talbot can be borrowed from Warners, Vidor will probably use him for the lead in the picture.

Deaner Back at Fox

Frances Deaner has returned to her spot in the Fox publicity department handling fan magazines. Girl was out since Arch Reeve became publicity director about a year ago.

Chase Starts Monday

Hal Roach will put a Charlie Chase comedy into production Monday under the direction of Charles Parrott. The cast includes Betty Mack and Billy Gilbert.

Brewster-Radio at Odds

June Brewster will become a free lance player February 20 unless Radio takes up her option. Studio wants her to remain without the pay increase scheduled in the ticket. Girl, former Earl Carroll beauty, has had featured spots in four features and has been the lead in the "Blondes and Brunettes" series of shorts.

Won't Exercise Option

Continuing its policy of no termers, Radio will not exercise its option on Sidney Buchman's contract, notification on which is due February 13. Writer is on loan to Columbia for the screen play of "Whom the Gods Destroy."

Fox Foreign P. A. Here

New York.—Roy Simmonds, publicity director for Fox Films, Ltd., of London, arrives in New York today on the Berengaria and after a party here from the home office will immediately board a plane for Hollywood.

New Cagney Title

Warners have changed the title on "The Heir Chaser" to "Jimmy the Gent," making the third change in labels. Picture, which featured James Cagney and Bette Davis, was previewed as "Blondes and Bonds."

Virginia Tax May Die

Richmond.—Governor Perry has agreed to withdraw his support from a legislative proposal for a five cent admission tax in this state.

On the occasion of the first anniversary of Sardi's today . . . Eddie Brandstatter and David Covey extend their thanks to many friends in the industry for their continued patronage.

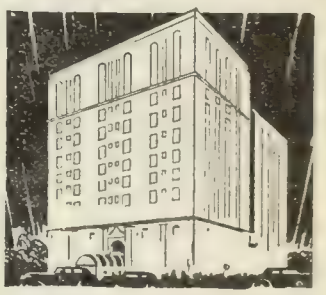
Rosen Goes Ahead On Hitler Picture

Al Rosen's "Mad Dog of Europe" will probably go into production early in March, according to his present plans. This week he receives approximately ten thousand feet of authentic sound pictures of Hitler activities and scenes in Germany showing Hitler in action, and also giving unusual views of how the Jews have been treated.

Rosen says he will only have to shoot sufficient added stuff to carry a story and he will have a picture that will be a thriller. He intimates that if anything should happen to prevent making the yarn, he will cut and re-edit the imported film and roadshow it.

Settle Out of Court

Suit by Ruth Fallows against Nancy Carroll and Bolton Mallory for $11,000 damages resulting from an automobile accident was settled out of court yesterday. Sam Wolf handled the case for Miss Fallows, a member of the "Sailor Beware" cast.



'City Limits' Finishes

Delayed a day because of difficulty on railroad exteriors, William Nigh finishes in "City Limits" at Monogram today. Frank Craven and Sally Blane head the cast and William T. Lackey and Paul Malvern supervise.

To Open Tingle-Tangle

Frederick Hollander, noted German composer and proprietor of cabarets in Germany, will open the Tingle-Tangle cabaret on Santa Monica near La Cienega about March 1.

REELING around LONDON

Tut, tut, Mister Lubitsch, you'd be surprised at the derisive laughter that greeted that so-called shot of London with Tower Bridge in "Design for Living." . . . However, the critics went for your little gem in a beeg way! . . . Ralph Murphy! you, too, are getting a lot of handclaps from the film scribblers this side, they liked your "Girl Without a Room." . . . Miss Frye, out at Universal City, has never seen Paul Kohner's name in this London colyum; so here it is!!!

Elsa Lanchester has made one treemen-dous hit as Ariel in a little show a guy called Shakespeare tossed off some time ago titled "The Tempest." . . . Doug Fairbanks all of a twitter, he could not find where Ethel Barrymore was staying in town and all the hotels in the Metropolis had to be called, to check on it! . . . . The Ben Nedells around town with Jack Votion and lovely lil Momma Voti.on . . . that screen director here with stage tendencies should grab a load of the camera movement in Crisby's first song number when he gives us a number in front of the mike, after he has just got up, in "Going Hollywood," plenty of movement and how!

Believe it or nuts, the big companies here are just beginning to use "stand-ins"—eight months ago an Assistant Director with ambition ordered a couple for the stars in his pic and got hell from the production manager for wasting the company's dough! . . . Joe Schenck did raves while here about a little gal called Eileen Marson. . . . They laughed a plenty at the trade show of "Design for Living" when March says write me care of the Carlton Theatre, London; that was the vurry house the pic was being screened-in; and it belongs to Para.

There were a half dozen British screen actresses with Hollywood ambitions, just waiting to make a play for Junior Laemmle the moment he steps off the old ocean liner. . . . And how disappointed they were to hear he wasn't coming. . . . My my! We heard an American picture actually say (in the film) he was leaving on a boat run by an American Line!; what's the matter, Hollywood, aren't those French rates as hot as they were?! . . Damon Dillon, himself one of the adverts for Warners, having his shoes shined in Picadilly Circus, the centre of the World; yeah, you heard us, Times Square!

Paul Perez, Dave Bader, John Paddy Carstairs and Paul Kohner having a belated breakfast all on account of Kohner's sudden trip to Paree. . . . . Alex Korda and Cyril Gardner around town together. . . . Social note: Douglas Fairbanks Senior in the same party as his Royal Highness Prince George. . . . Cameraman Desmond Dickenson plenty sore; recently he was front paged this side because he stuck to his cameras whilst a fire raged on the set; Dickerson claims it's a lotta hooey and says he wouldn't be that sappy—he scrammed like the rest!!! . . . Bill O'Brien at MGM night showings.

Hollywood stars are going legit on us in this town; Greta Nissen will be featured in the Nelson Keys revue, "Why Not Tonight" and Lily Dimita is in "Here's How!" . . . Dr. Ludwig Berber, formerly of Para., is staging a musical show for Sir Oswald Stoll here. . . . Sidney Bernstein and Clarence Winchester, popular British visitors to Hollywood last year, taking time out to see more flickers. . . . "The picture's ended, but the inserts linger on!" sang the lugubrious prop man. . . . C. M. Woolf, Mark Ostrer, the Michael E. Balcons amongst the Gaumont revelers at their Annual Party t'other night . . . and everyone enjoyed the St. Margarets binge.

American Pictures Top in Argentina

Washington.—The Department of Commerce announces that American films have topped, more than ten to one, the product of any other nation in exhibitions in Argentina.

During 1933 there were 301 American films shown there as against 39 German, 31 French, 13 British, 11 Italian and 6 made locally.

Fontanne-Lunt Make Personal London Hit

London.—Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt have scored a tremendous personal hit in "Reunion in Vienna," drawing raves that are rare from the conservative London critics. The play itself is going just so-so, keeping up the unlucky record of Playwright Robert Sherwood in London productions.

'Bean' Disappoints

London.—Local critics were disappointed in the film version of "The Late Christopher Bean," which is at present having an usual stage run here. They felt that Marie Dressler was miscast in the picture. But they do finish by saying, "It is poor art but good box-office."

German Admissions Drop

Berlin.—Official reports of the International Research Bureau show that attendance at German theatres is about 50 per cent off over the year previous, with cash intake even slightly more so because of decreased admission prices.

Boost 'Masquerader'

Paris.—La Jour, leading local daily, threw a rave on the Sam Goldwyn production "The Masquerader," pointing it up as an example of the competition French producers must step up and meet.

'Kong' Dresden Hit

Berlin.—Reports from Dresden indicate that "King Kong" is one of the biggest box office hits that has ever hit the town. Record average of 3000 daily in scramble for seats.

French and English Plan Cooperation

Paris—There is a strong undercover trend here for close cooperation between French and English producers, with a view to helping each other corner the European market.

The move is prompted by the complaint from French producers that while they get a reasonable break in the English market they are automatically consigned to the small art theatres in the American field.

Britishers Anticipate Schenck's Holly Gifts

London.—Britishers are looking forward with great expectations to the identity of the Hollywood stars whom Joe Schenck has promised to deliver for British and Dominion's ambitious production schedule this year. Lily Damita is expected for "Sons of Guns," and an unnamed star to play opposite Anna Neagle in "Nell Gwynn."

Reinhardt Plans in Air

Brussels.—Rumors to effect Max Reinhardt will go to Hollywood this winter have been denied by Reinhardt. However, he then adds that unless he signs with some American producer before Spring, he will start production on a big scale in France. First picture probably will be "Merchant of Venice."

Soviet-French Tie-Up

Paris.—Negotiations are said to be under way between Soviet Government officials and French film distributors by which the Russians may produce a number of pictures in France as a first move in their new plan to go after world markets.

Farrere Likes His Pic

Paris.—Film men of all France are wondering what manner of man Claude Farrere is. His famous novel, "La Bataille," has just been made into a picture to "the entire satisfaction" of the author. A rare case over here, or anywhere, for that matter.

Dutch Correction

The Hague.—The recent Reporter story about a new Dutch company, "N. V. City Film," was confusing in that this company has been operating since 1921, and the new company meant was "N. V. Europa Film," controlled, however, by City Film.

Monarchs Out in Czecho

Prague.—New regulations issued by the Ministry of Trade concerning motion pictures urge domestic producers to use up-to-date themes and avoid stories built on monarchistic subjects or concerning the nobility.

Swedes and French Swap

Paris.—Gaumont Franco Film, as an entering wedge to the Swedish market, has arranged a deal by which selected subjects will be "exchanged" with a Swedish company.

Wieck Remembers

Berlin.—Word reaches here that Dorothea Wieck has sent a check for $100 for the winter relief drive on the part of the film industry.

"If You See My Uncle," Belgian made picture, did a four weeks' stretch at the Victoria Theatre—unusual for here. . . . The Laurel and Hardy team continues one of the most popular American bets here. . . . We'd like you to meet Marcel Coppens, United Artists' boss in Belgium. One of the best-liked here. But on top of his real job here the company keeps him commuting weekly to Paris.

When the King appeared at the gala launching of "Henry the Eighth" you can be sure it was an affair. . . . Ferdinand Graavey, Belgium's pride and Ufa's moneymaker, is well liked by the press crowd. . . . If you come to Brussels don't miss "The Broadway," a noisy night resort, and let Ralph tell you how glorious it was when Harold Lloyd and Tuschinski (Holland's crack showman) celebrated the opening of Lloyd's last picture here. Of course, Souhami, Para's big shot in Paris, was there, too.

Max Reinhardt scored a real triumph here with "Diener Zweier Herren," presented under the patronage of a highbrow crowd. Hermann Thimig, Austrian film star and lead in the play, is a wow—and a fine fellow besides. . . . Why isn't "Dinner at Eight" here yet? . . . The biggest exhibitors are aroused because they are not getting the hits in season. . . . Much blueness: No one in the entire picture colony fortunate enough to draw a prize in the French lottery. . . . Well, next time.

'Girl From Maxim's' Gets London Shot

London.—"The Girl From Maxim's" made by Alexander Korda some time ago, long before his "Henry the Eighth" will be shown at the Leicester Square following "I Cover The Waterfront."

The latest Korda production, "Catherine the Great," will get its first European showing at the above house after the play of "The Girl From Maxim's."

Polish Theatres May Strike

Warsaw.—Polish theatre owners threaten a strike starting March 1 unless the government agrees to reduce the heavy load of taxation carried by playhouses here. The managers state that receipts have declined 30 per cent in the last year, making it impossible to meet the heavy government levies.

Berlin Kodak Boosts Cap.

Berlin.—Berlin Kodak A.G. has increased its capital by eleven million reichmarks, the money being supplied by Eastman Kodak of Rochester and Kodak, Ltd., of London.

Break for Mothers

Berlin.—Here's a new idea to help the birth rate. It is reported that the Hessian state government is planning legislation by which picture theatres will have to give at least one free admission a month to German mothers having at least three children.

him the power. On the other side of the fence is the growing belief on the part of labor that they are just being given a merry-go-round ride and any sort of technicality will be seized upon to avoid reaching the decisions promised by Rosenblatt while here.

Berres refuses to talk to newspapers. At a time yesterday when one Hollywood Reporter representative in his outer office knew that he was on the job, another Reporter representative was told by a secretary on the phone that Berres was not in, and as far as he knew might not be in the rest of the week—so far as newspaper men were concerned.

Meanwhile wires are burning up to Roosevelt and Rosenblatt in Washington about local labor and extra troubles being given no decision. A summary of the buzzing brings the following specific complaints to the front:

Local 37, IATSE, representing electricians, grips and property men, has four specific complaints on file with the Studio Labor Board. One is a demand for the limitation of the hours of "key men," some of whom are alleged to be working as much as 110 hours a week while other men go hungry.

Another complaint is that studios are dropping certain men from a high pay classification to a lower classification, but are making them do the same work.

Next is a complaint that major studios are relegating high pay work to men of lower classification in defiance of the NRA Code. The fourth matter is a demand for changes in the number of flat rate men used on sets.

Also up before the Labor Board is the demand of the sound men that the wage scale be set for all studios at the same rate as that now in effect in the Independents. This was assured the sound men by Rosenblatt before he left. No action has been taken on this complaint, even though the sound men say that Rosenblatt said it would be a very simple matter to adjust.

Extra ranks are up in arms over the fact that yesterday one of the major studios used 350 wooden "dummies" and only 35 extras in a scene at a race track. Charges have also been made and forwarded to Rosenblatt that in some studios the extras have to bring hats to put on the "dummies."

Extras charge that many of the studios are still taking on relatives in extra ranks by the simple method of putting them on a one-day contract at the rate of $7.50 per day as an "actor."

It is also charged by extras that some studios are taking advantage of a misprint in the NRA Code and are forcing bit players to accept $25 for doing an entire "bit" with speaking lines. Intent of Code, they say, was to pay these people $25 per day. The "per day" was left out, and in one case on record a player worked three days for one day's pay.

Thus far Rosenblatt has not replied to any of the numerous wires sent by the various complainers who say they can get no satisfaction either from Labor Board or Extra Committee.

Screenland IS "the smart screen magazine" for March. Everything in it is up to the minute and written well.

Leonard Hall's story, "DeMille's Magic at Work Again," is extremely amusing, and everyone will like James M. Fidler's "The Past, Present and Future of Jean Parker." Margery Wilson's analysis of charm in "Who Are Hollywood's Six Most Charming Women?" is clever; Laura Benham has "Gary Cooper Talks About His Big Romance"; Alma Whitaker gets away beautifully with "New Love for Garbo?" and S. R. Mook has a double story, "What I Think of Jimmy," and "What I Think of Joan" (James Cagney and Joan Blondell).

Dickson Morley writes a human, rounded yarn on Stuart Erwin, "The Man Who Replaced Lee Tracy"; Ben Maddox has "Telling All About the Barrymores"; Sydney Valentine authors "And the Lodges Speak Only To—" (John Davis Lodge); Scoop Conlon offers "The Five Ruth Chattertons"; Mortimer Franklin has a good story on Douglass Montgomery in "Jo's Boy"; and James Marion asks "What Next, Charlotte?" (Charlotte Henry).

Maude Cheatham falls a little below par in a too quaint revelation of Baby LeRoy, called "Yoo-Hoo! Here's My Story."

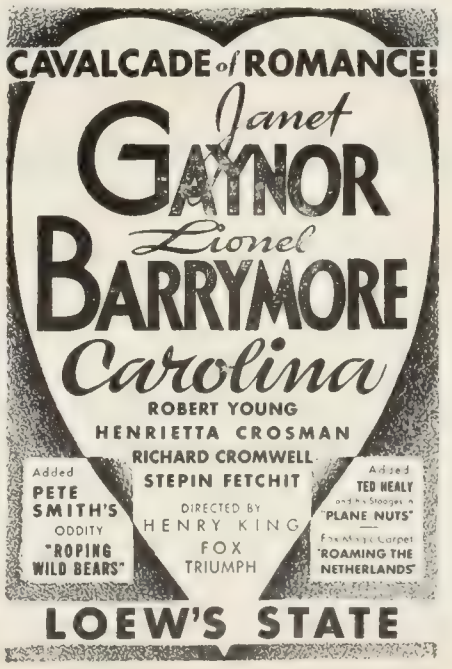
A good many fairly interesting stories place Hollywood in the midway class for March. Nothing very outstanding in either direction.



Hal Hall's story, "That Lil Gal Is Okay" (Lilian Harvey) is well written; Jerry Lane offers Jimmy Dunn's code on "The Kind of Girl Men Like"; "Crazy People" is about Burns and Allen, by Donald P. Sheldon; "Jean Harlow and Judge Lindsey Discuss Sex" is overheard by J. Eugene Chrisman, and Al Sherman tells what he knows about "The Truth About Hepburn."

"I'm Afraid of Hollywood," by Harold McNight, doesn't reveal much of anything new about Margaret Sullavan; J. Eugene Chrisman gets Mae West to answer a few of her fan letters in "Mae West Tells What Every Girl Should Know"; Peter Joel is hazy in "Will Garbo Soon Retire?" and Jewel Smith talks about the Paramount beauty winners in "How to Win a Movie Contract."

Richard English has a good story on John Boles called "Hollywood's Greatest Enigma"; Whitney Williams tells how Irene Dunne commutes between Hollywood and New York in "Love by Contract," and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. explains a few things in "Please Get Me Right," by Sonia Lee.

'Tiger' Holds Up in N. Y.

New York.—"Devil Tiger" continues the surprise of Broadway. It is hitting about $4000 daily with Arthur Mayer's exploitation at the Rialto and will probably do a $25,000 week if the Lincoln's Birthday holidays don't give everybody a chance to go out of town.

'Christina' Opening Sees Good Old Days

Indications are that the opening of "Queen Christina" at the Chinese tonight will bring back the old glorious days of 100 per cent star turn-out. This is judging from reservations to date.

Announcement is made that Charles Irwin will be master of ceremonies for the radio program, with Jimmy Durante, Arthur Jarrett, Shirley Ross and Larry Adler among the entertainers.

Musical Goes Russian

Leonard Kinsky will present a Russian operetta-farce in three acts at the Knights of Columbus hall tomorrow night. The operetta "The Naughty Girl" will be presented in the Russian language.

N.Y. Offices Close Feb. 12

New York.—Most film companies will close a half day for the holiday on Lincoln's Birthday on February 12. So that's a brief period in which you can't argue with the New York office.

EXTRAS ARE OUT OF LUCK

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•A NUMBER of picture people asked us why we seemed to have a peeve on against Rosenblatt while he was in our midst. (It's a peculiarity of this business that no one in it can understand that anyone has a thought that is concerned with their job, their duty to that job, or to the industry—but everything you think or do must have a PERSONAL reason behind it.)

So we tried very patiently to explain that we honestly thought that Mr. Rosenblatt was, in the first place, a very capable chap, and in the second place—having decided on a wrong course of procedure—was, at least, honestly following that course through.

But that sounded complicated. Mebbe it is. But let's see what is happening. Perhaps happenings make words unnecessary.

Mr. Rosenblatt has arrived back in Washington and one of his first statements is that while he had some very fine OPEN meetings, he got "most of his information from the confidential chats with people in Hollywood."

Ye gods! That was our quarrel with Mr. Rosenblatt from the start. That he went CONFIDENTIAL. When any son-of-a-gun who has spent six months in Hollywood can tell you that you can't trust your own BROTHER on opinions and advice. (Not because you think your brother is crooked, but because you know all Hollywood does more TALKING than THINKING when they get the thrill of contact with outsiders.)

And so what?

Only this: The real reason we were arguing with Mr. Rosenblatt during his stay in Hollywood was because he was such an easy victim for all this CONFIDENTIAL stuff.

For example, no one bothered to jump on Rosenblatt for his Wampas Dinner speech in which he told a number of publicity men about a mythical character who nonchalantly sold picture companies $15,000 stories for which she had already received $600 from some national magazine. The publicists listening to Mr. Rosenblatt took it in something of the nature of after dinner conversation. But at the minute they did not think of the fact that Mr. Rosenblatt was returning to Small Sets New Deal With U. A.

Reports of a split between Reliance and United Artists were spiked yesterday when it became known that the independent unit has concluded a new releasing ticket with United Artists.

Company will make four more pictures for the releasing company's forthcoming program. Organization changes will be announced shortly, Edward Small continuing as production chief. Reliance has one more picture, "Count of Monte Cristo," to make on its former ticket before starting the new one.

'The Key' Gives The Warners a Headache

Warners are thinking of changing the title of the next William Powell picture from "The Key" to "The Big Walkout."

First Kay Francis walked out on the feminine lead. Now she has been followed by the director, Archie Mayo. Michael Curtiz has been assigned to take Mayo's place, and the studio is reported to be concluding a deal with Edna Best, wife of Herbert Marshall, to take the place of Miss Francis.

Complaints Piling Up But No Action Because Chairman Is Busy On Sacramento State Job

While "extra" players are squawking their heads off over alleged violations of the NRA Code on the part of both the major and independent studios, the Code Committee for Extras, appointed by Sol A. Rosenblatt, maintains a policy of inactivity.

The committee is not only inactive, as far as any action for the investigation of the complaints are concerned, but its chairman, Mrs. Mable Kinney, is not even in Hollywood. She is in Sacramento taking care of business connected with the State Industrial Welfare Board.

Yesterday several members of the committee declared in no uncertain terms that there are many violations

Of the other MGM executives now in our midst, Maurice Revnes and Edgar Selwyn plan to leave on Sunday.

Kay Francis Selects 'Dr. Monica' for Next

From the two stories offered her by Warners, Kay Francis preferred "Doctor Monica" as her next selection over "The Firebird."

William Keighly's name has been penciled in as the director.

Grant and Cherrill Tie

London.—Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill were married yesterday and left for the United States on board the Paris immediately after the ceremony.

ONE STANDOUT FOR FILMS IN BROADWAY'S NEW PLAYS

New York.—As far as motion picture possibilities are concerned the stage hit of the week is "Broomstick Amen," presented at the Little Theatre by Jones and Green. Elmer Greensfelder is the author and the play deals with the ways of the Pennsylvania Dutch, made interesting to the public through a recent Saturday Evening Post series. Cast includes William Von Schoeller, Victor Killan, Jane Seymour, Jules Epilley, Jean Adair and Byron McGrath. It is virginal material for the screen and has all the earmarks of a great piece of entertainment. Full review will appear in The Reporter.

"No Questions Asked," the John Golden show already reviewed in The Reporter, rates as a fair possibility. "After Such Pleasures," a series of short sketches by Edward Gardner from Dorothy Parker's book, offers nothing for the screen.

New York REVIEWS

"THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE"

MGM prod.; director, George B. Seitz; writer, F. Hugh Herbert.

Capitol Theatre

Post: An unblushing exercise in hokum melodrama. It is cheap, noisy and stereotyped; an unworthy vehicle for the superior talent of Mr. Kruger.

World-Telegram: Based essentially on the idea that a lawyer, especially a criminal lawyer, is the most romantic figure imaginable, it is despite its sheer excess of invention, pretty lurid, foolish and tiresome. For the most part the acting gives "The Women in His Life" as luminous a performance as it could have. Otto Kruger acts the lawyer with force and persuasion.

News: Surely Otto Kruger is entitled to a better vehicle than this melodramatic thing called "Women in His Life" that MGM has imposed upon him. In this film that fine actor turns out his first strained perforamnce, but he can't be blamed, for any actor would break down under this burden that was written for the screen by F. Hugh Herbert.

Times: Often a poor story is saved partly by efficient players, but it would take far more than the combined talents of Otto Kruger, Una Merkel, Roscoe Karns and C. Henry Gordon to make "The Women in His Life," the present film at the Capitol, at all entertaining. It is a meandering melodrama, spotted with unfortunate bits of comedy, which has been handled in a hopelessly unimaginative fashion.

Herald-Tribune: The picture has quieter and less startling episodes and some of them are sensible and many of them entertaining, but the work as a whole is something of a throwback to a less complex national past. The acting whatever you may think of the story, is realistic and up-to-the-moment.

American: This fictional tale is made exciting and believable by the capable histrionics of Mr. Kruger and the staunch support of the cast.

Mirror: One of the most interesting actors the stage has contributed to the films, Otto Kruger gives an exciting performance in this lurid account of a ruined man. Mr. Kruger performs brilliantly. And he is assisted by an unusually interesting cast, which includes your old friend Ben Lyon, Una Merkel, Isabel Jewell, Roscoe Karns, Irene Hervey, C. Henry Gordon and the Irene Franklin long famed as "Red-Head."

Journal: The romances rather than the legal battles of a famous New York criminal lawyer are related in some detail on the screen of the Capitol Theatre this week.

Supervision

One of the better known producers at one of the major studios called in his favorite agent and frantically begged him to find a good story in a hurry for a certain star. Upon this request the agent asked him what type of story he wanted and the producer replied: "Possibly a comedy, possibly a drama."

Renew Quota Talk In Australian Mart

Sydney.—One result of the big battle being staged between the leading American distributors and the local film buying combine has been a backfire in the shape of renewed agitation for an Australian quota similar to that in England.

Contrarily, though, English distributors are arguing against an Australian quota. They point out that in England the quota held back artistic proggress by encouraging quickie production. Australian producers, they claim, will work ahead faster without the artificial stimulus of a quota.

Lukas' Next at Universal Is 'Women in His Life'

Paul Lukas' next picture for Universal will be "Women in His Life," which will be directed by Edwin Marin and supervised by Edmund Grainger.

Cyril Hume was signed yesterday to write the screen play of this yarn.

Thomas in Florida

Miami, Fla.—Harry Thomas, of First Division Pictures, has arrived here on a ten day trip. Strictly business, for the state right distributor figures on making a tie-up with local producers to handle their pictures.

'CATHERINE THE GREAT' DULL; RADIO 'SUCCESS STORY' A FLOP

Bergner Interests; Fairbanks Jr. Miscast

"CATHERINE THE GREAT"

(United Artists)

Directed by.....Dr. Paul Czinner
Scenario and Dialogue by..Lajos Biro and Arthur Wimperis
Supervised by.....Alexander Korda
Cast: Elizabeth Bergner, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Flora Robson, Gerald duMaurier, Griffith Jones and Diana Napier.

Despite the fact that England has crashed through with the first picture of the year on Catherine of Russia, it will serve only as a very mild and sketchy introduction of that fascinating wench to American audiences. And a pretty unexciting one at that.

In an effort to avoid what everyone already knows about Catherine, they have successfully eliminated anything of interest for a public avid for inside information and the result is a picture full of dull virtues and historical facts (unfortunately whitewashed), completely devoid of dramatic situations and completely lacking in inspiration in the writing, directing and acting.

The picture opens with the betrothal of Catherine to the unwilling Mad Grand Duke Peter. Peter finally consents to marrying Catherine after meeting her informally, but he no sooner decides that he likes her than nasty suspicions creep into what there is of his mind and he promptly leaves her alone on her wedding night and for two years thereafter. Catherine has the full confidence of the Empress Elizabeth and by the time the Empress dies it is Catherine who has won the confidence of all the Russians so that it becomes her duty to rid the people of the mad Peter and declare herself Empress in his stead. According to the picture, Peter's untimely death was something the gal never counted on. And the picture ends with Catherine becoming Empress and nothing much accomplished by way of entertainment.

This production brings a personality before the American public that has long tempted American producers. And that is Elizabeth Bergner as Catherine. The gal is not beautiful, but if she could only get the expression in her face that is so vibrant in her voice all the curiosity about her would be more than justified. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. as the mad Czar has a pretty tough time overcoming a deadly make-up and after that the going is even worse to overcome Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Flora Robson as the Empress Elizabeth, however, gives the only moving performance in the picture and it is a pity that she had to die.

Certainly there is not the writing in this that one has come to expect from Biros and Wimperis, nor has Dr. Czinner been able to give the picture any of those sly touches and genuine feeling that Alexander Korda might have injected into a story that was badly in need of some inspiration. All in all it is pretty dry fare for anyone who has been brought up to believe that Catherine the Great was exciting if nothing more. Exhibitors would do well to watch their step on this one. See it and judge for yourself.

An MGM Record

Lucien Hubbard, the producer, and George Seitz, the director, established some kind of a record at MGM yesterday bringing in "Louisiana" just 14 working days after the cameras started rolling on the first scene. Robert Young, Jean Parker, Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton headed the cast.

Universal to Handle Only Own Product

New York.—Carl Laemmle Sr. declared yesterday that Universal positively will not distribute any pictures other than those made by his own company, with the possible exception of an exceptionally outstanding production that might come along.

Laemmle declared that rumors being passed around to the effect that Universal would distribute outside pictures is the work of people trying merely to illegitimately finance their pictures by the use of Universal's name.

French Want Jobs Saved

Paris.—Frenchmen employed in the film trade have again requested the Minister of Labor to take measures to restrict activities of foreigners in the business here.

The influx of Germans due to the Nazi activity is responsible for the new agitation.

Boehm to Free Lance

His deal with Warners expiring February 19, contract having no option tag on it, David Boehm becomes a free lance writer. Recent negotiations to get a readjustment of his deal went by the board.

Is Ashley LaBriere Here?

A W. D. King, of El Paso, is anxious to reach Ashley LaBriere, last heard of in Hollywood as an actor. The Reporter will be pleased to give Mr. King's address to anyone who has information.

Simmons Finishes Yarn

Michael L. Simmons has finished his original story titled "Cabby," a vehicle for Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, and has been assigned by MGM to do another original story.

'Moulin Rouge' Takes 36G

New York.—"Moulin Rouge" doing big business at the Rivoli here. Receipts for first week estimated at $36,000.

Schenck to Mexico City

Joseph Schenck left yesterday for Mexico City. He will be gone from ten days to two weeks.

In This Case Doug Jr. Is the Success of Pic

"SUCCESS STORY"

(Radio)

Direction .....J. Walter Ruben
Story by.....John Howard Lawson
Adaptation....John Howard Lawson and Howard J. Green
Photography.....H. W. Gerrard
Cast: Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Genevieve Tobin, Frank Morgan, Colleen Moore, Edward Everett Horton, Nydia Westman, Allen Vincent and Henry Kolker.

The Radio picture, "Success Story," belies its title. The story itself is so fundamentally unconvincing and presented with such overemphasis that it is defeated from the start. Besides these handicaps it is blatantly a preachment, with the pill so thinly disguised that it is more apt to promote antagonism than applause.

The only success connected with the picture will go to Douglas Fairbanks Jr., who turns in a performance that, with the exception of some heavy-handed acting towards the end, is a very swell, clever characterization.

He plays the part of the young brother of a gangster. He sees his brother shot down and buried in a gold casket that cost $10,000. From then on he is consumed with an insane fever to make money—to get ahead—to have power. He turns his back on gangsterism because it is too spectacularly dangerous, and chooses to make his money by methods which are at least protected by the dignity of "Big Business."

He becomes extremely wealthy; he wins Genevieve Tobin away from the man who gave him his first job; he double-crosses his friends and forgets Colleen Moore, his childhood sweetheart. He turns his back squarely on love, honesty and loyalty and devotes himself completely and frantically to the gaining of power and more power, money and more money.

The pay-off comes, of course, when he discovers that he is not happy. He attempts suicide, but—

Oh well, the ending of this picture is one of the most unfortunate, inartistic, melodramatic and cheaply sensational sequences perpetrated on the screen for years and years. Across his body, lying prone upon his office floor, march the visions of everyone he has hurt during his mad, cruel scramble after money. He beseeches every one of them to help him ease the pain—he wants to live. And they all turn their backs on him, uttering deep, sepulchral bits of wisdom, such as "You wouldn't help me when I didn't have a crust of bread. Why should I help you now?" It's all just too, too bad.

There are two major bits of improvement that would aid the film. Fairbanks' jump from head of the advertising department to the status of a millionaire is too sudden to be credible, and his reformation at the end is not prepared for.

Fairbanks, as said before, gives a stunning performance. That it is wasted on poor material is unfortunate. Colleen Moore is adequate in her part; Genevieve Tobin plays expertly and intelligently the part of a not too admirable woman; Nydia Westman contributes some rare and distinctive comedy, and Edward Everett Horton, Allen Vincent and Henry Kolker are well cast in small roles.

J. Walter Ruben's direction lags a bit in spots. John Howard Lawson and Howard J. Green adapted the original story, which is by Lawson, and H. W. Gerrard photographed it o.k.

The picture is rather timely, in view of the depression. It may send your audiences out into the night a little happier that money is the least of their worries, but a little sadder because they just wasted some.

Report 'U' Calls Off 'Elizabeth and Mary'

Considerable excitement was created yesterday on the Universal lot when it was reported that Lowell Sherman had walked out as director on "Elizabeth and Mary," the picture slated for Margaret Sullavan.

This rumor was balanced by another statement that the company had called off production on the picture.

Felix Young Back To Columbia Post

Straightening out his spat with the studio, Felix Young has returned to his producer's berth at Columbia. Young will handle "The Party's Over," a play by Daniel Kusel, scripted by S. K. Lauren, as his next. Al Rogell directs. Young produced "Let's Fall in Love" before he left the lot about a month ago.

NRA Not For Censorship Says Sol Rosenblatt

New York.—Sol A. Rosenblatt, speaking at luncheon of National Board of Review, declared that the NRA has no interest in a purely censorship program for the picture business. Other speakers also pointed out that censorship is politically narrow and unintelligent, but agreed that passing resolutions against it is futile.

32 Hour Week Up For Hearing March 5

Washington—The matter of establishing a 32-hour week will come up on March fifth at an open hearing to be held here, according to anouncement by General Johnson. Other phases of the Code will also be discussed. All Code Authorities to attend meeting.

No More Juggling

Washington—Stock market regulatory bills introduced today will make it difficult for motion picture company executives to juggle with securities in their companies.

Straus on Code Authority

Washington — Robert K. Straus, son of the American Ambasador to France, was today appointed a member of the legitimate theatre Code Authority.

Stars Flock To The 'Christina' Opening

The opening last night at the Chinese of "Queen Christina" looked like the good old days when everyone in the business was on hand in soup and fish. That's just what took place last night. Practically every star of any importance in Hollywood was in attendance, and the house was completely sold out.

Thousands jammed the sidewalks and streets about the theatre to get a glimpse of the stars, and they were not disappointed. It was a steady parade of stars before the microphone in the forecourt. Charles Irwin was master of ceremonies for the radio program, with Jimmy Durante, Arthur Jarrett, Shirley Ross, Larry Adler and others pepping up with fun.

Art Directors Out in Force For First Stag of the Year

The Art Directors Section of the Academy turned out in full force last night at the Vendome where the section staged its first "stag" dinner of the year.

The spirit of the revived Academy was bubbling over everywhere, and the Art Directors left the party with renewed enthusiasm and the determination to do their part to make the Academy even stronger than it was in its hey-dey. Robert Edmund Jones was the guest of the evening.

'Stingaree' Starts Monday

With Richard Dix and Irene Dunne in the leads, William Wellman starts shooting "Stingaree" at Radio Monday. Mary Boland, Conway Tearle, George Barraud, Henry Stephenson, Andy Devine and Una O'Connor have been signed for featured spots. David Lewis produces.

Monte Bell to San Antonio

Monte Bell left yesterday for San Antonio to confer with government army officials there on "West Point of the Air," which he is producing for MGM. Script has been written by James McGuinness.

Boehm With Columbia

Columbia has signed David Boehm to fashion an original screen play for "Among the Missing," a title which the studio has on the current program. No players or directors set as yet.

Cyril Hume to 'U'

Cyril Hume swings over to Universal on a ticket set by the Edington and Vincent office to write the screen play for "Frailty," which Edmund Grainger supervises and Edwin Marin directs.

Neal Hart Will Produce

Neal Hart is priming his guns for a return venture in pictures, this time on his own. Famous in western days, he will produce a group of westerns himself. Was absent since 1929.

Breslau Closes at MGM

Lou Breslau is off the MGM payroll, having turned in a treatment with Mike Simmons on "Cabby," a Beery-Cooper production which Harry Rapf supervises.

EXTRAS OUT OF LUCK

taking place, but when asked what the Extra's Committee is doing about it they shrugged shoulders and gave the same answer:

"We cannot do anything until Mrs. Kinney gets back from Sacramento. But we surely will get to them."

Just when this committee will swing into action is the question that is uppermost in the minds of the extra players. Some members of the committee yesterday confirmed The Hollywood Reporter's story that producers are violating the Code by paying the bit players $25 for an entire "bit" with speaking lines, when the intent of the Code is to pay them $25 per day. But they declared that Mrs. Kinney must come back and the committee complete its business of organizing before anything is done. The committee has been in the process of organizing for the past three weeks, and has held two organization meetings.

Extras say they don't care about meetings. What they want is action.

"Mr. Rosenblatt told us that the Code Committee would handle our complaints," one extra said. "They have had a long time and have not shown us anything yet."

Extras want something done about use of "dummies" in place of extras. They want something done about alleged practice of evading the "request" list by means of signing relatives and friends to one day contracts as "actors" and then being used as "extras." Mrs. Kinney will be back next week, according to advices from other committee members.

Phil Rosen's Sisters Sue 'Ambassador'

Charging that they were ejected from the Ambassador Hotel as "objectionable people," Ethel and Effie Rosen, sisters of Phil Rosen, the motion picture director, yesterday filed suit for $2000 damages against the hotel, Ben Frank, the hotel manager, and Eddie Trantow, the house detective, who they say ejected them.

The alleged ejection took place, according to the girls, on January 6 last.

"We had been to the hotel for lunch," explain the girls. "After lunch we sat down in the lobby; in less than five minutes Trantow came along and told us to get out, that our conduct was objectionable, and that if we didn't get out immediately we would be ejected by force. We left, wondering what we had done, as we had been sitting there quietly after eating $3.90 worth of lunch in their dining room."

The suit was filed in municipal court. Attorney M. G. C. Harris is representing the girls.

Connolly Returns Tuesday

Walter Connolly returns to town Tuesday from a three weeks' vacation in the east. While away he attended the funeral of his mother in Cincinnati and took in the opening of "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," in which his wife, Nedda Harrigan, appeared. Connolly will be starred in "Whom the Gods Destroy" as his next at Columbia.

Darmour Pic Delayed

Because Johnny Robinson, the colored youngster in the Mickey McGuire comedies, will not return from Texas until Tuesday, Larry Darmour has been forced to shove back the start of the sixth comedy for Columbia release until February 13. J. A. Duffy directs from a script by Joe Levering.

Bank Plans New Site

The Bank of America has rented the corner of the Prudential lot at Bronson and Melrose and will start construction immediately on a new bank building.

Five Bucks a Reel Set For Indie Producers Levy

The Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, at a meeting held in Nat Levine's offices Thursday night, voted a levy of $5 per reel of negative to defray expenses of the organization. At the same time I. E. Chadwick and J. Boyce-Smith of the Anglo-American Film Company were elected vice presidents. William Berke and Jack Nelson were added to the board of directors. Trem Carr, newly elected president, presided.

'U' Story Editor Sells One at Another Lot

Columbia yesterday purchased "I'll Fix It," an original story by Leonard Spigelgass, and will probably use it as an Elissa Landi and Edmund Lowe vehicle. Sam Jaffe is the associate producer. Spigelgass, who is story head at Universal, wrote the story before he took over his present position.

'The Party's Over' First For Rogell

Al Rogell's first assignment on his return to the Columbia lot is "The Party's Over." He has just finished making "No More Women" at Paramount.

"The Party's Over" is a story by Daniel Kusel, with the screen play by Sam Lauren.

Lederman on McCoy Pic

D. Ross Lederman has been signed by Columbia to direct the next Tim McCoy action picture which starts Monday. Lilian Bond has the feminine lead. This is the sixth of the series of eight Tim McCoy vehicles the studio produces this year.

High Hat Baseball

The Pirates, in training at Paso Robles, are in for a treat. Harry Ruby left yesterday for the ball team's winter quarters and is taking along a valet to help him keep his baseball suits spick and span during the time he practices up with them.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Charles Middleton signed by Paramount for "Murder at the Vanities." Al Kingston handled the deal.

Phyllis Barry, Robert Adair and Katharine Williams set for "Dover Road," Radio.

Lowden Adams added to Columbia's "Whirlpool."

Harold Waldridge signed through Al Kingston for "Manhattan Love Song," Monogram.

Irene Franklin and Jackie Searl added to the cast of "Strictly Dynamite," Radio.

Clarence Muse set through MacQuarrie in "One Man's Woman," at Warners.

Ronnie Crosby into "Sawdust," at Warners, through O'Reilly and Mann.

Richard Tucker for "Show Off," MGM, set by O'Reilly and Mann.

Henry O'Neill, Hobart Cavanaugh, Arthur Vinton, George Cooper and Clarence Muse to "One Man's Woman" at Warners.

The three Brownie Sisters, colored trio, to Monogram's "Loud Speaker."

Leslie Howard's Future Finally Worked Out

Leslie Howard's calendar for the year is mapped out for him. Upon completion of "Human Bondage" at Radio, he returns to Warners to take up his long term ticket, going into "British Agent," "Anthony Adverse" and "Tale of Two Cities."

All other outside deals for the player are cold, according to M. C. Levee, his manager.

Change Acad. Dinner Date

The Academy's annual awards banquet, which had been scheduled this year for March 15, has been postponed to March 16. Norman Manning, of the Fox studios, was added to the awards committee, with his special duty the handling of the details of the banquet.

Johnston in Hays Post

At the meeting of the studio publicity directors' committee at the Hays office yesterday, John LeRoy Johnston was elected chairman to succeed Arch Reeve, who has held the post for the past three years.

Mono. Buys McGuire Yarn

Monogram has purchased a William Anthony McGuire original, "Money Means Nothing," and has assigned Frances Hyland to write the screen play under the supervision of Ben Verschleiser.

Harold Hopper Back

Harold Hopper, producer of Mayfair pictures, returned Thursday by plane from New York. He was accompanied by Larry Darmour on the return trip.

Lesser Signs Searl

Sol Lesser yesterday signed Jackie Searl for the role of Horace Clay, the second lead in "Peck's Bad Boy." Eddie Cline directs and Jackie Cooper has the lead.

Three swell stories head the March issue of New Movie. They are "The First Soviet Star—Anna Sten," by Edwin C. Hill; "I Call Dad 'Pete,'" by Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and a very amusing yarn on Kay Francis by Elsie Janis called "Class with a Capital Kay."

The other stories in the mag are worth reading, too, but the three mentioned above are the best.

Wallace Beery's life story starts in this issue. It is by Eric L. Ergenbright. And Joan Crawford gives an extremely frank interview to Nanette Kutner on "My Mistakes."

Dorothy Manners has "The Love Story of Gary Cooper"; Ramon Romero writes of "Hollywood's Roaring 40's"; "Once an Acrobat," by Harry B. Blair, is about Cary Grant, and Henry Willson writes about "Hollywood's Younger Set." Grace Kingsley has her usual "Play Time in Movieland" department.

Picture Parade is not fundamentally a fan magazine. It comes in a class all its own. What it is, is a darn swell literary finger pointing at the parade of current pictures.

The magazine carries nothing in the way of reading matter but reviews, and they are crisp, caustic and clever. They call a picture a picture and a lemon a lemon, and no matter what the review is about it is fine, entertaining, amusing reading.

The magazine also features good, live stills, with captions that, at times, border on the brilliant.

Picture Parade will be published ten times a year, and nobody who has not been chosen as a "subscriber" can buy it. It is not on sale anywhere. The idea is that the advertisers are the "sponsors" of the magazine, choosing its readers in order to guarantee a selected, concentrated circulation in desirable zones in the large cities.

Gordon's Next Opens Soon

New York.—Max Gordon, producer of the season's big hits, will stage his next play, "The Shining Hour," at the Booth next Tuesday. Keith Booth is the author.

WEEK'S BUSINESS ON B'WAY HITTING BOTH EXTREMES

New York.—Picture business was spotty on the week just closing in New York. In view of the weather, "Nana" looks great with a net of $103,900 at the Music Hall, but against this the Paramount will only show $42,500 on "All of Me." The big Capitol is taking something of a licking when it only checks up $26,000 on "You Can't Buy Everything." Pictures that are hitting average, but nothing to boast about, are "Hi Nellie," with $22,000 at the Strand, and "I've Got Your Number" at the Roxy doing $28,000.

"Devil Tiger" doing $11,500 at the Rialto in its first three days is really a surprise for this house, and against that you can take "Frontier Marshal," hitting below indie figures with only $5,000 at the Mayfair. "Fashions of 1934" in the second week of its run got $5,000 at the Hollywood.

Para. Shifts Slate To Help Columbia

Paramount has shifted its production schedule on the Bing Crosby picture "We're Not Dressing" in order that Carole Lombard may finish on February 18 to swing over to Columbia the following day on "Twentieth Century" opposite John Barrymore.

The "We're Not Dressing" company leaves for Catalina Island tomorrow for location work.

Pascal Moves into 'U' On 'Human Side' Script

Ernest Pascal has been signed by Universal on a one-picture deal to write the screen play of "Human Side," which Eddie Buzzell will direct under the supervision of Eph Asher.

Gertrude Purcell was on this script, but asked to be released from her contract because her ideas for the story did not coincide with Asher's.

Ben Stoloff Back Ready To Start Work for Foy

Ben Stoloff arrived back in Hollywood yesterday, after a month in New York.

The Foy studio comes to life again with two pictures slated to go into work immediately. First will be "Murder in the Theater." William Jacobs will write the screen play.

Hopton Closes Two Pic Deal at Warners

Russell Hopton has been signed by Warners on a two-picture deal. The player goes into a featured spot in the James Cagney-Joan Blondell picture "Without Honor," after which he goes into the Pat O'Brien picture "One Man's Woman."

Hancock Goes Straight

Abandoning motion pictures, Peter Hancock has turned photographer, opening a shop at Hollywood and Vine. He was an actor-producer before his commercial venture.

Washington to report to President Roosevelt.

And ye gods, and little fishes—based on what we have seen with our own eyes—we hate to think about what a fellow named Rosenblatt is reporting to another fellow named General Johnson, who in turn, as we understand it, reports to a plain, ordinary American citizen named Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Gleckler and Barrat Switch Posts at WB

Robert Gleckler arrives in Hollywood today to begin his term contract at Warners. He was slated to play the heavy in "Return of the Terror" as his initial assignment, but the studio made a switch and assigned him to replace Robert Barrat in "One Man's Woman" instead. Barrat goes into Gleckler's spot in "Return of the Terror," with Mary Astor and Lyle Talbot in the top spots.

Mono. Assigns Two

Monogram has assigned two stories to producers for future shooting. Ben Verschleiser handles "Money Means Nothing," which has been scripted by Frances Hyland. Paul Malvern has been assigned to handle "Border Patrol," an airplane story by Stuart Anthony, who is also writing the script.

Fox Puts One Over In Danish Market

Copenhagen.—Fox has slipped into the market here with "Cavalcade" in the midst of the war over sound patent rights and the explanation is that the company transferred the sound track to a non-conflicting sound track in America especially for the Danish market.

Dispute is between the American sound outfits, Western Electric and RCA and the domestic patentees and concerns, principally features in connection with noiseless recording.

Warners Working Out Deal on Seymour-Presnell

Warners and James Seymour are in a huddle over a new deal for the supervisor.

Although the contract with Seymour does not expire for several months, company is working out a new ticket which is to keep him on the payroll on a long termer in place of the single year called for in his present ducat. Warners are doing the same with Robert Presnell, as reported several days ago here.

'U' Continues Own Setup In Belgian Market

Brussels.—Charles N. Weill, years ago with Universal in Albany, N. Y., is the new manager in Brussels, succeeding Ferdinand Bourland. The appointment kills rumors that Universal might abandon the Belgian office and sell product outright for this territory.

Week's Publications Not So Hot To The Reviewer

After carefully weighing this week's talked-about books, one must necessarily come to the conclusion that better ones are coming than those that are currently engaging the reading public.

Note these impending publications: "Go Into Your Dance," by Bradford Ropes, author of "42nd Street" and "Stage Mother"; "Mad Hatter's Village," by Mary Cavendish Gore, one of the extraordinary books of the year; "Treeless Eden," by Francine Findley; "Smirt: An Urbane Nightmare," by James Branch Cabell; "Valour," by Warwick Deeping; "Nine Etched From Life," by Emil Ludwig, and an autobiography of that great American doctor, Bailey K. Ashford, called "Soldier in Science."

Lady Eleanor Smith also has a new novel coming out called "Seven Trees," and Irvin S. Cobb will blossom forth with "Murder Day by Day."

One of the news items of the week is the $2,500 International Prize Travel Book Contest conducted by Robert M. McBride and Company, the Magazine TRAVEL, and George G. Harrap and Company of London. The contest is open to all explorers, archaeologists, naturalists, anthropologists, journalists, big-game hunters, deep-sea sailors, scientists, "and all others who have traveled and have something unusual to say about life on any part of the globe." Better not send in any technical works aimed at the special student. They aren't eligible. From 50,000 words to 200,000 words is the required length. Contest closes November 30, 1934. Send entries to PRIZE TRAVEL BOOK COMPETITION, Robert McBride and Company, 4 West 16th Street, New York.

Now, for the current books:

"The Epic of Captain Scott"
Author.....Martin Lindsay
Publisher ..... Putnam's

The story of Robert Falcon Scott's tremendous drive through that icy hell to the South Pole in 1911 is told with dramatic caution by Martin Lindsay.

This book, of only 165 pages, is absolutely stirring and it stands as a very definite and sincere tribute to the men who lost their lives while proving, as Scott said in the note found on his frozen body, "that Englishmen can endure hardships, help one another, and meet death with as great a fortitude as ever in the past."

"The State Versus Elinor Norton"
Author.....Mary Roberts Rinehart
Publisher.....Farrar and Rinehart

Mrs. Rinehart, who is to the literary world what Rachel Crothers is to the stage, has written a new serious romantic novel with just an overtone of mystery.

When the story opens, Elinor Norton is being brought to trial in Montana for the murder of Blair Leighton, her English lover. Carroll Warner, a lawyer who has always been in love with Elinor, tells us the story. Mrs. Rinehart is, as usual, the intelligent and deft story teller, and this book is tricky, exciting and vivid.

"The Innocent Wife"
Author ..... Colette
Publisher.....Farrar and Rinehart

Colette, whose pen is deadlier than any male's, has written another devastating character study of a stupid, average wife.

Poor Annie! She gets a raw deal at the stiletto of Colette's wit. Annie's tragedy is the loss of her faith in her husband, Alain, and Colette's genius lies in the sophisticated havoc in which she involves Annie through the insinuations of Annie's catty friends.

This is an intense, brittle and devastating story.

"Roman Round-About"
Author.....Amelia Posse-Brazdova
Publisher ..... Dutton

This Swedish woman, whose literary charm and printed wit were evident in her other book, "Sardinian Side Show," has written now the story of her life in the Czech colony in Rome during the war.

She tells how her household was under suspicion; how she watched the German airplanes fly over Rome; how her children came, and how the American Red Cross helped them when all were stricken by influenza.

This is a human, whole-hearted, warm document.

"The Manuscript Murder"
Author.....George Limnelius
Publisher.....Doubleday, Doran

A new idea in murder mysteries . . . the solution is written by a mystery story writer, who is a friend of Sir Horton, the murdered man, and the person who commits the crime, Major Swayne, even before the murder is committed.

The characterizations are good and the whole thing well worth reading.

"Excursion to Lilliput"
Author .....Lewis Gibbs
Publisher ..... Appleton

Hanging upon the thinnest of threads is this book directly in contrast with the above. It is the story of one day in the life of an English boy. The whole thing rests upon the "borrowing" of a gold pencil belonging to his father, and never in all the years to come will the boy suffer such suspense as he felt during that one day at school when he was unable to find the pencil.

The story is delicate, but absorbing.

"The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan"
Author.....James T. Farrell
Publisher ..... Vanguard

Profane, cruel, lewd, this book is the saga of a Chicago boy who, an offspring of the slums, became alley-minded in his own distressing fashion.

Dreaming of the time when he would be a great hero, he expresses himself in the meanwhile by participating in vicious cruelties, small crimes and backyard sex.

Disgusting, pathological . . . but convincing.

"Moscow, 1911-1933"
Author.....Allan Monkhouse
Publisher.....Little, Brown and Co.

One of the most important books that has yet appeared on Russia is this account of Monkhouse's sojourn in that country, during which time he worked in an advisory engineering capacity aimed at the industrial upbuilding of Russia after the war.

The book contains a vivid account of his experiences and the brilliant comments of a man trained to observation.

"Josephine, Wife of Napoleon"
Author.....E. A. Rheinhardt
Publisher.....Alfred A. Knopf

The glamorous figure of Josephine, beloved of Napoleon, becomes a little tarnished in this book, and all her romantic traditions are blown to smithereens. Every legendary romanticism that the world has clung to about Josephine is brilliantly punctured by Mr. Rheinhardt.

She loved parties and Paris and refused to join Napoleon in Italy, saying she was pregnant. When that plea lost its power, having cried "Wolf, wolf!" too often, she finally went, but was accompanied by a young officer named Hippolyte Charles, who helped her while away her time.

She bought houses that took all of Napoleon's money to pay for; she had her own private zoo, her artificial lake, her hothouses, her dairy for making her own Swiss cheese. She bought jewels that she lost, and dresses that she never wore. And Napoleon paid and paid.

Contrary to romantic tradition, Josephine died of septic angina, rather than of a broken heart.

"The Spider in the Cup"
Author .....Joseph Shearing
Publisher—
Harrison Smith and Robert Haas

You might think that an old castle, a degenerate heir and a poisoned rosebush will make a mystery a rather tawdry, average affair. But Mr. Shearing, because he concentrates on the psychological tragedy of Lavinia Pierrepont, rather than relying on his old and frayed props, has written a book as horribly moving as any you will ever want to read.

The author preaches the weight of known heredity over environment. The thing is creepy and haunting.

"Silent World"
Author .....Florence Riddell
Publisher.....J. B. Lippincott Co.

The complete loneliness of the deaf is the subject of Miss Riddell's psychological narrative.

Christopher Frankland, deafened by an explosion when he was three, grew up to fall in love with a girl who had attended his school. Her name was Dawn, and she had been deaf since birth. They were married and for a while were completely happy together in their own silent world; then Christopher regained his hearing through another shock, and Dawn found that she could not share his new life. Another woman comes between them, and in handling this situation Miss Riddell does a grand piece of work.

"The Native's Return"
Author.....Louis Adamic
Publisher ..... Harpers

Louis Adamic had a remarkable and fascinating experience. And so he wrote about it, and the book is new, warm and human.

Mr. Adamic, who came to this country at the age of 14 from Slovenia, which is now part of Jugo-Slavia, and who gained success in the literary world, winning the Guggenheim fellowship, went back to visit his family and his country, taking his American wife with him. He had been away for nineteen years. He had forgotten the language, the customs. Everything was strange to him.

He saw the house where he was born, 600 years old now; he saw his people absolutely uninfluenced by modern civilized complexities; he saw how happy they were and how they laughed all the time, and the laughter was contagious. It absolutely dominates the first part of the book.

The second part is more or less of a travelogue, fascinating but lacking the laughter. His country, under King Alexander, is apparently in a bad way.

Gossip of Authors

In the future, all English and American editions of the works of George Bernard Shaw will be issued simultaneously. Next will be his three latest plays, "Village Wooing," "On the Rocks" and "Too True to Be Good," all three to be published in one volume by Dodd, Mead and Company.

John Dos Passos is finishing "In All Countries," which comes out on March 29. He is now in Washington.

The March Red Book features Joseph Louis Vance's last book, called, appropriately enough, "The Last Prowl." However, when Lippincott releases it, it will be under the original title, "The Street of Strange Faces.'

The New Republic offers a prize of $25 for the best poem on this subject: "The Reichstag Fire Trial." No restrictions as to form or length, but poems will receive happier attention if they are less than forty lines. Address 421 West 21st street. Contest closes April 15.

Another lecturer about to storm our shores is Jeffery Farnol, who has planned a tour from Omaha to New York.

Florence Riddell, who wrote "The Silent World," reviewed this week, writes every word in long hand and revises her books at least five times before allowing her publisher to see them. She writes all night long and sleeps all day.

The Stanford University Press has just published the "Autobiography of John Keats," by Earle Vonard Weller, who has put the book into the form of first person narrative.

There are two new magazines started in England patterned after "Story." They are "Lovat Dickson's Magazine," edited by P. Gilchrist Thompson, and "New Stories," edited in Oxford by Edward J. O'Brien and five English authors.

Did you ever stop to realize that James Joyce never got a cent for the thousands of bootleg copies of his novel, "Ulysses," that were sold in this country before the ban was lifted?

Marie Belloc Lowndes says that people find it hard to believe that beautiful women can be killers. Which is why most of the murderers in her stories are women. Her next, "Another Man's Wife," will be brought out in April by Longmans.

"Anthony Adverse" still heads the best seller list, with "The Thin Man," "The Mother," "Men Against the Sea," "Work of Art," "Skin and Bones," "The Cadaver of Gideon Wyck" and "Sea Level" keeping it company.

DU PONTS SEEK CONTROL

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•LADIES and gentlemen of this motion picture industry, today's sermon will concern itself with Mr. George Raft.

And the object of using Raft for today's chat is to remind you or acquaint you with the advance this ARTIST has made in pictures during the past two years of his employment at Paramount and elsewhere, and to comment on the reasons for that advancement.

Raft, as you all know, had his only "show schooling" dancing in the floor shows or the backrooms of New York speakeasies and cafes, graduating from that into a "greater" profession, in which he was brought to Hollywood in the caravan of the late Texas Guinan.

Georgie knew the limitations of that "greater" profession, and once he got a look at the studios, felt the heat of the studio lamps and heard the grind of the camera, decided that he was going into pictures for better or worse. This decision gave him more than two years of idleness until he was selected by Rowland Brown for a bit in a Fox picture and later an important role in the Howard Hughes "Scarface," which brought him to the notice of Paramount.

Paramount gave him one of those "nickel" contracts right at the height of the gangster craze and "Raftie" went to the top of actors in their creation of the tough boys of gangdom. Most of the mob in Hollywood, including this writer, were of the opinion that once audiences grew tired of pictures of that type George would be washed up, because he could not act. In that we were all wrong, and for the reason that we did not know Raft.

There has never been a person with a greater ambition than that of George Raft, and being of a gambling nature he has and will continue to stake his all on that ambition. The result is that Raft stands today as one of the best ACTORS on the screen, and given the opportunity in good stories will eventually become one of the greatest stars in this business. He has a tremendous following now, but nothing to what he will have, because he

RKO Head-Anthony Split on NBC Views

The present visit of M. H. Aylesworth to Hollywood is more in the interest of the local NBC situation than it is for Radio Pictures.

Aylesworth and Earle Anthony, the present holder of the NBC franchise here, have been at sword's points for many months. Anthony doesn't like the way NBC has treated him and Aylesworth is impatient regarding the squawks of Anthony.

Most of the trouble has been occasioned by the broadcasting of "Holly-

Wallace and Erpi Talking Big Deal

New York.—Richard Wallace, Hollywood director, and Electrical Research Products are talking a big deal, that when completed will provide for Wallace producing a series of features here at the Astoria studio with Erpi's financing.

Should this deal go through, it is understood that arrangements will be made with Paramount for release of the picture.

Aubrey Smith Injured

C. Aubrey Smith had his right hand severely lacerated by a pet German police dog which he owned. Dog went beserk Friday night when the actor returned home from the "Queen Christina" preview and found the animal with her leg painfully trapped in an iron gate.

Now Have Working Control in Loew-Fox; Aiming Toward Warner-Para. For Big Merger

New York.—The Du Ponts—the real monumentally wealthy Du Ponts, not merely the section of the family interests represented in Du Pont raw stock—are aiming towards control of the motion picture industry. Already they have a big share of it in their pocket—what with working control of Loews and Fox, a tie-in with the old Pathe company, and heavy entrenchments in the stock of Warner and Paramount.

There has been a war of the giants in motion picture stocks for some weeks past. Financial circles have been

Plays Die Like Flies On N. Y.'s Rialto

New York.—The undertaker was busy among the Broadway plays Saturday night, even with some that had received what might be called "fairly good"-reactions from the New York critics.

Closings for the night included, in addition to Katharine Hepburn's "The Lake," already recorded, "Mackerel Skies," "The Joyous Season," "Come of Age," and "A Hat, a Coat and a Glove." All have been reviewed in The Reporter.

Whale on Way Here

London.—James Whale left Saturday for Hollywood and Universal.

Alimony Headache Chases Laurel Away

Hal Roach has the biggest headache in town today with Stan Laurel definitely making plans to leave this country the end of this month, due to alimony trouble, and splitting the comedy team of Laurel and Hardy which has been a big box office winner for the producer for some time. Laurel has offers to make personal appearances in London and other European cities which he plans to accept.

Roach, it is reported, will try to build up a new comedy team with Babe Hardy and Patsy Kelly.

Bogue Sinks $100,000 On 'Queer People'

New York.—It is going to cost Galen Bogue $100,000 to find if "Queer People," the inside story of the movies, belongs on the stage. He is shooting that amount on a cast of forty people, very expensive stage settings and novel equipment for scene changing.

Eileen Percy Gets Raise

Eileen Percy has been granted an increase in alimony by Superior Court from her husband, Ulrich Bush, MGM unit manager. At the same time a motion by Bush for the custody of their child was denied.

New York—William K. Howard left for the Coast yesterday. Director spent a little less than a week here.

RADIO HEADS TRYING TO GET PRESENT PROGRAM SET

J. R. McDonough and B. B. Kahane, assisted from a listening vantage point by M. H. Aylesworth, are trying to get the remainder of this year's program of pictures set, before even thinking about the revamping of the studio, and the new policies that are to be instituted.

Radio has between 14 and 16 pictures to make before late spring and there is too little material in any branch of the production outfit to meet that demand right at this time. Accordingly McDonough and Kahane are trying to hold everything off until that group is set and giving little or no attention to the sixty or more

THE LOW DOWN

Latest person to "go Hollywood," as they laughingly call it, is George White. And from all reports the "Scandals" picture has GOT to be good to keep up with the wonder-producer's own opinion of himself. Accustomed to "making" stars, Mr. White refused to have Lilian Harvey as the star in his picture and chose to give Alice Faye the leading role. Which is fine, because it started a lot of arguments as to whether that sort of thing could be done in pictures as it's done on the stage. In fact, it was such a good note that a magazine writer was assigned to interview Mr. White on the subject and write an article about it. So the writer called Mr. White for an appointment and was told that he was very busy and would call her back. About five days later she finally called him back, because she had to have the article finished by the end of the week, and by that time Mr. White had made up his mind that he didn't want anyone to write his publicity for him—he'd do it himself some time, because he does everything else himself, from writing and directing to casting about.

Practically everyone in Hollywood showed up for the Garbo opening EXCEPT Garbo and Gilbert. That Torres-Ames foursome were there together and Lupe and Johnny decided to appear in public again together and there were Eleanor Holm and Art Jarrett and Jean Harlow in an "out fit" and Ann Harding with a stranger in town and Alice Brady and Salka Viertel and Dorothea Wieck (who would only allow one picture to be taken), and Randy Scott taking good care of Kitty Gillian, the Fox importation he met on the boat coming back, and Mae Clarke minus Sidney Blackmer and plus Leo Morrison.

It's just as well that Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill are coming back together, because sending cables to each other almost proved tragic. On his way to London Cary cabled Virginia from the boat, "Distracted and bored," and poor Virginia was in a dither when she received it, because by the time it finally reached her it read, "Attraction on board."

Strand Theatre

World-Telegram: A rollicking and exciting frolic, "Hi, Nellie," is one of the best of all the film sagas about that apparently everlasting romantic, the newspaper man. It pictures him accurately enough, catches his talk and knows the twists of character which make him forever think of a story first and himself later. A lusty spoof as well as an exciting melodrama, it is a rare combination—one that is conducive to fast and diverting amusement. Mervyn LeRoy has done a fine piece of direction for this.

Herald-Tribune: So much expertness of treatment has gone into the playing and production of the film that it seems a great pity that the result is merely a routine sort of melodrama. Mr. Muni handles his part with attractive credibility. The supporting cast is likewise helpful.

Post: The picture has a certain vigor and dash, but its underworld stuff is overdrawn and outmoded. Nor does Paul Muni make an impressive figure comically, dramatically or journalistically. Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks, Berton Churchill and others appear in the supporting cast.

Sun: The Warners, those masters of melodrama, have turned out another of their rapid-fire, high-pressure newspaper yarns and registered another sure hit. It is a comedy, a hilarious galloping comedy with its background one of those crazy, unreal, delightful newspaper offices that Hollywood still hopes may exist somewhere.

American: The picture is a pretty mixture of comedy and melodrama, with one supplementing the other in fast, actionful sequences building suspensefully, excitingly to a slam-bang climax. The story provides the star with opportunity for further exhibition of his talent as a creator and portrayer of character, and in a role which offers substance in which to sink his histrionic teeth, Muni gives one of the best exhibitions.

News: "Hi, Nellie" will be a treat for Paul Muni fans, as it gives him a chance to display his versatility as an actor. The film starts out with a certain lightness, but takes quite a serious turn as it moves along. Mervyn LeRoy has directed a film that is slow getting started, but when it does pick up speed it holds your interest to the fadeout.

Col. Wants Chinese For Capra Picture

Columbia is trying to get Sid Grauman to put the Clark Gable-Claudette Colbert picture, "It Happened One Night," into the Chinese theatre following the run of the Garbo picture "Queen Christina."

The RKO Hillstreet theatre, which has bought the Columbia product for a first run in Los Angeles and has booked the picture, is a bit peeved at this idea and will likely put up a big squawk if Columbia succeeds in putting the picture into the Chinese.

Start on 'Deacon' Script

Clarence Marks and Earl Snell have been assigned by Universal to write the screen play of "Alias the Deacon," which will be directed by Kurt Neuman and supervised by Edmund Grainger. Negotiations are still on for Guy Kibbee for the top spot.

WANTS TO BE ON TOP and will be on top.

Raft is a very serious person, spends a lot of his time in study; reads anything and everything that will advance his ambition, seeks the company and conversation of individuals that will further his work and does more work during a 24-hour period than any other person in this industry, because he wants to succeed and HE WILL SUCCEED even far beyond his present success.

Wurtzel to Handle Second Rogers Pic

Sol Wurtzel has scheduled a second Will Rogers production for his unit at Fox and will place it into work following "Merry Andrew," star's first.

Producer has set John Ford to direct the as yet untitled picture and has signed Dudley Nichols to write it. Nichols handed in his screen play on "Grand Canary" to Jesse Lasky Saturday, moving back to the Western avenue plant today.

Mono. in Trouble on Lead for 'Jane Eyre'

Monogram is finding it tough to get a leading woman for "Jane Eyre" and is reported ready to shelve the production unless a satisfactory player is obtained this week.

Deal to get Heather Angel from Fox went flat Saturday.

MacRae Seeks Comic Strip

Henry MacRae, in charge of Universal serial productions, is negotiating with Hal Forrest for the rights to his comic strip, "Tailspin Tommy." MacRae hopes to base his next story on the characters of the strip which is syndicated throughout the country.

Air Plugs for 'Lost Patrol'

Radio has set a series of ether plugs for "Lost Patrol" this week, first two being an interview with Victor McLaglen by Eleanor Barnes and an hour of sound track from the picture via KNX, both Thursday night.

The Invisible Man

On the strength of his performance in the one minute sequence in which he appears hidden in a telephone booth in the Warner production "Hi Nellie," Paramount has signed Sidney Skolsky to appear in "Murder at the Vanities." This time Sklosky will hide in a vanity case.

London Business Hits High Mark

London.—Business in the first run theatres here went way over the top last week. The neighborhoods and the provinces also reported record gatherings.

The newcomers of the week in the big houses are "Fugitive Lovers" at the Empire, "Catherine the Great" at the Leicester Square, "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen" at the Plaza.

The holdovers are "Little Women," doing a record business, "Invisible Man" and "Duck Soup."

'U' vs. Firestone Tonight

None other than the champion Firestone five have been selected by Universal's basketball outfit, under the direction of Jack Pierce, for tonight's opponent. The game will be played at the Hollywood Athletic Club. Gloria Stuart, George O'Brien, Andy Devine are among the rooters.

applications that have been phoned, wired or written in for production berths at that plant.

Of all the stories going around the town about this or that producer moving his desk over to Radio, the moves of William LeBaron and Charles R. Rogers seem most definite inasmuch as it is known that Radio wants Le Baron and his Paramount contract is up in May. The same goes with Rogers, who has around six pictures to complete with Paramount before he can make a move.

CAMERA UNION ON WARPATH OVER 'DISLOYAL' MEMBERS

Plenty of Expulsions Said To Be Planned

A number of Hollywood cameramen who played an active role in breaking the late cameramen's strike will find themselves expelled from the local IATSE organization in the near future, according to authentic information that has leaked out during the past few days.

Not only will they be expelled from Local 659, but their names will be broadcast to every labor organization in the country that is a part of the American Federation of Labor, with the statement that these men were "Judases" in the ranks of organized labor when the test time came.

The expulsions, as a matter of fact, have already started. According to cameramen on the inside of IATSE affairs, one first cameraman has already been dropped. While his name would not be given out at present, it was learned that he was one of the organizers of the local union.

"Why, he even wrote a great part of the by-laws for our organization," explained one cameraman. "He was one of our first officers, and in appreciation of his great work in the forming of the union he was made a life member of the union by unanimous vote of the entire membership and was presented with a gold badge of membership which cost the union about $90.

"Every man has a right to his personal opinion, but the union men feel that when a man has played such an important role in the forming and development of an organization as this man did, he should not desert his fellows the second day of trouble as he did in the late strike. We learned that he not only deserted us, but went to work, not making pictures, but on the telephone attempting to get other union men to quit the fight. That was too much.

"When our reorganization is completed there will be a number of surprises, for there will be other men who will find themselves on the outside looking in. We have had a quiet investigation of their activities under way for a long time. We will be sure of our facts before we act. And we are sure of some who eventually will be sorry for what they did."

Go Strong for Personals On 'Lost Patrol' Debut

Reginald Denny and Boris Karloff left for San Francisco to make personal appearances at the Golden Gate theatre today and tomorrow in conjunction with Radio's "Lost Patrol," in which they appear. Wallace Ford and Victor McLaglen made an appearance there on the opening day last week.

Rest for John Lodge

John David Lodge, having received his okey from Paramount to leave, left last night with his wife for New York by boat. He will return to Hollywood the end of March.

Pardon, Mr. Mayo

The Hollywood Reporter:

Your statement as to my walking out on "The Key" at Warners is untrue. I have been confined to my bed for the past three days with ptomaine poisoning.

Will you kindly correct the statement?

ARCHIE MAYO.

Sullavan's Next To Be 'Little Man' Pic

While no official statement was forthcoming from Universal officials, those in the know at the Universal City lot, say that the studio has decided definitely to start Margaret Sullavan in "Little Man, What Now," as her next picture, with Frank Borzage at the megaphone.

As reported in Saturday's Hollywood Reporter, they are dropping the "Elizabeth and Mary" picture, which was to have been a costume affair, and her second Universal production.

Kelly Out, 'U' Puts Pryor In 'I'll Tell the World'

Negotiations with Twentieth Century for the loan of Paul Kelly going cold, Universal today pushes Roger Pryor into the role for which the player was wanted in "I'll Tell The World."

Story gets under way today with Lee Tracy and Gloria Stuart in top brackets under Edward Sedgwick's direction. Lincoln Quarberg wrote the story.

Universal has offered Lowell Sherman the direction of the Elmer Rice play, "Left Bank," and is waiting on his decision before proceeding with the production. Rice is slated to return to Hollywood late in March to write the screen play.

Cordonas Tagged by WB

The noted aerial troupe known as "The Flying Cordonas" were signed Saturday by Warners for the Joe E. Brown production, "Sawdust." Troupe previously made a short for Pete Smith and are famed for their dare-deviltry on the trapeze.

Date 'Palooka' in N. Y.

New York.—Tentative dating has Eddie Small's production of "Palooka" following "Moulin Rouge" into the Rivoli. The Small picture got a great response from exhibitors over the country after the trade showings February 6.

Carroll Chaperoned

The beautiful Madeleine Carroll, British cinema star on a loan here to Fox, is being chaperoned around the town by her husband, Philip Astley, who by the way, is one of the richest men in England.

Norma Too 'Bossy,' So British Pic Off

London.—The British picture, "Somehow Good," that was to be made by British International and co-starring Norma Talmadge and Thomas Meighan, is cold, with Talmadge on her way back to America and Meighan looking around for another assignment.

B.I.P. and Norma could not get together on the story changes that Miss Talmadge wanted, and too, they would not give in to the demands the feminine star insisted on, for the right to an okay on everything.

Warners Close Loan Deal For Para's Charlie Ruggles

Warners got a commitment Saturday from Paramount for the loan of Charles Ruggles for the starring assignment in "Friends of Mr. Sweeny," which Sam Bischoff supervises. It is in exchange for Warren William, who goes into "Cleopatra" for DeMille.

'Nell Gwyn' Starts Soon

London—Just to add to the cycle of costume spectacles being produced in all countries, British and Dominions announce that they will very soon put into production "Nell Gwyn," with Anna Neagle playing Nell. Cedric Hardwicke will appear opposite. Herbert Wilcox will direct.

Nat Ferber on MGM Yarn

MGM Saturday signed Nat J. Ferber to write the script of "Stalling Thru Life," which will have Franchot Tone in the lead. This is the first scenario writing job for Ferber, who is a well known Hearst feature writer. Jerry Horwin handled the deal.

Select 'Op. 13' Song

Team of Burton Lane and Harold Adamson have sold the song, "Hell Bent for Heaven" to MGM for use in the Marion Davies vehicle, "Operator 13." Chorus of 30 negro voices will sing it.

Berke Moves to Pathe Lot

William Berke moves today to the RKO-Pathe lot from the General Service Studios. Berke, who is finishing a short now, will start soon on the first of a series of six features.

Rave Over Late Disney

New York—It must be good—Walt Disney's latest "Silly Symphony"—because United Artists home office has decided on a special intensive advertising campaign on this shiort.

Bob North Assigned

Columbia has assigned Robert North to supervise the Carole Lombard picture which the studio is preparing. Roland Pertwee, English writer, scripts.

Doris Anderson presented her husband, Anthony Jowett, with a baby girl at the Good Samaritan Hospital last Thursday night.

YESTERDAY IN New York

The cocktail bars around town still stacking them up and in. The latest to hit the town and one that is visited at least once a day by the "who's who" is The Ritz. Of course, it is at the Ritz. . . . The atmosphere at the Chatham is changed weekly through the drawings of Soglow and his Little King. There are a new set each week so the mob can have a new laugh. . . . Why has Hollywood missed this cocktail craze or have none of those otherwise enterprising liquor merchants on the coast thought of that idea?

Moss Hart is leaving for Palm Springs Wednesday with George S. Kaufman to complete a play. And poor Moss was so buried in grief due to the absence of Clifton Webb from "As Thousands Cheer" (in bed with the flu) that he had to throw a big farewell party for the ladies of the ensemble of that show, at which he gathered most of his (more or less) literary friends. . . . And the Clifton Webb angle and his sickness is a bit funny, for "Cliffie" is also giving a party Tuesday night—a Flu Party.

The Mayfair party Saturday night was quite gay even though most of the regulars have quit these Arctic regions for the warm breezes of Palm Beach. Among the others spotted at the Ritz affair were the Ricardo Cortezes, who are heading west Monday; Mary Brian, Jacqueline Logan, who has changed so much it is difficult to recognize her; Weldon Hepburn, the Clark Gables along with Richard Watts, who is trailing around with Beth Leary these nights; Bryan Foys (nee Thelma Chrysler), Harry Evans, Ben Finney and Ernest Truex, who had his thirtieth opening on Broadway with "Sing and Whistle" the same night.

AMERICAN DISTRIBS WAGING WAR ON AUSTRALIAN COMBINE

Gov't Steps In With Own Investigation

Sydney.

Last year's film war between distributors and the combine (Greater Theatres Corporation) has broken out again with a vengeance. This time the rift has become bigger than ever involving widespread ramifications throughout the entire trade. Sydney papers have been playing it up as front page news over several days. The trouble looms so large that it looks as if the Government will be called in to settle the squabble. Even so both sides are hardly likely to get satisfaction.

The dispute has arisen over the attempt of General Theatres Corporation (comprising Union Theatres Ltd., Hoyts Ltd., and Fox Film Corporation) to break the "blind booking" contract system demanded by the distributors. American film companies are endeavoring to beat the "combine" (who control over 200 theatres) by "muscling in" with theatres of their own for release of their own films. Paramount, to some extent, have already followed Fox in this direction. It is now announced that MGM will build their own theatre in Sydney. Universal is getting in on the ground floor also by planning, through D. Martin (a leading Universal executive) to refashion the Rialto by next Easter and at the same time is getting ready to build another theatre. Their reason for so doing is to provide Universal with an outlet for a number of Australian films they are releasing (including all of Efftee studios, Melbourne) as they cannot come to terms with G.T.C.

Universal product during the latter part of 1933 has been almost entirely crowded out of G.T.C.'s Sydney theatres at any rate. MGM, Paramount and Warners couldn't come to terms with G.T.C. for release of their 1934 product and have been selling direct to independent exhibitors.

Chas. Monro (managing director of G.T.C.), is quoted as saying that this new policy of these three American film exchanges would be likely to send his company and other Australian exhibitors into bankruptcy. One group of distributors are said to have demanded of G.T.C. an increase in the percentage of gross receipts as film hire from 20 to 50 per cent. "Submission to such a proposal would not leave sufficient for any theatre's normal running costs," said Mr. Munro. "Any measure of success the distributors might achieve is destined to have a detrimental effect on staffs, orchestras, advertising and operating costs all over Australia. It would most certainly bring in its wake an increase in admission charges." G.T.C. are going over the head of Universal and negotiating direct with Efftee for release of their films throughout the circuit.

"G.T.C.," said Mr. Munro, "is prepared to purchase any picture or group of pictures of a reasonable standard, whether American, British or Australian. We are certainly not going to be intimidated into paying exorbitant film rentals or stand idly by and allow any combine of distributors to ruin Australian enterprise at the behest of New York movie magnates."

MGM intend building their own chain of theatres, Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane. It is estimated that their Sydney theatre will cost between 150,000 and 200,000 pounds, and will seat over 2000.

D. N. Martin, manager of Liberty theatres, is much concerned over the fact that certain interests are believed to have approached the State Government endeavoring to persuade them to refuse the licensing of any further movie houses for a period of years. With G.T.C.'s recent acquisition of King's Cross and Majestic every city theatre of importance here is directly under their control. Five million pounds represents the amount invested by the public in C.T.C.

The three film exchanges concerned —MGM, Paramount, Warners—refuse to supply pools or agencies not responsible for the theatres in which the films are screened. C.T.C. have been in the habit of purchasing on behalf of independent exhibitors.

Fullers Theatres have, as was the case last year, diplomatically sidestepped the wrangle so far as possible up-to-date, declaring they are not involved.

And the final result was the appointment by the Government of an investigator, F. W. Marks, a Sydney accountant, who is now taking testimony from all concerned.

LEON S. STONE.

Buzz a Benedict

Buzz Berkeley stepped over the gangplank Saturday to the cheers of a host of friends and an equally strong echo from the friends of Merna Kennedy, the bride. And from now on, when they're shooting one of those big Warner numbers, Buzz will have to go to the phone and explain to the missus: "I'm being held at the studio."

'Les Miserables' Made Again and Still Too Long

Paris.—"Les Miserables," made in pictures two or three times, is again to be shown on the screen by Pathe Natan. But as shot it takes five hours to screen, and present plans are that it may be exhibited as three separate shows in subsequent weeks.

Universal some years ago bought a 13-reel French production of "Les Miserables" and went through considerable agony before releasing it in about eight reels. At one time Carl Laemmle announced plans to release it as two episodes, playing houses on subsequent dates.

Osso Firm Bankrupt

Paris.—The Osso firm, third in importance as a French producing and distributing outfit, has gone into bankruptcy. Company has been fighting hard to stave off the action, but bad business by theatre affiliates helped push it over the brink.

Americans Must Make Pics in Spain

Madrid—Spain will join the procession started by England and followed by Italy. The government will set a film provision this spring which will require that each importer of films produce at least one picture in Spain at a minimum cost of $50,000 for every five films imported.

Spain is trying to profit by the experience of England, where quota pictures were made on a footage basis and made so cheaply they hurt domestic production instead of helping it. That is why the $50,000 minimum for Spain.

The news of the quota comes at a bad time for American distributors because the Spanish market for some unexplainable reason just began to show signs of real life in the past six months.

Mono. Takes Next Step In Full National Set-up

New York.—The last step in the plan to get truly national representation for Mongram pictures was announced Saturday with the statement that the exchanges in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Seattle, Denver, Portland, Salt Lake City and Detroit will henceforth he designated as Monogram exchanges in their respective quarters.

These territories have, until this move, still carried the individual name of the state right exchange holding the Monogram franchise.

Columbia On Own In South America Territory

New York.—Columbia is branching out for itself in the South American territory, ending the agreement by which United Artists has handled distribution on the product.

Clarence C. Margon is in charge of S. A. sales for Columbia, with Emilie Acoste opening a Brazil exchange.

'Yellow Jacket' Bow Set

New York.—"Yellow Jacket," the new play by Sidney Howard about Dr. Walter Reed's famous work on yellow fever, will have premiere at Martin Beck Theatre March 1. Howard sails for Europe two days after opening.

Indie Gets Circuit Break

New York.—"Mad Age," being distributed by Ideal Pictures Corporation, has been booked by 42 Loew theatres in New York, 43 Warner houses in New Jersey and 80 Warner houses in Pennsylvania.

West Captures Paris

Paris.—Mae West has taken Paris like the revolutionists took the Bastile. "I'm No Angel" is packing them in at Gaumont-Elysee, with long lines being turned away daily.

Pierson on Gov't Job

New York.—Wayne Pierson, formerly well known picture exploitation man, is now "Supervisor of the Census" for the New York district.

Para. Extends Deal On Gillstrom Shorts

Arvid Gillstrom's comedies for Paramount during the past year have hit so well that in one case, Leon Errol, an original one-picture deal has been extended to three pictures to be squeezed in on this year's release schedule, and in the case of Harry Langdon approval has been given to make the final picture of his list an expensive semi-musical.

Gillstrom started his Paramount deal a little over a year ago with six Harry Langdons and three Bing Crosbys to make. Two of the Crosbys have been made, but the third will probably never see shooting because of the sudden rise to popularity of Bing as a feature star. But it has all combined to put Gillstrom in a choice spot as a shorts producer.

'Catherine' Has Its Big London Opening

London.—One of the most distinguished audiences ever to assemble for an opening of a picture here, attended the premier of London Films' "Catherine the Great" at the Leicester Square Friday night.

Royalty was represented by the Prince of Wales and Prince George. There were any number of Lords and Ladies, Counts, Dukes and Barons.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. made a personal appearance for this occasion.

The picture was well received.

Jewish Actors Pick Guests

New York.—George M. Cohan and Sam Harris will be the guests of honor at the dinner of the Jewish Actors Guild on April 8. Eddie Cantor is president of the Guild.

Original for Wynne Gibson

Lawrence G. Blochman, Universal scenarist, and Leonard Spigelgass, story editor on the same lot, are writing an original yarn in which Wynne Gibson will be starred.

Burgess at Warners

Dorothy Burgess has been signed by Warners for a featured role in the Joe E. Brown picture "Sawdust." Donald Dillaway has also been set for a featured role.

Universal Borrows Roth

Universal has borrowed Murray Roth from Warners on a one picture deal and has assigned him to the Eddie Grainger unit.

Coslow with Small-Landau

Sam Coslow has signed a managerial contract with the Small-Landau company, which will handle the music writer's business matters in the future.

Publicist in Disguise

It now turns out that "Alden Nash," author of the play that is clicking at the Hollytown Playhouse, is none other than Alvin Ascher, former publicity man for RKO. As Radio has already bought the play it's not a bad beginning for a youngster.

Movies for February hardly comes under the head of fan magazines. It is cheap, inexcusably uninteresting and almost a total loss. The almost is warranted by Walter W. Hubbard's production series on animated cartoons.

"Who Said 'High Hat'?" is by Julia Gwin and is about Robert Montgomery; "The Rolling Stone That Gathered Moss," by Mary A. Roberts, tells of John Stone; "The Road to Ruin" is fictionized after all these years by Ruth Schwerin, and "Marriage on Approval," announced in one place as Part One and in another as Part Two, is by Priscilla Wayne.

The department, "Baloonacy," fails to be amusing; "Pretty Polly," by Dr. Abduh Wretlaw, is a yarn on Polly Walters; and "Hollywood Hips," by Mary Dees, contains some reducing tips.

So what? It's all pretty bad.

RKO Steals Jump in Local 'Flesh' War

Stealing a march on the remaining first-run picture houses in the Los Angeles sector tied up without stage shows owing to union difficulties, the RKO-Hillstreet puts on a stage show starting Friday through an association with the NBC radio hour, "Hollywood on the Air."

Theatre will have the unit four times daily although broadcasting only once on opening night. Stage unit will be built around guest stars, the Radio contract list cooperating with personals. First group to consent to appear includes Wheeler and Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Mitzi Green, Jimmy Durante and Irene Dunn.

Starting Date Set For Universal 'Black Cat'

Universal has set February 24 as the starting date on "The Black Cat," which is a screen adaptation of Edgar Allen Poe's story, with Boris Karloff in the starring role. Edward Ullman directs.

When this picture hits the stages Universal expects to have seven pictures in production, which is the peak since last October.

Nun. Johnson Vacations

Nunnally Johnson left Saturday for New York on the first leg of a six week vacation from Twentieth Century. He will spend a week there, then go to Florida for five weeks with his folks. Johnson has completed his script of "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" for the studio.

MGM To Repeat on Bears

MGM has engaged the Chicago Bears football team, with Red Grange, to make another football short under the direction of Ray McCarey, who also made the first. There is a possibility that the studio may stretch these shorts into a series of six.

Termer for Milland

Raymond Milland, English juvenile actor, was signed by Paramount Saturday on a term contract on the strength of his performances in "Bolero" and "We're Not Dressing." The Bernard and Meiklejohn agency made the deal.

Sidney-Murray Start

Columbia puts Charlie Murray and George Sidney short, "Banker Buckaroo" into production tomorrow with Jules White directing and Zion Myers supervising. Johnny Gray has scripted from the original by Jack Cluett, Johnny Gray and Arthur Ripley.

Buy 2 Songs for Mills Bros.

Radio purchased two songs Saturday for delivery by the Mills Brothers in "Strictly Dynamite." One is "Swing It Sister," by Lane and Adamson, the other, "Money in My Clothes," by Fain and Kahal.

Kaaren Picks an Agent

Susanne Kaaren has signed a long term managerial contract with the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency. The actress is now under contract to Fox.

Joe 'Mank' With Vidor

Joseph Mankiewicz has been signed by King Vidor to write the script on "Our Daily Bread," which Vidor will produce independently at the General Service studios with a Radio release set. Picture is scheduled to start in the next two weeks.

DuPonts Seek Control

trying to tag the buyer of the more than 150,000 shares of Loew stock that changed hands in a forty-eight hour period.

Many thought it was Electrical Research Products, adding to their already heavy Loew investment; others were of the opinion it was British Gaumont interests.

Both were wrong. It was the Du Ponts—who in the week's change of stock ownership finished with most of the Loew shares previously held by Erpi, those of Chase, and many thousands of additional shares bought on the open market.

It is stated that the idea back of the men guiding the Du Pont millions is to form two big producing, distribution and exhibition organizations, each to stand on its own feet in a competitive sense, but with concentration of physical work and expenditures that will work miracles in efficiency and money-saving.

Dangers of Federal opposition to the moves are said to have been removed by picture people themselves who talked so freely to everybody connected with the NRA in recent meetings that the Administration leans favorably towards many aspects of the Du Pont plan. In addition the wealthy Du Ponts have always managed to divide their support so well between the Republican and Democratic parties that there is always someone in a position to get favorable hearing from the party in power.

New Yorkers watching the stock moves make it clear that this is not a step on the part of the Du Pont interests solely connected with raw stock. This group's actions are complicated by the fact that the Pathe Company, since the Joe Kennedy regime, has owned forty-nine per cent of Du Pont-Pathe stock. Efforts have been made unsuccessfully over the past year to buy this forty-nine per cent back. So now the raw stock end of Du Pont is in the position of making money for an almost inactive Pathe company every time it moves.

Another footnote to the story is the statement by insiders that the Chase Bank, now Rockefeller controlled, has been glad to unload its Loew stock at 34, in order to concentrate the Rockefeller picture interests in Radio, instead of having eggs in all the picture baskets.

It was thought for a while that Erpi was in the market on a buying rampage to protect the heavy debts owed by picture companies, but it now appears that Erpi would be just as happy to have Du Pont interests take over the obligations—and those big fellows know how to work together to leave everybody happy.

RENEW FIGHT ON ALIENS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THERE seems to be a lot of bad feeling brought on by the mistake the Academy made in not listing Radio's "Little Women" in their pamphlet of pictures eligible for the Academy award. This should not be. It was a mistake out and out and should be credited as such.

Certainly for a picture of the importance of "Little Women," it did not require a printed line in the Academy pamphlet, or a whole pamphlet, to recall to the minds of the creators here in Hollywood that such a picture was made and made during the past year, and as such, is eligible for the award.

But people will take the wrong slant on things and those same people feel that there was a little skullduggery in that omission and they are mad. So what?

Junior Laemmle should be given a pat on the back for defying whatever there was to be defied and returning Lee Tracy to pictures. First, because Tracy is a really great artist, and second, because there was a feeling around town that a ban had been placed on Lee for something that was supposed to have happened in Mexico.

That Laemmle kid has a lot of guts. We found that out at the time everyone was talking against making "All Quiet on the Western Front." He told the whole mob to jump in a lake, went ahead, caused the picture to be produced and it made film history.

It is a great disappointment to hear that the Garbo picture is not going over in several sections of the country. The failure of audiences to grab that attraction in the big numbers we feel it deserved, sort of twists things up a bit.

Garbo was never better; the production as a production is rich, fine, well made and extremely important and there's certainly good entertainment in the show. So what is it? Must we go back to that old wheeze, "Audiences will not go for costume pictures"?

What's your answer?

MGM Booming

New York.—Net profits for MGM are skyrocketing. For the eleven week period ending November 23 last they were $1,164,507, this comparing with $93,911 for the same period last year.

Erpi Holding Tight To Its Loew Stock

New York.—An interesting angle in the reports that the DuPonts are behind the sensational heavy buying of Loew stock in recent weeks became known today when it was learned that Erpi has not sold any of its 135,000 shares and has even gone further and let it be known to MGM higher-ups that it has no intention of letting any of the stock go.

The home office is buzzing with the mystery of who is buying the stock, since the turnover has been so tremendous that only the biggest operators in the country would have the dough to swing the amounts.

'Operator 13' Runs Into Story Jam

Production on the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper co-starring picture, "Operator 13," which Raoul Walsh is directing, was stopped yesterday at MGM because of story difficulties and shooting will be resumed after the script has been rewritten.

Sullavan Hurries Now

New York.—Margaret Sullavan changed her mind again and instead of waiting until Saturday to start for the coast and Universal she leaves by plane today.

Congress Clique Ready to Push Bill Limiting Entry of Foreign Actors—Equity Backing Move

Washington.—More trouble in the offing for Hollywood's foreign actors and actresses, and for producers with plans for further importations. Representative Samuel Dickstein let it be known yesterday that he has gathered around him powerful support to his bill setting tight limits on the entry of foreign players and will push the fight to the finish.

The bill, originally up in March, 1932, would place actors and actresses under the contract labor provisions of the immigration laws, which prohibit

MacDonald Set For MGM 'Merry Widow'

After plenty of arguments and bickerings one way or another, MGM has set Jeanette MacDonald as the widow in "The Merry Widow" opposite Maurice Chevalier.

The French star fought to the last ditch to keep Jeanette out, but had to bow to the logic of the situation as was outlined by both Irving Thalberg and Ernst Lubitsch.

New Long Termer for Green at Warner Lot

Warners yesterday handed Al Green a new long term contract, the director having been with the studio for seven years. Green just recently completed "Fur Coats" and before that he directed "As the Earth Turns." Director has been handling various branches of studio work for the past 22 years.

Rembusch Case Excites Industry

New York.—This $2,000,000 suit instituted by Frank Rembusch against all the major producers and coming up for trial next week, has most of the industry on edge and certainly New York plenty excited.

There have been other such suits, many of them were thrown out of court, others were heard; but in the end the producers and distributors have come out on top. But the present case seems to hold plenty of menace because the Hays office has engaged Max D. Steuer to represent them and that means they are worried.

Both Laemmles Start For West Thursday

New York.—Carl Laemmle Sr. and Jr. will leave here Thursday for Hollywood. On their arrival the Universal plant will assume a production blast that has been unknown for that [illegible] in three or fours years.

Feist in Town

Felix Feist, sales chief for MGM, arrived in town Saturday, after a trip starting January 2 that has swung him completely around the country's key cities. Feist is here to confer with Nicholas Schenck, who arrives Saturday, coming by way of the Panama Canal.

Lewis Remains at Radio

Frank O'Heron yesterday issued an official denial that David Lewis was leaving the Radio executive fold. Lewis has three pictures in work, "Stingaree," "Crime Doctor" and "Dover Road."

May Robson Returns

May Robson is due in Hollywood Sunday, returning to MGM from a successful personal appearance tour.

BALLOTS FOR REPORTER AWARDS MAILED TODAY

New York REVIEWS

"MOULIN ROUGE"

Twentieth Century prod.; director, Sidney Lanfield; writers, Nunnally Johnston, Henry Lehrman.

Rivoli Theatre

Mirror: Sparkling, dressy, tuneful and smart, this is a really adult musical comedy. Sidney Lanfield directed deftly. Darryl Zanuck produced extravagantly. And a great cast plays with spirit, humor and charm.

American: Fast and funny in the manner of a French farce and with its frail plot structure handsomely ornamented with song and dance and lavish investiture, this new Constance Bennett picture provides good film fun for all those addicted to this type of entertainment. Sidney Lanfield has kept his show together with skillful direction and never allows it to slow up. The dialogue is always amusing.

News: The usual backstage type of picture. But for that, and the routine presentation of its several ensemble numbers, the picture has more distinction and more quiet comedy of the sort that makes you chuckle and smile to yourself, than any musical that's come to Broadway in a long time.

Times: The story is of the back-stage variety, but its ample supply of good fun makes it a bright entertainment. Mr. Lanfield has done well in not permitting any too lengthy interruptions by spectacles in the story.

Herald-Tribune: The story is by no means anything deserving of cheers. If, however, you will drift along with the plot and enjoy the amiable dialogue and sly comedy of Helen Westley, Constance Bennett and Tone, "Moulin Rouge" will emerge as a likeable motion picture.

Telegraph: This is Miss Bennett's best picture, no matter how many doubts you might cast upon the story and its implausibilities.

Post: There is nothing in the plot or production of "Moulin Rouge" to distinguish it from any of the elaborate backstage spectacles which have been crowding the screen for the past season or two. There is little attempt to make the story logical. Miss Bennett plays her superficial roles with technical skill and her song numbers are effectively delivered.

World-Telegram: Shambling, feeble and bogus, with only an occasional entertainment for the eye, ear and funny bone. A loquacious, studied and dreary film.

Sun: Without offering anything particularly original, except the sight of Constance Bennett in a black wig, "Moulin Rouge" is a tuneful light-hearted bit of musical entertainment.

'Catherine,' 'Bolero' Head New Bway Pix

New York.—"Catherine the Great" opening at the Astor Wednesday heads the new pictures of the week on Broadway, but there is also considerable interest in Paramount's "Bolero" coming to the Paramount on Friday.

Other new arrivals include "Mandalay" at the Strand, Wednesday; "Carolina" at the Music Hall, Thursday; "Cat and the Fiddle," at the Capitol; "Long Lost Father" at the Roxy, Friday.

Films holding over are "Moulin Rouge" at the Rivoli, "Devil Tiger," Rialto, and "Big Shakedown," Mayfair.

Boston Opera Folds

New York.—After a lot of spectacular troubles in which Hope Hampton and Jules Brulatour were involved, the Boston Opera Company has folded up. It is understood that Brulatour had invested considerable money in the organization.

Halliday in 'Terror'

John Halliday has been signed by Warners for the male lead in "Return of the Terror," which will be directed by Howard Bretherton.

LaRue Back at Para.

Recently released from a term deal, Jack LaRue makes a return trip to Paramount as a free-lancer. He has been signed by B. P. Schulberg for a featured role in "Little Miss Marker." Dave Todd negotiated.

'Mona' Retitled

Warners have renamed "Mona Lisa." It is now "Self Portrait." Robert Florey directs from the original screen play by Carl Erickson.

Something New—! Reps Sue Each Other

Selznick and Joyce, represented by Attorney Ralph Blum, yesterday filed suit and attachment papers against J. G. Mayer, Ltd., for a share in commissions paid on the deal by which Thelma Todd made a British picture last fall.

Amount asked is $732, half of the commission paid on the deal. Claim is that Selznick and Joyce promoted the deal for Miss Todd on an agreement with her agent, Mayer, to share commissions.

Bolm on 'Firebrand' Steps

Adolph Bolm, stage director of the San Francisco Civic Opera, has been signed by Darryl Zanuck to direct the dance numbers for the Fredric March-Constance Bennett picture "The Firebrand," which Gregory LaCava is directing. The Bernard and Meiklejohn office handed the deal.

HEARINGS ON EXTRAS' KICKS WILL BE OPEN TO THE PRESS

Open Door Policy To Show Fair Play

If some members of the Code Committee for Extras have their way, this committee will function completely in the open, with all committee hearings of complaints open to the press.

"We think this is the only fair method," said one member of the committee. "If the companies want to commit violations it is not our fault, and we feel that the public has the right to know just who does what. And, if the press is allowed to be present no one will be able to point a finger at our committee and say we have been favoring either producer or complainant. This matter will be taken up at the first meeting of the committee, now that Mrs. Kinney has returned.

"As a matter of fact, it is the belief of some of us that public hearings will do much to cut down violations, for many producers would try to slip things over if they thought no one but the committee would know about it. With the public getting all, they will probably think twice before taking a chance."

Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the special Code Committee for Extras, who has been in Sacramento for the past week, returned yesterday.

Action on complaints that have been piling up is expected to start shortly. Committee will move into new offices this week. Place not yet settled. For past two weeks the committee headquarters have been in one office in the Professional building.

Murphy May Do Picture for Radio

Radio is talking a one-picture deal with Dudley Murphy. The director is currently at MGM, where he is to direct "The Green Hat" for Irving Thalberg, but the latter has consented to his making an outside deal provided the picture can be completed before "Green Hat" is ready for shooting.

Warners Close Deal For Edna Best in 'Key'

Warners have concluded negotiations with Edna Best and the player will fill the role announced for Kay Francis in "The Key." Picture went into production yesterday, with William Powell in the top spot and Michael Curtiz directing.

Walt Walker Goes East

Walter Walker left yesterday for a two weeks' trip to New York to settle an estate left to him by his brother, who was Chancellor of New Jersey for twenty years. Walker last appeared in "You Can't Buy Everything" for MGM and "Disillusion" for Fox.

Bert Marx with Berg

Bert Marx, formerly with Bren & Orsatti, has joined the Phil Berg agency, where he takes charge of the story department.

Uncle Carl Talks

New York.—"Fifty Years in America" is the subject for Carl Laemmle's talk over station WEAF, the NBC home station, from here tomorrow night. It will be on station KECA in Los Angeles at 4 in the afternoon.

Warner Denies Kay Francis Quit 'Key'

Discussion over Warner Brothers' "The Key" reached the point yesterday where J. L. Warner issued a personal statement denying that Kay Francis had withdrawn from the cast and declaring that the action was taken by the company because of desire to place her in two exclusive starring vehicles immediately.

"Firebird," from a Gilbert Miller play by Lajos Zilahi, and the picture on Madame DuBarry written by Edward Chodorov are the two selected.

"There has been no friction between the studio and Miss Francis," J. L. added to the announcement.

Brown and Cahn Off To Direct for British

Two American directors and a writer head for England by the end of the week to take up their deals with A. and B. Pictures there. Eddie Cahn will direct "Mystery of the Black Shirt" and Rowland Brown leaves to handle "Java Head." Harry Behm goes along to script the latter.

Moe Sackin Here Sat.

Moe Sackin, after eighteen months in Paris handling synchronization in a studio of his own, returns to Hollywood Saturday on the Pennsylvania, by way of the Canal. He plans Spanish synchronization work while retaining his interest in his French studio.

John Boyle Bereaved

John Boyle, prominent cinematographer, only recently returned from New York, suffered the loss of his sister, Corinne Boyle, Sunday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p.m. at the Hollywood Funeral Chapels.

Waggner on 'M.H.' Script

George Waggner checked in at the M. H. Hoffman offices in Culver City yesterday to start work on the script of "Mad Honeymoon."

the entry of workers who have been placed under contract abroad.

Before resurrecting the bill, Dickstein worked quietly with his fellow Congressmen, set himself there, and then put it up to Actors' Equity to get the present reaction of its members. To date close to two hundred members of Equity have signed a petition to Dickstein assuring him of their support if the bill is revived.

Unions Deny Talk Of Charter Repeal

Branding as "false and malicious" a rumor that the charters of the cameramen's and the other four IATSE unions' charters were to be recalled soon by the national body, union officials yesterday set at rest the minds of many local union men.

Starting Sunday the report spread that President Elliott of the IATSE had sent wires to the president of the cameramen's union and the other locals informing them that their charters would be picked up shortly. A vigorous checkup was staged yesterday, and last night union officials declared the report "was just an unfounded, vicious falsehood, spread for the purpose of injuring the local representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the International Alliance."

Gene Austin Set for Screen Bow at MGM

Gene Austin and his boys, Coco and Candy, will make their screen debut in the Joan Crawford picture "Sadie McKee" for MGM.

Clarence Brown put the picture into work yesterday, still without the crooner for whom the studio has been searching.

'Mike' Boylan Back to His Own Typewriter

Malcolm Stuart Boylan, who has been pinch-hitting as scenario editor at Fox for the past month, was granted a release from the job to go back to writing and has been assigned to the writing staff at that studio under Julian Johnston.

Dressler Ready for Work

Marie Dressler is reported in good health and production on her next picture, in which Polly Moran gets co-star billing, "Coming Round the Mountain," will get under way in a week under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard.

Acad. Busy With Meets

Directors and actors of the Academy will meet this week to select nominees for possible appointment on the various code committees. Writers and technicians have made their selections.

DeLeon-Walker Assigned

Walter DeLeon and H. M. Walker have been assigned to do the screen play on the W. C. Fields picture, "Grease Paint," which William Le Baron will produce for Paramount.

Lauren Scripts Lombard

S. K. Lauren has been handed the Dwight Taylor original "Orchids and Onions" for scripting. Story was purchased last week by Columbia for Carole Lombard.

Col. Tries Oil Theme

Stuart Anthony has been signed by Columbia to write the screen play for an original story with an oil field background. Action unit produces.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BARBARA BARONDESS

Douglass Montgomery almost got into one of those unpleasant messes. First Universal told him that he could do the play "Gentle Woman" that he is so anxious to do, on account of they postponed "Little Man, What Now," but after rehearsing a week they wired him that he must be in Hollywood by the 12th, so he flew yesterday. Alexander Kirkland will probably play the part he is leaving in "Men in White."

The play Judith Anderson is in, "Come of Age," closed Saturday and everybody with any taste or imagination left is heartbroken. She gave the most gorgeous performance I have ever seen. It was worth while coming all the way here just for that. Universal is negotiating with her for the part of Elizabeth, and wouldn't she make a swell one! . . . May Robson didn't mind the five shows a day at the Capitol, but the stairs were killing her. . . . Rouben Mamoulian at "Sailor Beware" with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Goldwyn, looking very self-conscious. They won't let the poor guy alone about this Garbo business, and if it keeps up he'll probably have to change his name. . . . Dorothy Lee was offered a part in the London production of "She Loves Me Not." If she can, she'll do it. . . . Claudia Morgan has let her hair grow back to its natural shade.

A certain young millionaire got himself into a mess of trouble with the colored valet of a well-known musical comedy star, but everything has been fixed up with a little "hush money." The colored valet cashes a $250 check every week and the young millionaire with a dash—is traveling around the world with his cousin. . . . Clifton Webb is supposed to be home with a cold, but I hear it's a suspicious-looking black eye (did he make a mistake?) . . . Lois Moran is recuperating, from her first flop in five years, in Florida. She says her little adopted sister is so talented that she will probably have to retire on account of the competition.

Now that Clark Gable has "made good" and come back, all the ones that wouldn't give him a break when he needed one are sitting around and saying, "I gave him his first chance"; "I knew he had it in him." . . . Anna Q. Nillson got a terrific ovation the other night at the New Yorker, which proves that they don't forget. . . . Kenyon Nicholson and Charlie Robinson, who wrote "Sailor Beware," are a strange combination. It's the bawdiest show in town; Nicholson is an ex-college professor and Robinson is the same Charlie Robinson that was under contract to MGM and started playing the lead opposite Joan Crawford in the "Modern Age," but they took him out after a week's shooting and now he's a good playwright.

'BROOMSTICKS, AMEN' FINE; 'SUCH PLEASURES' BORESOME

Dutch 'Hex' Story Offers Bet for Pix

"BROOMSTICKS, AMEN!"

Thomas Kilpatrick presents "Broomsticks, Amen!", a play by Elmer Greensfelder, staged by Arthur J. Beckhard, setting designed by Tom Adrian Cracraft at the Little Theatre. With Byron McGrath, Helen Huberth, Jane Seymour, Jean Adair, William F. Schoeller, Victor Kilian, Margaret Mullen, K. Elmo Lowe; Jules Epailly, George Carleton.

New York.—Staged with meticulous care and beautifully mounted, written with understanding and capably performed, "Broomsticks, Amen!" which deals with the "hexing" problem and the "powwow professors" of the Pennsylvania-Dutch country, furnishes a quaint and gladsome and wholly absorbing evening in the theatre.

"Professor" Emil Hofnagel, as stubborn as he is ignorant, and as honest as he is simple, had made "powwow" for many a long year in the "willage" of Pennhimmel. He charges no fee; believes implicitly in his mission; and is looked upon as infallible by the whole countryside where illness of man, woman, child, or beast is concerned. He performs most of his miracles, as only a "seventh son" can perform them, with a bit of red string and "sanctious" words. Doctors are anathema to him.

One can well imagine then what happens when his daughter, Crista, who has returned home from college, introduces a penniless young doctor, Vincent Lambert, into this atmosphere, with the announcement that she is going to marry Vincent because there is a baby on the way. But while Emil can forgive his daughter for having a "too soon" baby, he swears he will never forgive her for bringing a "verdampte hospital doctor" into the family.

One year passes; and the birth of the grandchild has softened Emil's feelings toward his son-in-law. Yet the household is charged with foreboding now, because the baby has taken sick. Vincent is treating it. It is during Vincent's absence that Emil, convinced that the baby is "hexed," bewitched, determines to discover who the bewitcher is. And the surest way of finding this out is to lay a broomstick across the doorway. The person who picks it up will be the "hex." It is Vincent, returning with diphtheria serum, who innocently picks up the broomstick and is accused of being the baleful influence and warned to keep away from his own baby's bedside.

When Vincent scornfully disregards that warning, Emil shoots him down, wounding him in the shoulder. Thereupon, with Crista rushing the unconscious Vincent to a hospital, Emil proceeds with his "powwow," despite the pleadings of his wife, Minna, who is torn between faith in her husband's magic and a growing belief in her son-in-law's science. Emil's blind son shows more determined opposition. He tries to block his father's entry into the baby's room. But all to no avail For Emil, like one possessed, fells his blind son, and continues his incantations to save the baby.

Three days later the baby, whose life might have been saved by the diphtheria serum, is dead. And when the bereaved family return from the cemetery there is waiting a detective from the State Attorney's office, which has been investigating the whole "hexing" situation. Emil has been betrayed by one of his own fraternity, a mercenary "professor" named Adolph Gansdilliger. Though all try to save him, even Christa and Vincent, Emil, stubborn and true to the last to his strange beliefs, is taken away to face charges for having brought about the death of the grandchild whom he loved so dearly.

The subsidiary characters, to say nothing of the Pennsylvania-Dutch

Wells Likes His Own

London.—H. G. Wells minces no words in expressing the fact that he is really pleased with Universal's production of his story "The Invisible Man," which is something of a shock to authors here.

Fine Cast Though In Dot Parker Play

"AFTER SUCH PLEASURES"

A. L. Jones presents Dorothy Parker's comedy vignettes, "After Such Pleasures," adapted and staged by Edward G. Gardner. With Shirley Booth, Don Shelton, Enid Markey, Ackland Powell, Mary Farrell, Kathleen Chase, Lea Penman, Blossom MacDonald.

New York.—La Parker's soiree of superbly malicious fragments failed to entertain us as much as we would have liked to be entertained by them To be perfectly frank, we were even faintly bored long before the evening was over by "After Such Pleasures." Which is too bad, because this unquestionably gifted writer has more, much more, to give than she has yet permitted herself. Or has she? How that gal can observe the frailties of those she despises and report her hatreds in dialogue! It's the narrow limitations, the monotony of your slant, Dorothy, that got us down. To liberally paraphrase the sentiment of the actress in one of your etchings, we quite agreed that too much acidity, without the compensating balm of the milk of magnesia of human kindenss, is bad for the system. Very bad. And so we cannot refrain from returning the compliment you handed Miss Hepburn apropos of her performance in "The Lake." The gamut of your emotions also seems to progress no farther than from A to B, or maybe only from A to A Flat.

In a "Young Lady From Paris" Dorothy eviscerates most brilliantly one of those dames who after three weeks in "Paree" return with a lousy French accent and a distaste for everything American but the blandishments of bootleg gin. In "Dusk Before Fireworks" Dorothy uses her scalpel on the possessive female in love with the promiscuous male. Then came "Here We Are," where Dorothy's victims are a not over-bright honeymoon couple painfully unprepared for the facts of life. In "Black and White" Dorothy annihilates a lady who is just too condescending for words where the color line is concerned. In "The Waltz" Dorothy amusingly externalizes the agony of a girl who is being trampled to death by her dancing partner. With "You Were Perfectly Fine" Dorothy vents her vemon on a designing wench who had taken advantage of the amorous propensities of a drunken gent in a taxicab. In "Glory in the Daytime" Dorothy provided us with the one poignant moment of the evening. She actually seemed to experience a pang of pity for the brandy-soaked actress whose life had been just one goddam mess. And, lastly, in "The Mantle of Whistler" Miss Parker proved that the gentle art of making enemies is apt to be as rampant amongst the hoi polloi as it is amongst the habitues of the Algonquin.

As for the casting of these so-called comedy vignettes (they are really minor tragedies), there can be nothing but praise. A perfect troupe. Not a few of them should find themselves before a test camera soon, even if there is nothing much else in "After Such Pleasures" for Hollywood—excepting, possibly, the title and Dorothy Parker herself. Maybe that's more than enough.

Unions Win Brush Over Still Man

The cameramen's union yesterday won a brush with an independent producer who, according to union officials, was attempting to use a still cameraman who not only was not a member of Local 659, but was not a member of any organization.

Some time ago the five IATSE locals signed a contract with a group of independents whereby these producers agreed to use none but union men. Yesterday when it was reported to the union that a picture being made at the Alexander studios under the direction of Burton King was violating the contract, union officials immediately "requested" that a union still man be used. This was done at once.

Freund To Direct U's 'Bachelor Wife'

After two directors, Eddie Buzzell and Lloyd Corrigan, had passed up "Bachelor Wife" at Universal, Karl Freund was assigned to handle the direction of this picture in which Edward Everett Horton and Genevieve Tobin are featured. Paul Cavanagh was set yesterday for a leading role. Shooting starts Thursday.

The Bennie Zeidman production, "I Give My Love," which Freund was preparing as his next assignment, has been laid aside until later.

Lugosi Returns for 'U's' 'Black Cat'

Bela Lugosi yesterday decided to give up his personal appearances in the east and accept Universal's offer for a featured spot in "The Black Cat," which Edgar Ullmer directs with Boris Karloff in the lead. Peter Ruric is scripting the Edgar Allan Poe story. Lugosi arrives out here February 21. Al Kingston set the deal.

Jean Carmen to Legit

Jean Carmen has been added to the cast of "Let's Be Civilized," a new play by Humphrey Pearson, to be produced by the Pasadena Community Players. This will be Miss Carmen's first fling at the legitimate.

David Manners Back

Acad. Sets Rules For Shorts Prize

The Academy yesterday invited more than twenty producers of short subjects to have their product represented for consideration in the Academy's annual award of merit competition.

According to the rules accompanying the invitations, all short subjects shown publicly between August 1, 1932, and December 31, 1933, will be eligible. One award will be made in each of the following classifications: cartoons, comedies and novelties. All pictures entered must be available for showing by February 22, when a special committee of fifteen Academy members will reduce the entries to three in each classification. The winners will be then selected by another special committee of actors, technicians, directors, writers and producers who have had short subject experience.

Sari Fedok Presents Pic

Sari Fedok, famous Hungarian star and wife of the playwright, Ferenc Molnar, will present a Hungarian picture at the Carthay Circle Saturday night for her compatriots. English titles are inserted. The original portrayer of "The Merry Widow" is here to finish a novel she is writing, after which she will go to New York to produce a play already completed.

Montgomery in 'Bachelor'

Robert Montgomery has been set for the lead opposite Ann Harding in "Biography of a Bachelor," based on S. N. Behrman's play "Biography," which will be produced by the Irving Thalberg unit at MGM.

No director has been assigned to this picture yet.

'Broomsticks' Fine

dialect itself, are made to order for comedy relief—and there is plenty of it. There are Frieda Sulzbach, a distressingly shy "vidow," and Otto Strumpkopf, an equally shy farmhand, to whom she is "dewoted," and whom she finally lands with the aid of the "Professor." Then there is Rika Uffelman, who has also set her cap for Otto, only to make up her mind to be content with the fat and less attractive Adolph Gansdilliger.

Jane Seymour, as Frieda, and Victor Killian, as Otto, handle their parts flawlessly. Margaret Mullen, as Rika, is almost as good. Byron McGrath gives a sensitive portrayal of the blind Herman. Helen Huberth, as Crista, and K. Elmo Lowe, as the young doctor, perform their roles with a beautiful, tremulous understanding. And William F. Schoeller, as "Professor" Hofnagel, and Jean Adair, as his wife, simply succeeded in making one forget they were enacting a play.

This review would not be complete without a special salute to Arthur Backhard's masterly direction, as well as to Tom Adrian Cracraft for the charming setting he has provided.

Elmer Greensfelder has written a tender and refreshing folkplay. It is certain to be grabbed up for pictures. So make your offers quickly, gentlemen.

Reporter Ballots Out

having ALL the members of the industry select what THE ENTIRE PEOPLE OF THE INDUSTRY think are the outstanding examples of direction, acting, writing, photography and technical work of the past year.

The Hollywood Reporter will present awards to the winners in this representative voting which it is privileged to conduct. Everyone is urged to mark and return his ballot as soon as it is convenient. When the ballots are in, a representative committee of men and women of the industry will count the votes and make the announcement of the winners.

This method of recognizing unusual achievement by the industry as a whole, rather than by small groups, has been universally acclaimed by men and women in every branch of the production field.

LABOR SHOWDOWN DUE

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE wonder if many in the picture business got an uncomfortable moment out of reading President Roosevelt's drastic action in connection with the airmail contracts.

We did.

Of course, we said immediately, there is no connection between the Government's right to take arbitrary action on its own contracts and the position of the motion picture industry which has never taken a cent from the Government and never expects to.

But then we got to reminiscing.

Way in the background, there were "White House feelers" in all that talk about salary control.

Not so far in the background, there were "White House feelers" in the planted stories that stockholders in picture companies should be given some consideration—and nepotism, bonuses, etc., investigated.

There were block booking "feelers," and censorship "feelers."

Any old Washington newspaperman knows what "White House feelers" are. They are straws tossed up into the air to show which way the wind of popular opinion blows.

But nothing happened. Not because the wind wasn't blowing. But because Baby LeRoy was rushed to the defense of the picture business. And Jackie Cooper.

That strange animal the American public just couldn't help laughing at the mention of Baby LeRoy and Jackie Cooper and salary control.

So did we laugh. Too soon.

An expedient was tried. No admission was made that any original plans were wrong—they were just "suspended" while we underwent investigation.

We were investigated.

In ten days.

Jules Verne couldn't do it.

But it has been done. And a lot of picture people who should have known better spent their time telling the investigator what was wrong with "THE OTHER FELLOW."

Soon, mark muh wor-rds, we'll see another "White House feeler." Based on that investigation.

The "feeler" may come back cold. It may come back hot. And if it be the latter, it's going to be just too bad.

Better give Baby LeRoy a new diaper.

Anti-Trust Suit Starts

The Rembusch anti-trust suit against the majors, exciting all the execs, started in New York yesterday. Full story on Page 4.

Nick Schenck Fights So Loew Has 'Nana'

New York.—After ads had appeared announcing that "Nana" would move from the Music Hall to the RKO Center for a two weeks' stay, the deal is now off, and the picture goes direct to the Loew houses in the metropolitan area.

Nick Schenck, though on the water on his way to Hollywood by the Canal route, put up a typical Nick Schenck battle against the delay in turning the picture loose on top of its Music Hall success. And he won.

South Seas Yarn Lederer's Next

Francis Lederer's second starring vehicle for Radio will have a South Seas background. The studio has been searching for a suitable vehicle for the star, and unable to find one, has assigned Jane Murfin to write an original story laid in the South Seas.

Harlow's Next Likely To Be Coe's 'Repeal' Yarn

Understood that Jean Harlow's first picture on her return will be "Repeal," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Francis Coe.

Jack Conway will direct under John Considine's supervision. Sam and Bella Spewack are writing the screen play.

Cooper Leaves Thursday

Merian C. Cooper leaves Los Angeles Thursday on the first lap on his planned round-the-world trip.

President's Order Indicates Stalling Period Over—Local Body's Status Still Mystery

Washington.—Complaints drifting back from Hollywood have been duplicated in so many industries that the NRA yesterday made public an executive order "from the President of the United States" which indicates that the teeth of the NRA are now going to grind.

The kicks, not alone from the picture industry but from many major activities, have been that various committees set up have been dominated by big influences and clever enough to avoid direct opposition to the NRA by stalling on various technical pretexts.

Fox Will Produce 'Corsican Brothers'

With every other studio well under way with costume pictures Fox has decided to start preparation on one and has selected the Alexander Dumas novel "The Corsican Brothers" as the vehicle to be used. This picture was made as a silent by Universal in 1919.

Ray Griffith Abroad For Eight Wk. Vacation

Ray Griffith leaves tomorrow for an eight weeks' vacation trip to London, accompanied by Mrs. Griffith. He will spend a week in New York, before leaving for London, to look at plays and potential story material for Twentieth Century.

U.A. Talks to Fitzpatrick

New York.—United Artists have options on two series of shorts to be produced by Fitzpatrick, who has been releasing through MGM for over five years.

Boleslavsky Takes Over 'Operator 13'

Rumor yesterday was that Richard Boleslavsky will take over the directorial reins on "Operator 13" when the MGM-Cosmopolitan production is started after time out for story revisions.

Raoul Walsh is understood to have asked to be relieved because of feeling that the difference of opinion on the yarn's dialogue were such that it would be mutually beneficial to himself and the producer to let a new director make a fresh start.

Radio Buys N.Y. Mystery For John Barrymore Pic

Radio yesterday purchased the play, "A Hat, A Coat, A Glove," which folded in New York last Saturday after a weeks run, and will use it as a John Barrymore vehicle. Kenneth Macgowan produces. Play was written in German by Wilhelm Speyer and adapted to the American stage by William Drake. Grosby Gage handled the New York production.

Fawcett Editor Here

Jack Smalley, managing editor of the Fawcett publications, and his wife arrived in town yesterday by plane from Minneapolis and plan to return Friday. Smalley is here to confer with Roscoe Fawcett, owner of the publications.

Monte Brice to Fox

New York.—Rumors that the Rowland-Brice split might be patched up seem to be off with the announcement yesterday that Monte Brice had been signed as a director by Fox. He left immediately for the coast.

Technicolor Figure Dies

New York.—William Travers Jerome, prominent legal light, and one of the original big backers of Technicolor, died here yesterday at the age of seventy-five.

GOLDWYN SALARY FIGURES START HOLLYW'D BUZZING

When the Saturday Evening Post circulated through town yesterday, Samuel Goldwyn's ideas regarding the weekly salaries paid the picture stars started a lot of buzzing.

He lists the following fifteen leading stars and their weekly salaries: Greta Garbo, $9000, Will Rogers and Maurice Chevalier at $7000 each, Constance Bennett, $7000; John Barrymore, $6500; Norma Shearer, Richard Barthelmess and Ann Harding, $6000 each; Wallace Beery, $5000; William Powell, $4500; Joan Crawford, $4000; Janet Gaynor, $3750; Edward G. Robinson, $3000: James Cagney, $2800; and Clark Gable, $2500.

THE LOW DOWN

Nobody in the world would have even guessed what two stars are having an affaire de couer at the moment if it hadn't been for the tact-ical error of the "lady" star's maid. The lady in question is really one of our better known stars given to bringing much sunshine and light into the homes of millions, and the other night a young married couple who are good friends of hers were driving home when their car ran out of gas. The couple looked up and discovered they were stuck right in front of the star's house, so they decided to drop in and telephone for help. So they rang the door-bell, and at three o'clock in the morning, mind you, the maid sticks her head out of the window and says, "Is that you, Mr.————?" giving out with the name of the popular young juvenile who was thought to have forgotten his keys. P.S.—He's married, too.

Bess Meredyth gave out with a large buffet supper the other evening and in the middle of the proceedings it was discovered that the whole thing was really a birthday party for Bess. Salka Viertel was telling the crowd how she had originally learned to speak English from her negro cook and how she astonished everyone by speaking with a southern accent. Ad Schulberg, Mrs. Ray Griffith, Louise Fazenda, Eugene Pallette and the Mrs. Pallette, W. C. Fields, Virginia Zanuck, the Sidney Lanfields, Bill Powell, Lou Schreiber all offered Bess congratulations.

Invitations are out for visiting royalty again and Connie Bennett has sent word to the right people that a buffet supper will be given for Lady Furness, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and A. C. Blumenthal on Satiddy night. White ties, IF you please.

Maurice Chevalier takes exception to the story printed here that he had finally broken down and given his consent to having Jeanette MacDonald play the feminine lead in "The Merry Widow." His story that he had never at any time objected to Miss MacDonald is confirmed by both Irving Thalberg and Ernst Lubitsch.

New York REVIEWS

"THE GHOUL"

British-Gaumont prod.; writer, Roland Pertwee.

Rialto Theatre

Sun: "The Ghoul" is a sad venture for the formidable Mr. Karloff. Universal, which manages to make its audiences faint with terror over its "Frankensteins" and "Draculas," might have been able to send them happily into hysterics with this. The English version hasn't a thrill in a carload.

Mirror: Karloff's career as the great shiver-inducer recently carried him to England, where he pursued his spooky exploits for the benefit of British-Gaumont. His film is neither so exciting nor so terrifying as those he has made in Hollywood. It is just a fair melodrama, satisfactory but unsensational. Mr. Karloff's monstrous reputation as a ghoul will put it across.

American: The production just hasn't the hair-raising qualities that have distinguished Karloff's former quite successful efforts to scare us so delightfully.

Journal: The picture was made in England and boasts some unusually effective photography and settings. It also contains a good idea in the way of hair-raising shockers. But, after a gruesome opening, the story becomes so involved that one—this one, at any rate—somehow forgets to be terrified while trying to figure what it's all about.

World-Telegram: Instead of curdling the assembled blood corpuscles and sending the customers home limp with terror it leaves them both amused and amazed at the woefully inexpert manner in which a good idea has been bungled. For this new Rialto entrant has a good idea, some gruesome moments and Karloff himself. Missing, however, is that ingredient—the spice, so to speak—which would make this mixture an hour of macabre delight.

Herald-Tribune: "The Ghoul" is a picture Mr. Karloff traveled to London to make, and that is a long way to go to make just another picture. It is a spooky piece and while it works hard to produce the proper ghostly atmosphere, it misses first class suspense.

Times: Karloff the Uncanny, Hollywood's great authority on the art of spine-chilling, has had the misfortune in his new picture to fall among amateurs at the game. "The Ghoul" has nothing like the hearty terror that the uninhibited script writers in Hollywood piled into "Frankenstein" and "The Mummy."

Report Sting Is Removed From Stage 'Queer People'

New York.—General understanding here is that the stage production of "Queer People" has had much of the sting removed that made Hollywood squirm in the book.

Galen Bogue yesterday announced postponement of the opening until Thursday night to allow time for improvements in the staging.

U's 'Vanishing Shadow' Serial Under the Wire

Universal's serial, "Vanishing Shadow," was completed yesterday under the direction of Louis Friedlander.

Onslow Stevens, Ada Ince and Louis Friedlander were hosts last night at a dinner given to the crew on the picture.

Mike Newman to North

Here's a Title

"Lovelife of a Sailor" was set yesterday as the title for the Chester Morris picture which Ben F. Zeidman is supervising for Universal. Dore Schary and Lew Foster have been teamed to write the screen play.

Dot Lee Is Ill

Dorothy Lee is in bed curing a throat infection so that she can hop off for Denver to make a personal appearance with "Hips Hips Hooray" there. Picture opens Friday.

GTE's New Deal Delayed by Judge

Wilmington.—The reorganization plan for General Theatre Equipment, the organization that brought Harley Clarke to the picture business and Fox, was indefinitely postponed yesterday when Chancellor J. O. Wolcott disqualified himself, explaining his wife owned Chase Bank. Chase interests and Clarke are fighting over the reorganization plan to be adopted.

Chief Justice D. J. Layton will sit at the hearing as soon as he recovers from a present illness.

Ten More Return to Acad. Technician Fold

Technicians Branch of the Academy continues to set the pace in the revived Academy. Another ten members of the branch have returned. This makes a total of twenty who resigned during the breakup last autumn who have come back into the fold. Membership of the Technicians Branch now officially is 180.

Metzger Back to Sales

Lou Metzger is dropping theatre operations for an interest in the distribution field. He returns here next week from Mexico City and will then move off to Europe to handle the foreign release of Foy Production's "Elysia."

Sheldon for 'Lovers'

E. Lloyd Sheldon has been handed the production reins on Paramount's "Lovers In Quarantine."

'CAT AND FIDDLE' FAILS TO MATCH STAGE HIT

But Fine Production And Cast Register

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE"
(MGM)

Direction .....William K. Howard
Story by.....Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach
Adaptation..Bella and Samuel Spewack
Photography .....Hal Rosson
Cast: Jeanette MacDonald, Ramon Novarro, Frank Morgan, Charles Butterworth, Jean Hersholt, Vivienne Segal, Frank Conroy and Henry Armetta.

MGM has a nice little hit in "The Cat and the Fiddle." Unfortunately, it is not a nice BIG hit.

The fault lies obviously in the adaptation. The only thing left of the original operetta which took the country by storm when it was presented on the stage is the music. Otherwise the screen child is absolutely no relation to its footlight parent.

As it is on celluloid, "The Cat and the Fiddle" is a little above average backstage story with music. Of course the music is superior to the usual music that accompanies this particular type of story; the sets are superb; the direction is outstandingly effective, and the photography is stunning. But the fact remains that practically everything that made "The Cat and the Fiddle" the utterly charming and delightful thing it was on the stage is missing in the screen version.

However that may be, the MGM picture is a pretty good bet because of the singing of Jeanette MacDonald and Ramon Novarro, and the elaborate production.

Novarro and Miss MacDonald play composers who meet and fall in love with each other in Brussels. But it is she who finds financial success with her music. They move to a luxurious apartment in Paris, where Novarro feels like one of her guests. The situation is further aggravated by Frank Morgan, who, in love with Miss MacDonald, persuades Novarro that he is standing in the way of her further success. He leaves her and attempts to produce his operetta. The night before the opening he is left without a backer, an orchestra, or a leading lady. So, of course, Miss MacDonald, who is now engaged to Morgan, steps in at the last moment—and his operetta is a sucess. To make everything jake he also wins her back.

"The Cat and the Fiddle" has one definite triumph of which it can boast. It gives Miss MacDonald a perfect opportunity to display the full beauty and excellence of her voice. Novarro's voice failed to register as well as hers, but it is pleasing.

Novarro's acting in this film is more pleasing than his voice. He makes the young, impetuous, romantic composer very likable. Miss MacDonald is, as usual, and in every way, utterly charming.

William K. Howard's direction is suave and interesting, and the photography by Hal Rosson is completely beautiful. Bella and Samuel Spewack made the adaptation, and Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach are the original authors.

60 for Warners

New York.—Warners are first of the majors to announce their line-up for next year with the statement that they will definitely make sixty pictures.

Jean Arthur For Columbia Lead

It was reported late last night that Columbia had signed Jean Arthur for the leading role in "Most Precious Thing in Life," which will be directed by Lambert Hillyer under the supervision of Robert North.

The picture has been held up for the past four weeks due to the studio's inability to secure an adequate lead for this yarn.

Circus Troupers Land On Warner Payroll

With the "Sawdust" troupe on location at the Al G. Barnes circus winter quarters in El Monte, Warners yesterday signed "Poodles" Hanneford, famous clown, Ernest Clarke and Gordon Evans for featured spots. Evans is a three and a half year old boy who plays the role of Joe E. Brown as a child. The troupe will remain in El Monte for three weeks. Ray Enright directs.

'Language' Author Here

Rose Franken, who wrote "Another Language," arrived with her three children in Hollywood yesterday and is planning on establishing her permanent residence here. The Edington and Vincent office have signed her to a managerial contract.

Selznick Takes Simmons

David Selznick has borrowed Michael L. Simmons from the Harry Rapf unit to write an original story scheduled to star John Barrymore under the MGM banner.

Beahans Make Up

Charlie Beahan and Sidney Fox went away for a quiet week-end to talk it all over and are now back in town with everything patched up and the dove of peace right at home.

'Dodsworth' on Feb. 24

New York.—The long awaited opening of "Dodsworth" has again been postponed, this time to February 24.

Charles Butterworth contributes his usual comedy; Frank Morgan is well cast as Daudet, the impresario; Jean Hersholt has a swell role as the old music master, Vivienne Segal reveals a very fine voice in a small role, and Henry Armetta is amusing as a taxi driver.

This picture will undoubtedly be popular in all towns and cities where the stage version was not shown. But in the metropolitan centers not even Miss MacDonald's singing will save it from being a little disappointing. However, the original music is all there, and that's something.

West Coast Theatre Value Is $13,063,000

First appraisal of the approximate value of the Fox West Coast Theatres properties was set at $13,063,000 yesterday by appraisers before Referee McNab. The appraisal is still in progress with slight changes necessary.

The figure reached is of particular importance to the trustees, Charles P. Skouras, Charles C. Irwin and William H. Moore Jr. and their attorneys, who ask $152,000 for their services to the chain, and on Referee McNab's refusal declared their willingness to await an appraisal of the property.

McNab, on hearing the appraisers' report, intimated that he would likely reach a decision today on the applications of the trustees and their attorneys for allowances.

Dearholt Doing Salvage Job in Central America

Ashton Dearholt, one-time production manager for First National, has been signed by Van Beuren to salvage the Joan Lowell expedition into Central America. Miss Lowell has just returned to New York.

A letter from Dearholt in the interior says he has obtained 100,000 feet of adventure film and expects to clear out of the jungle early next month.

Wynyard's First on Return Is 'Soviet'

Diana Wynyard's first trick for MGM upon returning from her Radio loan-out is slated to be a star spot in "Soviet," for the Irving Thalberg unit.

Star had her option picked up last week and continues with MGM for another year with a tilt in salary. Two other assignments being worked up for her are "Declasse" and "Vanessa."

No Work for Mary

Universal wanted Mary Duncan for the feminine lead in "Bachelor Wife," which Karl Freund will direct and Mary Duncan wants to play the role, but her husband, Laddie Sanford, does not want her to return to the screen so the deal is off.

Mayer Entertains M.P.

Louis B. Mayer entertains nobility tomorrow when he will have Lord Marley, M.P., as his luncheon guest at the MGM studio.

Para. Tests 'Death' Word In A Title

Making an issue of the old film theory that the word "death" in a title is anathema at the box office as regards the women, Paramount took "Death Takes a Holiday" up to northern California, made a test and exploded the age-old bugaboo.

Picture which Mitchell Leisen directed under E. Lloyd Sheldon's supervision was opened first in Fresno under the title "Strange Holiday." Only average business was reported. Company then cracked it in Sacramento under the "Death Takes a Holiday" tag, business report nearly tripling that of the Fresno booking.

Company is restoring the stage play title with the heretofore obnoxious word and will release the picture nationally under its original tag.

'Manhattan Love Song' In The Works Today

With Robert Armstrong and Dixie Lee in the leads, Monogram puts "Manhattan Love Song" into production today. Leonard Fields directs. Balance of the cast to date consists of Franklyn Pangborn, Nydia Westman, Harold Walridge, Cecile Cunningham and Helen Flint. David Silverstein collaborated with the director on the script. Arch Buchanan handles the unit.

Renew Sanit. Drive

Phil Goldstone, chairman, has just issued a statement of the Los Angeles Free Tuberculosis Sanatorium drive which shows the workers must still raise $165,000 of their goal. The drive has been held up during competition from the Community Chest and holiday activities but will now be resumed.

Franklin Deal Not Set

New York.—Despite reports printed a week ago, nothing definite has happened to negotiations by which Harold B. Franklin might make his independent series of pictures on the Universal lot in association with that company.

Corinne Boyle Services

Christian Science services were conducted yesterday for Corinne Boyle at the Hollywood Cemetery Chapel. Miss Boyle, who died Monday, was a sister of John Boyle, past president of the A.S.C.

Thompson To Lasky

Keene Thompson has joined the Jesse Lasky unit at Fox under a long term writing contract.

EXTRAS MAY BURY AXE AND COMBINE ALL FORCES

First sign of a nibble at the proposal of Allan Garcia that the four individual groups of extra and bit players get together for strength came yesterday when Silver Harr of the Riding Actors Association went into a huddle with Garcia.

After it was over Garcia, who heads the Supporting and Extra Players Association, with offices in the Professional Building, was in high glee, for he said Harr told him a large number of his crowd favor consolidation. The plan advanced by Garcia last week was that the Supporting and Extra Players Association, the Hollywood Picture Players Association, the Riding Actors Association and the Junior Screen Guild bury the hatchet and get together in one big organization. Purpose is to cut down overhead expense and form an organization that will be able to really accomplish something in case of showdown.

REMBUSCH TRIAL STARTS WITH BOTH SIDES FENCING

Trust Suit Lists Big Legal Lights

New York.—The $2,000,000 Frank J. Rembusch suit against all of the major motion picture distributors got under way today with a brilliant array of counsel for both sides. Arthur Butler Graham, who handled the Quittner case, and Judge Charles Henderson of Indianapolis are among Rembusch counsel. Max Steuer heads the lawyers for the defense.

Rembusch counsel charges the major distributors obtained a monopoly in Indiana by ownership and control of first run theatres and conspired to withhold product from independent theatres by franchise agreements made with each other; that this caused diminution of product and forced the independent producers from the market by price fixing. Counsel also claims that because Rembusch refused to arbitrate several claims for unplayed product he was unable to get any product from that time on, and suffered constant losses and depreciation of his eighteen theatres.

It is further charged that creating of the zoning protection agreements by film boards of trade and forced arbitration with blind and block bookings all violated the anti-trust laws. It is asserted, too, that through credit committees of the trade boards the exhibitors were forced to supply distributors with every particular concerning their business and how it was run, and that distributors were able to fix playdates to their own advantage.

Steuer for the defendants made a quiet play for the sympathy of the jury and stated that he would show that any figures Rembusch will produce to show his losses are fictitiously manufactured, through the first witness called, Gabe Hess; pointed out that before the Hays organization was formed exhibitors were in a chaotic condition due to absence of a uniform or standard contract and the necessity for making a 25 per cent deposit for delivery of film when arranging contracts.

Through Hess he also pointed out that after the formation of the Hays group and 32 film boards of trade condition of the industry improved tremendously, and exhibitors were given the privilege of withholding cash deposits until arbitration boards had proven a breach of contract. Hess testified that 30,000 cases were satisfactorily settled in the past six years by unanimous decision.

It is expected the trial will continue for several weeks. Ivan Abramson is the next witness to be called.

Binyon on Fields Pic

Paramount has assigned Claude Binyon to work with J. P. McEvoy on the comedy sequences of the W. C. Fields picture, "You're Telling Me," which is now in production under the direction of Erle Kenton.

Farnol Hits the Road

New York.—Lynn Farnol leaves town today on an intense exploitation trip through the Middle West in connection with "Nana" openings.

Knockout!

Miami.—Max Baer may be a knockout with the gals in some sections, but down here he got nothing but a cold shoulder when he started to shower attentions upon June Knight.

"May be the next world's champion," said June, "but he's just a pain in the neck to me."

Acad. Names 14 for NRA Director List

The Executive Committee of the Directors Branch of the Academy met yesterday and nominated fourteen members to be voted upon for selection of six nominees for possible appointment to the various NRA code committees.

Those selected were: Lloyd Bacon, Clarence Brown, David Butler, Frank Capra, William K. Howard, Henry King, W. S. Van Dyke, John Cromwell, Cecil B. DeMille, Alfred E. Green, E. H. Griffith, Robert Z. Leonard, Frank Lloyd and King Vidor.

Selznick May Repeat With 'Steno' Discovery

In the testing of his secretary, Marcella Bannett, for a spot in the South Sea story he is preparing, David O. Selznick is attempting to repeat his actions of two years ago. At that time he spotted Dorothy Wilson, then a secretary at Radio, and made her a star overnight by giving her a featured spot in "The Age of Consent."

Oliver Sought for Big Project at Catalina

Wrigley interests are said to have approached Harry Oliver, art director for Harold Lloyd, with a proposition to handle and design project to change the town of Avalon on Catalina Island into the replica of an early California Mexican-Spanish town.

Agency Man Takes Office

R. H. Polenski, representative of the Ruthrauff and Ryan national advertising agency, has taken an office at the General Service Studio. He is here for the purpose of making a series of still pictures, using motion picture people for a national campaign on the Dodge motor car.

Rogers Signs Craven

Frank Craven has been signed by Charles R. Rogers for a featured role in his next picture to go into production at Paramount, "In Conference," to be directed by Harry Joe Brown. The William Morris office negotiated the deal.

O'Brien on Personals

George O'Brien breaks a rule against personal appearances tonight to attend a church benefit at Anaheim where his latest picture, "The Frontier Marshal," will be shown.

Finish 'Cosmetic' Script

Jane Hinton and Harlan Thompson finish their work on the script of "Cosmetic" at Paramount this week.

Chi Critics Strong For Sten and 'Nana'

Chicago.—Anna Sten and Samuel Goldwyn's picture "Nana" took this city by storm. Every film critic on the local dailies raved about both the picture and the star.

Rob Reel, American, says: "Anna Sten will send male film fans into ecstacies"; calls the picture "magnificent," and gives it a column and a half of space. Carol Frink, Herald-Examiner, says: "Anna Sten IS a sensational screen find. She is something new in movie sirens—at once sultry and naive, ageless and childlike."

Mae Tinee, Tribune, classes Miss Sten as "a perfect mistress of pantomime with a voice to charm the soul away." Clark Rodenbach, Daily News, in his rave about the picture and Miss Sten declares that her beauty is simply "breath taking."

Arline Judge Illness Delays Mono. Picture

Because Arline Judge, who was signed for the lead, is in Palm Springs recovering from a pneumonia attack, Monogram is looking for another feminine lead to fill her spot in "The Loudspeaker." The radio story, which was scheduled to start Friday, now will not get under way until next week. Joseph Santley is slated to direct and Ray Walker has the male lead.

McKinney Moves Into Revived 'Operator 13'

Florine McKinney has been assigned a featured role in the new edition of "Operator 13" at MGM.

Player is appearing in the play, "And Let Who Will Be Clever" at the Hollytown theatre.

New Play for 'Troopers'

Harriette France and N. V. Inloes will present "Sweeney Todd or the Demon Barber of Fleet Street" at the Troopers Club Theatre on February 23 for an indefinite run. The Montecito players are being brought down from Montecito for this production. Beer and pretzels will be served to the audience free of charge.

Cleveland Deal Hot

A deal is said to be in the air between MGM and Gene Cleveland, Broadway player new to Hollywood. She and her agents, Lichtig & Englander, were huddling this week with Ben Piazza.

Presnell Starts Pic

Robert Presnell put "One Man Woman" into work yesterday at Warners with Pat O'Brien and Glenda Farrell in the leads.

Wash. Exhib Here

REELING around LONDON

Lloyd Knechtel works harder than most Americans in town; you can credit him with that swell process stuff in "Sorrell and Son." . . . Mary MacCormick is currently warbling at the Palladium and will be followed by no less a celeb than Ethel Barrymore; yeah, Ethel in variety!

H. G. Wells took a slam at screen writers in Film Weekly, having just signed to write an original for Korda. And Mister Wells then proceeded to steal all the headlines about retiring to Bournemouth to write it; but he seems to be hanging around town as long as the papers print it! . . . Doug Fairbanks Jr. was no sooner back in town than he was dancing with Gertie Lawrence, so there!

Elizabeth Allen is kept well in the news here, for which, no doubt, she thanks Bill (Hubbie) O'Bryan. . . . 'Twould appear the thing to do now amongst the elite of our producers is fall for the stars of their own companies, several are engaged in this diverting pursuit! . . . Percy Cudlipp of the Standard still has a hankering after moom pics; we know! . . . Robert Stevenson, now listed as an associate producer at Gaumonts, is sitting in on the next Jack Hulbert production. . . . We have it on the inside that Joe Rock and the Wainwrights have got together on a movie deal. . . . John Cecil Graham taking a well earned vacation; this was probably necessary due to the way "Design for Living" and "Duck Soup" affected him—we've never heard such laughter—and at your own product, too, Mister Graham; good for you!! . . . Fred Astaire dancing with Society Shots after his woik at the Palace. . . . S'funny how uncommonly like Spencer Tracy Spencer Tracy looked in disguise in "The Mad Game." . . . That British scribbler at a certain Hollywood studio must be delighted that that English star is now out there; he was THAT crazy about her in London, but it was all rather one-sided, and the lovely one now has a husband, so what?

A vurry distinguished shareholder with Gaumont-British went up to Victor Saville and congratulated him on the direction of "Constant Nymph"—which Basil Dean megged! . . . Michael E. Balcon and his charming wife certainly like the Savoy grill these days; and the Balcons, the Sam Smiths and Arthur Dent were all at the "Mala the Magnificent" ("Eskimo" to you!) preview—and so was little Mrs. Jack Votion, who was that thrilled by Mala. . . . Dorothy Hyson took time out in a legit show to prove to movie makers that not only had she beauty but also acting ability. . . Cyril Gardner is one popular guy; despite the vast sea of aristocratic snooties who are toting the Midnite Follies Girls around town, it is our Cyril who is the girls' beeg moment! . . . Connerie (Film Critic) Chappell raved about the American cameramen's work at Gainsborough, quite forgetting that the pic in question was lit by one of their German importees!

The Ealing Studios have just built a grand camera crane, the first of its kind to hit British studios. . . Everyone is seeing Dreams Walking in this Burg. . . . Mark Ostrer, Sam Eckman and Sol G. Newman having a luncheon huddle. . . . Johnnie Green made a personal at the "Cover The Waterfront" screening here and played some of his own moosic. . . . Greta Nissen, boys and gals, is Park Laneing. . . . "Say?" said the suspicious guest when the indie outfit here threw a dance and requested all people to wear Evening Clothes, "they're not still shooting that Society pic out here are they???"

Merrill White will cut the Jack Buchanan pic, "Sons of Guns." . . . . . Maurice Elvey directs more box office pics than anyone in the town. . . Nerina Shute, movie scribbler is en route to Russia; it must have excited her because she mentioned in an early part in her column that she was going to talk about Diana Napier and left it at that, utilizing all space to talk about Betty Balfour's comeback. . . George Ayre, slick publicity hound, is back with Irving Asher's Warner-Brit outfit; and thousands cheer. . . Sydney Bernstein, without so much as bye-bye, jumped a boat for America and might hit Hollywood again. . . . Otto Ludwig is now an ace "Scissor King" at Gaumonts.

Aus. Battle Looms As War to Finish

Sydney.—The eyes of the film trade are focused on the daily sittings here of the New South Wales Governmental Film inquiry in which testimony is now being taken in what looms as a war to the finish between the American film distributors and the General Theatres Corporation.

Bernard Freeman, speaking for MGM, declared they want to build new theatres of their own because of the unsatisfactory conditions governing the general release of his company's films. Some suburban independents welcome the project of new theatre building apart from the G. T. C. control.

Stuart Doyle, of G. T. C., advocated appointment of permanent board to regulate industry here. He also brought out that erection of new theatres by foreign capital would spell ruin to his organization. Other executives of the G. T. C. declared the country has more theatres now than it can fill, and asserted that if American film companies are allowed to build theatres they will foist pictures upon the natives that are not wanted. Also G. T. C. men declared no foreign capital should be permitted to have any part in theatre building.

London Films Leases Whitehall Studio

London.—London Film Productions have taken over the former Whitehall studio from Consolidated Film Studios, Ltd. New lease is for a six months period. The studio has been sound-proofed and new insulated floors laid. Another stage is to be added, and plan is to try to put over idea of the co-operative plan among exhibitors whereby they produce pictures themselves.

Sound City Enterprising

London.—Norman Loudon, managing director at Sound City, has given chances to four new directors in the past year and all came through in fine shape. The quartet are W. P. Lipscomb, John Baxter, John Hunt and John Paddy Carstairs. Now he is giving another youngster a chance, Andrew Kimmins.

Irish Pictures Planned

Dublin.—Well-founded report here is that the Dutch Ediphone Company is coming here to establish itself as Irish Ediphone, with J. B. T. Thole as managing director. It is in line with efforts in the Irish Free State to establish its own picture producing industry.

'Bowery' Opens in Paris

Paris.—"The Bowery," Darryl Zanuck's Twentieth Century production, opened at the Lord Byron Theatre Saturday, and despite the unsettled conditions caused by the riots it is off to a good start. The critics received it with high praise.

Belfrage's Great Sendoff

London.—Cedric Belfrage, starting round the world for a vacation, was the recipient of one of the greatest gatherings of screen celebrities ever seen here at a farewell party. He is succeeded on the Sunday Express by Ernest Betts.

PARIS GOSSIP

You should hear Mosjoukine at the Martainitch . . . where vodka is vodka and where blinis are caviar . . . telling of his experiences in America making pictures for Papa Laemmle. . . . He doesn't like talkies and is in despair over Chaplin's announced decision to make one. . . . Feder is in from Nice and holding important conferences with the idea of building a French Hollywood at the Antibes. . . . The riots are hurting theatre business tremendously.

Mervyn LeRoy, with his bride, getting a break on publicity while here. . . . Curtis Melnitz at United Artists busy as a bee. . . . The Gaumont Palace is doing nicely with a music hall program. . . . It's a wonder the kids don't get indigestion with a full show of "Mickey Mouse" cartoons at the Lord Byron. . . . The kids laugh, the grown-ups become children again, and the cash is rolling in to United Artists.

The film crowd went in a big way for this year's Bal des Petits Lits Blanc, organized by Le Jour. . . . Six thousand tickets were sold for the charity affair almost before a publicity campaign was started. . . . The latest beauty contest on here is one to choose "the most beautiful car."

French Shelves Bulging

Paris.—Financial troubles that have hit French picture companies in the last year are illustrated by the statement made at the recent independent theatre owners meeting that there are unfinished French films in the value of fifty million marks.

New French Trade Sheet

Paris.—A new French trade paper has made its appearance, "La Synchro." It is the organ of the French Synchronization Actors Association, the group doing the dubbing of foreign films.

Dry Cleaning in London

London.—MGM pictures get the title change treatment over here, "Eskimo" becoming "Mala the Magnificent" and "Sons of the Desert" arriving as "Fraternally Yours."

New Para. Aussie Chief

Sydney.—John E. Kennebeck has been appointed managing director of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., of Australia, succeeding William J. Clark, who resigned.

Famous Tenor in Films

London.—Ricard Tauber, famous tenor, is due here in March for a film production of "The Life of Schubert," which Paul Stein will direct for B.I.P.

Add to Gaumont Staff

London.—Russell Metcalfe, New York playwright, and Ley Lipton have been added to Gaumont's writing staff.

Huston on 26-Wk. Ticket

London—Selznick-Joyce office here has placed John Huston a 26-week contract to write for British-Gaumont.

Labor Showdown

Complaints coming to Rosenblatt on the Hollywood situation have centered on the assertion that the Studio Labor Board is dodging action on any question with the statement that they have not yet received authority from the Code Authority, which is now the real boss of the picture industry, and not Rosenblatt.

The President's order was issued on February 8. On the very same day Rosenblatt is reported to have wired union officials in Los Angeles, in response to their kicks about the stalling, "The Studio Labor Committee was appointed by the Code Authority with approval of the Administrator."

This telegram from Rosenblatt was sent in reply to a telegram from the unions asking whether or not the Labor Committee had authority to act. A significant feature of the telegram from Rosenblatt to the unions was the fact that it concluded with the words: "With kindest regards."

The President's order, made public today, decrees that all employers operating under an approved code must post the labor provisions of those codes conspicuously in their establishments so that employees, as well as other complainants, could be fully aware of the employers' labor requirements.

The Executive order calls attention to Section Ten A of the National Industrial Recovery Act, prescribing a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both, for each day's violation, or any violation of the code pursuant to the provision of the Executive order.

Hollywood.—Despite the statement above that Rosenblatt had told the unions that the local labor committees were authorized to function, it was impossible to get any action in town yesterday. Union officials just stated that they were still being stalled; labor committee officials cannot be reached by reporters.

An additional interesting element was added to the local situation yesterday by the statement from Judge Ben Lindsay, attorney for the IATSE during the late strike, that he has just been informed by State NRA Administrator George Creel that he had been selected to fill a "certain position of importance" in connection with the film code in Hollywood.

Judge Lindsay declared that while he planned to accept the job he could not say just what it was to be. He stated that the decision to create the position and place him in it had been made at the recent conference in Washington of the code administrators of the 48 states.

"Mr. Creel telephoned me from San Francisco," he said, "and asked me to take the job. He said he would be down here within a few days. He emphasized that it is important."

Aside from that the Judge would not indicate what it is. However, speculation was rife last night, and there were many guesses, due to the fact that the Judge was so active in the interests of labor during the strike, even going to Washington to represent the IATSE men.

REPORTER AWARDS GREETED WITH RUSH OF ENTHUSIASM

Mailing of Ballots Brings Quick Reply

With the completion last night of the mailing of ballots, voting in The Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit competition is under way. And with the mailing of the ballots completed, praise of The Reporter's system of selection started rolling into the office.

The Reporter believed that a system of selection in which the ENTIRE personnel of the industry did the voting would be more representative than any system of selection by smaller groups, so ballots have been mailed to all the workers. They will vote for the most outstanding examples of direction, acting, writing, art direction, cinematography and sound recording.

Following is some of the comment of leading people of the industry regarding The Reporter awards:

"The Hollywood Reporter medal for artistic accomplishment is both timely and extremely interesting. I think it would be more fair to have theatremen, exchangemen, critics and producers vote on these awards than confine the voting to Hollywood alone.

"FRANK BORZAGE."

"An award of merit for any artistic attainment is a good thing. The Hollywood Reporter medals will be a prized token but more than that they will represent wide recognition of effort, talent and performance — the best applause any true artist can get. Success to the idea.

"LOWELL SHERMAN."

"I think the Hollywood Reporter cannot be too highly commended for making it possible for the great mass of workers of the industry to have a voice in saying who deserves the greatest distinction. It is a grand idea, and will be an award that will mean something to the winners.

"JAMES GLEASON."

"The Hollywood Reporter's plan for awarding medals of merit for outstanding achievement in the industry is one of the finest plans I have ever heard of. It is a much fairer method than to have the decision made by one small group. This will be a universal decision.

"RALPH MORGAN."

"Congratulations to the Hollywood Reporter on a grand idea. Recognition for artistic value in pictures will elevate our standards and gain for the worth while pictures, actors and directors the credit they deserve. It is sad but true that the industry has complimented its artistic success too little.

"B. F. ZEIDMAN."

Lenore Kingston Tagged

Lenore Kingston has been assigned to a managerial contract by the Bernard and Meiklejohn agency. Miss Kingston, who is under contract to Universal, will have a featured spot in "Little Man, What Now?" as her next.

Lederer Back to MGM

Charles Lederer returns to the MGM writing staff, joining the Irving Thalberg unit. Writer is waiting for an assignment.

Bright Future

The Warner publicity department describes George Evans, the Highland Park youngster selected to play Joe E. Brown as a child in "Sawdust," like this: "Joe E. Brown can get four billiard balls in his mouth. George Evans, at the age of three and a half, can hide two in his oral cavity."

Two Bricker Yarns Get Live Studio Interest

George Bricker has just completed an original newspaper yarn that has several studio heads a-flutter. It is called "Ink Gets in the Blood."

Another of Bricker's originals, "School Teacher," is now in the hands of Warner Brothers, who are considering it as a yarn for Aline MacMahon. Lichtig & Englander are agenting Bricker.

M. H. Hoffman Builds Cast for 'The Quitter'

M. H. Hoffman has signed Phillips Holmes, Jack LaRue and Leila Hyams for the leading roles in his next Liberty production, "The Quitter," which Fred Newmyer directs.

Also in the cast are Hedda Hopper, Christian Rub, Garry Owen and Carl Miller, latter three set through the MacQuarrie office.

A Boy at Payettes'

Washington.—John J. Payette, zone manager in the Washington territory for Warners Theatres, is passing out the cigars. Mrs. Payette presented him with a nine-pound boy last Thursday. Mrs. Payette is the daughter of Harry M. Crandall, former Washington theatre magnate.

80 in 'Legal Murder'

New York.—"Legal Murder," the much discussed play about the Scottsboro murder case, and the defense of a group of negroes, opens Thursday at the President Theatre. The play has a cast of eighty.

Keaton Starts Today

Buster Keaton starts his first week before a camera since leaving MGM today in the initial two-reeler on his deal with Educational. Comedian has been busy on personal appearances arranged by Leo Morrison.

Leon Waycoff Returns

Having finished his role opposite Constance Binnie in "Among Those Sailing," Leon Waycoff has returned to town. Play ran in Philadelphia for several months.

Gombell in 'Dynamite'

Radio yesterday signed Minna Gombell for a featured role in "Strictly Dynamite," which Elliott Nugent directs. Lupe Velez and Jimmy Durante have the top spots.

Starling to Radio

Lynn Starling was set at Radio yesterday by Edington and Vincent to write dialogue for the screen play of "Down to Their Last Yacht." Lou Brock pilots.

La Sullavan Still Mystery to the 'U'

Universal officials declared yesterday that while New York may say Margaret Sullavan boarded a plane, her plans and whereabouts are still a mystery to the studio.

Production of "Little Man, What Now?" originally scheduled to start Monday, is now understood to be likely to slip back another week anyway to round out story problems. Douglass Montgomery will be in the lead opposite Sullavan, and Frank Borzage directs.

Actor Guild Makes Election Statement

The Special Committee of the Screen Actors Guild meets tonight to name tellers and other necessary officials for the election of NRA committee candidates on Sunday evening.

Officials of the Guild are anxious to let players know that while efforts have been made to notify all screen players with credits of Sunday's election, any oversight may have been only due to lack of a proper address, and all properly credited players are invited.

Lloyd Honored By Shrine

Harold Lloyd was yesterday inducted into the office of Second Ceremonial Master of Al Malaikah Temple.

PRES. BANS SON'S PLUM

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IS the Warner production system right or wrong? Is the rush and bustle of making pictures that have been given the same rush and bustle in their preparation the right way to make pictures? Is it the best procedure to take a director who finishes a picture one day and start him shooting another the day after?

We have been asking ourselves this question for the past two years, have been comparing the product of Warners with that of other studios, picture for picture, and although we don't believe Warners have the right idea, nor are some of the others wrong in taking plenty of time for preparation and shooting, we must confess that Warners have done as well and maybe a little better than the majority with their short schedules and working their directors and writers 365 days a year.

Warners make sixty pictures a year. They have eight directors under contract and, occasionally, run in an outsider for a job; but those eight directors account for 95 per cent of that program, giving each man from seven to ten pictures a year to shoulder, necessitating no "between picture" layoffs with or without pay.

Compare the number of pictures that Warners are making with that of any other studio and you will find they beat the next competitor in quantity by at least eight, most of them by fifteen or twenty. And by the same comparison you will find that most other studios have more directors, twice as many writers, and the results of those efforts are about the same, maybe a little better, maybe a little worse, but with no comparison in cost per picture.

From that comparison you will feel that Warners are ABSOLUTELY correct in their production ideas, that their hustle and bustle, their short shooting schedules and their working the daylights out of producers, writers, directors and casts (saving the company plenty of money) is the thing to do—IF you abide by those comparisons. We don't.

The failure of other studios, namely MGM, Paramount and others, in their efforts to make better pictures, throughout a year's program, than Warners, because they have longer

Warner Stands Pat

New York.—Adolph Zukor's interviews that Para may go to profit sharing to settle salary squabbles brought a statement today from Harry Warner that his company would stand pat on its present salary methods.

Pathe Puts $150,000 Into Majestic Pics

New York.—One of the first moves of Pathe in its new financing plans is said to be the placing of $150,000 at the disposal of the Majestic Pictures organization to complete that distributor's schedule for the coming year.

Statement made here is that this cash, with additional credit balances, is expected to swing at least four pictures for Majestic.

Resume 'Operator 13' with New Script, New Director

MGM will resume shooting on "Operator 13," the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper co-starring vehicle, next Monday under the direction of Richard Boleslavsky.

Harvey Thew and Zelda Sears are writing the new treatment and the picture will go back into work with a brand new script.

'Nana' Holds Up

New York.—"Nana" finished its second week at the Music Hall hitting a bit above the $86,000 mark, very healthy money for a second week at any house, and added to the $103,000 for the first week starting the picture off with a bang locally.

Nat Saland Here

Nat Saland, veteran Eastern Laboratory man, now running his own plant, Mercury Laboratories, of New York, is in town at the Hollywood Plaza. Understood to have a number of release print deals on.

Washington Says That $1000 A Week Offer For Roosevelt's Son Stepped On By President

Washington.—There is a report going the rounds here that in its in-between the lines implications can mean a lot to Hollywood. Briefly the story is that Elliott Roosevelt's recent flying trip to the Capitol concerned the reports that the President's son was to take a thousand-a-week job in the movies and that the net result of the trip was an "order" from daddy to do no such thing.

The reports then go on to say that the President didn't object to his son taking any job in the movies for

Play Prices Slump In N. Y. Market

New York.—The play market must be in for a slump, judging from three recent prices paid by Radio for stage vehicles. The price tags read: "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," $17,500; "Wednesday's Child," about $25,000, and less than $10,000 for "False Dreams Farewell."

These prices compare with $90,000 and $40,000 prices early in the season for plays like "Ah, Wilderness" and "Double Door," neither of which is near the screen yet.

Lesser-Krellberg Split

Sol Lesser, after handling the "Tarzan" serial through Sherman Krellberg financing, is understood to have found other means of swinging his deal for the coming "Peck's Bad Boy."

Burt Kelly to N. Y.

New York.—Burt Kelly is on a flying visit here for huddle with William Saal on plans which will seal the two producers on a national production deal.

Lloyd Returns To Fox For Two Pics

Frank Lloyd and Fox have penned their signatures to the two-picture contract which has been cooking for several weeks. The director returns to the company to pilot the next Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell picture, which Winfield Sheehan produces.

Ticket, negotiated through the Small-Landau office, gives Lloyd the right to make an outside picture. Negotiations are on with another studio to produce his story "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Hecht on Rewrite Job For MGM's 'Viva Villa'

New York.—Ben Hecht is busy on the rewriting of new sequences to be photographed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for their production of "Viva Villa."

Each sequence is being airmailed to the studio, and Wallace Beery, here vacationing, has been told to be ready for an air flight on an hour's notice, to be on the set for these added scenes.

Trains Loaded with Film Folk Whom You Know

New York.—Clear up the bright spots, some of the nice folks are coming back to Hollywood. The list of those en route includes Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Cortez (Chrissie Lee), Ruth Donnelly, George F. Kaufman, that famous team of Moss and Hart, and Sigfried Rumann, who will play in the Fox picture, "The World Moves On."

Peeved Norma Returns

New York. — Norma Talmadge, peeved about the story she was handed in England, arrives here today on the Paris. Virginia Cherrill and Cary Grant, bridal couple, are also aboard.

Grainger Vacations

RADIO SEALS COOPER AND BERMAN WHILE LOT WAITS

The conferences that have been staged on the Radio lot between the heads of RKO and Radio Pictures were brought to a close last night with complete understandings between the top officials and Merian C. Cooper and Pandro Berman, the two ace producers for the organization.

The understanding with Cooper is that he is to take his round-the-world trip and get all the rest and recreation that he has been fighting for. On his return he can do one of three things, step back in the top spot at the studio; divide the production activities with Pandro Berman, with both of them having separate units under their wings, or confine his activities to the production of the Katharine Hepburn just bought her contract from Jed Harris with her own money to get out of touring with "The Lake" because Radio refused to get her out of it and there's a strong possibility that La Hepburn may not finish her contract with Radio if Radio is foolish enough to let her slip through their fingers over the matter of a few thousand dollars in raise that the gal deserves.

New York REVIEWS

"THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN"

MGM prod.; director, Wm. K. Howard; writers, Zelda Sears, Eve Greene, Edgar Allan Woolf, Florence Ryerson, Marjorie B. Paradis

Capitol Theatre

Times: A sincere and affecting piece of work, one of the best vehicles in which the popular Lionel Barrymore has appeared. As refreshing as "Little Women." It is blessed with the proper restraint and the suspense keeps one on the qui vive. Each character is developed in a believable fashion and none of the players is asked to cater to what might be considered the box-office angle.

News: Although the picture moves a little slowly at first it is always interesting. Its comedy and tragedy are so blended as to draw both laughter and tears in the right places.

World-Telegram: Although its cast contains such excellent players as Lionel Barrymore and Fay Bainter, "This Side of Heaven" is not very good and does nothing to dispel the lethargy that has seized the recent cinema arrivals on Broadway.

Journal: Absorbing entertainment, excellently acted and directed. It is smartly cast. Each role is so expertly filled that the story emerges as a thoroughly believable and convincing document. Provided with an intensely human story, William K. Howard has skillfully woven the details into a quietly fascinating pattern.

American: Players and director have endowed the piece with a sympathtic quality that makes it good entertainment for the whole family of moviegoers. As is expected in a William K. Howard production, he has embroidered his film with those niceties of workmanship which make all the difference between a good picture and just another one.

Mirror: Pleasing, wholesome film which describes a typical Lionel Barrymore hero. Splendidly acted by Barrymore and a fine supporting cast, directed with William K. Howard's usual imaginative touches, the picture has a simple, powerful appeal.

Post: One can put up with threadbare stories if they are honestly conceived and written, but there is no possible excuse for a picture so flabby and false as the one which Mr. Barrymore is forced to carry on his shoulders.

Sun: Its manner of telling is episodic and hurried, diffusing its interest among a half dozen characters rather than concentrating upon one or two. Mr. Barrymore, Miss Bainter and Miss Merkel carry their roles competently enough. The story swings along when they are present. It is the minor characters who in this film are not minor characters at all, who let the picture down.

Jas. Whale Brings Script With Him

New York.—James Whale, arriving on the Europa today, brings with him a complete script on "A Trip To Mars," by R. C. Sherriff, which he will direct for Universal.

Other picture and theatrical arrivals on the same liner included Peggie Wood, Hattie Carnegie and Sam Woods.

New Metro Ticket for Director Rowland Brown

MGM handed Rowland Brown a new three months' ticket yesterday and at the same time gave him a leave of absence for a similar period so that he might go to England to direct "Java Head" for A. and B. Pictures. Brown will probably direct "Stealing Through Life" at MGM when he returns.

Connie Cummings Abroad

Constance Cummings and Benn W. Levy leave for London upon the completion of the star's role in Universal's "Glamour" in two weeks. Couple go via Orient, spending the summer at the writer's London home.

Cormack Scripts 'Woman'

Bartlett Cormack was yesterday assigned to the screen job on "One Woman" at Paramount, the story being planned for Miriam Hopkins' next picture.

Atwill on the Air

Lionel Atwill goes on the air at KHJ on the evening of February 22, over a coast to coast Columbia network of 85 stations. He will plug the Academy and its annual awards competition, along with other things. Appearance is in the nature of an interview with local column chatterer asking the questions.

Universal Signs Two

Renee Gadd, English player, gets her first American role in Universal's "Bachelor Wife," signing the deal yesterday. Paul Cavanagh has also been handed a featured spot.

Bobby Crawford Coming

Bobby Crawford, head of the De Sylva, Brown and Henderson publishing company, arrives here from New York Saturday.

Arthur Ticket At Col. Long Termer

Jean Arthur was signed by Columbia to a five-year contract yesterday. She will do four pictures a year.

As told in yesterday's Reporter, her first picture will be "The Most Precious Thing in Life," which will start about March 1. Her Columbia contract came as a result of her work in "Whirlpool," which she is now making. The contract gives her the right to make pictures at other studios providing Columbia okays her parts. Ralph Farnum set the deal.

Nick Grinde To Meg For Magna Pictures 3-Reelers

Nick Grinde has been signed by Magna Pictures in New York to direct three two-reelers with an option for three more. He will direct two shorts starring Bert Lahr and one starring Harry Richman. The Bernard and Meiklejohn agency made the deal.

Grinde will leave for New York tonight by train.

'Stolen Sweets' Starts

"Stolen Sweets," a Jack R. Batcheller production for Chesterfield, goes into production today at Universal. Sally Blane and Polly Ann Young have the feminine featured roles, and Charles Starrett has male lead. Richard Thorpe directs. Goodee Montgomery, of the old team of Montgomery and Stone, also is in the cast.

Dunn-Eilers Reunited

Fox reunites the Jimmy Dunn-Sally Eilers team in "Always Honest," which Sol Wurtzel has scheduled. E. E. Paramore is on the screen play.

Universal Seeks Sloane

Universal is negotiating for Paul Sloane to direct Gloria Stuart and Lew Ayres in the Beckins Thorpe novel "The Two O'Gradys."
